It was not reality.
Dreams do not abide.
They are daisy chains of thought
To wear . . And toss aside.
Never let them rule your heart
And leave it to vain sorrow;
Throw a kiss to passing dreams
And dreams again—tomorrow!

The Influence of Women and Its Cure—John Erskine.

We have suggested that women band together for mass influence because they are uneasy in their conscience about the reasons their men have for supporting them.—They wouldn't have time for it if their men did not pay the bill.

Women in the mass are now busy reducing men to slaves. They use the leisure which men's labor has purchased for them, to organize and tell men what to do. Is this feminine dictatorship a good thing?

Women have interfered in our education with unfortunate results. They have cancelled from our political inheritance some of the most creative ideas. They are perpetuating a still more tragic mischief in the field of religion.

Men will honor the woman who is a home-maker and the woman who is a wage-earner. But shall we in the future tolerate as we do now the women who are neither home-makers nor wage-earners? I hope we shan't, but there's no evidence as yet that we are alert to the danger. Agreeable women, most of them, full of good intentions answering the call, as they see it, to service and uplift. Self-appointed guardian angels. Very dangerous. (from the author's summaries).

The Influence of Men—Eudsia Ramsay Richardson.

"Man as an individual is a lovable creature. But man in the group, dominant, assertive, egotistical ,illogical, has excited an influence that would have mocked civilization had women of other days not been able to deal with him swiftly, subtly, effectively."

With this general declaration, Mrs. Richardson opens her book, which is far more than an eloquent reply to John Erskine's "The Influence of Women and Its Cure". Here is much more than mere clever fencing; here is wisdom. Her earnestness commands serious attention, yet at the same time one is entertained and delighted with her keen humor and pointed unit. She has chosen to state her case forthrightly because she believes that satire is not woman's province.

Exploitation, depressions, Big Business are evils resulting from the influence of men. It is ironical that women, who did not contribute to the causes of the depression, should be made its victims. Men have organized to discriminate against women workers. They have stolen women's jobs and have produced, not to supply the necessities and perhaps luxuries of life, but in large quantities for profit. And now in the interest of Big Business we are headed for war. Woman's influence has always been pacific, man's militant. At last man has "achieved the influence to put on the biggest and best war in history."

It is time, Mrs. Richardson says, for men to see things as they are. She hopes that this "Mirror held before their eyes will reflect an image they will have a mind to change."

FOLLOWING IT UP

We are following up last week's comment on marriage with a survey of the case that has turned up in Sneedville, Tennessee concerning a shy, nine-year old girl and a twenty-two year old six-footer.

Can anyone imingane a nine year old, underdeveloped girl married? It does not appeal to our code of ethics; it shocks and revolts us—and yet, the girl's mother sits back and smiles and giver her blessing to the couple.

Do you remember back nine-ten, eleven, twelve years ago when you were nine years old? Do you remember how you played with dolls, rode bicycles, fought with your brothers and sisters, played marbles? Do you remember how carefree and happy you were—without a single burden upon your shoulders? Think of that—then think of this little girl who has the problems of marriage thrust upon her when we who are eighteen, nineteen, and twenty consider ourselves unfit for marriage. How old that child will be when she is our age!

Sorrow upon sorrow keeps piling up in the Ohio and Mississippi valleys. Levees breaking—deaths—hunger—disease — illness. The most horrible thing we can imagine are the mass burials that are taking place: huge holes dug in the ground and twelve to twenty bodies placed therein and dirt shoveled on top of them. It reminds us of an Edgar Allan Poe story, and we shudder—yet that is the only thing that can possibly be done.

We who are safe and dry think about such conditions and wonder just what we can do; and, seemingly, there is nothing we can do, and yet there is! Our material contributions help no end, our money and clothing! In the small town of Lexington, Virginia, the Red Cross took in contributions amounting to nearly $15,000; in the state of New York actually $934,727 was receipted—the city of New York alone (donations having been sent directly to Washington) is credited with a contribution of more than $1,000,000.

It is only fitting and proper to say something concerning the class which is editing the paper this week, the Senior Class. We are dignified and facing the new idea of living our own lives, without the loving aid of parents and the helpful guidance of professors. It seems such a short while ago that we were freshmen, green as grass and, well, dumb! As sophomores we were practically forgotten and sort of shifted for ourselves. Our junior year was a busy, hurried one, we intent on "catching up" and "getting ahead" so we could play this year. And here we are—playing, loafing, having a good time yet loathing the idea of being separated from the resounding halls and the classic beauty of the portals of our Alma Mater. We will be separated from our friends or will slowly drift from them.

Is it sad?—of course it is, and yet it's so true it hurts us. Let's not think of it that way—let's have fun with it. Here are some poems that may help:

"Gather kisses while you may
For time brings only sorrow
For the girls who are so free today
Are the chaperons of tomorrow."

Another most appropriate one that appeared in last week's Rotunda:

She learned to love,
She learned to hate,
She learned a Ford would carry eight,
She learned to smoke and how to tell
Wood alcohol by taste and smell
She learned to coax,
She learned to tease,
She learned new ways of cooking cheese
She learned to neck and break a date,
She's ready now to graduate."

The eyes of the world are again turned on Germany. Last year about this time all nations were astonished because the defeated country was remilitarizing the Rhineland. Today they are again looking at her with startled expressions because this nation is turning her thoughts on colonies. France has offered to return all colonies Germany had before the war.

Basketball Captain Introduces Players

In chapel Wednesday morning, athletics came to the front with Frances Hudgins, president of the Athletic Association, leading the devotionals and creating interest in the opening basketball season.

She introduced one by one the varsity basketball team while the students cheered enthusiastically. Then Frances called for the cheer leaders to teach the new song composed by the seniors to the student body.

After the freshman class sang their original song, the program was closed with an announcement of the basket ball game Friday with Lynchburg College.

Shep Fields Appears In Danville Saturday

Shep Fields and his Rippling Rhythm Orchestra are playing for a dance in Danville in the Drill room of the New Armory on next Saturday, February 6th starting at 9 and lasting until 12 o'clock. Shep is playing the Georgia Tech Midwinter dances on Thursday and Friday, and is enroute to New York for his weekly broadcast over the Networks for Woodbury at 9:15 on Sunday night. He is breaking the long jump from Atlanta to New York in Danville for this dance engagement.

Shep Fields and his new unique Rippling Rythm has risen to the absolute top of the music world in the shortest time on record for any orchestra, thus proving that all dancers and listeners everywhere love this new Rippling Type of music. The rippling background is acquired first as an introduction by blowing into a Bowl half filled with water, this as a solo for a moment, after which it is augmented by the drummer with a chop chop effect on the Temple Blocks, next being joined by a Piano Accordian which builds up the Ripple and last by a Viola which does the muted slide giving the long effect until the proper key is reached at which time the entire orchestra swings into the sweet music that is really different. That is Rippling Rythm, as introduced and played by Shep Fields and his Rippling Rythm Orchestra, which will be heard in Danville on next Saturday night in the drill room of the armory.

Notice

Pi Gamma Mu has requested that all students will please bear in mind that stags and couples will not be allowed on the floor for the Mardi Gras dance unless they are in costume and masks.

Definitions of Love

Two types of definitions for love are prevalent today. There is the serious, philosophical definition which is found in every dictionary; there is the silly, nonsensical definition which we hear every day. According to the scientist, love is a compound the essence of nothing; bound by caresses and broken by fusses. The popular definition for love is that it is eternal, external, internal and fraternal.

According to Webster's Unabridged Dictionary love is a strong personal feeling or a tender, ardent affection for a person of the opposite sex. This real love, however, should not be confused with the high school love since the infatuated ones are always walking, talking, and sitting together. This love, commonly known as "puppy" love, usually lasts from six to eight weeks.

There is the silly, nonsensical definition for love which we hear every day. Love is a feeling that you feel when you feel as if you are going to have a feeling you have never felt before. Love is also a funny little feeling you never have felt before; after you feel it once you want to feel it some more. Then love is like heat lightning. You never know where it will strike next nor how much damage it will do.

According to the sentimentalist: "Love is something so divine, description cannot make it less. It's what you krfow and can't define; what you feel and can't express."

Pettus, Gwen Bell, Gay Stieffen, and Mary Joyner Cox. The grand march will follow immediately after the floor show. Prizes will be awarded for the most original, the best looking, and the most attractive boy's costume.

After the awarding of the prizes, couples will begin to dance to the music of the University of Virginia's orchestra. To dance at Mardi Gras one must be in costume and masked. Masks will be sold at the door to those who don't have them. Anyone who is not in costume will be allowed to watch. Because the dancing does not get under way for some time there will be no intermission.

Tickets went on sale Tuesday night. The price of admission is fifty cents per person for those who dance and twenty-five cents for the spectators. They can be obtained from members of Pi Gamma Mu only and will not be sold at the table in the hall. The mothers of the girls in the court have been asked to chaperon the pairs coming with some of the members of the faculty and administration.

New Theatre Project Gains Favor Rapidly

Audiences In Country Praise Work of WPA

The WPA Federal Theatre Project has rapidly gained fame in promoting the legitimate theatre. Through the entire country more and more people are enjoying the work of the different artists who are being given an opportunity to show what ability they have.

In Philadelphia, in an effort to definitely determine audience reaction to its work and its plays, the WPA Federal Theatre Project has just completed a survey made at the New Locust Theatre during the playing of "It Can't Happen Here" last week.

Though this was the first WPA legitimate theatre production seen in Philadelphia, in answer to the standard inquiry, "How many WPA plays have you seen before this?" 345 persons wrote "From one to five." Four hundred said "yes" to the question, "Do you like this play?"

Thirty per cent of the customers had not seen a play during the last year; 45 per cent had seen over five. Reasons for nonattendance at the drama ranged from financial difficulties to lack of belief in the production of really good plays.

The overwhelming majority of those who answered favored a permanent Federal Theatre. The reasons given were low admission prices, rehabilitation of unemployed theatre workers and musicians and the production of types of plays commercial producers are unwilling to touch.

Having closed a successful three-week run in Bridgeport, Conn., on January 23rd, "Cellini," WPA Federal Theatre production of Joseph Lee Walsh's poetic drama, moves into the Palace Theatre in Hartford on Friday, February 5 for one week.

"Unprecedented interest of the public", states Gertrude Don Dero, State Director, "as well as highly favorable press comment on the play, have led the WPA Federal Theatre to consider touring "Cellini" throughout the East at the completion of its Connecticut tour."

Two other plays by Connecticut playwrights, "In Praise of Husbands" by Stanley Young and "King and Clown" by Homer B. Mason, are now being considered for production by the Connecticut WPA Federal Theatre.

"Death Takes the Wheel", production of the Buffalo Historical Marionettes, a unit of the Federal Theatre Project, has been incorporated in the curriculum of the Buffalo Police Department's Traffic School.

The show, a gruesome picture of the results of reckless driving and excessive speed, is now playing to high school students of Buffalo and vicinity. Many students have written letters to Buffalo newspapers commenting on the production and suggesting that a student league be formed for the purpose of promoting safe driving.

Lynchburg College Is Debate Winner

ed by local groups. She advised this method, since under state control, it is inevitable that capitalists would work they way in.

As the second negative speaker, Mr. Inge explained that the negative did not argue against state control because they believed that a humanitarian plan was necessary but that the plan didn't meet the need, since it would not raise the standards of living, but would cause one group of people to injure another. He named as the defects that a normal wage cannot be maintained in depression, the money raised in these ways mentioned would defeat the plan, and it would only give rise to paupers.

The negative gave, as their rebuttal, that the affirmative proposal would not correct conditions, saying that the minimum wage would become maximum, that worse machinery would be used with less money, and prices would be forced up with the result—decreased production.

The affirmative stated that the negative neither suggested another plan or defeated the affirmative arguments.

Mr. Tucker Doyne, the judge of the debate, criticized both sides, but gave the decision to the negative.

At the same time another debate was held at Lynchburg College. The same question was debated. William West and Shirley Rosser upheld the affirmative for Lynchburg. Pattie Bounds and Ruth Sears defended the negative side for S. T. C.

The judge decided in favor of the affirmative.

SPORT SLANTS

(—By the Sport)

BASKET BALL:

Victory—S. T. C.'s on top! Shouts, songs and laughter followed the game Friday afternoon, when Farmville defeated Lynchburg College 35-14. It looks as if all those practices were not held in vain. We are proud of our basket ball team and of all the members of the squad, who were ready to help in any way they could, in order that Farmville would be the victor. All of our efforts were rewarded by the victory that started out basket ball season with a "bang."

Now for a few high-lights of Friday's game. Frances Hudgins, Captain and forward played such a grand game—that remarks were made, "as to how that tiny little girl could get around so well, and make so many goals." Then too, that sophomore, Jennie Carroll, who has already made a name for herself as the "never-miss girl", played an outstanding game, starting out with Hudgins. Only one substitution was made among the forwards, when Ruth Emma Chambers substituted for Jennie Carroll. Ruth Emma Chambers is a junior transfer from Blackstone, and was on the Blackstone team last year. She really helped to make those Lynchburg girls move around and did she help to roll up the score? I'll say!

And now for the centers, Ruth Phelps, Sue Eastman and Evelyn Mann. Ruth Phelps, jump center, is the girl that "reaches out" and "pulls in" the ball and then passes it on. Is there any wonder that we beat Lynchburg when we have every position filled with such "grand players"? Sue Eastman started off as side center, and Sue and Ruth played "ring around the rosy" with Lynchburg centers. Evelyn Mann substituted as side center, in the last of the game, and "there's no stopping her." "Dynamite comes in small packages!" Now, we will give credit to those girls who actually kept the Lynchburg forwards from "dropping the ball in the goal." They were starting off, Ellen Gilliam and Virginia Smith, and then later, they were substituted by "Pat" Gibson, Clotilde Jarman and Army Butterworth. All we can say about these girls, without filling pages, is just to say, "Fleet were their feet, fast did they guard—and well did they play."

Well now, who was the coach of such a team? And the answer is Miss Olive T. Iler, the coach who has "coached" more than one team to victory. A coach who has been patient, understanding, determined and one who knows "her stuff" about basket-ball! To her, we owe our thanks, as well as to those girls who were so anxious to play and keep us on top! After all, she is the nucleus around which all the rest has been added.

To the cheer leaders, Will Scott, Mary Lib Slater and Macon Raine, and the score keeper and time keeper, Virginia Baker and Mary Bowles, we say thank you! To the student body, who helped support the team, we also thank and say, "we hope you enjoyed seeing your school be the victorious one—and only—S. T. C."

Black Leads in Style Parade With Touch of Vivid Colors

As soon as the season rounds the first of the year you want to disavow winter with some salute to spring. But be careful—don't be too hasty, don't rush the season too quickly. February is still midwinter and if you begin living in printed dresses while the snow is still thick on the ground, you'll be bored with them when spring arrives.

If you're spending the winter in our section of the country, avoid any printed dress that is too botanical or variegated in color. And, above all, avoid wearing a printed dress unless your coat is full length. Nothing looks more inconsistent than a printed silk dress showing beneath a short fur coat. Black is still the classic thing to wear, and, pointed up with a contrasting color, makes an effective compromise with the season.

Now, you might like a few tips on things people will look at twice: a chiffon in symphony colors a swirl, of grey, green, violet, marve; for the brunette are all black costumes with elbow-length white gloves; hair brushed back from the forehead; a pastel-colored tweed under furs. And you must have a hat that rolls. If it rolls, it's right.

Junior Sing Pictures March Of Time of College Life

Time marches on! And so with the impersonation of the New Year by Sarah Graham, the Juniors presented the last Sing given by the different classes.

The first scene gave the audience an idea of what Mardi Gras is like. The couples departed from the dancing long enough to have the grand parade. Will Scott as one of the judges awarded the prize, "the first booth in Shannon's" to Bruce Crowell for the best costume and for giving an excellent performance on the harmonica. Gay Stieffen tapped her way into honorable mention while Scotty McAllister gave an interesting monologue of a Scot telling a story.

The second scene showed the annual May Day. The court was made up of the best-looking boys with Will Scott as "May King". After the butterfly dance of Kitty Jamison the curtain fell on May Day.

Graduation was the next with Charlie French, played by Ruth Montgomery, awarding the diplomas. The students, very undignified in their smocks, trucked up to receive their degrees. Dr. Jarman was detained because he had to play a game of golf according to the excuse that Miss Bugg, Evelyn Hastings, gave.

Father Time marched on to close the school year. The curtain fell upon the last of the Class Sings.

of the advisability of having an advisory council for the Freshmen to help them "find themselves" and map out their courses, as many of them do not know where their true interests lie. Often mere trivialities cause them to change their course entirely. She stressed the importance and need of getting a well rounded and well balanced course.

These speeches were followed by comments and discussion by the group. Dr. Wynne enlarged on these speeches by explaining to the group the matter of curricula: that there is a great demand at the present for women in the field of dentistry, especially as children specialists. In the choice of electives he told them of finding girls with an unbalanced course; they have narrowed themselves by following only their interests or the lines of least resistance.

Educator Advises Youth to Follow Creed of Don'ts

Dr. Niles Carpenter, dean of the School of Social Work at the University of Buffalo, presented a creed of eleven "don'ts" yesterday to almost 1,000 delegates to the Western New York Conference as an aid in helping them out of the dilemna of unemployment.

Uurging the young persons to "'get in training and keep in training" is an occupation, Dr. Carpenter presented these "dont's."

"Don't forget—your first job is a continuation of your education.

"Don't expect a high wage at first.

"Don't follow the crowd—it's usually wrong.

"Don't go into a job you don't like. It won't like you.

"Don't forget you must never stop learning.

"Don't oversell yourself to yourself. It's better to be a first-class second-class man than a second-class first-class man.

"Don't think you're going forward when you're drifting sideways. A rolling stone not only gathers no moss but frequently cracks.

"Don't mistake the treadmill for a stepladder. You must frequently take a temporary loss of rank to get set to go up.

"Don't try for easy money. It's uneasy money, often dirty money, and usually dangerous money.

"Don't take a job morally and ethically out of tune with the times.

"Don't forget your job is more than a job—it's part of your obligation to the social order."

Honor Fraternity Taps Five Leaders In Student Body

Miss Winnie V. Hiner is Advisory Member

JUNIORS CHOSEN

Leadership Qualities Are Stressed By Head

Five Juniors, in whom qualities of leadership have been found, were recognized this morning at the chapel hour by the Joan Circle of Alpha Kappa Gamma, in its second tapping service of the school year. These girls who have been recognized for their outstanding service to the school, and the spirit in which their service has been rendered, are Ruth Phelps, Madison Heights, Va.; Ruth Montgomery, South Hill, Va.; Jennie Belle Gilliam, Petersburg, Va.; Mary Harrison Vaughan South Boston, Va.; and Isabel Plummer, Petersburg.

Miss Winnie V. Hiner, treasurer of the college, has been chosen as an advisory member of Alpha Kappa Gamma. In her, too, is recognized that spirit of service which Alpha Kappa Gamma fosters.

Dr. Jarman opened the service with the reading of the Alpha Kappa Gamma scripture, the twelfth chapter of Romans, after

Dr. Jeffers Talks At A.C.E. Meeting

His Speech Justifiies Elementary Science

The regular meeting oft he Association of Childhood Education was held in the Student Building Lounge on Thursday evening at 7:00 o'clock.

After the business session the meeting was turned over to Dr. George W. Jeffers who spoke on "Science in the Elementary Grades."

His first thoughts were along the lines of this problem, "Are we justified in putting science in the elementary grades?" He said that since science is so much around us in America and the men of the street know so little about it that the best medium to teach them is through the elementary school. The most important aspect, he said, is to get people to look at things in the same way the scientist looks at them.

The science which is taught in the elementary grades is as Dr. Jeffers put it "a sort of integrated hash from the child's point of view."

In his final summary he showed the great future in specializing in the field of elementary science. The increase in leisure time is one thing that give a need for science to be taught as a help in the investigation of hobbies. Another thing that was pointed out was that there isn't a single really well prepared elementary science teacher in Virginia, also there is a lack of writers of popular books on science.

Sophomore Class Gives Production

Mother Goose Finds Herself Modern at S. T. C.

Thursday night at 8:15 the curtains parted for the Sophomore Class Production, Mother Goose Goes to Town, which depicted the famous Nursery Rhyme characters as ultra-sophisticated moderns in the twentieth century to the tune of "swing music" and bright puns.

The prologue of "Mother Goose Goes to Town" took us back centuries to the rhyme, "The Old Woman in the Shoe", who gave an entertainment for her children and friends. Among those who attend the party are Mother Goose, The Crooked Man, Lucy Lockett, Georgie Porgie, Jack Spratt, and Mrs. Spratt. The prologue ends when Jack and Jill come running in and fall.

The first act opened in Old King Cole's Court many years later. The King, his court, and friends have become very modern and

Athletic Association Gives Sing Saturday

The Athletic Association presented Sing Saturday in the form of two monologues and a skit. Pat Gibson delivered the first monologue, which was a one-sided conversation on a train between an old maid and a young college girl. Following her recitation, Dot Fisher sang a solo, "Who is Silvia" somewhat shakily. The second monologue was given by Mabel Burton concerning the wooing of a young mountain maiden by a tough mountaineer. The skit was read by Mabel Burton while Ruth Phelps as the villian captured Dot Fisher the unwilling lassie and tied her to the railroad tracks. Pat Gibson, the hero rescued Dot and (as the villian left cursing) attained her hand in marriage.

Puppet Show

Lanuage Clubs Plan Annual Costume Bazaar

The annual French-Spanish Bazaar will be held Monday, February 15 from 4:00 to 6:00 in Miss Coulling's art room Similar bazars have been held by the language department in previous years and have proved educational as well as entertaining. At this time Miss Smithey Miss Draper and Miss Nichols are enabled to exhibit notebooks, maps and various other articles which have been made in their classes depicting the customs of the countries, and developments in the various languages. A close glimpse of the life in France and Spain will be shown. French and Spanish money will be used, and your money will be changed as you enter and as you leave. There will be programs of French and Spanish songs, dances, and plays. The special attraction is a puppet show. Booths of candy and dolls will be sold. The dolls will be dressed in French and Spanish costumes. Tables, imitating the sidewalk cafes of the Rue de la Paix, will be provided for those who wish sandwiches, tea, or hot chocolate. Everyone is invited to come and spend an enjoyable afternoon at the French-Spanish Bazaar. Admission is 5c.

S.T.C. Basketeers Win Over Wingate

Farmville Triumphs With Score of 25-16

Last Friday night Farmville's varsity met the Wingate, N. C. team in what proved to be one of the hardest fought and fast-moving games of the season. Farmville soon took the lead, though, and after the first quarter the invaders offered no serious threat, the game ending with a 25-16 score in favor of S. T. C.

This game gave us an opportunity to see some of our freshman material in action, and from all evidence we need have no worry about the future.

The line-up follows:

Farmville	Wingate
Hudgins, cap., forward	Rimmer
Carroll, forward	Lovelace
Phelps, center	Gatkins
Eastham, s. center	Hancoth
Gilliam, guard	Brewer
Bibson, guard	Pittman

Substitutes: Farmville—Adams, Fischer, Chambers, forwards; McConnaughey, center; Jarman, Bolick, Butterworth, Smith, guards.

Wingate—Griffin, center; Hancoth, s. center.

Referee: M. Dabney.

Valentine's Day is Possessor of Interesting Past History

February 14th! What a world of romance that date could tell if it could only talk and reminisce. It could tell how St. Valentine once made himself beloved because of his extreme goodness to people in trouble. It could tell how after his death this date was celebrated as a day for the giving of gifts. It was known as St. Valentine's Day in memory of the kind old man and became associated mainly with the giving of love tokens.

In the days of hooped skirts, laborious efforts were spent by romantic swains in the attempt to write poems that would cause red lips to curve in pleasure. Lacy "valentines" bedecked with red hearts and cupids caused many eye-lids to drop discretely as cheeks unconsciously revealed the

Escorted Princesses Enter Before Queen

Dancers and Singers Entertain Queen With Act; Out-of-town Judges Choose Winning Costumes

Susan Lane of Altavista was crowned queen of Mardi Gras last night by Jack Urmine of Hampden-Sydney in a brilliantly decorated gymnasium.

Mary Katherine Ninenger and Nancy Taylor, as heralds, announced the queen's approach, and before her marched eight princesses clad in purple, green, blue, and red with black mantillas, escorted by mess jacketed princes. The queen's dress was all white and her crown was a white lace mantilla, brought in by Nan Armistead, as page.

When the queen was seated a program was given in her honor. Mary Joyner Cox and Gay Steiffen danced a tanko and Gwen Bell tapped. Virginia Lee Pettis sang, "You Do the Darndest Things", and "Don't Mention Love to Me". freshman trio: Grace Waring, Sara Keesee, and Eloise Whitney, rendered "Moonlight and Shadows." After the program, the queen led the princesses around the gym and the grand march of everybody in costume began. The judges: Mrs. R. E. Garland and Mrs. Lloyd Whitaker of Farmville, and Mrs. Pegram of Petersburg selected from the unusual display Madeleine McGlothlin and Bob Loving who represented a monkey and organ grinder respectively, as the cutest couple; Lula Wyndham in a white model from "Camille" as the wearer of the most beautiful costume, and Mildred Harry in a pioneer dress made of sacks as the most original. Prizes were awarded and dancing resumed to the tune of Charlie Parrish and his Virginians.

Among the chaperons invited for the occasion were: Miss Mary White Cox, Mrs. Laing, Miss Moran, Mrs. Butler of Norfolk, Mrs. A. L. Seward and Mrs. R. Gilliam, of Petersburg, and Mrs. W. Dodd of Richmond.

Coyner Announces Plans for Holiday

Changes Are Made In Celebration of Day

The Founder's Day Committee has almost completed the plans for this year's celebration of that day. Several changes have been made in the usual program for the day. There will not be a Founder's Day dinner on Saturday night for anyone except the house guests. The speeches will take place in the auditorium instead of the dining room as has always been the previous arrangement.

Mr. M. B. Coyner chairman of the Founder's Day Committee has announced the following tentative program:

Sodalitas Latina Has Valentine's Meeting

On Thursday afternoon, February 4, the Latin Club, Sodalitas Latina, had its regular meeting.

The program, in keeping with the season was on Valentine's Day. Janie Lee Young explained its origin and Sudie Yager gave an account of the customs of different countries practiced through the ages on this holiday. Katharine Pilcher concluded the program by reciting a valentine poem. After the program, the members present played an appropriate game and refreshments were served.

Debate Club Plans Season's Schedule

Delegates From Here Will Speak Elsewhere

On Wednesday afternoon, February 3rd, there was a call meeting of the Debate club to arrange a temporary schedule for this season. The following tentative schedule was arranged:

Feb. 17—University of West Virginia, here
Feb. 22—Erskine University, here
Mar. 1—Waynesburg here
Mar. 4—Bridgewater, there
Mar. 4—Harrisonburg, there
Mar. 12—Randolph-Macon Men's College, there
April 13—Wheaten, here

The club also expects to send deleates to two conventions. The Pi Kappa Delta Convention will meet at Johnson City, Tenn., April 2nd and 3rd. The Pi Kappa Delta Convention was held last year at Houston, Texas. Gertrude Levy, Farmville's representative held her place in the national oratorical contest until the last round. Debate teams have not attended the Pi Kappa Delta Convention in recent years for they have been held in distant states.

IN MEMORIAM

The distressing accident which ended in the loss of one of our former students, Tyler Wood, is deeply felt by all who knew her.

She was a member of the Class of '38 and served as vice-president the one year she was here. Tyler was greatly loved and admired by her host of friends, and entered whole-heartedly into the spirit of our college life.

We regret that she did not return to Farmville, but having known her we feel we have gained from an outstanding and beautiful character much that time cannot erase.

To the memory of our beloved friend we dedicate these lines with the assurance that those who knew her and associated with her always found her worthy of every trust placed in her.

We extend to her family our sincere feeling and heartfelt sympathy.

LENT

And now we come to that season of the year for self-discipline, known as Lent. It is a time when we may examine ourselves closely for defects great and small—a New Year for our souls, as it were. If, during this short six weeks period, we could deny ourselves something we would probably find that when Lent is over we would be better persons for having exercised our will. We might try dispensing with so-called "strong language". Or we might give up those seemingly inconsequential, yet terribly important, remarks we have to say about nearly everybody we know. For forty-five short days let's try it.

"Where's mother?" was the inquiry received by John Higgins, of Depauw University, in a letter from his father in New Albany. "I don't know where your father is," came in a letter from his mother the same day—so John went home to tell each of the flood-separated parents where the other could be found—and they were only two miles apart.

Phil Dessauer, a columnist at Oklahoma City University, recently called attention to the need of new typewriters for student use by classifying the old machines in the following manner:

"The common type is known as the 'Hawaiian' or 'Hula model'. It shimmies. Number two is the 'Love-bird type'. Every part is stuck on some other part, and the keys are stuck on themselves.

"The 'Hop-Skip-and-Jump' variety is the Jesse Owens of its regiment. It always goes twice as fast as the typist.

"Number four is the 'Journalistic Special'. It is nature's great boon to the lead pencil industry. A sort of aviator-type machine. The keys always look over the field before they land.

"The last model is known as the 'Secretary'. It slips into your lap at the slightest provocation."

"He did I dirt, dern he.
Me not knowed him wuz a flirt.
To all those in love, me forbid—
That they be done like I been did
Dern he. Me hate he.
Me wish him were died.
Him told I him loved I.
Dern him lied."

"I loved her,
She loved me,
We both loved each other.
I went out,
She went out,
We both went out with another."

Rotunda Reverberations

You girls who had to sit home Saturday night because you couldn't go to the dances at H.-S. may heave a sigh of relief now—they are over. One consolation about those fraternity dances is that they can't last forever.

Wasn't Mardi Gras grand and didn't Sue make a gorgeous queen? The court really showed up swell too! Have you ever seen so many cute as well as pretty costumes? This idea of having the dance in the middle of the week isn't half bad either—look at the stags we had. They wouldn't give you a chance to take the conventional three steps with any lady. That wasn't so good in some cases though.

A certain senior, whose face has been dark and gloomy for over a week, has suddenly become the most cheerful person on campus. The old adage of "Love will win out" has surely proved true in her case and gives us other dubious girls a ray of hope.

The next time any of you have a boy up to see you on Sunday instead of making him take you out to supper bring him in the dining hall. It's being done this year or is it, Prince?

Miss Moran should be more careful when she tells her freshman class that the next time the class meets they are going to take a trip to Africa. Poor Jane and Erma went to class all prepared in white linen suits.

I've just discovered some hidden talent in the Senior class. Lucy P. can play a violin after six years of training and in such a way that even Rubinoff would feel bad about his playing.

Those playful lovers, Army and Jack, had to be separated Saturday, because he went home, but we see everything's O. K. now—they were back in the "rec" Sunday night—adding to the noise as usual!

Robert Taylor still adds a thrill to S. T. C.'s every day life. At least Ruth Montgomery has decided he'd do. Livian Powell has a name for it—it won't be quoted, however.

Polly Ware is a wise girl—in vital ways, 'tis said. As for Elsie Dodd, she's strong for General Electric.

Ho hum! The night is-er-old. Must turn in. By the way, I'll take camellias!

Miracle

Who is in love with loveliness,
Need not shake with cold;
For he may tear a star in two,
And frock himself in gold.
Who holds her first within his heart,
In certain favor goes;
In his roof tumbles, he may find Harbor in a rose.
—Lizette Reese

Tread

These be
Three silent things:
The falling snow . . . the hour
Before the dawn . . . the mouth of one Just dead.
—Adelaide Crapsey

I burn my candle at both ends
It will not last the night
But oh, my foes and oh, my friends,
It gives a lovely light.
—Edna St. Vincent Millay

Preparedness

For all your days prepare
And meet them ever alike;
When you are the anvil, hear—
When you are the hammer, strike.
—Edwin Markham

The Heart Asks Pleasure First

The heart asks pleasure first;
And then, excuse from pain;
And then those little anodynes
That deaden suffering.
And then to go to sleep;
And then if it should be
The will of its Inquisition,
The liberty to die.
—Emily Dickinson

November Night

Listen . . .
With faint dry sound,
Like steps of passing ghosts,
The leaves, frost crisp'd, break from the trees
And fall.
—Adelaide Crapsey

I Shall Not Care

When I am dead and over me bright April
Shakes out her rain drenched hair,
Though you should lean above me broken-hearted,
I shall not care.
I shall have peace, as leafy trees are peaceful
When rain bends down the bough;
And I shall be more silent and cold hearted
Than you are now.
—Sara Teasdale

Destiny

The wind doth wander up and down,
Forever seeking for a crown;
The rose, in stillness on a stem,
Inherits love's own diadem.

Open Forum

Dear Editor:

In every large group there are a few persons who seem to disregard personal property. In a student body as large as ours, persons of the above mentioned type cannot be tolerated—especially when it comes to taking the Rotundas out of the faculty mail-boxes.

What would we students think if we were deprived of our Rotundas for a single week? Then consider the fact that some of the faculty members have had their Rotundas taken from their boxes as much as three weeks in succession. The faculty pay for their Rotundas and are just as interested in knowing what is happening among our student body as we students are.

Not only is the fact that the faculty members are deprived of their Rotundas of importance but the whole problem involves a question of honor. Every student here should be making herself into a desirable citizen who has a community consciousness rather than a selfish attitude. Did you sign the Honor Code just as you would have a scrap of meaningless paper? Or did you realize that you were pledging your honor as a promise to abide by all the rules of citizenship. Surely we do not want anyone in our student body who will break this pledge by taking that which does not belong to her.

If the cap fits you, consider the matter unselfishly and remember that the "injury of one is the concern of all."

—A Student

PRO 'N CON

Valentine's day is almost here. The same question and the same hope comes to many hearts and minds. Does the answer to that question mean so much? Yes, a great deal, but listen to the significance it used to have and be glad (or sorry) it has no longer.

On the eve of St. Valentine's Day young people of both sexes used to meet and each of the men would draw a name of a girl. Each gentleman thus got a lady for his valentine, and he became her valentine and was bound to be faithful to her for a year.

Contributions to the Red Cross disaster relief fund totaled $14,110,000 on February 5, and we may feel certain this amount continued to increase. That is a large amount of money, but its bulk came from no one place. Had citizens all over the country not done their part, that figure could not have been reached and the relief it made possible could not have been administered.

We should feel proud of the response S. T. C. girls made to the call and for their fine spirit of cooperation.

And Mardi Gras is gone but not forgotten! It was quite a festive occasion and Susan made a stately queen.

It seems that it has long been a time of considerable celebration, even of eating as many pancakes as possible on the day before the beginning of Lent. Since 1857 New Orleans has been famous for the manner in which it celebrated Mardi Gras—so named in New Orleans. By masquerade balls and other elaborate entertainments the rapid tempo and festive spirit is kept up day and night.

To be sure, our own Mardi Gras celebration was on quite a smaller scale, but it was big enough to make us feel the need of a little more sleep in classes.

We all know that adaptation to usefulness is the important thing. Did you know that the eye of the eagle is twice as heavy as the eagle's brain?

Germany gets more and more independent of the outside world every day. Wine bottled in Germany hereafter will have instead of a cork, a plug of German wood, because the cork does not grow in Germany. This will save 10,000,000 marks a year, spent abroad for corks.

Our Central American neighbor Nicaragua, forbids all slot machines and other gambling devices in that country. All must be destroyed.

Nicaragua's government says such machines teach children to gamble and their workers are parasites of the worst kind, making a profit of 68 cents on the dollar.

Where is that America which in last November showed such a decisive trend toward liberalism? Will it be "the people" who decide the fate of F. D. R.'s new plan to pack the Court, or will it be subject to the opinions of experts? When it comes to the protection of American Democracy even from New Deal legislation, there seems to arise an enormous amount of conservatism from every rank and file. "A symposium Cartoon Comment" in a recent daily newspaper presents one view on the situation.

"Gone With the Wind" is now featuring another phase of local color. Four southerners, society girls, are soon to be tested for the lead in the moving picture production of this current novel. Who will be the Scarlet O'Hara of our Southland?

Who, in our generation, will be remembered by contemporary and future critics with such unprejudiced praise as has been bestowed upon the late Elihu Root? "Brains and character are always badly needed in every country. Mr. Root had both in ample measure" and " . . . over a long span of years his was the finest mind in public life on this continent, probably the world" are typical opinions that have been expressed.

Presbyterian Seniors Entertained at Tea

Reverend and Mrs. Hollingsworth entertained the members of the Presbyterian church from the Senior Class with a delightful tea at their home on Wednesday afternoon, February 10. Miss Mary was also present at the tea.

Those attending were Elizabeth Booth, Sara Buchannan, Ruth Crumley, Merwyn Gathright, Martha Hamlet, Lelia Hill, Dorothy Hutcheson, Lucile Rhodes, Anne Scales, Mary Lib Slater, Rose Somers, Virginia Tilman, Nancy Wall, Ruth Dunnington, Betty Rivers and Margaret Watkins.

Week-enders Journey Hither And Yon With Gay Hearts

In spite of the dismal gray skies, many of our S. T. C. girls journeyed from their Alma Mater this week-end, with sunshine in their hearts.

Many went "trucking" to the University of Virginia dances. They were: Nancy Cooley, Victoria Gillette, Lelia Hill, Eugenia Jolly, Lois Jenkins, Rose Moore, Kathleen McCann, Dorothy Rudder, Katherine Roberts, Eugenia Reeves, Virginia Tilman, Marjorie Wicks, Margaret Eckford.

Those who attended other dances were: Jacqueline Adams, R.-M. W. C., Lynchburg: Frances Bryan, Clemson, S. C.; Betty Harwood, Mary Virginia Walker, and Peggy Young, Atlanta, Ga.; Mary Hubard, V. E. S.

Others visited and their destinations were:

Richmond: Bonnie Avery, Elizabeth Conner, Kathryn Cox, Doris Eason, Julia Furnival, Helene Greene, Evelyn Kreger, Lloyd Kelly, Kitty Morrison, Elizabeth Morris, Margaret Thorpe, and Neva Yancey.

Lynchburg: Virginia Allen, Frances Barnes, Frances Gaskins.

Roanoke: Doris Carper, Lucile Mosley.

Athletic Association Entertains Wingate

The Y. W. C. A. lounge was quite a colorful place Friday night after the basketball game, when our S. T. C. team entertained the Wingate team with a reception. Miss Iler Miss Mary Dabney the referee, and Miss Roberts, the Wingate coach were present.

Frances Hudgins and Mabel Burton had charge of the refreshments which consisted of hot chocolate and Longwood buns.

Fashion Questionnaire

Question: What is spring's star of promise?

Answer: The jacketed dress; the color beige with black accents.

Question: What is the two-piece suit and blouse to be?

Answer: Its bolero is headed for fame this season. Try the suit in gray with the blouse in butter yellow.

Question: What is the latest dress for evening?

Answer: A vast cloud of chiffon to swirl about your ankles when you dance; the skirt bordered in brilliance for emphasis. Splashy prints are also, the last word.

Question: What will the smart women wear in the way of coats?

Answer: Burly white lambskin—hip-length, and lined in vivid colored woolens.

Question: What does Paris predict for this season?

Answer: That boleros champion brevity and pepper the day and evening. That pockets will be placarded everywhere decorative, but part of the integral cut, placed high on the bosom. That fastenings will absorb universal attention: buttons, pompoms, stitchings—anything to give a refined feeling of decoration. That no hide-bound law will govern hats. That printed vests are quite the thing. That colored shoes aren't restricted to dance floors and country paths. The darker hued of them have taken to city streets. That black is by no means forgotten in this rush of color. And that, finally, everyone will move heaven and earth to have some imaginative jeweles.

Farmville Alumnae Attract Attention

Katherine Alice Hoy is Wed in Quiet Ceremony

Miss Katherine Alice Hoy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Hoy of Charlotte Courthouse, Virginia, became the bride of Mr. George Irvan Whetsell of Bowman, S. C., in a quiet but lovely service at the home of the bride's brother, Mr. Edwin H. Hoy, at Charlotte Courthouse, Va., February 2, 1937. The ceremony was performed in the presence of the immediate families by the Rev. A. C. Hopkins.

The bride is a graduate of Farmville State Teachers College and for the past several years has been teaching in Franklin, Va. The groom was graduated from Wofford College, Spartansburg, S. C. and has since that time been located in business in Orangeburg, S. C.

ALL-STAR PEN

It Lets You SEE When to Refill

—hence won't run dry in classes or exams

Yes, thousands of students start to rate higher when they replace their old "blind-barrel" pens with this new Parker Vacumatic.

This is because it is people who are capable of rating high who go for this Pen in a big way, and because it is this kind of Pen—and only this kind—that can bring out the best that is in them.

Its Scratch-Proof Point of Platinum and Solid Gold writes like a zephyr. Unlike pens that hide the ink within the barrel, this laminated Pearl Beauty lets you SEE Days Ahead when it's running low. When held to the light it shows the ENTIRE Ink Supply—holds 102% More Ink than old-style.

It's the pen that received more votes than any other TWO makes of Pens COMBINED when 30 College Papers asked 4,699 students "Which pen do you own?" It was awarded by the All-America Board of Football to 90 nominees for the All-America Team of 1936.

Go at once to any good store selling pens and try this revolutionary invention. Identify the genuine Parker Vacumatic by this smart ARROW Clip,—this holds this Pen low and SAFE in the pocket. The Parker Pen Co., Janesville, Wis.

Cleans Your Pen As It Writes

Student Thinks of Things That Make People Familiar

It's funny how things remind you of people. Even little things brings back images of people and gay times that are past. For instance, when I think of certain colors I think of some people. Blue makes me think of Selma West and how pretty she looks when she wears that color. Red makes me think of how black Gay Steiffen's hair looks when she wears that brilliant color.

Hats definitely suit certain people. It takes people like Kathleen McCann to get by with ca-razy models and Ginny Carroll is infinitely the type for extreme sport ones. Sue Lane makes me think of tunics and wide belts and odd shaped buttons.

I think of soft music when I think of Jennie Belle Gilliam and of blues' songs when I think of Ann Hardy and her exotic type. I can easily picture Ruth Crumley in a spic and span kitchen as complete mistress of the situation.

And doesn't Sue Owens make you see an old fashioned portrait of a girl with bare shoulders and high curls? Lois Powell brings high heeled shoes and sheer stockings to my mind. Maybe it's because she models them so well. Pranks bring Charlotte Rice and her impudent grin to the front and a sophisticated hair-dress somehow, seems like Vera Ebel. Little things—that are valuable—are typical of Ruth Montgomery just as careless sweaters are of Army Butterworth.

Things do count and because of the people I associate them with often become lively and almost a part of those people.

Faculty Members Will Give Classes For U. of Virginia

Mix and Wynne to Teach at W. & M. Extension

Forty-two classes will be given in the Richmond Extension Division of the College of William and Mary and University of Virginia during the coming semester, it was announced yesterday. These courses are now open for registration and will begin meeting this week.

Visitors will be welcome during the first week, but after that time persons attending classes will be considered as students. Professors come from both the College of William and Mary and the University of Virginia.

Four new classes are offered this term. They are English and American folk games, dances and songs, taught by Richard Chase; the philosophy of education, taught by Professor J. P. Wynne; American folk music and balladry, by Miss Annabel Morris Buchanan and child development (kindergarten and primary), by Miss Grace Mix. The classes given by Mr. Chase and Miss Buchanan are under the College of William and Mary, while the other two are given by the University of Virginia.

This year however, five members of the Debate club with Dr. Walmsley will attend the convention. Delegates are expected from every state lat this convention.

The Grand Eastern Tournament will meet at Winthrop College, Rock Hill, S. C., April 8th, 9th, and 10th. This tournament is an exeriment in forensic activities initiated by Dr. Keith, debate coach at Winthrop College.

Teams were arranged so that each girl in the club could work on her debate. The plan is that every member should take some part in this schedule.

At this meeting, committees were appointed by the president, Anthelia Robinette, to take charge of the visiting teams.

Valentine Day Has Interesting History

feelings the eyes would have told.

Then people got less frank. The giver of a valentine did not linger to see the blushes and smiles of the honored miss. Instead, he dropped the token, rang the door-bell, and betook to his heels in haste. From the children of pre-teen age to big sisters and brothers, this was the happy custom. Great was the excitement at the time of St. Valentine.

Now in this age of practical-minded Americans, St. Valentine's Day still come to the front in less romantic ways, but it comes nevertheless. Perhaps the busy man will remember to send his wife some rose-buds or the besought beau of some modern miss will remember her sweet tooth with a box of Whitman's. Eagerly, she will tear the wrappers off to get inside. The difference between her and her grandmother is that she never even stops to admire the chubby cupids on the outside, and dear grandmother would have loved them!

SPORT SLANTS

(—By the Sport)

"We're back of you now Blue and White" rang out in the gym Friday night and the student body really lived up to their song. Hats off to you girls for your loyal support. Will and Mary Lib, we hope you have regained your voices by now. The team is off on a victorious start so let's come out and show your school spirit.

Congratulations, team, we are all proud of you, not only for your excellent teamwork but also for your good sportsmanship. With your spirit and your able coach we are expecting great things from you. More power to you in your coming games. We know you can do it.

By the way I hear that Bonnie has been trying to acquire the Wingate technique. With the warm weather coming on, there will be some more Monogram Club hikes so girls, loosen up your walking gait and hike with zest. You might even learn a long way to go to Longwood.

"Rah! Rah! Zip! Boom! Bah! That's what I learned in college." It looks as if our Freshmen have learned things from the way they walked away with an overwhelming victory from Crewe High School. Watch out, you other members of the Varsity Squad; the Freshmen are up and coming. They set an example of loyalty for the other classes to follow. Did you see the number of red suits sitting on the side line waiting to fight for their class if necessary? That's real class spirit. Let's see if the other classes can do as well. Congratulations, Chlotilde, for being captain of such a fine team. Congratulations also to Dot, Pat, Marie, Ruby, Sara, Elizabeth and all the others on the Freshman team. We hope you will be out for basketball again next year.

With basketball season lasting only a few more weeks, you girls who are interested in volley ball and baseball, be on the lookout for notices of practices.

Well—good luck to you in your athletics till I see you again next week—"We're back of you now Blue and White."

which Virginia Leonard, president of the group conducted the tapping service. She stated facts disclosing the incentive which led to Alpha Kappa Gamma's organization on this campus. She gave the purposes which the fraternity strives to attain, and the qualities of leadership it stands for, stressing the importance of quiet leadership found in co-operative service, as well as the individual leadership of the individual personality. Virginia's concluding words were: "Such leaders have been found among you.

Mary Harrison Vaughan has found journalism the chief field in which her leadership has been prominent. She is feature editor on the Rotunda staff, following two years' work as reporter on the staff of that publication. She is editor for the second year of The Farmville Quarterly Review, the college magazine. Her originality and literary talent will be seen in May Day, under her chairmanship of the theme for that event. Mary Harrison is a member of Beorc Eh Thorn, English society Alpha Phi Sigma, national honorary society for scholarship, the Sigma Sigma Sigma sorority, the Cotillion Club, and a member of this year's May Court.

Isabel Plummer has shown ability in the capacity of costumer for the Dramatic Club and is head of the costuming department in that organization. She is the costume chairman of May Day for this year, and is president of De-Ho-Ec club, a group of those girls taking home economics. Isabel's work on the Y. W. Council is most efficient and she is treasurer. She is serving her second year as a member of the chapel committee. She belongs to the Cotillion Club, the Sigma Sigma Sigma sorority, and she was chosen as both a member of the May Court and a Mardi Gras princess.

Ruth Phelps began her freshman year as all-round athlete. She has been both a class and varsity member every season on the hockey squad, the base ball team, and the basketball team, on which now holds the position of jump center. Last spring Ruth carried away first place in the archery competition. In the scholastic field she is again a leader, her attainments having been recognized by: Alpha Phi Sigma, of which she is president, and a member of the masters degree; by Kappa Delta Pi, national education fraternity; Sigma Pi Rho, national Latin fraternity; Sodalitas Latina; and Beorc Eh Thorn, English society. Ruth has served on the Rotunda staff as reporter and assistant business manager. She has been president of the Choral Club for two years, a member of the college choir, the Dramatic Club, and the A. A. Council.

Ruth Montgomery has been active in Y. W. work, being elected to membership on the Freshman Commission in her first year here, and serving as the Freshman Counselor of that group this year. Ruth's work has been particularly outstanding on the Virginian staff. In her sophomore year, she was assistant business manager, and is now the photographic editor. She is a member of the Dramatic Club, the Sigma Sigma Sigma sorority, and was chosen to be in the May Court last year. Ruth is now manager of the Cotillion Club .

Jennie Belle Gilliam has held a position on the varsity squad of the basketball team for the past three years, a member of the hockey team, the baseball team, and was recognized for her athletic ability with the office of treasurer on the A. A. Council. Jennie Belle stands high in scholarship, belonging to Alpha Phi Sigma, national honorary society, and Kappa Delta Pi, national fraternity in education. Beginning with her freshman year, she has been class representative on the Student Standard Committee, and is secretary at this time. During her sophomore year, she was monitor on the chapel committee, and is the present chairman of that group. She is a member of the Dramatic Club, De-Ho-Ec club, the Cotillion Club, the Sigma Sigma Sigma sorority a member of the May Court for three years, and also in Mardi Gras court.

College Freshmen Defeat Crewe Hi

Class of '40's Team Wins by Score of 25-16

The Freshman basketball squad played a game with Crewe High School Tuesday afternoon, February 9. Both teams were on the court ready to begin promptly at 4 o'clock. The Freshmen, with a large number of upper classmen, attended the game and showed the team that they were backing it through the songs and yells.

Crewe began with a bang! But soon the Freshmen made everyone know that there was nothing to fear. At the end of the first half the score was: Crewe 10 Freshmen 18. Both teams displayed excellent sportsmanship and good team work.

The Freshmen held the lead—the final score being 29-14.

The line-up:

Farmville	Crewe
Fisher, forward	Cramer
Adam, forward	Crafton
Dix, center	Moore
Jarman, guard	Taylor
Gibson, guard	Poole
Nimmo, side center	Weeks

Substitutes: Crewe — Wilson; Farmville — Vaden, Blackwell, Newman, Kent, Mann, Crockett and Callis.

laugh at Jack and Jill who have just recovered consciousness after their long sleep for being dressed so old-fashioned.

For Jack and Jill's entertainment and amazement, the King orders the Swing Trio to sing "One, Two, Button Your Shoe" and "Moonlight and Shadows". Their costumes are black tuxedos. Next the blackbird chorus entertains, come in a make-believe pie to dance. Their costumes are black with stripes of paper to represent the feathers and yellow paper over their noses to represent the birds' beaks. Old King Cole and his wife, the Queen of Hearts, as well as Simple Simon gave evidences of enjoying this thoroughly. The King's costume is a black tuxedo and his crown is gold; the Queen wears a crown of hearts and a white dress with hearts on the bottom of it. Simple Simon is dressed in red checked shorts with a black coat, white shirt and red tie. When the curtain closes, Jack is going into the meadow with Lucy Lockett with whom he has become infatuated so Jill goes with Georgie Porgie.

The second act, "In the Meadow" opens with the see-saw dance. All of the girls are dressed in short dresses. As soon as the see-saw dance is over, Jill and Lucy Locket enter and Jack is undecided about his two loves. Jill and Georgie Porgie enter and sing "But What Shall I Tell My Heart". Little Bo-Peep enters crying because "she had lost her sheep and her best friend won't tell her." Mary Had a Little Lamb and Little Boy Blue do a dance. As this scene ended Jack and Jill are still too stubborn to admit they love each other and make up.

At the begining of the Third Act, Jill goes to Mother Goose for advice about Jack. Mother Goose tells her not to worry that Jack is also coming to see her and she'll fix everything. Jill goes into the garden to wait just before Jack comes in. Mother Goose sends him to her in the garden. Lucy Lockett enters just before Georgie Porgie. Both are looking for Jack and Jill. While they are there, the Queen of Hearts gives them one of her famous love tarts and they fall in love again. Jack and Jill come on the stage and announce that they are going to get married.

The wedding of Jack and Jill was the last scene of this entertaining production. The bride wears a white dress and veil and the court, acquamarine chiffon dresses. Lucy Lockett, the maid of honor, wears white .

The curtain closes with the entire company singing "The House that Jack Built."

Between acts, Frances Steed sang "Goodnight My Love"; Virginia Epes Irby sang "Cloe" and the Adkins twins danced. They sold some of the Queen's famous love tarts to the audience between the third and fourth acts. The money was to go to the Red Cross Flood Relief.

A letter addressed to "The Bednesota" was finally turned over to the department of entymology by the partially puzzled university postmistress.

Artist Dance Group Presents Program

Mrs. Fitzpatrick Directs Orchesis in Recital

On Saturday, February 20, at eight P. M., Orchesis, the artist dance group, will present a recital in the auditorium. This program, which is the second of its kind to be given in the college, is under the direction of Mrs. Louise R. Fitzpatrick.

The dances and costumes are original, being made by the girls with the valuable aid of Mrs. Fizpatrick. The music for several of the dances is original too. Mrs. Fitzpatrick who has studied under Charles Wiedman and Doris Humphries at Bennington, is an able instructor and has done an excellent work in training the girls.

The people in town as well as the Student Body have been invited to attend. Guests are expected from Sweetbriar and Randolph-Macon Woman's College.

A program of the dances follows—

Freshmen Present Bizarre Production on February 26th

Extra! Extra! Extra! Read all about it! Freshmen crash through with another of their original ideas! Production to be given in Rec! Cabaret style! Food! Colossal floor show! The date is Friday, February 26.

There are to be tables food, and a floor show. (Those of you who miss your night-club life will feel perfectly at home again). The floor show will be stupendous under the direction of Sara Keesee, Macon Raine, Hope Minter and Mary Mahone. These will be assisted by other able committees; Lula Windham, costumes; Ann Billups, food; Johnny Lybrook, ticket; Phil Schlobohm, advertising; Eliza Wise and Isabel Williamson, decorating. These gals assure us rollicking entertainment that we can't afford to miss.

Professor Speaks At Open Meeting

Alpha Phi Sigma Has Program on Music

On Tuesday night, February 16, at 7:30 o'clock, Miss Purdom talked to the members of Alpha Phi Sigma in the small auditorium. Her subject was "The Federal Music Project Under The W. P. A."

Miss Purdom told how under this project thousands of unemployed musicians were sent out by the United States government to teach music and music appreciation to the people in the rural sections and in the crowded city districts. She gave many interesting facts and data concerning this work and the great numbers of people reached and benefited by it.

In closing, Miss Purdom brought out the fact that one need not talk about music as "it speaks for itself." To illustrate this very excellent point, Frances Steed and Sara Keesee sang. Then Elizabeth Sieber and Elizabeth LeGrande played a violin duet.

West Virginia to Debate Thursday

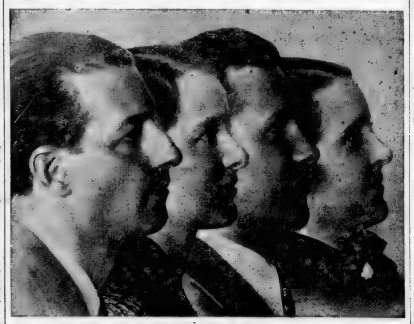
Dual Debate Here on Monday With Erskine

Thursday afternoon at 8 p. m., February 18, the affirmative team of West Virginia University will hold a debate here with our negative team. The question is; Resolved: That Congress shall be empowered to fix minimum wages and maximum hours for industry, the national Pi Kappa Delta question.

The two debaters from West Virginia University are Elizabeth Willetts and Martha Jane Williams who have both been active members of the debate squad, and have also won many oratorical and public speaking honors at various intercollegiate meets. Farmville will be represented by Pattie Bounds and Ruth Sears.

The debate is to be non-decision and will be excellent practice for both teams. The West Virginia team will also stop here, and will debate Hampden - Sydney College before leaving on a tour of points south. This trip carries them to North Carolina, Georgia and Florida.

Everyone is invited to attend the debate which will be held in the small auditorium.



On Monday night, February 22, at eight o'clock, there will be a dual debate here between Erskine College and Farmville. Anthelia Robinette and Evelyn Kreger will uphold the affirmative side of the question, and Ruth Sears and Pattie Bounds will give the negative side.

Erskine College, which has in the past years placed large emphasis on the forensic arts, has been noted for her wide activity and success in the field of debating and public speaking. The team that will arrive here Monday to debate has been on a northern trip on which they have debated in Pennsylvania, West Virginia, and Virginia.

Modern Language Bazaar Success

Puppet Show, Songs and Dialogues Featured

The Modern Language Bazaar was held Monday afternoon from 4:00 to 6:00 in Miss Coulling's art room. The room was attractively decorated in red and white, with red hearts placed on the tables. Girls dressed in French costumes sold French dolls. The Spanish group sold knick-knacks and candy.

A very interesting program was presented by the two departments in collaboration. Sara Keesee sang a French solo and Elizabeth LeGrande sang two Spanish classics. Both groups sang songs in chorus.

The feature of the afternoon was a Freinch puppet show. The girls who gave the dialogue were Bonnie Lane, Frances Hutcheson and Nan Throckmorton. Norvelle Montague and Louella La Fon cleverly worked the puppets. Tea was served.

"Beorc Eh Thorn" Bids New Girls

On Monday night, February 15, "Beorc Eh Thorn", the English honorary society, sent bids to thirteen girls. The formal initiation will take place Thursday night at 8 p. m. in the honor room.

The girls receiving bids were Kathleen Sawyer, Lillian Anderson, Sara Buhanan, Doris Carper, Erna Dickinson, Ann Dugger, Bessie Eberwine, Sarah Hayes, Frances Holloway, LeNoir Hubbard, Fanny Mae Putney, Gay Stieffen, and Selma West.

To follow the initiation, a very interesting program has been

You know, some time in the future, for one look at the faces of some of these girls around here that you don't want to forget you would give a goodly portion of your hard-earned salary. And it won't be possible, nine times out of ten. Wait till you gaze upon it, and have the Student Body coming at you with pen points to get your autograph! You'll grasp the cherished book hungrily, and wish it were yours. You'll be willing to forfeit your last allowance from home if you could only have one of your own, and be able to fall upon someone else's with your quill. Only think, you, who keep putting off your subscription! You've only till Monday, February 22, and then it's curtains for your last chance.

(Whew! Talk about a salesman—Oh boy!) Right this way, girls. Come to the table in the hall Tuesday, Wednesday or Thursday. Come Early! (It's to avoid the rush.) Now lend me your ears or you'll regret it, no kidding.

Student Standard Reviews Problem

Regulation of Student Extra - Curricula Work Discussed

The regular meeting of the Student Standard Committee was held Thursday afternoon at 5 o'clock. The committee discussed several changes which have been discussed by the faculty and students before. These changes were discussed in view of subjecting them to the Student Body for approval.

It was suggested that a girl be allowed to join only three honor societies. Under the present system many of our most capable girls are members of five or six honor societies. A girl who belongs to so many organizations is not able to really work effectively in any of them. If the number were limited then each girl would be given a better opportunity to develop in her respective societies.

The members of the faculty have been quite patient with the student body, but they do make one request. It is that productions and entertainment not be scheduled on week nights. Performances in the middle of the week cause too great a break in study.

Dr. Jarman Leaves For Louisiana Meet

Leading Educators to be Present at Meet There

Dr. Jarman left today, Wednesday, February 17, for New Orleans, Louisiana. He will represent Farmville State Teachers College at the meeting of The American Association of Teachers Colleges on February 19 and 20.

Dr. and Mrs. Wynne will leave the latter part of the week for New Orleans where Dr. Wynne will attend the meeting of The High School superintendents.

Enroute Dr. and Mrs. Wynne are planning to visit relatives in North Carolina and Mississippi.

Art Group Guest of Miss Coulling

Miss Coulling entertained the members of Gamma Psi, the art fraternity, with a banquet held Friday evening, February 12, in the College Tea Room. All the colors of the spectrum, black, and white were cleverly but simply arranged to represent rainbows on the table and around the lights. Tiny red hearts added the Valentine touch.

The guests were Miss Bedford, faculty adviser, and the active members.

Mr. Coyner Gives Plan for Program

In Chapel Tuesday morning, February 16, Mr. Coyner, chairman of the committee for the Founder's Day Program, explained the program for Founder's Day to the students. He urged that students not desiring to attend the dance do not ask for tickets. This will avoid congestion and confusion on the dance floor.

This year the gifts to the Boston Light Opera Company Present Drama

Both lovers of music and lovers of drama will be delighted when The Boston Light Opera Company presents "The Secret of Suzanna" tonight at 8:00 o'clock. This is the first time in several years that our Lyceum course has brought us a light opera, a form of entertainment which combines so skillfully light comedy and great music.

Four artists, Gertrude Ehrhart, soprano; Harriette Price, contralto; Wesley Coppiestone, tenor; and Hudson Carmody, bass, will sing in the light opera and in the Operatic Ensembles which will be presented as an additional feature of the program. They will be accompanied by Reginald Boardman, pianist.

"The Secret of Suzanna" is one of the finest examples of light opera in that field of entertainment. It is in the repertoire of almost every opera house in the world, including the Metropolitan. Not only will its music charm the listeners, but its zest and sparkle will captivate them as would a fine play. The movement and vitality of a play plus the rich and tilting music of real artists is a combination that few people can resist.

The Boston Light Opera Company is known throughout the country for the quality of its productions. This light opera is particularly recommended. The skill of the artists and the power and range of their voices merit true praise. It is thought by some that Mr. Carmody may eventually be sought out by the Metropolitan in its quest for American artists.

Following is the program for the evening:

The Boston Light Opera Company
Gertrude Ehrhart ..... Soprano
Harriette Price ..... Contralto
Wesley Copplestone ..... Tenor
Hudson Carmody ..... Bass
Reginald Boardman ..... Pianist
I. From L'Allegro ..... Handel
Haste Thee, Nymph
—Tenor and quartet
Come and Trip It
—Soprano and quartet
Or Let the Merry Bells Ring Out
—Tenor and quartet
II. Divinities Du Styz ..... Gluck
Miss Price
III. Come All Ye Lads and Lassies
—Wilson
Duet, La Regata Venziana
—Rossini
Miss Ehrhart and Miss Price
Duet from final scene of "The Magic Flute" ..... Mozart
Miss Ehrhart and Mr. Carmody
Quartet from "Rigoletto" ... Verdi

School Comediennes Presented at Sing Saturday Night

The week-end talent presented Sing last Saturday night and proved not to be so "weak" after all. The girls who remained at school were highly entertained.

Among the shiners on this program were Anna Shiflett and her bugle, "Gigi Rogers Yonce, and Elizabeth Kemp. Dot Fishcher kept the audience in an uproar in describing her trip to the farm. Blues songs were offered by Yetive Dawson, and Mary Page Huff. Kitty Pope made a hilarious attempt to show off her vocal talents and was given an overwhelming gong. Martha Haye, pardon, Virginia Ritchie, brought the audience to its feet and the curtains to a close with the singing of "Mister Paganini."

"LEST WE FORGET"

It seems that chapel has again lost the meaning for which it stands. We came back to our work in 1937 with refreshed minds and exalted spirits but it seems that we brought our old habits back instead of new ones.

There are several ways of viewing the chapel hour, which should appeal to the average college student. Let us consider that chapel is a relaxation period between the different classes where one's mind finds a rest in worship. The singing and devotionals give each individual a thought for the day. Although there are some who appear to be disinterested even in the fact that it is beneficial they do not realize that if they would arrive in chapel on time, be respectful and attentive, the chapel period or relaxation period as we have called it, would be much shorter. Those of us who sit in the rear of the auditorium could enjoy hearing the speakers and the programs that are sometimes presented. If we cannot be appealed to through the consideration of fellow students, why not think of the impression our student body makes upon visitors.

PREPAREDNESS

"I can get by tomorrow" is heard each night from the lips of many girls. Sometimes we wonder if some S. T. C. students haven't forgotten that they came to college for an education. Plenty of time is given for playing, but studies are just squeezed in between times. The study hour is filled with meetings, bridge games, and bull-sessions from which come no good. Shows and dates keep us from our books in the afternoon. Prom-trotting and frequent social visits keep the week-ends filled. Then come exams! Behind them roll in grades — F's and D's. Maybe we will get by tomorrow, but will we get by in the end?

Lines From Here — And There

Consolation

"Small clouds are sailing,
Blue sky prevailing;
The rain is over and gone!"
—Wordsworth

"I think of thee (oh mine the more if other eyes be sleeping!)
Whose greater noonday splendors the many share and see,
While sacred and forever, some perfect law is keeping
The late, the early twilight, alone and sweet for me."
—Guiney

"There is a strong wall about me to protect me:
It is built of words you have said to me"
—Davies

Here eyes are like forget-me-nots,
So loving, kind, and true;
Her lips are like a pink sea-shell,
Just as the sun shines through;
Her hair is like the waving grain
In summers golden light;
And, best of all, her little soul,
Is, like a lily, white.
—Kobbe

The year's at the spring
And day's at the morn;
Morning's at seven;
The hill-side's dew-pearled
The lark's on the wing;
The snail's on the thorn:
God's in his Heaven
All's right with the world.

Blow, bolw, thou winter wind
Thou art not so unkind
As man's ingratitude;
Thy tooth is not so keen
Because thou are not seen,
Although thy breath be rude.

How do I love thee? Let me count the ways.
I love thee to the depth and breadth and height
My soul can reach, when feeling out of sight
For the ends of Being and ideal Grace.
I love thee to the level of every day's
Most quiet need, by sun and candlelight.
I love thee freely, as men strive for Right;
I love thee purely, as they turn fro Praise.
I love thee with the passion put to use
In my old griefs, and with my childhood's faith.
I love thee with a love I seemed to lose
With my lost saints.—I love thee with the breath,
Smiles, tears, of all my life!—and, if God choose,
I shall but love thee better after death.

"The sun paints a picture of twilight
That only a dreamer sees;
It touches its brush to the breast of a thrush,
And etches designs on the trees.

All's right with the world!
—Browning

"Ah love! I shall not search your hands,
But look into your eyes."
—Ewing

"Sunset, . . . twilight, . . . and dark t follow, . . .
And thoughts of you through a mist of tears."
—Harding

"Lovely rose;
Half blown,
Half closed;
Dew-wet . .
I can't Forget
The sweetness brought,
By heaven's tears
Upon your heart.
—Katherine Roberts

Rest

Girls! We have an inspiration. Have you been feeling tired and grouchy for lack of sleep? Our inspiration is the simplest there is. Go to bed and sleep. We don't mean for you to sleep through classes but to sleep at night. . . Do your lessons during the day and early evening. Oh yes, we like to see the shows, too, but surely there is time to get a few lessons done before four o'clock.

Speaking from experience we say that sleep is the thing.

Good-night.

Rotunda Reverberations

And speaking of reverberations and the Rotunda—how about all those satchels out there last weekend? Have you ever? Records show that over two hundred checked out, and the fare-welling started on Wednesday! It's a pity more of us couldn't have gone to Blacksburg on Wednesday—Gay Stieffen came back an engaged woman—miniature 'n all. Congrats and stuff!

Kitty Fitz reports that she really did behave herself at V. P. I. Someone asked her if she believed that germs were carried in kisses, and she said, "Well, I don't know, but they cause plenty of heart troubles."

Are we supposed to admire those in our midst who profess to be feminine "gangbusters?" We never knew before that people could play bridge in the dark! It must be an art, and how about the rooms really becoming cells! It helps though to know that there's enough sportsship among some play-goers to 'fess up.

People come to college for various reasons, but from all signs, Vera came purely for the sake of Ed-ucation. They say Randolph-Macon has students of Ed-ucation also. But that's all right, Ebo—Stay in the game, show your sportsmanship—keep up the good fight—we know how you like to play.

Have you heard about the appin-dicitis in the Willis family? Say, Jean, just what did you go to Charlottesville for?

Smitty and Jennie Belle crashed through with delovely products of the garden this past week-end. Orchids to you! How graceful your Valentines must have looked hanging from your shoulders. Can't you see those two fair damsels trucking at V. P. I. now? Fact is—it beets everything we've ever heard tell. Do you think those boys carrot all for you gals?

Gigi, we're sorry to hear 'bout your blisters, but it sounds like it was a good excuse for sitting out dances. Is your foot Bruced? Your best Franz will tell you.

Scene in the rec—Dickie Burrell keeping the hearts of the fair damsels a-pitter with his piano selections—Sara Keesee without Dick—Walter Tower without Eason—Elizabeth Prince carrying a big stick and keeping the skirts off of her uniform—Nan—June—Frank Johns—No Reed—sweet (?) music—lights out—the ten thirty bell and another Saturday night is over.

Bunny's little sister made another killing at S. T. C. this week-end. Her admirers are becoming more numerous by the minute. How many pie-beds have to be accounted for? But that's not any worse than an older member of our student body who tied a string to a big Valentine and would pull it away when the person came to the door to pick it up. Waite, now!

By this time, everybody's sick of the candy they got for being so cute, and besides, it's time for dessert!

Spring Fashion Notes

Such a beautiful day as last Sunday made us all think of Spring. And hand in hand with Spring are fashions. Here are a few hints, girls—take them or leave them!

Hand-blocked and hand-stenciled silk prints will line many coats during the coming season. Many of them will be repeated in blouses.

Let a boxy ruffer be yours for the coming season. It should be a Gay Nineties ruffer, double-breasted abruptly, short and boxy. Wear it over your suit. A coat of grey covert cloth over a blue suit would be very stunning.

Don't let your suit be too mannish. Placarde it with pockets. Have uncreased revers. The jacket should be either fitted or boxy, and let it contrast in color. In a breast pocket have a fuchsia handkerchief, and in the hip-pocket, a bright green one.

The towering hat crowns sink to lower levels. You may go crownless, if you like. Have a childish Britton sailor, but be sure and wear it far on the back of your hear, else it won't look "1937". Along about Easter have riots of flowers. Primroses strung like a coxcomb over the ridge of the black helmet!

Your day gloves should be made of the same fabric as your beige, grey, maize, or blue dress. Your evening gloves shall be short, satin ones.

For dinner parties, go out in a slim, straight black dress topped with a ruffer, just as short and boxy as the day one. On your feet wear the new satin booties that reach to the ankle-bone. Dance in a dress of gauze, chiffon, or marquisetti. A combination of pink and cerise with gold accessories may be suggested.

Select your costume. Remember that clothes make the woman!

THE REVIEWING STAND

It seems probable that we'll hear no more about the General Motors sit-down strike, but our poltical leaders do not think that it was by any means "a strike to end strikes". The damage to the business and men involved is great, but there is also a good side to it. These strikes slow up the stock market and put a brake on the financial boom which seems imminent. Such a boom would inevitably result in another depression, proving disastrous not only to the people but also to the Democratic Party.

Speaking of sit-down strikes, have you heard about the recalcitrant Romeo who staged one in the living room of the home of the Girl of his Dreams. She had refused to "yay or nay" to his frantic proposals just once too often, so he marched in and hand-cuffed himself to the radiator (a big thrill) and announced that he intended to sit until she crashed through with her answer. The fair damsel dashed out with a gleam in her eye. A-ha! She will turn it into a publicity stunt, so she went to New York and broadcasted a sentimental "yes" over the radio to her patient suitor. Moral: Beware of holding out too long. Another might not hold on so tenaciously.

Observations

If I don't drive around the park,
I'm pretty sure to make my mark.
If I'm in bed each night by ten,
I may get back my looks again.
If I abstain from fun and such,
I'll probably amount to much,
But I shall stay the way I am,
Because I do not give a damn.
—Dorothy Parker

This seems to be a very popular attitude among some of our fine students. Personally, I'm all for "playing," but there is a time and place for everything. There is a whole lot in the saying that you remember the friends that you learned to know in college long after you forget the academic facts that you pored over. Nevertheless, you are bound to absorb a certain amount of the material placed before you, if you exert a certain amount of effort. Nobody really wants to be an ignoramus all of her life. They aren't just far-sighted enough to see that that is exactly what will happen if they only have the ambition to barely get through their classwork. So many college graduates are just "good-time Susies" with no thought for the future. Bear this in mind the next time you cut a class or don't prepare a lesson.

Founders Day is not far off. There will be lots of alumnae back and they will expect a great deal of the girls and rightly so. Although we never knew them before, we are expected to make them feel like the school is still a part of them and not that we are being polite and gracious from mere duty. Let's entertain them and show ourselves to the best advantage.

You girls who are either exulting or worrying over the result of dear old St. Valentine's Day, take note of this poem. It may be a bit exaggerated but I think we have something here:

"By the time you swear you're this,
Shivering and sighing,
And he vows his passion is Infinite, undying—
Lady, make a note of this:
One of you is lying."

If you are really down in the dumps and seriously contemplating the elevator shaft or some equally horrible method of suicide, read this and repent ye:

"Razors pare you;
Rivers are damp;
Acids stair you;
And drugs cause cramp;
Guns aren't lawful;
Nooses give;
Gas smells awful;
You might as well live."

SOCIALS

Blacksburg attracted many prom-trotting S. T. C. girls last week-end to V. P. I.'s mid-winter dances. Some girls enjoyed the allaying tunes of Jack Denny at Cotillion ,while others trucked over to the German Club with music by Barney Rapp. Both clubs had Valentine decorations of red and white with many hearts and balloons which helped to keep our "cute" girls in bright spirits. Farmville was very well represented with Jennie Belle Gilliam, Elizabeth Smith, Louise Painter, Lelia Hill, Elsie Greene, Frances Pope, Gay Stieffen, Emily Channell, Sue Pack, Frances Warriner, Helen Hoyer, Virginia Doughty, Clara Nottingham, Frances Bryan, Ruth Emma Chambers, Bernice Copley, Hope Minter, Martha Sietz, Nancy Taylor, Ann Billups, Katherine Moomaw, Lois Powell, Kathryn Fitzgerald, Amy Powell, and Mary Bowles.

Shep Fields and his rippling rhythm attracted Lucille Moseley, Henrietta Ivers, Annie Leigh Bailey, Margaret Long, and Mary Wilson Clark to Newport News.

A great number of girls went home and quite a few took friends with them. Elizabeth Tyree almost had a house party with Catherine Waite, Mary Louise McCullough and Page Nottingham visiting her in Danville.

Ellen Bowen visited her uncle, Dr. Bowen, in Richmond.

Mary Lib Slater spent the past week-end with Polly Wall in Boydton.

Jean Willis was the guest of Mrs. F. G. Langford in Charlottesville.

Eleanor Wood had as her guest, this past week-end, Dorothy Hutcheson.

Catherine Mavor had as her week-end guest, Sue Owen, in Waverly.

Sylvia Somers visited Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Thacker in Richmond.

Evelyn Bailey went home with Selma Berry and Dorothy Johnson visited Virginia Sue Tuck.

Jean Nichols and Jane Hardy visited Mr. and Mrs. P. Nichols in Richmond.

Annabel Westcott went to Richmond with her family for the week-end.

Kathryn Jamison spent the week-end in Richmond, also.

Mrs. Bob Pettus had as her week-end guests in Drakes Branch Mary Frances Simpson and Louise Borden.

Georgie Custis had as her week-end guest Gwendolyn Humphreys.

Harriette Vaden visited in the home of Elizabeth Butler in Norfolk.

Ruth Montgomery and Chic Dortch visited their sisters for the week-end in Lawrenceville and Lynchburg, respectively.

Martha Jane Flannagan spent the week-end at her home in Norfolk.

David Terry was the guest of Elizabeth Wilkinson in Cumberland.

Mary Ann Sanderson visited Virginia Kemp in Hopewell.

Jacqueline Beale and Elizabeth Tindall visited in their homes in Scottsville.

Fletcher Walker visited Mrs. P. C. Holladay in Richmond the past week-end.

Miss Mix entertained her student teachers of the fall and winter quarters with an informal tea at her home Saturday afternoon.

The Junior and Senior Presbyterian girls were entertained by the Reverend and Mrs. Hollingsworth at a tea Thursday afternoon. The tea was given at the home of the Hollingsworths', and an attractive Valentine color scheme of red and white was carried out.

The Gamma Thetas are giving a banquet to their pledges at Longwood on Wednesday evening, February seventeenth.

The Mu Omega sorority held its annual pledge banquet Saturday, February 13, in the tea room. Attractive Valentine decorations were used for the occasion.

The out-of-town guests included Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Lomax Hunter, Mr. James Hunter, Mr. Douglas Hespel and Mrs. Nancy Pobst Ellis.

Valentine's Day

A lovely day? Yes, but does that account for the quickened step and the sparkle in the eye as the girls pass down the hall? No! There have been other lovely days, but this is Valentine's Day! Danny Cupid has come to town! Theres' a thrill of excitement in the air, a feeling of expectancy!

Telegrams and "specials" arrive—the post-office boxes are fuller than usual. There is a longer line waiting for packages out in the hall. As the girls move

Alumnae Chapter Formulates Plans

Former Students Doing Outstanding Work

The local chapter of Farmville State Teachers College alumnae met on Thursday night at "The Orchard", home of Miss Katherine Wyatt with Miss Wyatt and Miss Virginia Brinkley as hostesses.

The president, Miss Banna Price Massey, presided over the business session, during which plans for the year were discussed. It was decided to try to contact as many alumnae as possible, and to try to help with the Jennie M. Tabb scholarship, to which all the state chapters are being asked to contribute. Miss Tabb was registrar at the college for many years, until her death about two years ago.

Plans were begun for a spring banquet, at which time the chapter hopes to have Dr. J. L. Jarman, president of Farmville S. T. C., present.

Refreshments were served at the conclusion of the meeting.

In the contest for "Modern Waltz" held at the President's Ball given at the Casino, Hot Springs, Va., two couples were so well matched that the judges could not reach a decision, and so they flipped a coin to decide. Miss Caroline "Bug" Byrd and Mr. Hamill Jones, both of Monterey, won the flip.

On January 13, Mrs. E. H. Ould, state chairman of American citizenship, spoke to the Forest Hill Woman's Club of Richmond, Virginia, on personality development. Her talk was made at the seventh anniversary luncheon given at the home of Mr.s Edwin C. Bryce. Mrs. Ould attended Farmville S. T. C. and was the former Miss Ethel Cole.

Miss Connelly of Galdys Wed

Miss Elna Claire Connelly, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Connelly of Gladys, and Mr. Cecil Mahlon Rose of Durham, N. C., were married December 25 at Gladys. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. A. W. Connelly of Thaxton, an uncle of the bride.

The bride is a graduate of Gladys High School and Farmville State Teachers College, and taught three years in Campbell County. Mr. and Mrs. Rose will make their home in Winston-Salem, N. C.

The Powhatan High School Minstrel proved to be one of the most successful events in the school this year. Much of the success of the show was attributed to Miss Margaret Herndon, a former S. T. C. student, who staged the dances and Miss Lucie Anne Lane, also formerly of S. T. C., who coached the music which was sung by the chorus and glee clubs.

Miss Anne Peple has returned to Richmond after a short visit to friends at Farmville S. T. C.

Intercollegiate News

A "No Cigarette Bumming League" has been formed on the campus of Louisiana State University. League members promised not to bum or be bummed from. Bumming of "drags" is permitted.

"Frequent water-drinking," said the specialist, "prevents you from becoming stiff in joints."

"Yes," said the co-ed, "but some joints don't serve water." (Carolina Buccaneer).

"Why are they called the Tonsil sisters?"

"Well, because nearly everybody has had them out." (Malteasea).

Phil: "Then why don't you use a mouth wash?" (Ohio Sundial)

A back-woods mountaineer one day found a mirror which a tourist had lost.

"Well, if it ain't my old Dad," he said as he looked in the mirror. "I never knowed he had his pitcher took". He took the mirror home and stole into the attic to hide it. But his actions didn't escape his suspicious wife. That night while he slept she slipped up to the attic and found the mirror.

"Hum-um," she said, looking into it, "so that's the old hag he's been chasin'." (Wataugan).

An engineering student walked up to his professor the other day and handed in a large bunch of assignments. Noticing a sheepish look on the face of the student, the professor asked somewhat suspiciously, "What's all this?"

"These are my Mae West problems," he explained.

"Mae West?"

"Yeah, I done 'em wrong."

In the gloaming oh, my darling,
When the lights are dim and low,
That your face is powdered, painted—
How am I, sweet-heart, to know?
Twice this month I've had to bundle
Every coat I possess
To the cleaners—Won't you darling
Love me more and powder less.
(Wataugan)

If you can wiggle your ears, you have a little of the ape-man in you, says Prof. Hunt at Michigan State College. Pre-historic man had to wiggle his ears to sharpen his sense of hearing. Muscles employed in this action are definite inheritance from him.

Have You Ever —

Have you ever—

Had a lonely heart on Valentine's Day?

Seen so many Hampden-Sydney boys turn pro?

Gotten stuck with Virgil May at a co-ed?

Seen Mildred Stone without—?

Known a girl who'd sit up late—watching a fire-escape?

Heard splashes at mid-night?

Spied a girl kissing a boy on the dance floor?

Heard that Jenny Carrol was the most conceited girl at Rocky Mount Hi and disillusioned all the boys in her chemistry class?

Noticed the Hampden-Sydney boys going west these days—about fifty miles?

Seen Boo Speak and Sue Adams having any more fun than they did Saturday afternoon in Shannon's?

Heard that Chlotilde Jarman was the dignified president of her senior class at high school?

Been to a midnight show? (Some say it is not worth it.)

Seen so many slips before, Miss Iler?

Had a date in the student building lounge on Sunday afternoon, Lloyd?

Known a girl to raise so much heck as Mary B. did in Blacksburg?—arrested even!

Heard that Susan Lane was captain of her basketball team in high school? Take a bow Miss Athlete!

Noticed Will Scott's beautiful brown eyes? Bet they were the ones that captured the football heroes back in the high school days.

Seen legs as shapely as those of our student body president?

Had a boy come from New York to see you? Alice Burroughs did, and saw him only a half hour.

Received a birthday card on Valentine's Day? Pagg got one from Dexter, Smooth!

Seen anyone cut throats like Irma Carpenter? Hold your man girls when she's around. That goes for you, too, Dot Tillett.

Bumped into Nera Hines when she wasn't chewing gum?

Heard a quiet minute on third floor main?

"Come on let's get together and do it right"—

Fight, fight for ole "green and white" and "red and white". Class songs rang out all over the gym when class games were played off. The old rivalry between class colors again held sway and each team was fighting in order that it might be the victor. The Freshmen and Sophomores started off the series of class games with the freshmen coming out on top. The Junior and Senior game, which was played Saturday night was a very exciting one—the winner being that fighting, fearless Junior class. Thus, the colors "red and white" were the victors in both games. Come on green and white, we just can't let it be that way!

Frances Hudgins refereed the games with the aid of Virginia Carroll as umpire—and what games they were! Mary Bowles proved most outstanding in the Junior-Senior game. In the Freshman-Sophomore game, Vera Ebel of the Sophomores gave the Freshmen "something to think about", while Marjorie Nimmo and Sara Keesee helped to make those proud sophs step around. Even though each class was fighting to uphold their colors, sportsmanship proved the most outstanding characteristic displayed. We are very proud of our S. T. C. girls for knowing the true value of sportsmanship in everything they undertake to do. Even though we fight against other classes in order to hold our own class colors high —we all unite in "backing up old blue and white". The true fighting spirit is displayed in all our sports and we realize that we are the examples of our beloved Alma Mater.

By the way, while we are discussing this game of basketball—remember that our varsity team will play William and Mary at Williamsburg this week-end, and "we" must show the Indians what we can do—and we really can, you know!

NYA Youths Help With Flood Relief

3,000 Boys and Girls Fight Against Waters

More than 3,000 boys and girls from the work and student aid projects of the National Youth Administration have thrown their weight into the fight against flood waters of the Ohio River and its tributaries, helping to evacuate stricken families, collecting and distributing food and clothing, and assisting generally wherever they are needed, Richard R. Brown, Deputy Executive Director, announced this morning.

Reports were received overnight from State Youth Directors in all the flooded states except Kentucky, where lines of communication have been crippled, indicating full cooperation by local NYA groups with all agencies engaged in flood relief.

"Our state directors in the affected area have been authorized to offer help wherever their services are needed", Mr. Brown declared. "Approximately 10,000 youths are available fo remergency work in the counties hardest hit when and if they are needed.

"The only stipulation we have made is that youths, because of their lack of experience, be assigned as far as possible to the less hazardous tasks of rescue and rehabilitation. For that reason, most of them are baing employed in the second line of defense—receiving and aiding refugees after they have been removed from danger; assisting health authorities in maintaining water supplies, and setting up emergency kitchens.

"Our biggest part in the disaster, however, will come after the waters have receded, when our workers will begin the task of cleaning up and rehabilitation."

NYA youths in the area around Huntington, W. Va., have taken oven several WPA nursery schools and are operating them twenty-four hours a day for the benefit of children of refugee families. Hundreds of parents have brought thier children to these centers to be cared for in safety while they returned to retrieve what household goods and personal belongings they could from homes buried under as much as twelve feet of water.

West Virginia to Debate Thursday

Kansas, and Mervin Grossman, from Tyronza, Arkansas, constitute the affirmative team. Thomas McDill, from Gastonia, North Carolina, and John C. Murdoch, from Antreville, South Carolina, make up the negative team.

On Tuesday afternoon the Debate Club held tryouts at the request of several of the students who were desirous of becoming members. The subject for debate was; Resolved: that Congress shall be impowered to regulate Social Security. Of the girls who tried out, Sudie Yager, Betty Bush, and Lorraine Moomaw were given bids. All appeared to be excellent material.

Open Forum

Dear Editor,

I have been talking to several other students here in college, and all of us believe that closed study hour from 7:30 to 10:00 would be a good thing.

We like to play as well as anybody around here—but there's a time and place for everything. We come from rather small high schools, and therefore, lacking the best of preparation we have to work hard in order to keep up with our studies. We can not attempt to work as long as there is a constant hub-bub in the halls. "busy" signs just aren't observed, and we can't enforce them all by ourselves.

There are also, meetings that interrupt any work we might have to do. We aren't saying that we don't want to belong to clubs and Honor Societies, for we do. But, we do wish they could meet some time other than the hours during which we need to study.

We feel that we aren't the only ones here who feel this way, and we would like to know what some of the other students think of the matter.

A Student

Students from twenty-seven colleges and universities were represented in the exams for Rhodes Scholarships. Only three universities had more than one scholarelect. Princeton had four, Harvard two, and Swarthmore, two. One of those from Swarthmore was a Virginian. These scholarships provide an annual stipend of 400 pounds sterling for two years at Oxford University, with the option of a third year's study down the halls, there is a hurry and bustle. Amid the confusion and noise are heard "ohs" and "ahs" of delight. Girls madly open cards and packages, bringing forth lovely heart-shaped boxes of candy—symbols of extra pounds to come! They hug each other in glee and hold whispered conferences about their Valentines.

Dan Cupid surveys the scene, and with a sigh of tired contentment goes his way, well pleased with his day's work.

April 17 Set as Date for Dances

Cotillion Club Meets to Complete Plans for Hops

At the meeting of the Cotillion Club, last Wednesday night, April 17 was set as the definite date for the Spring Dance. Jimmy Poyner and Johnny Long are the two orchestras under consideration. Both bands are tremendously popular among the college groups and should appeal to all of the returning alumnae. The former hails from North Carolina and the latter plays in the Marshall Room of the Hotel John Marshall in Richmond.

All old Cotillion Club members are allowed to attend the dance with dates and the new pledges come stag. The figure will be led by Mary Bowles and the officers of the club.

ALL-STAR PEN

It Lets You SEE When to Refill

—hence won't run dry in classes or exams

Yes, thousands of students start to rate higher when they replace their old "blind-barrel" pens with this new Parker Vacumatic.

This is because it is people who are capable of rating high who go for this Pen in a big way, and because it is this kind of Pen—and only this kind—that can bring out the best that is in them.

Its Scratch-Proof Point of Platinum and Solid Gold writes like a zephyr. Unlike pens that hide the ink within the barrel, this laminated Pearl Beauty lets you SEE Days Ahead when it's running low. When held to the light it shows the ENTIRE Ink Supply—holds 102% More Ink than old-style.

It's the pen that received more votes than any other TWO makes of Pens COMBINED when 30 College Papers asked 4,099 students "Which pen do you own?" It was awarded by the All-America Board of Football to 90 nominees for the All-America Team of 1936.

Go at once to any good store selling pens and try this revolutionary invention. Identify the genuine Parker Vacumatic by this smart ARROW Clip,—this holds this Pen low and SAFE in the pocket. The Parker Pen Co., Janesville, Wis.

Annual Conference Convenes in Alabama

Pi Gamma Mu Sends Norvell Montague as Delegate

The fourteenth Annual Conference of the Southeastern International Relations clubs was held at Alabama Polytechnic Institute in Auburn, Alabama, on February 19 and 20. Virginia Gamma chapter of Pi Gamma Mu, which has affiliations with the I. R. C. sent as its delegate Norvell Montague. Delegates from other colleges in Virginia as well as from colleges in North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, and Tennessee, numbering about 200, gathered at Auburn.

The conference of which the theme was "Peace" opened on Friday morning with the first session of round tables immediately preceded by addresses of welcome from the officials of the conference. Four round tables were in session: "American Foreign Policy"; League of Nations and International Labor of Organization"; "Conflict in the Far East"; and "Dictatorship vs. Democracy". Following this Miss Carol Riegelmann from Carnegie Endowment for International Peace spoke on the "International Labor Conference: How it Functions and What it Has Accomplished."

Following the second session of round tables Miss Amy Hemmingway Jones, also from Carnegie Endowment, presided at a meeting at which reports from International Relations Clubs were heard. She presented helpful suggestions for furthering the club's work.

The first social function was an informal reception on Friday afternoon held in the Recreation Hall of the College. Friday night the delegates were entertained at a banquet at which R. C. Bades, president of the Southeastern Conference of I. R. C., presided. The guest speaker, Major C. D. Broth, noted Canadian authority on international affairs, made an address on "British Foreign Poli-

Classes Form Plans For Founder's Day

Dr. Jarman and Classmen Urge Large Donations

Founder's day being less than two weeks away, the classes have been using their meetings for a discussion of the student's chapel program on March 6.

Dr. Jarman introduced the Freshmen to Founder's Day by an interesting and instructive talk on the beginning of the college. Fifty-three years ago the money was granted by the Virginia Legislature for the buildings. On March 7, 1884 the ceremony of laying the corner stone took place; it is this date that the school celebrates as Founder's Day.

In concluding his talk he asked that the class try to make a large donation, but with proper feeling behind it. With the cooperation of the entire school he hopes to lower the debt from $16,000 to about $6,000.

The students program will be made of dramatic tableaux representing different sections of the state. The sophomores have their part of the program based on the Lights to Twinkle as S. T. C. Becomes Metropolis for Night

Don't miss it, any of you. What? The Freshman Production. When? Thursday Evening at 8:00 P. M. Where? In the "rec". Why? It's simply great.

Down just one flight of stairs and you will be majestically whisked from S. T. C. to a cabaret in the heart of New York City.

Skyscrapers will rear majestically in the background. Stars will twinkle in the red glow of the bright lights.

The Freshman Jazz Orchestra will furnish soft and hot strains of well known melodies for dancing. The soft shoe chorus will show you that stars aren't the only things that twinkle—feet do it too.

The cigarette girls with the lovely legs will serve cakes, jits and nabs while you listen to the sentimental notes of the Liebestraum Chorus and the golden voices of some of our loveliest and most talented songtresses.

Prominent Seniors To Be in Rotunda

Members of the senior class nominated twenty outstanding classmates, from which ten were to be elected on February 23, at their meeting on February 16. These girls chosen as the most outstanding seniors will be disclosed weekly in the Rotunda beginning March 10.

College Orchestra Presents Program

Saturday morning the Seniors marched in to the "Alma Mater" played by the College Orchestra. After the usual hymn, the orchestra gave the following program: "The Celebrated Minuet" from "First Symphonie" by Georges Calensin; "Mignonette", an overture, by J. Baumann; a cello solo by Mary Grainger; "El Capitan" was played as a recessional.

Orchestra members are: violinists, Elizabeth LeGrande, Mildred Lancaster, Elizabeth Sieber, Bernice Copley, Sudie Yager; pianists Geraldine Hatcher, Frances Phillips; xylophone, Eloise Whitley; bass viol, Martha Grainger; cornet, Luckin Bugg; clarinet, Harold B. LeGrande; drums, Cornelia Story; banjo, Dorothy Fisher; cello, Mary Grainger. Miss Lisabeth Purdom is director.

Light Opera Group Presents Program

Boston Artists Featured as Fourth Lyceum

The fourth number of the Lyceum series was presented in the large auditorium on Wednesday, February 17, by the Boston Light Opera Company.

The quartet was composed of Gertrude Ehrhart, soprana; Harriette Price, contralto;; Wesley Copplestone, tenor; and Hudson Carmody, bass. Reginald Boardman accompanied on the piano. Mr. Carmody holds a contract with the Metropolitan Grand Opera Company for the next season.

The first part of the program was composed of selections from such famous operas as "L'Allegra" and "Rigoletta," and piano solos by Mr. Boardman, the accompanist.

For the concluding feature, the company offered "The Secret of Suzanna", a comedy opera in one act concerning the trouble Suzanna has keeping her husband from finding out about her smoking. Her husband, enraged over the tobacco odor, tries to find the criminal and believes that his bride of several months has not been true to him. All ends happily when he discovers she is the one who has been smoking. The characters of this opera are Miss Ehrhart, Mr. Carmody, and Mr. Copplestone.

On Thursday morning in chapel the quartette gave excerpts from "In a Persian Garden." This beautiful song cycle was composed by the distinguished English composer, Liza Lahmann, and Khayyam.

Alumna Gives History of Alma Mater Patron

Margaret Pollard, a graduate of Farmville in last year's class, spoke to the student body in chapel on February 24, on "The Ideal of our Alma Mater", which is Joan of Arc.

There are only four known equestrian statues of Joan of Arc in the world and these are in New York, Massachusetts, France and Farmville. This particular statue which stands in the Colonade was a gift to the school through Alpha Kappa Kamma in 1927. Mrs. Anna H. Huntington, a well-known New York sculptress made the statue and presented it to the honor society as a symbol

Freshmen Introduce Novel Production Feature

The freshman class will present "Night in Manhattan," a cabaret as their production, on Thursday, February 25, at 8 o'clock in the "rec."

The scene will be in a night club with the sky-scrapers silhouetted in the background along the walls. Surrounded by table the entertainers will perform in the spotlight in true night club style.

Laura Morris, Sara Keesee, and Micou Sneed are featured as soloists and the freshman trio will sing in their own inimitable way. An unusual tango with Macon Raine and Isabel Williamson and three well gotten up dance choruses vary the program. Eliza Wise and Harriette Vaden, Mary Page Huff, Virginia Lee Pettis, and Mary Mahone give the novelty in separate skits throughout the night.

Elizabeth Kent will be the mistress of ceremonies.

The freshman jazz band will furnish music for the program and for dancing. This group is composed of Geraldine Hathcer at the piano; Eloise Whitley, xylophone; Mildred Owen, Edith Bradshaw, and Wilma Beaton, bazookas; Micou Sneed, drums; and Dot Fischer, banjo. Jane Hardy and Geraldine Hatcher have arranged a piano duet and accompanyment for the Liebestroum chorus of nine girls.

Orchesis Performs In Dance Program

Biblical Feature Finds Particular Appeal for Audience

Orchesis presented a program of modern dance in the large auditorium on Saturday evening, February 20. This presentation was directed by Mrs. Louise R. Fitzpatrick, instructor in natural dancing.

Members of the dance group designed the dances and the costumes with the aid of Mrs. Fitzpatrick. Mary Bowles' original dance, "Dance Hall Impressions", which was a take-off in natural dance style on the dance hall or chorus girl who "trucked" and did the "Charleston". Her costume was a full skirt of bright colors. The audience received this number with much ovation.

The Biblical Study, "The Way of the Cross", which portrayed scenes during the last part of Christ's life here on earth, was splendidly given. The selections in this number were "Agony In The Garden" by Katherine Irby; "Condemnation" by Marguerite York; "The Burden", Mary Bowles and Margaret Thomas; "Consolation", Susie Clark; "Tearing and Ripping of the Garment," Helen Glass, and "Chic" Dorch; "Descension", Mary Joyner Cox; "Ascension", Virginia Bean; and "Hallelujah."

The costumes for these scenes were long white garments with full sleeves and with colored draperies hanging from the shoulder past the waist.

Students of natural dancing Folk Quality" and "Proclamation" Elizabeth LeGrande and Vivian Davis, who were accompanyists, composed some of the music to fit the dance numbers. Janie Lee Young arrange the lighting effects.

Frosh Reveals Love Life "Joyces" of "Sexton Munts" Removed

Oh, me! Of all the men in the world, Bakers, Painters, Plummers, Smiths, Butlers, Colemen and Fischers, I had to pick a Lemon.

You see it was this way to start off with, he was a Scott, and I was a Britton—you know how those people Agee.

Anyway, I met him at the Baptist Sunday School picnic. I was feeling sort of Cross and Fagged out so I walked down the Lane to the Brookes. And would you believe it, right there on a Rock sat a Mann—a man Waring Buttons. No one Sneeded to tell me that he was a military man. I'm Wise enough for that.

Now, I wasn't going to Speake to him at all because you know good girls Kent do that. However he kept Beaton around the Bush and well, you know—you're only Young Yonce. After all, he was a Newman and he had Black hair and a Jolly look about him.

So, he Tuck me out Sale-ing. And I'm telling you, I sure Phelps for him. By the time we'd Bean out on the Rivers for an hour, I was in a Hayes. I felt something Pierce my heart and if I can Read faces he felt the same thing. Finally he started getting sort of Marchy and then I said to myself Nimmo of this. But I had a feeling that I didn't mean it so I'm sure glad that storm came up 'cause I always have Bone a good girl.

We'd gone way past Chappell Wood and were heading Seward on the Channel when the Raine started. Ten minutes before, the West had been a fierce Red and now Bowles of water came tearing down upon us.

I got sort of scared 'cause I didn't think we could Turner back. A few seconds Bassed by before I realized that we had made land Easley. However, we ended up in some Reeds or maybe it was Rice plants, I don't know. Our trusty Steed got stuck so we Dugger out. By that time I had been Sprinkled to the skin.

The Joyce of my life being injured I was forced to take hold of things. I climbed a Chestnut tree and such Seitz. There was my own little Hamlet nestling in the Greene Wood. I saw that we had to Walker mile. Now, Mama, had always been Strick with me and it was getting Slater and Slater. I didn't know Watts to do. Thomas, my Romeo, couldn't walk, so what did I do but pick him up like a Pack and Carter him home.

Now, I have always Bane a lady but when he called me up the next day and asked if I'd be Ebel to go for a ride on the Rivers, I well, I got sort of Huffed.

The Waters must have gotten him for the very next day he appeared Sans ford and rang the Bell. Did I see him? Well, Hardy. I simply Poped at him with one of my Beebe guns. An amazed expression came over his Mapp when he got Wise. He Cralled away and that was the end of that.

Am I sorry? No. The Joyce may have gone out of my life, but since it all happened Sexton Munts ago I don't feel bad about it any Moore

Just What is Patriotism

The birthday of George Washington, the great soldier, leader, and statesman, brings to our minds the ever-important modern problem of world peace. In most of our history books and by many of our teachers, Washington, the great soldier, has been held up as a hero and model for American youth. Our histories have seemed to glorify war, and their pages have been full of glowing descriptions and pictures of the greatest soldiers of our country.

We realize the wonderful services rendered to our country by these men, but we believe that they have been over-emphasized. We think that the young mind should be trained to put peaceful projects before military ones. The modern youth must be taught that in order to be a real patriot, he does not necessarily have to bear arms for his country. He must be taught that Washington was also "First in Peace." He must be shown the significance of the many non-militaristic heroes and services they have rendered to our country.

There must be some constructive substitute for the glamour, excitement, and glory which accompany war stories. This is a problem which may have an outstanding effect on the attitude of future generations toward war. Surely it is a problem to be given full consideration by those preparing to teach in the public schools of our country.

Please Regard Them

How many of you disregard "busy" signs? It is a common but inexcusable fault. When someone puts a "busy" sign up, it should mean that she wishes to study without being disturbed. How do you like for someone to interrupt you while you are studying for a test? You do not. Neither does the person you disturb. That person wants peace and quiet and has used the "busy" sign, which really says, "Please do not enter." The next time you see a "busy" sign, think of the person who is trying to study and do not rush into the room unless it is necessary.

Corner Picks

Tributes to Washington

Where may the wearied eyes repose
When gazing on the great,
Where neither guilty glory glows
Nor despicable state?
Yes,—one, the first, the last, the best,
The Cincinnatus of the West,
Whom envy dared not hate,
Be quenthed the name of Washington.
To make men blush there was but one.

—Lord Byron

Pale is the February sky,
And brief the midday's sunny hours;
The wind swept forest seems to sigh
For the sweet time of leaves and flowers.
Yet has no month a prouder day,
Not even when the summer broods
O'er meadows in their fresh array,
Or autumn tints the glowing woods.
For this chill season now again
Brings, in its annual round, the morn
When, greatest of the sons of men
Our glorius Washington was born!
Amid the wrecks of thrones shall live
Unmarred, undimmed, our hero's fame
And years succeeding years shall give Increase of honors to his name.

—William Cullen Bryant

Pedigree

The pedigree of honey
Does not concern the bee;
A clover, any time, to him
Is aristocracy.

—Emily Dickinson

Sometimes

Across the fields of yesterday
He sometimes comes to me,
A little lad just back from play—
The lad I used to be.
And yet he smiles so wistfully
Once he has crept within,
I wonder if he hopes to see
The man I might have been.

—Thomas S. Jones, Jr.

Beclouded

The sky is low, the clouds are mean,
A traveling flake of snow
Across a barn, or through a rut
Debates if it will go.
A narrow wind complains all day
How someone treated him;
Nature like us is sometimes caught
Without her diadem.

—Emily Dickinson

Life

Oh my, what is life,
What can it really be,
A problem, happiness plus sorrow,
It appears to me.
We get up in the morning,
And the equation becomes a more complicated affair
A seemingly twisted situation
Each day we do and dare.
But when all is added together,
And we subtract the sorrows of the past,
Life is wonderful in all kinds of weather,
And we realize we're lucky at last.

—Mary Page Huff

Last Minute Ramblings

Girls whirling here and there,
Flitting around like birds,
Boys filling the Rotunda
Going around in herds.
Smiles begin to appear
As everyone starts to glance,
Ahoy! My friend, you can't keep 'em here,
They're going to the Hampden-Sydney dance.
(next morning)
Did you have a nice time?
Says Nan to Nell, (yawn)
Oh! boy, did I?
T'was swell.

—Mary Page Huff

When Spring Begins

When spring begins, I start to pine
For any guy just so he's mine.
I start to sing about the moon
And wish I knew just how to croon
I'll fall for almost any line.
I want some one to say, "Be mine;"
To tell me that I look divine.
I know I'll fall for some one soon
When spring begins.
And soon I'll start in to design
A song of life and love divine,
And try to find a rhyme for June
And act just like a silly loon,
For love goes to my head like wine
When spring begins.

—Mary Mahone

Farmville Will Commemorate Laying of S.T.C. Cornerstone

Fifty-three years ago on March 7, 1884, the corner stone of the State Female Normal School was laid. This date is observed as Founder's Day. The members of the Virginia Legislature of 1884 were the fathers of the institution. Among the men who were closely associated with the beginning of teacher training, we may mention two who especially put their hearts and souls into the work: Dr. J. L. M. Curry and Dr. W. H. Ruffner. They are given the credit for the normal school idea in Virginia, and they were the guiding spirits of the new undertaking.

The first president of the State Female Normal School was Dr. William H. Ruffner. In the fall of 1884, when its doors were opened to students, there was a faculty of seven and one hundred and seven students were enrolled. There have been four presidents since the beginning of this college.

Dr. Joseph Leonard Jarman, the present fourth president of the school, has served much longer than all of the others combined. This institution has grown and developed under his wise leadership until today it is recognized as one of the outstanding teachers colleges of the United States. In 1902 when he became president, Dr. Jarman found a very small school. The number of students in the professional course grew from 58 to 1,095 in 1928. The name of this institution has been changed twice. Also many other changes have taken place during his administration. Today in 1937, among the many buildings which have been erected may be mentioned the East and West wings: the middle east wing; the training school; infirmary, dining room, dormitories, the laundry and power plant, and the student building.

From its modest beginning has risen the splendid college of today with its beautiful buildings, its standard college courses, its up-to-date campus training school, and six rural training schools, its able faculty and its thousands of loyal alumnae scattered over the nation.

The State Teachers College of Farmville is a member of the American Association of Teachers Colleges, and also holds membership in the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

Dr. Jarman has asked that the students and organizations make their contributions on Founder's Day generously and with the right spirit. This has been requested not only as a matter of custom, but also that the debt which is owed on the Student Building may be lowered to a small amount. From the large sum of money that was originally owed on the building, approximately $16,000 still has to be paid.

POPULARITY POINTERS

Charm? "It's a sort of bloom on a woman. If you have it, you don't need to have anything else; and if you don't have it, it doesn't mater much what else you have." The same thing applies to popularity; some people appear to be popular with no visible effort on their part. After all, it isn't something that is impossible; there are quite a few "little" things that add to one's popularity.

Don't credit others' success to "Lady Luck" and "getting the breaks"; you had the same chance as they—the difference lies in their willingness to sacrifice some of their pleasures for success.

Don't be continually rearranging someone's hair and clothes. They have probably just finished dressing and your extra pats are not appreciated at all. Ten to one they are thinking that your appearance might be improved, too.

Don't accuse your roommate of having more faults than any person alive; just think how annoying your habit of leaving a dripping raincoat draped over the only vacant chair must be.

Don't interrupt your best friend when she launches forth into a rapturous description of "the one' the chances are you have bored her just as much with your favorite story of Bob's cleverness.

If it is absolutely necessary to borrow an article, make a point of returning it the moment you are through using it.

Do try to be patient when waiting in line for something. Everyone else is just as anxious as you to be through and away.

"GONE WITH THE WIND"

The way in which Margaret Mitchell, newcomer to the list of American novelists, happened to write "Gone With the Wind" is an interesting story.

Several years ago, she was obliged to remain in the hospital for some time, due to a lengthy illness, and while she was there, a relative amused her by telling her of various incidents in the life of her garndmother, at the time of the Civil War. For her own pleasure, Margaret Mitchell wove these threads into a story, and being a native of Georgia, she blended the setting of old Georgia at the time of the Civil War, and the characters with all of their true southern characteristics, so well, that she managed to create a beautiful and vivid portrait of the land she loved, in the days of its sorest trial.

Last year, when the MacMillan Publishing Company, for which she was a reader, ran short of manuscript, and began looking around for more, one of her closest friends said, "Peg has a story that she's been working on for some time. Why not look it over?" This was thought to be a good idea, as she was familiar with the kind of copy they liked. She was told to finish it immediately, and to submit it to them, which task, as she afterward stated, was one of the hardest ever assigned to her, as she had been accustomed to working on it at her own leisure.

The title signifies that the peo-

President Roosevelt has thrown a bombshell into the scheme of living of the American people. Neither in his campaign speeches last fall nor in his inaugural address was there any hint of his plan of enlarging the membership in the Supreme Court to meet with the increasing demands made upon the judicial bodies of the U. S. There seems to be a failing among our countrymen in that we seem to take the defensive position when confronted with a new idea. Probably after the recent years of economic disorder, our instinct for self-protection comes to the surface and without careful consideration we condemn progressive plans. Among certain groups, today, the pass-word is, "The President is trying to subordinate the powers of the judiciary body to his own authority."

If America considers this with an open mind, realizing that the well-being of the citizens is the chief aim of executives, perhaps an unbiased opinion of this vital matter may be formed.

In the lighter vein, here is food for thought. Hereafter, when you see a gorgeous moon, don't let your mind be a one-track sort of mechanism, turning only to thoughts of love. Instead, turn your mind to coiffures. Be your tresses auburn, raven, golden or what have you, the latest report from those "medicine-men" in Vienna states that we shouldn't get a hair-cut unless the moon is right for the various functions of the body are governed by periodic rhythms, and hair grows best when the moon is growing.

Another choice bit from Friend Winchell: never let it be said that those ingenious Germans will allow anything to go to waste—not even left-over raw meats. They have started using raw meats for manufacturing clothes! With Spring and Easter, will come chirping birds, green leaves, new clothes 'n stuff. It's then you'd better be on your guard. Imagine one's chagrin upon arriving at church on Easter Sunday escorted by a pack of hungry mongrels sniffling at her sirloin steam shoes or chewing at the hem of her mutton skirt.

Should people really let things get them down? Was that a snicker on the back row?

"The sun's gone dim, and
The moon's turned black;
For I loved him, and He didn't love back."

—Dorothy Parker

Speaking of affairs of the heart. This week-end will again bring gaiety and romances into the lives of various members of the S. T. C. girls who go to V. M. I. to trip the light fantastic against a background of enchantment. Blue-grey uniforms with gleaming buttons and red sashes—soft lights and sweet music! The spirit of revelry once more will come to V. M. I.

As the time draws near for the S. T. C. basketball team to go once more into the field of conquest, a feeling of pride surges within us. Again the team covered itself with glory at William and Mary last Friday. And this week we're counting on them for the conflict with Harrisonburg. Where's your spirit?

Let's send our undefeated team on its way with the whole-hearted support of the entire student body. Where's your spirit? You've got it. Now keep it—doggone it—don't lose it—What—your pep!

By all means don't miss t he Freshman production! The atmosphere of gay old New York will be brought into our midst as the "Rec" is transformed for a night into a sparkling modern cabaret. There will be the Manhattan skyline and all the fixins'. Comedians with hilarious entertainment, choruses of lovely dancers, music by the orchestra. The captivating rhythm of the tango will thrill one and all who spend a night in Manhattan.

S. T. C. Basketball Team Will Meet Harrisonburg on Friday

Varsity To Meet For Fourth Major Game

S. T. C. varsity basketball team will play its fourth major game of the season on Friday, February 26, when it will journey to Harrisonburg to meet the Harrisonburg State Teachers College team. The girls will leave Farmville Friday morning and return Saturday.

The team has been successful in the three previous games, but strong competition is expected for the ensuing games.

Miss Olive T. Iler, athletic coach, will accompany the girls on the trip. This is the second out-of-town meet. Last week the team was victorious over William and Mary College in a meet there.

Freshmen Win Over Sister Class

Rats Rally Near Close In Interclass Basketball

After defeating the Sophomore red and white team, the freshmen again were victorious over the Juniors in a hard fought and exciting game on Wednesday, February 17.

During the first quarter neither side scored, although the freshmen kept the ball toward their goal most of the time. The juniors were the first to break the scoreless tie and they led 4-2 at the half.

With their spirit regained the little sister class played hard and stood their ground, and the juniors tried in vain to recapture the lead. The score stood at 16-10 for the freshmen.

Brooks; Lula Windham, with Jack Temple; Virginia Tilman, with Richard Woolling; Vera Thames, with Bob Vaughan; Hope Minter, with Mutt Wise; India Martin, with David McCallion.

Elizabeth Kent, with Buck Buchinsky; Jennie Belle Gilliam, with Jimmy Powell; Ann Billups, with Everette Meredith; and Sue Adams, with John Kincaid.

Students Are Urged to Sign Up; Event March 23

Again the classes will have a chance to prove their ability in the swimming line on March 23, when a meet will be held. There is a poster on the A. A. buletin board with the events listed and a place for all interested to sign beneath each event. Those interested are urged to sign so that practice may begin and because this event will add points toward the Color Cup.

For the advanced swimmers competition will be offered in the back crawl, crawl (two lengths), breast stroke, relay, tandem crawl, and plain and fancy diving.

Intermediate swimmers may participate in sculling, one length crawl, side stroke, relay, one length free style race and diving from the side.

None may enter more than three contests, and every participant must have six practices.

"Rec" is Scene of Modern Night Club

The costumes vary from thin, shadowy dresses or ballroom costumes to the chorus-girl type which blend well with the lighting and the decorations.

Tasty refreshments will be sold at reasonable prices. Since the entertainment is in the "rec" and the capacity is limited, no boys will be admitted.

The following girls are heading committees:

Sara Keesee	Singing
Macon Raine	Dancnig
Anne Billups	Refreshments
Marjory Nimmo	Table
Johnny Lybrook	Tickets
Isabel Williamson, Eliza Wise	Decorating
Mary Mahone, Ruth Curtis Robeson Macon Raine	Floor Show

It looks as if dear ole S. T. C. did scalp those Indians down there in Williamsburg last Friday night. With the score 18-19 in favor of William and Mary up to the last fifteen seconds of the game, Jenny Carroll came thru with a beautiful shot to win the game 20-19. These girls not only played ball, but it seems as though they tried themselves by attending a lecture, playing bridge, and obtaining the usual heavenly sleep. (??)

Before attending the tea after the game, the whole team went down down and enjoyed sandwiches. Speaking of food, how about the toast and poached eggs you received for dinner girls? Those squaws didn't realize that these Farmville girls eat when they get down to it, did they?

On the return trip the travellers stopped off in Richmond for several hours. Some of the girls went to the movies, others went shopping (at the five and ten). Taking everything into consideration it seems as if our team had a most successful and enjoyable trip. How about it, girls?

On the twenty-sixth of February the varsity squad journeys to Harrisonburg for the annual game. What a game it is going to be! Let's get together and give them all three cheers! They deserve it, don't you think?

Wednesday, February the seventeenth proved to be another successful day for the freshmen in the way of basketball. The Freshman team came through with a 16-10 victory over their sister class, the juniors. Those juniors really offer stiff competition when it comes right down to it.

Betty Butterworth played a fine game for the juniors and Marjorie Nimmo played her very best basketball for the freshmen. Frances Hudgins and Jennie Belle Gilliam were kept busy as referee and umpire.

Rice Hi Basketeers Bow to Freshmen

Red and White Outclass High School Team

The Farmville team and Rice High School played one of the most enthusiastic games of the season in the gym at 4:00 o'clock Tuesday afternoon.

Rice players showed unusual skill and ability, but Farmville again succeeded in winning with a score of 30-6.

The line up:

CAMPUS HITS

Well, I guess the basketball team certainly came back on top—not only that, but one of the officials who went on the trip, with all expenses paid, came back one Buck ahead. Some doe, huh.

Selma, who is this who has as his slogan "Go West Young Man" even to the tune of 200 miles per Sunday. We hear that it will even be further west next Friday.

By the way can anyone tell us the two reasons the basketball team wants to stop in Lexington on the way back from Harrisonburg?

Elsie Dodd, we hear you've changed your theme song from the "Spirit of V. M. I." to "Keep on Hoping".

Well—on Sunday night those three "Main" girls were certainly off again just trying to get on top. Sounds as if they are rather touched in the "dome".

It seems that Bob Loving has admirable taste when it comes to mixing colors. He thought yellow, orchid, and old rose would be nice. Others thought differently, and it sent Madeline chasing around school at the last minute for a new outfit.

We had a Clark Gable and Robert Taylor all in one here last week. Although most of us missed him. Ruth Curtis, why didn't you make him come in. After all, Aunt Molly can walk.

Conversation heard at "Southside" corner—"Yea Bailey's O. K. Say, what's this Margaret Long got?" Really now what's this all about. And what is this talk about Lucy P's marrying Cousin Tommy—and is there a professor up here named Epes? Really, it doesn't make sense.

What's this—you mean Hope really Minter go just to see the dance recital or is this just what she says. Anyway it was quick work as she got to the dance. Her roommates try to teach her and have succeeded somewhat as now the rule has changed 'Faith, Hope, and Charity and the greatest of these is Hope'.

Enough enemies made,

Blue and White Emerge Victorious in Third Game

After one of the most spectacular and exciting games of the season, the Farmville basketball team again emerged winner at William and Mary College Friday night, February 20, making this the third victory of the season.

It was a close and hard fought game from the opening to the closing whistle. Although there was the disadvantage of playing on a small court, the team work of the guards and forwards and the interception by the centers led the blue and whites to victory.

Farmville held the lead until the last quarter, when, with fifteen seconds to play and a score of 19-18 in favor of William and Mary, a field goal made by a pass from Hudgins to Carroll clinched the game for Farmville with the score Farmville 20—William and Mary 19.

W. Virginia Team Debates in School

Bounds and Sears Win Over Erskine

The debate team of Farmville have recently established forensic relations with debate teams of West Virginia University and Erskine College of South Carolina. Thursday afternoon, February 18. Martha aJne William and Elizabeth Willetts of West Virginia University, upholding the affirmative of the national Pi Kappa Delta question, resolved, that Congress should be empowered to fix minimum wages and maximum hours for industry", met Ruth Sears and Pattie Bounds, negative team of Farmville, in a non-decision debate. The West Virginia team has been o na tour of non-decision debates throughout the south.

Monday afternoon, February 22, Farmville affirmative team, Anthelia Robinette and Evelyn Kreger, met Thomas McDill and John Murdock of Erskine, who upheld the negative in another non-decision debate on th esame subject. Monday night Sears and Bounds defeated the Erskine affirmative team, Donald Calhoun and Mervin Grossman. Dr. Allan of Hampden-Sydney acted as critic judge.

Week-end Activties Lure Students

This past week-end was a busy one for many S. T. C. girls, who visited families and friends.

Miss Nickols entertained the Alpha Sigma Tau pledges at tea on Monday afternoon, February 22.

Girl Encounters Fascinating Celebrity Aboard Greyhound

The bus was riding smoothly over the road carrying many people to different destinations. Toward the back of the conveyance sat a distinguished-looking man who seemed fatigued by a long journey, but whose eyes were clear and twinkling.

As he looked from person to person around him, studying each pensively and chuckling to himself once in a while, his gaze fell on me who sat across the aisle from him. I could feel his gaze upon me and I turned my head quickly toward the window to evade his glance. Finally he spoke, 'You are very stubborn. I can tell by your chin." I was completely overwhelmed by his abruptness and could not utter a word.

Soon the conversation began to run steadily and the strange man gave some characteristics of each person on the bus, using only the faces for the basis of his assertions. The subject was later changed to books, which he thought would probably be something about which I could talk freely. "The Magnificent Obsession" was soon mentioned and a discussion of it was made. When asked what I thought of this book, I answered, "The first 100 pages were wasted in introduction and only parts of the rest interested me." Being quite amused over this fact, the inquisitive stranger asked why I didn't like the book and what suggestions I could make for it.

As I answered, his face became very calm and white. He then told me that the author had put himself as the hero and the only girl he had ever loved as the heroine. He explained that she was his twin sister who died when only twenty-one years old. Seeing that I was a little bewildered at his knowing so much about it, he said, "You see, I'm Lloyd C Douglas."

Mr. Douglas seemed a little afraid that I would not be very frank now that I knew who he was, but he was very pleased to find me just as before.

This author has a great understanding of human nature and his loneliness makes him a keen observer of the characteristics of people whom he sees while traveling. He gains most of his amusement through people he doesn't know and who don't know him. He hates for people to rush up to him and tell him how wonderful his books are, especially when he is sure they've never read even one.

Mr. Douglas loves the world and all of its sights. He has traveled the greater part of his life having been around the world seven times. He has traveled by every possible conveyance, bus being his last. Because of his knowledge of the world and its people he is able to live the part of his characters and to put himself wholly into his work.

ple of the South possessed prosperity, contentment, and unity of family, until the War settled on them like a horde of locusts, and when it lifted, everything was gone with the wind.

From the heroine, Scarlett O'Hara, representing the author's grandmother, down to the smallest slave girl, the novel skims its way on such vividly colored "wings of enchantment" that its readers cannot fail to fall under its magic spell from cover to cover.

Retirers Reflect On Hall Heads' Authority

It is evident that the time Mary Page Huff does most of her deep thinking is not in the daytime, but after she has retired at night. The other night, as she heard her hall president go up the hall calling "lights out" for the last time, she rose up in bed and said to her convict friend, Micou Sneed, in the same cell, No. 181, White House.

"I wonder what the hall presidents do when lightning bugs are in season?"

Micou answered in her droll way, "It must be a funny sight to see the hall presidents sticking their heads out the windows calling "lights out"' to the poor little innocent lightning bugs.

Alumnae Chats

Coulbourn- Higgins

Invitations have been issued for the marriage of Martha Clifton Higgins to Mr. Edwin T. Coulbourn at 8 p. m. in the Waverly Methodist church on February 27. Miss Jane Royall will be one of the bridesmaids.

Miss Martha Nottingham was the guest of her sister, Page this past week-end.

Frances Parker spent the past week-end with Elizabeth Harris.

Lieut. and Mrs. C. L. Blackwell have recently been stationed in Norfolk. She was the former Retta Hardy.

Mrs. Dorothy Leonard Moore visited her sister, Virginia Leonard, last week.

Mrs. William Woodland Johnson of St. Louis, who was formerly Frances Potts, was the guest of her brother, Dr. J. Manning Potts and Mrs. Potts for a short time. She is now in Charlotte, N. C. visiting her brother-in-law and sister, the Rev. and Mrs. John A. Redhead, Jr.

Kate Trent spent a week-end recently with Mary Ruth Winn in Culpeper. She was president of the student body in '26.

Mrs. G. V. Yonce spent the past week-end with Sidney Yonce.

The J. L. Jarman Chapter of the Farmville Alumnae Association recently sponsored a card party at the home of Miss Elizabeth White to help raise money for the Student Building.

Miss Louise E. Broaddus and Mrs. Margaret H. Forbes, alumnae of Farmville S. T. C. attended the sixty-seventh annual convention of the Department of Superintendents of National Education Association in New Orleans which opened Monday.

On Saturday morning the conference viewed a showing of five short films on international subjects. The subjects covered were: "The Mediterranean Area"; "Manchuria"; "China and America"; "Honolulu to Havana"; and "America and the World Trade."

Then followed Major Booths' second address which was "Public Opinion as a Safeguard of Peace". After his address the business session was held at which time officers for the coming year were elected, and a meeting place for next year"s convention was selected.

The final function was the luncheon on Saturday.

of the highest attainable leadership.

Joan of Arc was a peasant girl who was called into military service during a way between France and England. She won the love of her people and king, but when her prestige was no longer great, her army deserted and she was captured and tortured by the enemy. She unknowingly signed papers for her death, and on May 29, 1431 she was burned at the stake uttering the words, "Blessed Jesus".

Miss Pollard urged the students to follow the example of Joan of Arc and use as their motto, "Forward With God."

VOL. XVI. FARMVILLE,, VIRGINIA, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 3, 1937 No. 19

Siberians Appear In Lyceum Number

Singers Are Brought Here the Third Time

VASILIEFF LEADS

Costumes of Russia Will be Worn by Group

Friday, March 5 at 8:00 marks the third return engagement of the Siberian Singers. The Singers are presented as a Lyceum number on our Founder's Day Program.

Those who have heard the Siberian Singers before, know the pleasure that is afforded us in being able to have them again. Their force of spirit and intensity of emotion allow them to explore into the heart of song. Their priceless experience as members of the former world famous choir of Russia gives their work its authority. Each member of the group is a soloist of unusual ability, yet in ensemble they attain a vocal blend as beautiful and sonorous as the tones of an organ. This colorful and artistic Russian male choir has captivated the music-loving public, and has been acclaimed by them and by the music critics as "a valuable contribution to the music life of the countries."

Following is a porgram for the evening:

Southside Virginia Music Clubs Hold Contest at S. T. C.

Miss Lisabeth Purdom of Farmville Supervises

Miss Lizabeth Purdom of the Farmville State Teachers College faculty supervised the contests of the Southside Va. Music Clubs. The contests were held in the Student Building Lounge.

This is the first time the contests have not been in connection with the Federated Music Club's convention of six districts which is to be held at the Farmville College on March 13. The winners in the state will give a program at the convention in March.

"A high grade of skill was exhibited and real musicianship was evident," said Miss Purdom about the contests. The contest is an opportunity to compare one's progress with the degree of skill that others have attained. The idea of the contest is to put each contest out on the road to excellence and not to compete with a friend.

The contestants ranged in age from eight to fourteen years. There were seven winners. They were piano solo, class A, Elizabeth Raiford, of Victoria; piano solo, Mary Jo Anderson of Chatham; class D, Billy Watkins and Doris Ruebin of Danville; violin solo, class A, Carolyn Hardy, of Victoria; violin solo high school group,

American Youth Climaxes Drive

Young People Parade on Washington Streets

By MARVIN COX

(ACP Washington Correspondent)

Washington, D. C.—Thirty-five hundred young people representing colleges and organizations throughout the country affiliated with the American Youth Congress climaxed their drive for passage of the American Youth Act with a parade from the Capitol to the White House last week.

The colorful procession marched down historic Pennsylvania Avenue shouting and singing its plea for better opportunities. Signs and banners carried by the marchers demanded scholarships and work projects for unemployed youth. On the south front of the White House the procession halted and the hundreds of young people shouted "Scholarships, not battleships"; "We want jobs"; "pass the American Youth Act" and other slogans for the benefit of the President. A petition carrying more than 1,000,000 signatures urging passage of the Youth Act was presented to President Roosevelt.

A committee of seven representatives of the American Youth Congress met with the President to appeal for aid to American youth. This conference took place in the afternoon after the parade. The committee reported back to the delegates assembled in the Masonic auditorium. President Roosevelt, they said, assured them that sympathetic consideration would be accorded the demands of the young people.

Steps Worn By Girls Feet May Feel Familiar Touches

Steps—old steps, worn and sunken—steps that have served faithfully for five decades and, though showing their age a little, bravely bearing their burden each day with only a faint squeaky protest.

Climbing the stairs leading from the second to the third floor of White House, sunken places are clearly visible where thousands of feet have trod over them—feet of other girls in days gone by—girls with the same ambitions the same hopes, the same little troubles that girls have today.

In imagination, the sound of their footfalls resound again as they march down the corridor of the years. Stumbling feet of sleepy girls called from cozy beds by the breakfast bell. Hurried footsteps—as some late scholar rushes to class trying to make her appearance before the roll is called—seem to leave a scurrying echo.

Then staccatto beats are heard on the stairs. Someone bounds up them in leaps of joy—the morning mail is up and she has gotten a box from home. O unspeakable joy! (no, not unspeakable if to judge by the excited shouts that

"Watch Points", Says Committee

Student Standards Will Uphold System

Nominations and elections for both major and minor officers are slated to be conducted sometime in the near future. With these facts in view the Student Standards Committee is working to prevent the loading of any one student with too many points. During the spring eelctions a close watch will be kept on the various nominees and those elected to prevent a student from piling up points above those permitted by the Point System. With this in view the entire Table of Points is printed in this issue of the Rotunda. Students are asked to watch themseives accepting offices and memberships, to save the embarrassment of immediate resignations.

Students with averages of not less than B may carry not more than 16 points; a student with a scholastic average of not less than C may carry as many as 12 points; while those whose average is less than C may not carry more than 6 points.

President Attends Education Meeting

National Association Also Calls Dr. Wynne

Dr. J. L. Jarman and Dr. J. P. Wynne attended the regular meeting of the National Education Association in New Orleans which was held from the 19th through the 27th of February.

Dr. Jarman attended the part of the meeting held by the Association of Teachers College. Dr. Wynne attended the meetings of the Department of Superintendents, Society for the Study of Curriculum, the John Dewey Society, and the Association of College Teachers of Education.

The N. E. A. holds two meetings annually at which times all the school superintendents and educators meet to discuss the progress and changes in education. It is a voluntary organization of teachers, administrators, and others engaged or actively interested in educational work. This association has done much to promote the interest of the entire educational system and of all workers in education regardless of rank, position or length of service.

Dr. W. T. Sanger Speaks at S. T. C. Founder's Day

Homes and Gardens is Topic of Talk

Dr. W. T. Sanger, president of the Medical College of the University of Virginia, will be the guest speaker of the fifty-third Founders Day celebration at Farmville. He will speak on "Historic Homes and Gardens in Virginia" and accompany the address with lantern slides.

The talk will be given at 8:00 on Saturday night in the large auditorium, following the Founders Day Dinner.

Dr. Sanger, also president of the Cooperative Education Association of Virginia, is a brilliant psychologist. Having attended the University of Indiana he taught at Bridgewater College for some years. He received his Phi.D. at Clark University.

Having been head of the Department of Education at Harrisonburg, Dr. Sanger became secretary of the State Board of Education. From there he was called to the Medical College of Virginia. His outstanding work there as elsewhere has merited him a place in Who's Who of America.

Freshmen Present Class Production

Guests Are Greeted in Up-to-date Night Club

On Thursday night, February 25, "A Night in Manhattan" was presented in the Recreational Hall under the auspices of the Freshman Class. The freshmen have the distinction of putting on a production in the form of a cabaret, which proved to be the most unique of the season.

As guests of the night club arrived, a blue and silver lighted sign announced its name as "Club Manhattan." Walking into the club proper, the skyline of lower New York City came into view in blue against a red sky, which was studded with gold, red and silver stars.

Before the floor show began, several couples danced to the music of the "Mad Manhattans", while venders were weaving their way in and out among the tables selling their wares of cakes, candy and drinks. The ushers, in evening dress, were busily showing excited guests to their reserved tables. As the lights dimmed, the spot was thrown on the master of ceremonies, Elizabeth Kent, immaculate in white tie and tails. In her own sparkling way she introduced the inimitable Laura Morris who sang "Cafe Continental". With the exception of a few intermissions, punctuated by the rhythmic strains of the orchestra, the floor show continued as follows:

The Coin Chorus singing "Plenty of Money and You."

Mary Page Hall from Stiff Stuff and Puff Company giving a lecture on the rules of etiquette.

Sara Keesee, who made her plea to "Trust in Me" and for an encore sang "Wonderful You."

The Liebestraum Chorus en-

Montgomery, Vaughan Edit Virginian and Rotunda

GROUP IS AGENT

Ficklen and Phelps Are Business Managers

Misses Ruth Montgomery and Mary Harrison Vaughan have been selected editors-in-chief of the Virginian and the Rotunda respectively for the 1937-38 session. Misses Mariam Ficklen and Ruth Phelps will be business managers of the two publications.

At a meeting of a committee appointed by the president of the Student Body according to constitutional provision the editors and business managers of the Virginian and the Rotunda were selected last week.

Ruth Montgomery, present photographic editor of the Virginian, has been a member of that staff for two years. She served as assistant business manager last year. Her success is made evident by the appointment to the editorial position. Miriam Ficklen has also worked with the annual staff for two years; last year as Mr. McCorkle's assistant, and this year as assistant photographer on the staff.

Mary Harrison Vaughan has been a member of the Rotunda staff for three years. Her sophomore years she became feature editor, and has again served in that capacity this year as an associate editor. Having also been editor of the Farmville Quarterly Review, Mary Harrison has demonstrated her ability in the field of publication. Ruth Phelps, now assistant business manager, has been a mmeber of the Rotunda staff for three years. She served as circulation manager in 1935-'36.

Waynesburg Wins Debate Over S.T.C.

Farmville and H.-S. C. Hold Humorous Debate

On Monday afternoon, March 1, the Farmville negative team was defeated by an affirmative team from Waynesburg College, Waynesburg, Pennsylvania. The debate was held in the small auditorium at four o'clock. John McPherson and Robert Anderson of Waynesburg upheld the affirmative. On the negative were Rose Somers and Juanita Callis of S. T. C. Anthelia Robinette served as the presiding officer.

According to Mr. O'Ferrel Thompson, a Farmville lawyer, the affirmative won the debate by their excellent stage presence and delivery and a better organization of their argument.

With Dudley Allen presiding in the small auditorium on Monday night the Waynesburg negative defeated the affirmative team from S. T. C. Isabel Sprinkle and Nora Jones upheld the affirmative for S. T. C. and John Myers and Roy Waycoff upheld the negative for Waynesburg.

Mrs. Fallwell, also a Farmville lawyer, served as critic judge. According to her decision the negative team won by only a small margin.

Dr. Walmsley and two S. T. C. debate teams left on Tuesday, March 2, for Harrisonburg S. T.

FOUNDER'S DAY

Saturday marks the fifty-third anniversary of the beginning of our school as a state teachers college. For over a half a century the sole function of this institute has been to supply teachers for the schools of the state. But it does more than that. It also gives to our land individuals who can take their place in any society today.

When we look over Farmville's glorious past, we realize what a heritage ours is. We survey with pride what those who have gone before us. We are thankful that we, too, can have a part in the making of a better State Teachers College and in leaving a richer heritage for those to follow us .

Again we think of Joan D'Arc, our patron saint. It is only fitting that on our Founder's Day we consider all she stands for here and through the world. With her as our inspiration and with the desire to make our school richer for our having been within its portals, we renew our pledge to do things worthwhile. Our task is to make more complete what others have done. Then Farmville will be proud of us.

QUIET IN THE LIBRARY

The library is the best place for good study in the school, but lately there has been so much noise that workers have had to take refuge elsewhere.

Here there are the best books, the most recent periodicals and encyclopedias, and the daily newspapers to which references may be looked up and the girls who really want to study and who realize the worth of the library are truly ashamed to have it become a gathering place for loud conversation. Last fall grades were unusually low. Earnest concentration and clear thinking done in a quiet library with all essentials around would be a great help to those below average grades.

Listen with interest to stories about geniuses who exist on a few hours of sleep a night, but discount most of them.

Findings of Colgate University's Dr. Donald A. Laird, in a survey of 500 men high in the fields of art, literature and science, show that the majority of these "greats" got plenty of sleep and if they didn't they suffered the same ill effects anyone else does.

A mine on a college campus. Sounds very absurd, doesn't it? This, however, is what has been built on the campus of the University of Utah. An experimental mine, 300 feet long, 6 1-2 feet high, and 5 feet wide has been constructed with the aid of the NYA to provide laboratory facilities and practical demonstrations of various phases of mining to students of that profession.

"I've received a lot of unusual requests, but this one beats them all," says Ben Schmoker, executive secretary of the University of Minnesota's Y. M. C. A. A mother, worried about her freshman son, wrote him the following letter:

"I am sending you three suits of woollen underwear under separate cover. Please see to it that my boy wears them as he should during this cold weather."

When a University of Minnesota male was being interviewed to determine the type of woman, blonde or brunette, he preferred, he said: "I like 'em all, but they can't be bald-headed."

Members of two Santa Ana Junior College English classes voted that they would rather meet Cleopatra than any other famous woman in history. Queen Elizabeth polled the next most votes.

Thieves at the University of Texas are playful. After a midnight swipe of $8, one left a note which read, "Thanks for the eight bucks! Will return later." Signed "Ima Robber".

Rotunda Reverberations

Dear Me,

"I'm Going to Sit Right Down and Write Myself a Letter" "Cause I'm Nobody's Sweetheart Now." Here I sit "Night and Day" with Kitty Fitz and Berry "Looking Around Corners" for Cousin Tommy . . . Carter Belle and Fred having "No Regrets" and Smitty asking Johnny "Did You Mean It" when he had her in Shannon's the other afternoon. Johnny doesn't know "It's a Sin to Tell a Lie."

All people have their troubles though "That's Life I Guess," "You're Laughing At Me" seems to be what Mr. Shannon thinks when he asked some people to pay their bills, but I'm telling you he's gonna "Turn the Tables" on you, then you'll find out "It Can Happen to You", and you'll be praying for "Pennies from Heaven."

Oh! me—and just when I thought I was going good with "That Man from Dallas", along came a "Military Man" (just like Mary B's), and all I could say was "A Woman Has A Right to Change Her Mind" and then he up and said "I Never Should Have Told You," 'cause "It's the Gypsy in Me."

Why do all the exciting things happen to girls like Lib Harris and Betty Butterworth? There they were having "A Fine Romance" when in walks a person connected with that big organization and it wasn't a "Welcome Stranger". Now they're "Tormented" and trying to console themselves with the idea that "This Year's Crop of Kisses Are Not So Good for Me," and sending down to Shannon's for "One Hamburger for Madame." But Minnie only smiles and says "You Better Play Ball With Me."

Last Thursday night was such fun though—"Club Manhattan" had everything from "Sing Me a Love Song" to the "Old Kitchen Clock"—"Every Minute of the Hour" was filled with something, and it was even better if you were "In a Sentimental Mood" on account of Virginia Lee Pettis. "Hands Across the Table" solo got me down or maybe you were ready for a few pointers on "Tea For Two" with Madam Poof Poof especially.

The poor Juniors and Seniors will be moving out next Friday and "It Ain't Right" to push us "Out in the Cold Again"—it's just like "I Can't Break That Habit of You". (My bed). Why "My Heart Wants to Dance", and how can it especially "On A Rainy Afternoon!" But those ole girls coming back will be saying to one another "Fancy Meeting You Here" and they'll be "All Dressed Up and No Where To Go" and I'll be telling them I'm so glad they're here. Then that night when I'm sleeping with two other people I'll know "The Moon is Laughing at Me" and I'll be asking myself "Why Do I Lie to Myself About You?"

And along came exams. Even a stranger can tell "There Was Something in the Air"—and I'll be "Out Where The Blue Begins" "Alone With My Dreams". Of course, I'm going to say to my teachers "Let's Put Our Heads Together". How do you expect me to graduate otherwise? "Oh, You Rogue" it's "Now or Never" and if I don't get that good grade every day will be a "Gloomy Sunday." "Am I Asking Too Much" for "Just One More Chance"? "It's Like Reaching for the Moon." Just when I think I'm learning something a voice haunts me with "Lights Out" and I look longingly at that bed, then I say "Get Thee Behind Me, Satan" (Charlotte Rice's trouble—she doesn't), then I look back at my book. I know "You've Got Something", but what? Until today I thought I wasn't exactly dumb now I know "There's No Substitute for You" and I wonder if "I'm Wasting My Time on You." And then I think "How Could You" fail me, and so far into the night. Love to you, Myself.

Books About the Civil War:

The Women of the Confederacy by Francis B. Simpkins and James W. Patton.

The authors, having examined a vast collection of letters and diaries, have recorded the wartime activities of the Southern women for the first time in a systematic and orderly fashion. The book describes the attitude of these women; their share in sustaining the Southern armies and in keeping alive the economic life of a blockaded country; the several phases of their relations with the Federal invaders; their amusements and their social diversions; their hardships, anguish and suffering; and months of the war in which the Confederacy was destroyed."

In spite of their almost fervent hope for the Confederacy to win, the women were constantly faced with the anxiety and realization that their friends and relatives were constantly exposed to perils, death and imprisonment.

"Only those who have felt this anxiety know what it is," said a Confederate wife in describing the feelings of those who had husbands in active service.

"I scarcely laugh now," wrote a Virginia woman, "and when I do the sound of my voice startles me and I immediately reproach myself for having forgotten for a moment the weight which hangs over my spirit."

Yet seldom did the women of the Confederacy give way to their grief entirely. They kept up a brave front going from the hospital where they tended the pitifully wounded to bazaars and amateur theatricals to raise more money, and though in a little while they'd be weeping tears of anguish for the present they made merry.

The authors have covered every phase of the lives of the women of the Confederacy and have made it very graphic by using the words of the women themselves to a considerable extent.

The book is interspersed with pictures which add greatly to its interest.

Soldier of the South—General Pickett's War Letters to His Wife.

It was on the third day of the fighting at Gettysburg that upon Gen. George F. Pickett was placed the responsibility his unfailing gallantry had earned for him. He was born in Richmond, Va. of an old Tidewater Virginia family. From the time of his enlistment he won distinction as a leader, his superior officers believed in his ability and his men worshipped him as man and general. So it came to pass, then, that on the fateful day of July 3, 1863, the supreme honor of leading the crucial charge against the Federals was given by General Robert E. Lee to General Pickett. A fine and gallant figure, astride his black horse, his blue eyes afire with ardor, his auburn hair bronzed to the sun, his flashing sabre in hand, he led his men on their triumphal march across the golden pages of history! Five thousand strong, the men of General Pickett's Division set forth across the field of their glory and their death. Not one thousand five hundred returned.

The letters in this volume were written by General Pickett to La Salle Corbell Pickett, his bride and his wife during the period of the war.

Quotations About Poets and Poetry

A poet is a nightingale, who sits in darkness and sings to cheer its own solitude with sweet sounds.
—Shelley

The world is full of poetry,—The air is living with its spirit; and the waves dance to the music of its melodies, and sparkle in its brightness. —Percival

Poetry is the breath and finer spirit of all knowledge.
—Wordsworth

Poetry is the music of thought, conveyed to us in the music of language. —Chatfield

Poetry is the spontaneous overflow of powerful feelings.
—Wordsworth

Poetry is the sister of sorrow: every man that suffers and weeps, is a poet; every tear is a verse; and every heart a poem. —Andre

Poets are all who love and feel great truths, and tell them.
—Bailey

In poetry, which is all fable, truth still is the perfection.
—Shaftesburg

Poetry is the intellect colored by feelings. —Prof. Wilson

Sad is his lot, who, once at least in his life, has not been a poet.
—Lamartine

You will find poetry nowhere, unless you bring some with you.
—Joubert

Poets utter great and wise things which they do not themselves understand. —Plato

As nightingales feed on glowworms, so poets live upon the living light of nature and beauty.
—Bailey

Poetry is music in words: and music is poetry in sound: both excellent sauce, but those have lived and died poor, who made them their meat. —Fuller

They learn in suffering what they teach in song. —Shelley

You arrive at truth through poetry; I arrive at poetry through truth. —Joubert

Poetry and consumption are the most flattering of diseases.

LOOKIN' 'EM OVER

Virginia L. Agee

We have been in the middle of winter for the past three months—supposedly—and, yet, we have had only two or three snow flurries. Last Sunday morning we awoke to see the ground covered with pure white snow, and the trees and bushes transfigured into fairy-like figures. Then — by two o"clock—it was all gone, "Gone with the wind."

Something has definitely changed, and we know not what. Perhaps the winds, perhaps the cycle of the world (which is most improbable)—but something has happened to the universe.

Not so long ago—many of us remember it, too—winters were bitterly cold and relentless, even in this sunny South. Cold winds blew; skies were leaden; we weren't surprised to wake up to find the world breath-takingly lovely in its new winter outfit. Those were the days when we squirmed in our seats at school—eager to be out in the frosty beauty of winter; when we were bundled into gay scarfs, jaunty, tam-o-shanters, warm mittens, heavy galoshes; when we tirelessly climbed hills and rode down on sleds, then climbed up again —pulling the sled behind us; when we thrilled with genuine excitement during snow battles and felt the sting of a water-pressd snowball on our cheeks and on the backs of our necks; when we pressed our noses to the window-pane and saw our playmates indulging in hard play — then we wished and wished we hadn't socked the baby brother or got caught red-handed in the cookie jar!

It goes back farther than that—our parents—who went sleigh riding to the tune of gay tinkling bells; who had taffy pulls and then "two-stepped it" or square danced—who looked at the feathery snow as it fell and the frosty stars and the pale moon.

Ah, yes—something has happened. In the dead of winter we race about with no hats, no mittens, practically no coats. (With due respects to the rainy days). And when it does snow—and we get excited and bright-eyed about it—the sun comes out and—pff—it's all gone.

Of course winter also has its bad points. There is suffering—much of it—made up of hunger and cold and disease. There can be one slip in a car on a dangerous road and lives are snuffed out and bodies crippled and minds deranged. The warm winter has its advantages there!

Yet cold weather kills harmful bacteria to a certain extent; it puts new vigor into the step and brightness to the eye and a flush to the cheek. It makes us eager and peppy and full-of-life.

A strange argument to have with oneself, is it not?

This is the twentieth century, an era of high culture and civilization and yet when we observe the headlines of every edition of every paper, a great doubt is born. "Baby's Body Discovered in Pigsty," "Boy's Body Found," "Two Held in Brutal Slaying," "Two Men, Woman Hurt in Detroit Strike." Father Gets 6 Months for Chaining Daughter."

In spite of the advance of science, in spite of the outward "calm and collection," in spite of all the veneer and varnish of background and culture there remains underneath barbaric, crude desires and aims. Lust, hatred, violence, cruelty, they're all present—and they're not attractive!

We writhe in indignation when a baby's body is found beaten and crushed or when the skeleton of a youth is found in the bushes or when a young woman's severed body is discovered floating down a cold black river. We grow hot headed when the strikes and riots break out or when a bank clerk is drilled with bullets or when a street full of carefree happy children is mowed down before a machine-gun.

And what do we do? Track down the killer, give him a fair trial, sentence him to death, or sometimes let him off with a couple of years of labor, then free him and let him start his disgusting career again.

Annual Dance Will Be Climax To Founder's Day Festivities

Music is Furnished By the V. M. I. Band

The annual dance on Saturday, March 6 will climax the Founder's Day festivities. A riot of color and a bedlam of sound, the gymnasium will be the scene of the most anticipated and delightful of the week-end's events, to which all alumnae and all students are bid.

The distribution of tickets to the girls now in school will take place early in the week in rooms to be announced later. All alumnae will receive their tickets when they register. Each person is to sign both her own and her escort's name upon receipt of the two tickets. In the event that any student wishes someone else to secure her ticket she must furnish a written statement, specifying the same.

Music for the occasion will be furnished by the V. M. I. orchestra, which will begin playing at nine-thirty. There will be no intermission, and the dance will close at twelve o'clock.

One of the season's most popular events, the dance attracts a large crowd each year and is expected to continue to be as successful this year as formerly.

Dramatic Club Gives Tea for Members

New members of the Dramatic Club were invited by the old club members to a seated tea in the Student Lounge Thursday afternoon, February 25, between the hours of four and five-thirty.

Miss Leola Wheeler, advisor to the Dramatic Club, welcomed the guests, and some of the girls served.

Macon Raine sang during the afternoon.

Bridge

Card Mania Sweeps S. T. C. Into Frenzy

One spade—four diamonds—pass two clubs—no trump—double—redouble. On and on. It rolls out through the keyhole. It slips between the cracks. The sounds mix with the smell of fudge and float out over the transom. I flee to the out-of-doors. It follows me through the windows. I escape to Shannon's. Alas! there is no escape. The place is teeming with the slap of cards being dealt, the grinding as they are raked in—the muffled "br-r-" as they are shuffled. Tenseness, expectancy, excitement fill the air. Faces are red with victory; pale with lost hope. They merge, whirl. I can't stand it. Vulnerable! A club!—slam!—down!—one heart gone!—Now for a spade.

Poetry has been to me its own exceeding great reward: it has given me the habit of wishing to discover the good and beautiful in all that meets and surrounds me.

Teachers and School Is Discussion Topic at Regular Meeting

Kappa Delta Pi held its regular program meeting on Thursday night, February 28. Ruth Phelps was in charge of the program which centered around the requirements and demands made upon teachers. Libby Roberts gave a brief history of the development of schools since the Civil War, changed mainly by two forces—the Industrial Revolution and immigration. Norvell Montague gave a talk on the modern teacher in relation to the school and her pupils. She pictured the teacher in the school of today giving her duties and necessary achievements based upon the needs of the pupils.

Charm Chides

Little things in life do count. A bright handkerchief that matches accessories can make a costume complete. A pin or a bracelet can add distinction to an otherwise undistinguished dress.

Neatness is the by-word in a modern miss' mind as she seeks to become well-dressed. Smooth hands with well-kept nails are always charming. Feet are most important. Run-down heels, hose with runs or crooked seams are simply out of date in this meticulous age.

Do you always remember to see if you have that tell-tale pink showing below your skirt? Do your gloves and bag blend perfectly with your costume? Do you ever make the extreme mistake of combining dressy hats with sport shoes? If you wear a white collar, it must be spotless. Never, never must your hair be oily. If you're the tailored type, don't ruin your personality with frills and fussy things. Study yourself, and work on your distinctive characteristics: and be yourself. Never be sparing with the needle or soap and water and you can always put your best foot forward.

Steps Worn May Feel Old Touch

precede the receiver to her room).

There are tired footsteps of some scientific minded girl coming from the laboratory where, for two or three hours, she has been bending over some important experiment in Chemistry or maybe a dissection of an animal in Biology.

Loitering feet on the steps after study hour at midnight when the girls linger, exchanging bits of news, talking of letters received, or laughing at the antics of some fun-lover.

These have passed away and others have taken their places. But the footsteps of the alumnae haven't died away for many have climbed the steps of success, attaining the heights of which they dreamed when still students at S. T. C.

How many will come back and tread these steps again on Founder's Day? How many will come back to revive old memories of the happy hours spent here? Will these worn steps remember them?

The contestants were entertained informally in the college lounge. They were entertained at lunch in the college dining room.

Miss Purdom entertained the music teachers and supporters of the clubs in the college tea room. They were Mr. Watkins and Mrs. Raymond Aubrey, of Danville; Mrs. Jesse Patterson and Miss Alice Sheppherd, of Victoria; Mrs. William Gills, Mrs. A. H. Chamberlayne, Mrs. U. B. Elliotte and Miss Elsie Carter, of Farmville.

Alpha Sigma Tau Has Pledge Dinner

Banquet at Longwood For New Girls is Held

The Zeta Tau chapter of Alpha Sigma Tau held its annual pledge banquet in the banquet room at Longwood Saturday evening, February 27. The color scheme of green and gold was carried out with flowers, candles and place cards, the latter being an enlarged replica of the pin with the guard.

Alumnae that returned were Misses Sally Royster Rives, Grace Virginia Woodhouse, M. T. Rawls, Alice McKay, Virginia Brinkley, Ophelia Booker, Marjorie Booton, Lucile Davis and Jane Lybrook. Other guests included Miss Grace Mix, Pan-Hellenic adviser, Miss Virginia Bedford, faculty member and adviser and Miss Mary Nichols, faculty member. The active members and pledges were also present.

Geography and Art Classes Exhibit Work

Miss Grace Moran and Miss Virginia Bedford will serve tea in the Geography and Art laboratories from 3:30 until 5:30 Saturday afternoon. All interested persons are invited to visit these departments at this time and view the exhibits which will be on display. The display will be made up of all the artistic projects that classes in Geography or Art have composed this year.

Pi Gamma Mu Has Program on Holidays Celebrated in Month

Pi Gamma Mu had a very interesting program at its regular meeting on February 23. Virginia Acworth, chairman of the program committee, presented the following speakers, Lucille Rhodes and Marjorie Robertson. The former spoke on St. Patrick's Day. Irish. Marjorie Robertson told of the many origins of St. Valentine's Day and of the different customs in regard to it.

Jan Garber Charms Lasses At V.M.I. Mid-Winter Hop

Kenbridge is Second on the Social Calendar

The strains of the lovely waltz "My Dear" echoing through the rafters of the V. M. I. gym began the festivities for the Mid-Winter set of dances last week-end. Jan Garber and his versatile orchestra were featured. S. T. C. girls seen waltzing in and out were Selma West, Elizabeth George Wilson, Ellen Conyers, Mary Bowles, Caroline Willis, Marguerite Costello, Jennie Belle Gilliam, Sue Eastham, Cathleen McCann and Jane Saunders.

Kenbridge Dance

Strange as it may seem Kenbridge was also in the spotlight for the socialites this week-end. Helen Harris, Elizabeth Hardy, Jac Adams and Virginia Allen entertained with a dance Saturday night. Among their guests were Army Butterworth, Nancy Sellman, Betty Hardy, Margaret Britton, Betty Fagg, Margaret Williams, Em Easley, Lois Powell, Read Turner and Nan Armistead.

At Home and Visiting

Girls leaving school to visit home were Dorothy Hatcher, Geraldine Hatcher, Neva Yancey, Eloise Williams, Doris Carper, Mildred Davies, Dorothy Davis, Livian Powell, Martha Evans, Marjorie Robertson, Lois Vassar, Cornelia Jeffries, Vera Thames, Dorothy Nebb, Elizabeth Tindall, Dudley Allen, Louise Allen, Della Chambless, Erna Dickerson, Louise Chandler, Betty Harwood, Frances Irvin, Leila Hill and Frances Gaskins.

Bonnie Avery was the guest of Mrs. W. S. Clayton in Richmond last week-end.

Eleanor Dodson visited in Culpeper for several days the guest of Georgie Stringfellow.

Jennie Benton Mapp spent the last week-end in Petersburg with her uncle, Reginald Mapp.

Virginia Tilman visited Kitty Jamison in Roanoke and they were among those enjoying the tunes of Jan Garber Thursday night.

Nellie Pierpont visited Virginia Locker in Richmond.

Elsie Carter had as her guest in Prospect, Mildred Harry.

Sponsor

Adelaide Dressler, attending the University of Richmond dances, was presented by George Harper, president of Student Council, as his sponsor for the Annual.

Baptist Tea

Mrs. F. C. Elliott and Mrs. A. L. Burgess entertained a group of the Baptist girls with an informal tea on Wednesday afternoon, March 3.

Farmville Defeats H. S. T. C.

Final Score is 23-14 in Brilliant Contest

Playing a brilliant offensive and defensive game, the Farmville State Teachers College basketball team defeated the Harrisonburg State Teachers College in Reed Hall Gymnasium February 26, 23-14. Evenly matched in the center and guard zones Farmville surpassed the Harrisonburg players in the accuracy of their forwards. The Farmville Lad of 5-2 in the first quarter shifted to 11-5 at the half and 15-6 at the third quarter. The fourth period, however, witnessed a rally by their opponents which rolled up eight counts to Farmville's five.

The Harrisonburg - Farmville fray opened with a period of fruitless passing with the centers functioning smoothly, the guards fast and watchful, and the forwards getting few chances at the goal and missing both foul and field shots. The scoring started with a foul shot by Hudgins for Farmville. Purnell immediately tossed in a field goal for Harrisonburg. Hudgins scored again in a field basket which was followed by another by Carroll, leaving the score 5-2 for our team at the whistle.

The second quarter maintained the ration. Hudgins scored from the floor. Purnell hit the basket from the foul lines, as did Carroll and Hudgins. Purnell looped in a field shot and Hudgins did the same just before the half ended.

The sidelines roared with excitement as the H. T. C. team discovered its characteristic speed and fight in the last period of play. Captain Margaret Byer went in for J. VanLandingham as center and Linkous had previously substituted for Glover at forward. Scores came thick and fast on both sides. Purnell and Linkous each roped in two field shots and Hudgins and Carroll scored one each for Farmville, adding one foul count by Hudgins.

C. and Bridgewater College. Rose Somers and Juanita Callis will uphold the negative for Farmville at Bridgewater on Tuesday afternoon. Tuesday evening Isabel Sprinkle and Nora Jones will support the affirmative at Harrisonburg.

There will be a humorous debate in the small auditorium on Wednesday, March 10. The question for debate is: "Resolved that S. T. C. should adopt Hampden-Sydney for a training school." Everyone is invited to attend.

SPORT SLANTS

(—By the Sport)

Three cheers for the team that went to Harrisonburg and "brought home the bacon." The game of the season was played Friday, February 26, when our own varsity team defeated Harrisonburg's team. Are we proud of them? I'll say. We really have a team to be proud of, and they deserve all the praise we can give them. Of course we are anxious to win all our games, but as always, there is "one certain one, and that one was Harrisonburg. The team left for Harrisonburg with the spirit of gallant soldiers going to war—they had to defeat their rival, H. S. T. C. team, and they did. The game was exciting, and not a single substitution was made. Those that playcd were Frances Hudgins, captain, Virginia Carroll, Ruth Phelps, Sue Eastham, Ellen Gilliam and Virginia Smith. To those girls we say "nice going"—we knew you could do it. We also say "nice going" to those that sat so patiently on the side, ready to do all they could, whenever they were needed. And again we congratulate Miss Iler who has again coached S. T. C's team to victory. Our varsity team has won every game they have played this year—and now they have only one game left to play, Blackstone College. This game will be played Friday afternoon. So everyone come out, and support your team. We must show them that we appreciate all they have done, in keeping the name of S. T. C. on top. Those girls on the squad are doing their part, so now we as members of the Student Body must do our part. We're backing you always "Blue and White."

chanting its audience with the lovely strains of Chopin's well-known number of that name.

A chorus of ethereal creatures dancing in a blue spot to "Lovely Lady."

Eliza Wise and Harriet Vaden bringing down the house with professional demonstrations of trucking and a vocal rendition of "Sippin' Cider" by Harriet.

A banjo solo by the personable Dot Fischer.

An individual arrangement of "Organ-Grinder's Swing" as a piano duet by Jane Hardy and Geraldine Hatcher, followed by an encore, "Moonlight Madonna."

Virginia Lee Pettis singing "Night and Day" to Katherine Peery, and most appropriately "Hands Across the Table."

Mary Mahone, the little senorita, exhibiting her interpretation of a native rhumba, after which Grace Waring, Sara Keesee and Eloise Whitley insisted "She's a Latin from Manhattan". This was followed by "Midnight Blue."

The chorus returning for an interpretative dance of "Stompin' at the Savoy."

Macon Raine and May Bates, graceful and suave, in a tango.

Micou Snead strumming her own accompaniment on the ukelele to "Moonlight and Shadows" and on the guitar to "The Girl of My Dreams Has Dyed Her Hair."

Here the master of ceremonies drew the program to a successful close and once more the guests danced to the music of the orchestra.

Open Forum

Dear Editor:

When I was in grammar grades I heard a lot about the care of school property. In high school we had a "sermon" on the subject about once a month but since I have been down here I haven't heard the first word on the subject. And you can easily tell that quite a few others haven't heard it by the looks of some of these walls!

Say! what's wrong? Are we grammar-grade children? Do we have to be told "don't write on the wall, Sadie, it doesn't make it look nice?" We are supposed to be grown young ladies (or anyway, grown) and foolish, childish things of that sort should no longer be a part of us.

An ugly mark on the wall, a crazy picture, that we had so much fun putting there may look cute to us for a day or a week, and maybe the first time somebody else saw it, it didn't look so bad, but when you have to pass that picture every day it becomes very unpleasant.

Now it isn't the cutest thing in the world to stick Jimmy's name all over everything. Jimmy wouldn't appreciate it any more than you would if he'd stick your name up everywhere. You know a name used too frequently loses its charm and becomes the least bit common.

You may not be guilty, I expect you aren't so selfish but somebody is, and I wish that somebody who has written all over the walls of the halls and bedrooms and those who have taken the liberty to carve their names on the statues would just remember if everybody in this school would do that—well, you can see what would happen!

"Fools' names, like their faces, always appear in public places." Don't be a fool!

Dr. J. L. Newcomb Gives Regulations

Virginia University Refuses Favor to Athletes

Charlottesville, Va. —(ACP) — Scholarships, loans and jobs will continue to be awarded to the University of Virginia's students without favoritism to athletes, it was announced by President Lloyd Newcomb in issuing the new rules governing the university's intercollegiate sport activities.

The new regulations, which have been adopted to replace those of the Southern Conference from which Virginia withdrew recently, were accompanied by the following statement:

"The University of Virginia will continue to observe the one-year rule; the migratory rule and the rule which limits athletic participation to four years in a five years period.

"Any of its regular students who are sound physically, who are in good standing academically and who have passed at least the three year course in the preceding session, will be eligible for its varsity teams under these rules.

"It will continue to award its scholarships, loans and remunerative jobs to athletes and non-athletes alike, without preference to either.

"The recipient of a scholarship must have ranked in the upper-half of his class if he is a new student, and he must have passed all his courses if he is an old student.

"The university will continue to exercise institutional control over all aspects of its athletic life which are within its control, with a view single to its welfare as an institution for the education of all its students.

"The university will be prepared to give assurance to all its competitors of the eligibility of each player under its regulations," the statement concluded.

S. T. C. Will Meet Blackstone Friday

Unbeaten Team to Play Final Game of the Year

The date's one! March fifth brings us promise of a good game of basketball, that between S. T. C. and Blackstone College to be played in our gymnasium. There have been some mighty swift games played in that gym this year and the prospect is anything but dull. So far as the schedule goes this is the last game of the season—let's make it a loud one girls!! That team just thrives on our applause so now it's up to us and remember—"the more the merrier!"

Students Further Jennie Tabb Fund

Money for Memorial is Contributed to School

PLANS CONTINUE

Results of Contacts As They Stand Are Given

Soon after the death of our beloved Miss Jennie, interested musical friends proposed a memorial loan fund for students to revere her name and unselfish service. With a contribution made by these friends, the alumnae carried forward plans for increasing the fund as a general alumnae association project.

An intensive effort has been made this winter to contact each of the 16,000 former students of the college. Lists of alumnae by chapters, counties and city groups were made and sent to the group chairmen who organized under sub-chairmen smaller groups to be interviewed as directly as possible. These alumnae did splendid work; generous responses came in and are still coming. As yet some groups have not been reached; some groups have not completed the work, and out-of-state alumnae have not been contacted. For these reasons the Fund Committee with Miss Carrie B. Taliaferro as chairman will continue the policies and plans as started until all groups have been reached.

The Fund Committee wishes to acknowledge all contributions and reports to date and will gladly receive others as they are sent in. Chapters, county and city groups have been heard from as follows: Accomac, Amherst, Andersonville, Appomattox, Augusta, Bath, Blacksburg, Boydton, Bristol, Va. and Tennessee, Caroline, Charles City, Charlotte, Charlottesville, Chatham, Clarksville, Culpeper, Clifton Forge, Chester, Cumberland, Curdsville, Fairfax, Fauquier, Gloucester, King and Queen Lynchburg, Martinsville, Middlesex, Norfolk county, New Kent, Northampton, Nottoway, Page, Midlothian, Patrick, Peninsula chapter (Elizabeth City, Hampton, Newport News, Warwick, and

Teachers Achieve Much During Year

Extension Classes Call Services of Faculty

The faculty have been busy during the year with school business and private accomplishments.

Dr. Simkins had his new book "The Women of the Confederacy" published, and the popularity of this book is spreading rapidly. Dr. Wynne's new book, entitled "The Teacher and the Curriculum," will be published March 15.

Dr. Jarman and Dr. Wynne attended the meeting of the National Educational Association that met in New Orleans. In Petersburg Dr. Walmsley and Miss Haynes were on the program at the Sectional Meeting of Virginia Teachers Association which several other members of the faculty attended on Friday, March 5.

Extension classes are going to be taught this spring by Dr. J. E. Walmsley and Miss Stubbs in Petersburg, and by Dr. Wynne and Miss Mix in Richmond.

The Supervisors are discussing at their regular monthly conferences the new method of marking and promoting pupils.

Miss Mary Nichols, president of the Alumnae Association.

Miss Nichols Will Head Association For Coming Year

Miss Burgess Frazer is Elected as Director

At the Business Session of the Alumnae Association held in the Little Auditorium on the morning of March 6, the following officers were elected:

President, Miss Mary Nichols; Director, Miss Mary Burgess Frazer; Nominating committee: Miss Carrie Brown Taliaferro, Miss Grae Browning Moran, Miss Lucy Gordon Adams.

Other features of the meeting, besides the election of these officers, were the treasurer's report and the reports on the several memorial funds.

The members of the Association were invited to tea in the Geography and Art departments, and Miss Mary Harrison Vaughan extended an invitation to come in and see a display of all of the publications of the college.

The Association gave the retiring president, Mrs. Mildred Dickinson Davis, a rising vote of thanks for her fine work while in office. Mrs. Davis welcomed the incoming president, after which the meeting was adjourned.

Farmville Debaters Lose to Bridgewater On Tuesday Evening

Four members of the Farmville Debate Club with Dr. Walmsley travelled to Bridgewater College and Harrisonburg S. T. C. on Tuesday, March 2, to debate teams of these colleges.

Representatives of Bridgewater college defeated debaters from Farmville in the Bridgewater College chapel on Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock. The debate centered around the National Pi Kappa Delta question of empowering Congress to fix minimum wages and maximum hours for industry—Vera Miller and Mildred Hite of Bridgewater supporting the affirmative debated. Rose Sommers and Juantia Callis who upheld the negative for Farmville.

On Tuesday evening at eight o'clock there was a non-decision debate at Harrisonburg between H. S. T. C. and Farmville. This debate was also a discussion of the Pi Kappa Delta question of Congressional regulation of wag-

PRESIDENT'S LETTER

To the Alumnae:

Another Founder's Day has rolled around which means that a number of our girls will be coming back to their second home. This is always a great pleasure to the faculty and administration. I should like to feel that all over the country groups of our alumnae were getting together on Founder's Day, thinking in terms of their Alma Mater.

Every year we get telegrams and letters from chapters, as well as individuals, sending us greetings and best wishes. One of our alumnae, now in her eighties, sends us a letter every year at this time recalling some of her experiences while here. All of these greetings are very much appreciated.

We have, as usual, this session a splendid group of students from every section of the state, fourteen other states and two foreign countries enjoying the same experiences and participating in the same activities that you did while you were here. All of our extra-curricula activities maintain high standards through which girls have an opportunity to express themselves and in this way develop their personalities.

We are this day thinking of you and sending our greetings and best wishes.

Cordially yours (Signed) J. L. Jarman, President

Fourth Lyceum is Third Appearance Of Noted Singers

Siberian Chorus Has Nicholas Vasilieff as Director

As an early part of the Founders' Day Program, on Friday, March 5, at 8 P. M., the Siberian Singers were presented as the fourth Lyceum number of the year. This being the third appearance at S. T. C., the Singers joined in the spirit of this being a "homecoming" event for them also.

The first division of songs was devoted to religious songs during the rendering of which the chorus appeared dressed in Seventeenth Century Moscow Cathedral Robes. These numbers were:

Divine Praise, Bortuiensvy; Hallelujah, Old Church Chant; Credo, Gretchaninoff; The Last Supper, A. Lxoff; Lord Have Mercy, Lvoffsky.

In part two the Singers appeared in their regular Russian costumes. Here they gave interpretations of the gaiety and various phases of Russian life. In "Pirate Song", a Volga legend, the bravado of Seventeenth Century pirates was interpreted. The "Jolly Inn Keeper", "Soldier's Song", and "Laughing Polka" followed in the same carefree manner of youth and frivolity. However in the "Prisoner's Song" the mood changes to depict the horror of Siberian prisons.

Elizabeth Roberts is Manager Rotunda

Elizabeth Roberts, Norton, will be business manager of the Rotunda for 1937-28. Elizabeth has been a member of the Rotunda staff for two years, serving in the capacity of an associate editor this year. She is literary editor of the Farmville Quarterly Review, a member of Kappa Delta Pi, Beorc Eh Thorn, and various other organiaztions.

Student Program Precedes Donation To Building Fund

Theme of Skits Given is Virginia Scenes

The presentation of gifts to the Student Building Fund on Saturday morning was surrounded by a program presented by the four classes.

Against a background composed of a huge map of Virginia each class put on a skit on the stage of the large auditorium as the Student Day Program. As a prologue the Spirit of Virginia in the person of Bonnie Lane read a poem about the state which was written by Kitty Roberts.

The four classes, in turn, gave brief skits representing the four sections of state. Freshmen attired in nautical costume tapdanced and sang. Black-faced Juniors harmonized songs of the Old South: "Old Black Joe", "Massa's in the Cold Groun" and others. A miniature Apple Blossom Festival presented by the sophomores gave a picture of the Winchester section. Finally, senior Hill Billies portrayed the typical mountaineers in songs and dance.

Once more Virginia's spirit stepped forward bearing a golden horn of plenty. This she presented to Dr. Jarman as the representation of the various parts of the state flooded the stage, singing "What's the Matter with Jarman? He's All Right!"

The program was followed by

College Will Offer Two Summer Terms With Winter Faculty

Summer school at Farmville S. T. C. promises to be even better than usual this summer. It consists of two terms—June 14 to July 23 and July 24 to August 27. The faculty will be made up of professors taken from the winter school faculty with the exception of some of the supervisors in the Training school.

The college will offer, besides the regular courses, several new subject matter courses which include current history in newspapers and magazines, history of the New South, a laboratory course in writing, Bible as literature, and others equally interesting.

The college is looking forward to a summer of success and the educational betterment of its students.

VIRGINIA LAUDED

Gardens and Homes of This State Are Shown

Dr. W. T. Sanger, president of the Medical College of Virginia, spoke Saturday night at 8:00 in the large auditorium, following the Founder's Day dinner. The topic of his talk was "Historic Homes and Gardens in Virginia" Lantern slides illustrated his subject.

Mr. M. B. Coyner, chairman of the Founder's Day Committee, introduced the speaker. Mr. Coyner met Dr. Sanger at Columbia University when he was a student there. "Dr. Sanger is the best sight-seer I have ever been with", said Mr. Coyner.

Dr. Sanger holds many high honors and positions. Among them are presidency of Medical College of Virginia; presidency of the Cooperative Education Association of Virginia; presidency of Kiwanis Club of Richmond. His outstanding work in education has merited him a place in Who's Who of America.

Black and white slides of the typical three room house of the early seventeenth century to the present day homes in their beauty were shown. Dr. Sanger explained each slide as he pointed out the type of brick laying, chimney, roof, ceiling, and other features.

Many hand - colored slides were shown of the historic Wil-

Date for Spring Play is Selected By Dramatic Club

Committee Selects "Cradle Song" For Play

April 16, is the date of the spring production of the Dramatic Club. "The Cradle Song" by G. Martinez Sierra will be presented under the direction of Miss Leola Wheeler.

The play is in two acts, both set in a convent of Enclosed Dominican Nuns. A baby girl is left at the Convent grille with a plea to the Mother Prioress to bring the child up in the cloister. During eighteen years the sisters care for little Teresa. In the second act Teresa is preparing to leave her home in Convent to marry a fine young man whose career will take them immediately to far away America. The grief of the devoted sisters is heart-touching.

Simplicity marks the whole of the play, the beauty of it being in its lines and its revealing emotions.

"There is such a wistful, delicate loveliness about this "Cradle Song" with its world-aloof nuns its admirable convent, its bells,

Miss Mary W. Cox Returns from Trip to Western Coast

On Friday night, March 5, Miss Mary White Cox, Head of the Home Department, returned from a three weeks trip to California and other interesting places in the West.

Leaving Farmville on February 12, Miss Mary traveled south by train to Memphis, Tennessee to join there her sister and brother-in-law, Dr. and Mrs. Tom Young. One of the most inspiring spots they visited was Grand Canyon before sunrise. They turned again to the West and Lost Angeles.

Although in visiting Catalina Island Miss Mary did not see the Coconut Grove Ballroom, her trip there was most enjoyable. The next attraction on the program was the horse races in Los Angeles.

Beginning with church services Sunday at Presbyterian church they proceeded thence to Beverly Hills and Hollywood, and also drove by Aimee Semple McPher-

S.T.C. Graduates Become Prominent

Various Fields Are Representative of Students

From time to time the "Rotunda" has published sketches of Farmville alumnae who have distinguished themselves in various kinds of service. The greatest service performed by our graduates is, of course, in teaching; but most of the articles in the "Rotunda" have told of achievements in other fields. Among the writers who have won distinction are Mrs. William Cabell Flournoy ("Birdie" Boyd, '93) of Lexington, author of many essays on Southern history; the sister poets, Josephine Johnson and Julia Johnson Davis, '10, of Norfolk; Mrs. Jean Cameron Agnew, '96, of Birmingham, Ala., playwright and story writer; Mrs. Carrie Hunter Willis, '10, the children's historian; Elizabeth Malcolm Nason, '17, poet and columnist, the Vivian Shirley of the Philadelphia Public Ledger; and May Brinkley, '17, of Richmond. Prominent in administrative positions and club work are Carrie Sutherlin, '04, president of Arlington Hall, at Washington; Pauline Williamson, '06, chief of the school health bureau of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., New York. The chairmen of three departments of the Federated Women's Clubs of Virginia are Mrs. E. H. Ould, '02, of Roanoke; Mrs. Carrie Hunter Willis, '10 of Fredericksburg; and Mrs. Elizabeth Edwards Hoyle of Newport News.

Mrs. Maria Bristow Starke, '14, is historian of the Virginia Divi-

WHOM SHALL WE CHOOSE?

With major and minor elections for the coming school session definitely in the air, we must stop to consider a few vital things. For one, no girl will be permitted to carry above the set number of points as set down by the Student Standards Committee. Each student must make her choices as to what she is most interested in and not load herself with too much work. We, the electors, do not want a girl holding so many offices that she does not serve efficiently in any. There are a great number of girls, who are qualified for office but never hold one, because of the habitual election of one student to as many offices as possible, and her propensity to accept everything that comes her way. If a student doesn't have sense enough to say "no", let the organization say it for her. Let's give everyone a chance.

HOME IS WHERE THE HEART IS

There's an atmosphere of warmth and friendliness about our school that somehow binds us, her daughters, to her in love and patriotism. At no time is this feeling more poignant than on Founder's Day. Old girls are drawn back as to a magnet. They cannot ignore the beckoning arms of their Alma Mater, calling them home.

Perhaps it is the untiring motherly care that we get from the home department that greatest the feeling of home. Perhaps it is the closeness we feel to our President. Perhaps it is the easy, careless freedom with which we are allowed to move while under school regulations. Whatever it is, there's some subtle something that sets this school apart from other schools in the fact that here is made for students a real home.

It is, somehow, wrapped up in such unlimited attention as we get in special dinners for certain occasions, in the fact that we are free to consult any person of authority at any time, in the way that each girl is known by name and welcomed home whenever she returns, especially by Miss Mary and Dr. Jarman. Anyhow, the old place is dear, and all it stands for will continue to be dear to her daughters that she sends out into the world each year.

Literary Column

A new volume of poems by Patti Smith Broadhurst ('1907-08) has just been published. For Florida. Carl Van Doren and others who have seen it in manuscript have given the work high praise. A review will apear in a later issue of The Rotunda.

In honor of the reunion of the Class of '17, poems from volumes written by members of the class are printed below.

A Sonnet (for L. H. S.)
from "Price of Wisdom"—Elizabeth Malcolme Durham

Like some mad boy that craved a budding rose,
You grasped a friendship far too young to touch
With fierce exploring fingers;—and a nose
Desiring full-bloomed fragrance overmuch.
You are a hedonist, I think, who will
Not wait the measured blooming of the flower.
Why should you hasten on the rounded, still Breathless perfection of the given hour?
Like antique figures of erotic Fates,
Distorted, strangely human, and unkind,
Your thoughts, persistent, just as one who waits
And will not go, have hammered at my mind.
Be patient, using your amazing wit
In contemplation of the infinite!

Laughter
from "A Handful of Life"—by May Brinkley

O give me clear tinkling laughter,
Like ice within a glass,
That I may cool my thirsty grief,
As gray years slowly pass.
Like ice upon a fevered brow,
Laughter to grief's hot thirst,
Will cool awhile, then leave it parched
And drier than at first.

To a Certain Village Pierrot

I send my heart a-soaring far on wings
In wistful search of Love's forgotten tune,
When Pierrot beneath my window sings—
And sighs, bewitched by a full-blown moon.
No wonder that the stars half envy me,
And roses drink as though the song were rain,
So sweet a young lad's serenade may be.
And yet, ah yet, I long for an unheard strain!
Tomorrow night, if Pierrot stops by
To life his loving voice, I'll bid my heart
Fold close her wings, quench her desire to fly,
Contented with the reach of rustic art.
He's but a lad yet; Pierrot is young;
Then wherefore should I sigh for a love unsung?

Our Part

I

Alas! O Lord, the cry has come,
Of war, to sweep our land;
To take away a reign of peace,
For which our fathers planned.
Whose roll-call speeds its fierce alarms;
And life sighs, "Here!" with parting breath,
Where bleeding thousands ground their arms.
For brothers face each other's steel,
Grim suitors in the last appeal.

From laughing leas the bugles sing,
More shrill than bird to nesting mate;
O'er tented slopes the war notes ring,
And time again the tramps of fate.
Bright oriflame of liberty,
Our bannered blazon flaunts the sky,
And hails the "sun-burst" in the sea,
A gallant peoples' anguished cry.
Now brothers, touch in common weal
To right that foreign wrong with steel.

From shuddering trees and painted leaves
Strew redder dyes of crimson sod;
And brave men be in ghostly sheaves,
As whirled there by the wrath of God.
Gray vapors hum with wings of death,

SENIOR PERSONALITIES

Mary Bowles, president of Senior Class.

Mary Bowles, our gleeful, favorite, has chucked her way into the hearts of not only her class members but the student body besides. Her boundless good humor, infinite fund of common sense and ability to tackle almost any job with success, her talent for calling practically 750 girls by name, have made her a vital part of school activities for four years.

In class work, Mary was secretary for two years and has presided these past two in the executive position. In athletics, she has made class teams in hockey and basketball and managed varsity hockey. She was treasurer of the A. A. Council last year. Besides, she's an H20, an officer, and a member of Orchesis. Tapped by Alpha Kappa Gamma for unusual ability the first part of her junior year, she has been its treasurer this year, and was circus chairman. Her work in the Dramatic Club merited a place on its executive board as staging chairman her sophomore year.

Mary's talents don't stop with activities and executive ability. H charm and attractiveness—great blue eyes in a heart-shaped fact, and a mere five feet two—have made her a member of May Court for four years and of Mardi Gras court two years. She is leader of Cotillion Club and a member of Sigma Sigma Sigma sorority.

Dear Editor:

As the third issue of the Farmville Quarterly Review is in our hands, it has occurred to me to wonder if it has proved itself worthy of its place on our campus. In answer to that question, I receive a chorus of "Yes" whenever I am so bold as to voice it.

When we consider its brief history and the valuable contribution it has already made to our student life we have just cause for pride in our infant magazine. It has stimulated interest in writing among our sub-geniuses, it has brought us in touch with the unique work of many of our faculty and alumnae, and it gives us excellent reading matter—pure pleasure—with each issue.

We are all hoping we'll see it firmly established on our campus very soon. With such a foundation as it has, we have few doubts as to its future.

More books about the Civil War:

Our American Holidays edited by Robert Haven Schauffler.

In the book entitled Memorial Day of this series there is a fine non-sectional anthology, in prose and verse, of the Civil War. No discrimination has been shown in this collection between the literature of the South and North. The editor has instead selected from all sources the most beautiful poetry and the most eloquent prose "in an attempt to reveal from various viewpoints, the tone spirit and significance of the festival and of the events leading thereto."

"Chickamauga" by G. T. Ferris which is perhaps one of the loveliest poems in the collection:

Women of the South in War Times compiled by Matthew Page Andrews.

This book depicts the life of the Southern people within the lines of the Confederacy during the four years of its storm-tossed existence.

The greater part of the material is given in the words of those who were a part of the times in which they lived, and editorial notes are sometimes added for clearer understanding.

One of the most interesting sections is that which contains excerpts from the diary of Judith Brokenbrough McGuire. The diary opens on May 4, 1861; it closes May 4, 1865, with the news of the surrender of General Joseph E. Johnston's army at Greensboro, N. C. Her story is the simple record of a courageous, self-sacrificing wife and mother who endured privations without complaint, encouraged Southern soldiers on the way to battle, and comforted the sick and wounded sent back to homes or to hospitals.

LOOKIN' 'EM OVER

Virginia L. Agee

"Age brings mellowness and ripeness; and with those factors — sweetness makes its appearance."

How many times have we heard that same thought put into different words! It applies to all things, if one stops to think about it. There is nothing like the ripeness and fullness that comes only with age.

The sun rose cheerily on the morning of March 6, and the glow from it seemed to penetrate the very hearts and minds and souls of everything and everybody feeling the warmth of its rays: the red brick buildings embraced by clinging ivy and thus softened the exquisitely beautiful columns gracing the entrances—the big trees, gnarled and weather-beaten, yet stately and calm and serene—the wisteria and spyrea and first-breath-of-spring, all bending graciously to the playfulness of the wind—a wonderful atmosphere created by Nature for the celebration of the fifty-third anniversary of our Alma Mater.

During the course of events of the weekend we had ample opportunity to study the opening quotation when we looked at and talked to the "Old Girls" who came back to us for a brief period of time. There was pride in the line of the chin, character in the flash of the eye, certainty and self-assurance in the step.

There were silver strands mingling with dark hair—that silver brought out mellowness and sweetness and dignity: there was a general calmness and self-assurance that marked them as those who have known the sheltering love of these resounding, old walls and who have departed from them to futures entirely in their own hands.

When we get ready to graduate from college, to be sure, our minds do comprehend a wee bit of the fact that we're facing such a new mode of living—but, we really have no idea at all until we are out in the great plain of life, sowing as we will and reaping as we sow. Sometimes it takes a long time to wake up to the fact that we're grown up and dependent entirely upon our personal resources and abilities.

With learning time must also come and go, and with time, ripeness and mellowness and sweetness come: in turn come dignity and self-assurance and poise.

Founder's Day here, was very well expressed by one of the Siberian Singers when he said it is our Homecoming. It is our Homecoming—when the old grads and the not-so-old grads hasten "home" with feathers in their steps and gleams in their eyes.

This is the time when someday we who will automatically enlist in the ranks of the alumnae shall hurry back to glance again at things we never knew we could miss so much--to recapture memories that seemingly died away in the hurry and rush of our professional lives—to take in all the old splendor and grace and dignity that belongs to our foster home and let it penetrate to the very marrow of our bones so that we'll have a clear vision of it when days seem dull and drab and hopeless.

To her—to our Alma Mater—we owe great tribute and honor, and in what way is it more beautifully expressed than by Jennie Masters Tabb in our Alma Mater?

"All hail, Alma Mater, dear mother to thee;
Thy daughters true, faithful and loyal will be,
Thy gentle instruction, thy influence so sweet
Will go with them always a guide to their feet
Thy loving protection, thy nurturing care
Will lead them to cherish things lovely and fair.
All hail, Alma Mater, dear mother to thee,
Thy daughters true, faithful, and loyal will be."

S. T. C. Victorious Over Blackstone College

S.T.C. Basketeers Have Undefeated Season of Games

Hudgins is Captain of Farmville Team

MISS ILER, COACH

Eastman is Manager During the Past Year

The Blackstone College game Friday, March 5, brought to a close one of the most glorious basketball seasons Farmville has ever known. An undefeated season!

The team was coached by Miss O. T. Iler with Frances Hudgins as captain and Sue Eastman as manager.

The successful season was a result of long and hard practice which started early in November. The varsity squad was announced December 16. Those girls who made up the varsity team were: Hudgins, Carroll, forwards, with Chambers, Fischer, and Adams as substitutes; Eastman, side center, with Mann as substitute; Phelps as center with McCounnaughey, substitute; Gilliam and Smith, guards, with Butterworth Bolick, Gibson, and Jarman as substitutes. The season opened January 29th when S. T. C. met Lynchburg in the S. T. C. gym. It was a hard and fast game. Lynchburg led in the first quarter but Farmville soon overtook them to win with a score of 35-14.

The next game was with Wingate, February 5, at Farmville. Farmville led from the beginning and won with a score of 44-16.

When the team went to William and Mary to play on February 19th they played with the disadvantage of a much smaller court than they had been accustomed to. Farmville won the game in the last two second of play The score was 20-19. It was the "tightest" game of the season.

The game which caused more excitement than any other one was played with Harrisonburg S. T. C. there February 26th. The teams were evenly matched, Farmville was again victorious by a score of 23 to 14.

The last game was played on the S. T. C. court with Blackstone College. It was the hardest, fastest and most thrilling game of the season, the final score being 32-23.

Throughout the season the team displayed unusual cooperation and ability. The team might easily be called one of S. T. C.'s best in many years.

Freshman Class Basketball Team, 1924

Imaginary Talk Takes Place Over Basketball of '24 and '37

Rules Have Changed But S. T. C. Spirit Remains Same

"Why look! Here is a picture of us when we were on the Freshman Basketball team back in 19—, let's see, when was that '26 or '27?"

"'24", innocently.

"Now Jenny, don't be ridiculous! It must have been later than that—let me think—we graduated in '28. Why, why! this must have been '24. I can't believe it."

"Yes, it's hard to realize. It seems as if it were only yesterday that we walked out on the gym floor for our first game. Let's see, you were one of the jumping centers and I was a forward. I was so frightened I didn't think my weak, shaking knees would carry me out on the court."

"I was almost palsied with fear, too, but after the ball was thrown up and I succeeded in slapping it to our side, fear left me and my only thought was victory for ("ole S. T. C.")

"By the way, that reminds me, did you notice, in the game between 'our' team and Blackstone Friday, that the referee threw the ball from the outside instead of throwing it up between the two jumping centers like we used to do? I hear that that is a new rule."

"Yes, and when I look at our picture and compare our suits with those that the girls wore Friday, I realize what changes have taken place."

"Those long-waisted middy blouses with black silk ties and those knee-length bloomers do look different, don't they? Those middy blouses were all the rage then, and I remember how proud I was of mine."

"I like the suits they wear today, too—the white short sleeved shirts and the black sleeveless sweaters are very attractive. I like the way the girls fix their hair, too. It doesn't seem to worry them if it flies in the wind as they play. I used to be so careful with mine. I actually wore a net to keep it in place when I played."

"I like the letter "F" in white on those black sweaters. It seems to stand out as the symbol of the spirit for which they are fighting, and it certainly has brought them to victory. Just think, they haven't been defeated this year!"

"Yes, looking at this old picture and seeing that game have made me realize that there hasn't been much change after all. For even though styles and rules are different, the spirit of the game is the same. They are fighting for the same school in the same sportsmanship-like way."

sion of the U. D. C. In hospital and clinical work, Mrs. Sophia Packer has recently become supervisor of the out-patient department at Johns Hopkins, and Mrs. Clara Noblett Burrier, after taking a degree in psychiatry at Yale, has been in service with the United States government. In other forms of social work are Olive Hinman, '05, in New York City; Mrs. Juanita Manning Harper, '14, in Richmond; Hansford Patteson, '14, on the Eastern Shore, and many others. Mrs. Olive Bowman, '25, chairman of the State Religious Contacts Committee of her church in Pennsylvania, recently prepared the outline on the church's responsibility for world peace published by the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom which sends its publications to forty foreign countries. Other prominent workers in missionary and religious fields are Constance Rumbough, "14, Elizabeth Jarrett, '15, and Mary Finch, '22.

It would be inspiring to know what has been achieved by teachers as Kate Trent—who taught for a time at Teachers College in New York, and is now with the Wilson Teachers College, Washington, or Germania Wingo, '07, at the State Teachers College at Richmond, Ky., or Bess Rush, '22, or Eleanor Gleason at the Fox Meadow Schools, Scarsdale, N. Y., or Etta Rose Bailey in Richmond; or Carolyn Cogbill, '31 at Petersburg and Susie Floyd, '32, of Hilton Village, both of whom have done demonstration teaching in the Farmville summer session. They, like Lillian Minor, '27, and Mary Kelham, '17 and many other Farmville graduates have collaborated effectively on the new Virginia curriculum program.

Only occasionally does the class room work of such teachers receive the notice that it deserves. A happy exception is Flora Belle Williams of Appomattox. She had published in the September, 1936, issue of the "Southern Workman" (Hampton, Virginia) an illustrated article entitled "A Unit—the Negro" with an editorial introduction by Isaac Fisher called "Teaching Peace at Appomattox". In this paper Miss Williams describes the unit which she successfully carried out in her seventh grade class. Unlike other units it is not a conscious or unconscious effort to escape reality by description of problems remote in time or place. It represents a realistic approach by a Southern white teacher and her pupils to the South's most sensitive and pressing problem. The Virginia branch of the Interracial Commission was so impressed by this until that this organization has reprinted it and distributed it extensively in North and South Carolina and Virginia, where it is in demand by school officials and teachers. Miss Williams, as a Farmville student, was inspired to this activity by Miss Florence Stubbs's course in race relations.

son's temple. Following this, they took the train to Mercede for a drive through Belmont Orchards.

The travelers' visit to Yosemite was the most impressive of all according to Miss Mary. After seeing the giant redwoods, they took the train back to San Francisco. The next day the Youngs and Miss Mary took the ferry to Berkeley for a visit to the University of California, crossed the new Golden Gate span, returning to the hotel.

Leaving California, the next stop was in Denver for a shopping tour, and from there they made a visit to Boulder. On account of an automobile accident, however, and much to the disappointment of all, they missed Salt Lake City, Colorado Springs and Pike's Peak.

Although nearly two-thirds of the trip was spent on the train, a number of amusing incidents occurred along the way to relieve the strain of riding.

SPORT SLANTS

"The Seasons Stars"

Of course we have basket ball every year, but this year our team has been most outstanding. They have remained undefeated thru-out the entire season. They have kept that sportsmanship, fighting spirit that is so characteristic of Farmville's team. Those girls who have made possible our championship record in basket ball we wish to recognize and thank, and also Miss Iler who is coach of the Blue and White team.

The squad at the beginning of the season elected Frances Hudgins as captain of their team. Frances has played on the varsity squad and team for four years, and has made a record for herself, as well as for her Alma Mater. She was a star forward her Junior year and also this, her last year on the team. Frances has been outstanding in every game she has played, and has always managed to pull us through by making the winning goal, or the winning pass. In the William and Mary game, her final pass to Virginia Carroll caused the goal to be made and we scored the winning point.

Virginia Carroll, a sophomore, who is also forward, soared to fame when as a freshman she came out for basket ball and made not only varsity squad, but varsity team. Virginia Carroll played on the team with Hudgins and they really make a pair of fast, sure-shot forwards.

Then too, without our able centers, Ruth Phelps and Sue Eastham, our success would not have been possible. When Ruth Phelps reaches for the ball, if you are trying to get it, just give up because there's no hope! Ruth, who is jump center has been on the varsity squad for three years and has also played on varsity team. Ruth just has what it takes when it comes to reaching for the ball, and jumping for it. And is she backed up? I'll say with Sue Eastham as side center, we have two "jumping" centers, and they are really fast. Sue never misses when it comes to getting "the top". She is always right on the spot at the right time. Sue is a junior and has also been on the squad three years.

Now we come to those impassable walls of stone defense, our star guards, Virginia Whitehead Smith and Ellen Gilliam. Virginia is a sophomore and has played on the team for two years, and Ellen is a junior. Ellen played on the team two years and then graduated. But she returned to us again this year, after a year's absence, to take up her place on the team. These two girls are to be praised for their outstanding ability as guards. They were the two that held those Harrisonburg girls down the entire game. They are the girls that have kept the other side from rolling up the score. To them we say, "hurrah for the grand work you've done." These six girls, Frances Hudgins, Virginia Carroll, Ruth Phelps, Sue Eastham, Ellen Gilliam and Virginia Smith made up Farmville's 1937 basket ball team.

But now let us mention those girls who made up the varsity squad. Chlotilde Jarman, a freshman, has played outstanding basket ball this year, and plays well at almost any position. We're expecting you to be on top, Chlotilde. She played in quite a few games this year. Ruth Emma Chambers, a junior transfer, from Blackstone, who is forward has also made a name for herself on the squad. Pat Gibson, freshman guard, has made us realize a thing or two, also. Other members of the squad that have proved outstanding are Edna Bolick. Army Butterworth, Inez Chappell. Elizabeth Berryman, Evelyn Mann. Jean McConnaughey, Jennie Belle Gilliam, Dot Fischer, Marie Dix. Mable Burton, Ruby Adams. These girls make up the varsity squad and have been essential in the success of our team. So now as our season draws to a close we say, "Three cheers to our varsity team and squad, and to their coach, Miss Iler!"

liamsburg Restoration and the scenic gardens of Richmond.

Some of the outstanding buildings shown were Monticello, Bear's Castle, Raleigh Tavern, Bruton Parish Church, Patrick Henry House, Carey Home, Winston Hall, and Ashlawn.

Dr. Sanger told how the old homes were built to be enlarged as the family grew. Perhaps the most interesting feature of the early house was the inside chimney on the north side of the house to protect it from the north wind.

"The main function of a hobby is for one to see more as he goes around," said Dr. Sanger in closing his address. His wish to get the rising generation interested in restoring and beautifying old scenic spots of Virginia was certainly a challenge to the teachers and future teachers of Virginia.

its music, and its uneventful events.

"Cradle Song" has been translated in all the major languages and has been an especial favorite on the British and American stages. The "British Weekly" says of it: "This is a play genuine in its emotion, deep in its significance, and lovely to the eye as well as the mind."

The characters and cast in order of their appearance in the play are: Sister Sagrario, Anne Scott; Sister Marcella, Sarah Keesee; The Prioress, Elizabeth George Wilson; Sister Joanna of the Cross, Frances Hutcheson; Mistress of the Novices, Edith Kaylor; The Vicaress, Mary Joyner Cox; Sister Torrera, Macon Raine; Sister Inez, David Terry; Sister Maria Jesus, Frances Alvis; Doctor, Betty Hardy; Poet, Virginia Agee; Teresa, Clara Nottingham; Antonio, Elizabeth Carroll.

Farmville Forwards Escape Guards Ably

SCORE IS 33 TO 23

Enthusiastic Support of Student Body is Given

Undefeated, Farmville won the last game of the season from Blackstone with a score of 33-23 in the S. T. C. gym Friday, March 5. The first quarter was close with both sides scoring. Slightly rattled, Farmville failed to rally in the second quarter. At the half S. T. C. had gained a score of 16-13. Both teams scored in the third quarter as Farmville began to stage a comeback. With four goals made, Hudgins and Carroll proved their ability to get away from Blackstone's guards.

The first minutes of the game promised an exciting and close match; each team used exceptionally good pass work. Blackstone was the first to score only to be followed immediately by S. T. C. The quick short passes of the opposing team were soon interrupted by the agile Farmville six.

Both Blackstone forwards made several beautiful floor shots. Hudgins, captain of the S. T. C. squad, was accurate in making free shots. After the opponents made a substitution at the half the score was brought to a tie of 21-21. Blue and white renewed confidence in themselves and with spectacular passwork brought the third quarter to an exciting close.

The opening of the last quarter found our guards breaking up the passes of Blackstone College guards. With the able and perpetual assistance of the team, Hudgins and Carroll raised the score eight points in the final quarter. The ardent enthusiasm of the spectators and student body helped to bring the fray to a victorious ending for S. T. C. The student body is proud of the fact that the Farmville squad has been undefeated for the past two years.

The line-up:

F. S. T. C.	B. C.
Hudgins (Capt.)	F. Farley (Capt.)
Carroll, F.	Leggett
Phelps, C.	Crowder
Eastham, C.	Sesge
Gilliam, G.	Paxton
Smith, G.	Cummings

Blackstone substitute: Bennett.

Farmville Orchestra Plays During Meal

Alumnae and students were entertained at six o'clock Saturday evening with a banquet in the dining room. Mrs. Shelton, Mrs. Jamison and student waitresses were in charge of the elaborate dinner.

Seated at the head table were Dr. and Mrs. W. T. Sanger, Mrs. Mildred Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Coyner, Dr. J. L. Jarman, Miss Mary White Cox and Bonnie Lane. Alumnae were seated at the tables nearest the door.

A blessing was asked by Dr. Jarman. During the meal the college orchestra, under the direction of Miss Lizabeth Purdom, rendered selections.

Departments Give Exhibition at Tea

Geography and Art Classes Entertain Alumnae

From 3:30 to 5:30 on Saturday, March 6, the Geography and Art Departments entertained the alumnae at a tea and displayed their exhibits in the Geography Department. The Art Department had on display the various phases of art as they would appeal to the different departments in teaching school, from the primary through the high school. Starting with crayon studies on cloth, the exhibits ran up through murals, poster designing, plaques, pottery, and crafts.

Australia was the general theme of the unit worked out in the Geography Department. A map with all the regions and products of Australia presented on it took up the greater portion of the exhibit. All around the room different posters and scenes of Australia and its relation to other countries were shown. The whole display showed study and concentration on the part of those participating and gave to those who saw the exhibit a bird's-eye view of Australia.

Misses Hiner Have Tea for Class of '17 On Day of Reunion

Misses Mary Clay and Winnie V. Hiner entertained at tea at their home on High Street on Saturday, March 6. The tea was in honor of the class of 1917 on its reunion day. Ten members of the class and some of their friends were present.

The fifty-third anniversary of Farmville S. T. C. also marked the reunion date for the classes of 1887, 1897, 1907, and 1927.

Alpha Sigma Alpha Sorority Dedicates Memorial Bench

On Saturday, November 14, 1936, the eyes of the Alpha Sigma Alphas from coast to coast were turned to Farmville State Teachers College. Here alumnae had gathered from near and far to pay tribute to the founders of Alpha Sigma Alpha Sorority on its thirty-fifth anniversary by unveiling a memorial bench and birdbath.

At three o'clock faculty members, students, alumnae and friends assembled on the campus in front of the Student Building. On the platform adjacent to the memorial were two of the Founders, Louise Cox Carper and Juliette Hundley Gilliam. Dr. Joseph Jarman, President of the Farmville State Teachers College, Miss Evelyn G. Bell, National President of Alpha Sigma Alpha, and Susan Lane, president of Alpha Chapter.

Miss Bell said, "We present this memorial to Dr. Jarman, president of the Farmville State Teachers College with the hope that it may symbolize Alpha Sigma Alpha's ever present desire to keep faith with her Founders as well as with the place of her founding."

The sorority was founded in November 1901 just three months before Dr. Jarman was installed as president of the college. It was the second national sorority to be founded on the Farmville Campus and one of five nationals to be founded at Farmville. Virginia Lee Boyd, Juliette J. Hundley, Mary W. Hundley, Louise Burns Cox, and Calva Hamlet Watson were the five founders responsible for a sorority that now has chapters extending out into all sections of the country.

Registrations Are Sent to President

Granddaughters Club Expect Members in 1940

Three registrations for future membership in the Granddaughters have already been received from mothers, announces Elizabeth Harris, president of the organization.

Among those who have already been registered are Katie Giddens Bourne's daughter, Saluda, to enter in 1940; Margaret Alexander Tucker's daughter, McKenny; and Annie Warren Jones Starritt's daughter, Grand Rapids, Michigan, to enter in 1940.

Daughters and granddaughters of alumnae who are attending S. T. C. at present are as follows:

Jacqueline Adams, Eva Orgain Adams; Mary Elizabeth Badger, Edna Roberts Badger; Elizabeth Archer Barnard, Judith Fenner Barnard; Frances Barnes, Mattie Blanche Haskins Barnes; Eleanor Bell, Ethel Arvin Bell; Mary Rives Black, Mattie Eugenia Bowles Black; Edith Owen Bradshaw, Frances Owen Bradshaw; Elizabeth Burke, Carrie McGeorge Burke; Jane Burke, Ethel Abbitt Burke; Elizabeth Butler, Georgie May Miller Butler.

Sigma Sigma Sigma Entertains President of National Council

Miss Mabel Lee Walton, National President of Sigma Sigma Sigma Sorority has been visiting Alpha Chapter of the Farmville S. T. C. campus for several days.

Miss Walton has visited twenty college campuses in the past five months, and will complete her tour of the various chapters during the spring.

At the recent meeting of the American Association of Teachers Colleges at New Orleans, Miss Walton, as secretary, presented a paper on "The Association of Education Sororities—Its place in the Teachers Colleges."

One of the interesting features of Miss Walton's trip for the spring will be attending the presentation of the Chi Omega National Achievement Award to Katherine Cornell at the White House March 30. Mrs. Roosevelt is a member of the committee making the award.

Ice Cream in the shape of flowers and fruits, cake, candy, nuts, and punch were served during the evening.

OBITUARIES

Death has taken fourteen S. T. C. alumnae within the past year, according to reports received by the alumnae office here. Those listed are as follows:

Miss Ellen Bouldin, former faculty member, Nov. 22, 1936; Miss Dorris Alford, July 16, 1928; Mrs. B. S. Dyer (Armenta Allison) March, 1936; Mrs. E. B. Cary (Leila Almond) April, 1936; Mrs. J. H. O'Bannon (Rena Armstrong) April, 1936; Mrs. E. P. White (Nannie Burcher) Dec. 1936; Miss Marion Forbes, 1936; Charlotte Elliott, Sept. 1936.

Mrs. J. E. Garland (Gertrude Pearl Harris) 1936; Mrs. E. R. Saunders (Frances Lipscomb) 1936; Mrs. James Cooley (Jessie Nidermaier) Jan., 1937; Miss Susie Phaup, March 1936; Mrs. Ernest Brown (Dorothy Shoffner), 1935; Miss Estelle Tyler Wood, Feb., 1937.

Friend Meets Friend as All Gather to Dance

The annual Founder's Day dance was ushered in last Saturday night by the gayest of crowds, shrieks of feverish glee and swing tunes by the V. M. I. "Commanders".

This affair climaxed the weekend celebrations. Throngs of old and new girls swarmed into the gym dragging behind them their bewildered dates dressed in anything from a uniform or tails to a sport suit. Color from the graceful and beautiful spring gowns of the young ladies was the old decoration. Uniforms were scattered throughout the crowd, and girls' elaborate hair dressings blended to make the scene more spectacular.

Refreshing punch was served before and after the dance in the Student Building lounge. There was no intermission so quite a few weary couples wandered up to the lounge to seek refuge from the noisy mob.

Many brave souls expressed the desire to dance all night but after the last strains of "Home Sweet Home" had faded out the larger majority dragged their weary feet willingly to bed. Everyone agreed that it had been the best Founder's Day of all.

Association Holds Longwood Luncheon

Amidst a heraldry of spring with its warm sunshine within and without, and a welcoming warmth radiating from the decorations of spring flowers and cheery greetings of the welcoming committee, the alumnae association held its annual luncheon for the S. T. C. alumnae at 1:00 on Saturday, March 6, at Longwood. This year's buffet luncheon was served by Margaret Carroll, Bonnie Lane, Jane Powell, Mary Jackson, Dorothy Wise, and Jane Royall. Besides the eighty-one alumnae, Dr. Jarman, Miss Mary White Cox, Mary Bowles, president of the senior class, and Sarah Hayes, president of the Sophomore Class, were guests.

Publications Give Display of Issues

Reading Room Shows Past History of Alumnae

During the Founder's Day celebration, room 19 was turned into a reading room for the alumnae. Here were "Rotundas", "Virginians" and all other school publications that have been published. The annuals on display dated back to the years 1898 and 1899 when the name of the yearbook was "The Normal Light". In the year 1900 the name was changed to "The Virginian" which has been kept ever since. Copies of the magazine "The Focus" were found on the bookshelves.

Books from the various departments of the school were lent by the faculty to make the material in the room as interesting and as varied as possible. Visitors also could find the daily newspapers.

Although the yearbook has been published almost every year since the school was founded, the Rotunda appeared on S. T. C.'s campus in 1921, while various magazines have appeared intermittently through the years.

Editors of the various publications in chronological order are as follows:

The magazine: 1911, Helen C. Massie; '14, Gertrude Welkes; '15, Helen Geig; '16, Lillian Obersham; '17, Gertrude Lee; '18, Shannon Morton; '19, Nellie Lagnes; '20, Katherine Stallard; '29, and '30, Mary Ellen Cato; '37, Mary Harrison Vaughan; and '38, Norvell Montague.

The Rotunda: 1921, Helen Skillman; '22, Mildred Dickinson; '23, Elizabeth Moring; '24, Emily Calcott; '25, Lucille Walton; '26, Lucy Haile Overbey; '27, Edith Cornwell; '28, Evelyn Dulaney; '29, Pearl Etheridge; '30, Lucy Thompson; '31, Jessie Smith; '32, Louise Elliott; '33, Martha Gunter; '34, Mary Shelton; '35, Lelia Mattox; '36, Florence Sanford; '37, Virginia Bean; and '38, Mary Harrison Vaughan.

The annual: 1898, Mary Garnett Jackson; '99, Ella Godwin; 1900, Anna Bruce Touston; '02, Ethel Stuart Cole; '03, Mary Peck; '04, Mary Elizabeth Herbert; '05, Olive May Hinman and Lucy Manson; '06, Cary Dungan; '07, Elizabeth Edwards; '08, Virt Davidson; '09, Mary Purnell Dupuy; '11, Carrie Hunter; '12, Anne Bucknor Conway; '13, Thelma Blanton; '14, Alice Howison; '15, Benlan Scott; '16, Dixie McCabe; '17, Gertrude Griser; '18, Irger Schele; '20, Carolyn Burgess; '21, Iola Johnson; '22, Emily Calcott; '23, Kathleen Morgan; '24, Agnes Baptist; '25, Audrey Chewning; '26, Cornelia Dickinson; '27, Evelyn Beckham; '28, Louise McCormick; '29, Virginia Raine; '30, Lucille Norman; '31, Elizabeth Taylor; '32, Charlotte Hutchins; '33, Mary Thomas Rawls; '34, Mary Frazer; '35, Elizabeth Vassar; '36, Lelia Sanford; '37, Virginia Baker; and '38, Ruth Montgomery.

Mrs. Fitzpatrick Will Be Chairman of Dance Section

Members of Orchesis, Dance Group, and the Dance Composition Class under the direction of Mrs. Louise Fitzpatrick will appear on the program of the spring meeting of the Virginia Association of Health and Pysical Education to be held at the Jefferson Hotel in Richmond, March 12-13.

On Friday night as a part of the floor show of the dinner-dance of the convention Katherine Irby and Gwen Bell will tap dance, accompanied by Vivian Davis.

At the Saturday afternoon session in the Flemish Room of the hotel, the Dance Section will be under the chairmanship of Mrs. Fitzpatrick. At that time Marguerite York will review the book, "America Dancing," by John Martin. This will be followed by demonstrations in Modern Dancing by students of Westhampton, Mary Baldwin, Fredericksburg, and Farmville.

The Farmville students will present dances composed by members of Orchesis and the composition class. They will be accompanied by Vivian Davis and Elizabeth Legrande. The latter has composed a piece of music especially for one of the dances.

From Richmond a number of the girls will accompany Mrs. Fitzpatrick to Sweet Briar to attend their dance recital.

Farmville girls who will take part in the program are: Katherine Irby, Gwen Bell, Virginia Bean, Mary Bowles, Margaret Thomas, Helen Glass, Mabel Burton, Susie Clark and Marguerite York.

Plates of Farmville Will Be Sold Soon

Miss Mary Clay Hiner has announced that her committee is investigating cuts and prices for commemorative plates. As soon as the plans are completed price lists and cuts will be sent to all alumnae chapters. Anyone who doesn't belong to a chapter and desires a plate can write to Miss Mary Nichols for information.

Mrs. Julia Davis Graduate of 1910 Returns to S.T.C.

Alumna Will Present Her Original Poems

A treat is in store for the poetry lovers of Farmville on April 15. Mrs. Julia Johnson Davis, of the class of 1910, will return to her Alma Mater on the invitation of the English Honor Society, and present a number of her original poems.

Mrs. Davis, better known to the alumnae as Julia Johnson, was editor of the literary magazine, The Guidon, while in school, and wrote for it frequently. Her first story was written here, and appeared in the leading juvenile magazine, St. Nicholas.

Since then, Mrs. Davis has written a number of fanciful stories and some long poems for children, most of which have been published in John Martin's Book.

Poems of hers have appeared in The Century, Forum, The Nation, and The Lyric, and work of hers has been included in a number of anthologies and collections. Her poems have been frequently copied in The Literary Digest and newspapers. One of her long poems, The Garnet Ring, has been read with great success over the radio from many of the large northern studios. She has won several prizes for essays, and had a one act play produced at the Little Theatre in Norfolk.

Norvell Montague Is Review Editor

Johnnie Lybrook is Business Manager of Magazine

BODY ANNOUNCES

Alumnae Contribute Accomplishments to Staff

Norvell Montague of Fredericksburg will be chairman of the editorial board of the Farmville Quarterly Review for the term 1937-'38. Johnnie Lybrook of Fincastle will be business manager of this magazine. This has been officially announced by the committee appointed to choose the head of the publication.

Norvell has been on the staff of the Quarterly Review since its appearance on this campus in the spring of 1936. Since this fall, she has served as literary editor. She is a member of Gamma Psi, art fraternity; Beorc Eh Thorn, English fraternity; and is head of the program committee of the Association of Childhood Education. Norvell is also a member of Pi Gamma Mu and Kappa Delta Pi. Johnnie is a freshman, but she has shown ability along journalistic lines by her work as a reporter on the Rotunda staff. She is active in her class and is a member of Alpha Phi Sigma, national fraternity for scholarship and Alpha Sigma Tau fraternity.

The Farmville Quarterly Review has been a school publication since May 1936. It is published three times a year, once each quarter. Its purpose is to present to the students and alumnae all the most worthy literary accomplishments of students, faculty, alumnae and other interested persons. This fall the magazine was placed financially as a part of student funds, thus placing each issue in the hands of every student enrolled. Among the contributors have been Miss Nancy Byrd Turner, Mr. Thomas L. Hunter, Mrs. Julia Johnson Davis, Miss Josephine Johnson, Mrs. Carrie Hunter Willis and many others of interest to lovers of good literature.

The magazine may be subscribed to for seventy-five cents a year. Anyone wishing to subscribe or contribute may correspond with the new editor.

Norvell Montague, editor of the Farmville Quarterly Review.

Johnny Lybrook, business manager of Magazine.

Freshman Rotunda Wins In Contest For Class Issues

Junior's Publication Gets Honorable Mention

Winner of the Rotunda class issue contest is the freshman class. Placing a close second, for honorable mention, is the junior class issue.

Under the editorship of Johnny Lybrook and Helen Jeffries the freshmen scored again by publishing the winning edition of the class Rotundas. With Mary Harrison Vaughan and Libby Roberts as editors, the Junior class came second in place of honor.

The Rotunda class contest, held during the month of February gave each class the opportunity to publish the college paper, with two members of the staff as editors. These four publications were judged by Mrs. Sawyer, News Editor of the Farmville Herald, according to the regular classifications of newspaper excellence. These include make-up, content, style, consistency of punctuation and grammatical construction, and news-worthiness, which includes the varying prominence given to news articles.

Mrs. Sawyer states that the papers as a whole were unusually worthwhile, containing comparatively few errors usually found in collegiate editing.

Choir Will Appear On Radio Program

Miss Leake Will Be Guest Artist On WRVA

The College Choir, under the direction of Mr. Alfred H. Strick, will broadcast from WRVA Richmond, Virginia, March 12, 6:00 p. m.

The guest artist for the evening of the broadcast will be Miss Irene Leake, soprano soloist of the Methodist church; a graduate of the Chicago Conservatory of Music, and one of the leading sopranos of the state.

The program will be as follows:

"Where-ere Ye Walk" .... Handel
a Cappella Choir

"Liebestraum" ..... Liszt
College Choir

"I Love Life" ..... Mana Zucca
College Choir

"To a Hill Top" ..... Cox
Miss Irene Leake

"Panis Angelicus" ..... Franck
A Cappella Choir

"The Lord is My Light" .... Allitsen
College Choir

Mrs. H. K. Laing will act as chaperon for the choir, and Miss Virgilia Bugg, the Chairman, will be among those attending.

This year has proved to be one of the most active in the history of the choir. Besides leading the Monday morning song class for the freshmen during the winter quarter, the choir has rendered music for special Christmas services in the school, and local churches; and it has provided music for lectures and chapel exercises in our auditorium. On the evening of February 28 the choir gave a recital of sacred music at the local Methodist church.

One of the most important events of the year will be the concert which is to be given here on April 19.

es and hours. Isabel Sprinkle and Nora Jones debated the affirmative for Farmville. They met Helen Hatch and Helen Shobe who supported the negative for Harrisonburg.

On Wednesday evening there will be a humorous debate in the small auditorium. The question discussed will be resolved: That S. T. C. Adopt Hampden-Sydney as a Training School.

Gifts to the Student Building Fund for 1937 from organizations, alumnae, and friends amount to $1,780.33.

Indomitable Cousin Tommy Is Beloved Friend of Students

Just as the sun was rising on the morning of September 8, 1861, a boy baby was born in historic Appomattox County, Virginia. That child, the first born in a family of four, was given the name of William Marshal Atkinson, (better known to us as "Cousin Tommy").

He spent his early life on the farm where he was born. From all reports, "Cousin Tommy" was quite a ladies' man. When asked how old he was when he first "fell", he scratched his head and said, " Ithink I've been in love all my life." He was married to Birdie Mae Bordman at the age of twenty-seven. To them were born five children, three boys and two girls. Those children are all married now, and "Cousin Tommy" has fifteen grandchildren.

He was a farmer for a number of years, tilling the soil where he was born. Elected as deputy sheriff of Prince Edward County, he served twelve years. During this time he made more than a few note-worthy arrests. Among these was the arrest of two negroes who had killed a white man. They were hanged here in Farmville. Another exciting arrest was that of John Edmond who was electrocuted for killing John Morton.

In 1911 he came to Farmville S. T. C. to be night watchman and has remained here since that time. A few years after he came to the school a girl, Virginia Atkinson, of Clifton Forge, started calling Mr. Atkinson, "Cousin Tommy" because he reminded her of a cousin of the same name. One by one the other girls tooko it up. Soon the town people and the Hampden-Sydney boys adopted it. With that it became permanent. Few people know that "Cousin Tommy" isn't really Tommy at all but "Billy."

Needless to say since Mr. Atkinson has been at S. T. C. he has seen many, many things. He has seen girls come and go. He has known many people.

One of the most thrilling of escapades in which he has taken part happened when Mr. Graham's house was used as a dormitory. A colored man crawled thru a downstairs window, and when he was discovered, he was leaning over a girl's bed. "Cousin Tommy" arrested him and took him to jail. He was tried, convicted, and fined five hundred dollars with twelve months in jail. This was the heaviest fine ever put on anyone arrested by "Cousin Tommy."

Then there was the exciting "White House Hall fire escape escapade" last fall; on this occasion "Cousin Tommy", after having arrested a man attempting to get in one of the windows, was brutally attacked by the prisoner who escaped.

A few days before school started one fall, a fire broke out on Buffalo Street. Among those who rushed to the scene was "Cousin Tommy". He climbed through flames, risking his own life, to save the life of a little child, who was believed to be locked in an upstairs closet. The child had already escaped when "Cousin Tommy" reached the room. The acid with which they were fighting the fire poisoned "Cousin Tommy" and he was unconscious for twelve days. He was unable to walk for six months after the accident. Because of the various other injuries received in his brave efforts, he was forced to leave the school for a year. During this time, the girls never ceased to remember him and he tells us "my room was always filled with flowers and fruits and checks from the girls, which were both large and frequent."

"Cousin Tommy" does not smoke or drink. He says he is "too young."

Pacing the streets through rain and snow, through cold and wind, night after night, for twenty-six years, "Cousin Tommy" has become quite familiar with every inch of the campus. He has walked hundreds of miles over it. He has seen the college grow from that one small building to the school it is today.

"Cousin Tommy" is a part of the "big family". Everywhere, the girls speak fondly of him. His kindness and the way in which he goes about enforcing the law around the school have made him worthy of his popularity. Hats off to the very best night watchman a school could have.

Seward Is Elected President Of Y. W.

Plummer, Munt, Button, and Robeson Are Placed on Council by Student Vote

Nan Seward, Petersburg, was elected president of the Y. W. C. A. in a popular vote by the student body last week.

Her council, consisting of Isabel Plummer, vice-president; Carter Belle Munt, secretary; Sarah Button, treasurer; and Ruth Curtis Belle Munt, secretary; Sarah Button, treasurer; and Ruth Curtis Robeson, Freshman Councilor; was elected March 19th. Installation of the president and council will be held after the Easter holidays.

Nan Seward has been secretary of the Y. W. Council this year, besides serving on the Freshman Commission. She is literary editor of the Quarterly Review. Her scholastic rating has merited her membership in Beorc Eh Thorn, and she has been a member of the Rotunda Staff this year.

Both Isabel Plummer and Carter Belle Munt have worked on the Y. W. Council this year, Isabel as treasurer of the council and Carter Belle as Sing Chairman. Sarah Button has been on the Town Girls' Committee this year. Ruth Curtis, a freshman, is new in the work.

Reverend Patton Is Guest Speaker In Sunday Series

Negro Education is Topic Discussed in Talk

Reverend Robert W. Patton, D. D., Director of the American Church Institute for Negroes, was the speaker at the Episcopal Church on Sunday evening, March 14. For his subject Dr. Patton used phases of the treatment of negroes and their education.

The American Church Institute for Negroes is an Auxiliary of the National Council, which promotes, under the auspices of the Episcopal Church, the Christian education of negroes in the southern states. At the nine schools, trades are taught and more jobs are able to be filled by negroes. The moral and financial standing is raised considerbaly by the knowledge received.

At one school there were four thousand one hundred regular students enrolled last year in addition to eight thousand two hundred adults and young people, who for brief or for longer periods received direct instruction and inspiration to better, happier liv-

Three New Students Register at S. T. C. While Others Finish

Three new students have entered Farmville S. T. C. for the spring quarter. Shirley Ann Stephens, Petersburg, Virginia, enters the freshman class. Janet Stollard, Fate City, Virginia, and Ellen McDonald Burke, Salem, Virginia, are new members of the junior class.

Several students received degrees at the end of the winter quarter, and one diploma was received. Receiving the diploma was Thulia Park. Those who received their degrees were: Virginia Coleman, Victoria Gillette, Evelyn Howell, Lois A. Jenkins, Mrs. Margaret Drake Jennings, Virginia Leonard, Irene J. Parker, and Dorothy E. Robertson.

Ruth Phelps is Chosen A.A. Head In Student Ballot

Sue Eastham Will be Vice-President of Group

Ruth Phelps, junior from Madison Heights, Virginia, was elected president of the Athletic Association for 1937-'38. Ruth has been on the A. A. Council for several years, and has taken an active part in all athletics. She has played on the basketball team two years and has been three years on the squad. Ruth was tapped by Alpha Kappa Gamma, honorary fraternity for leadership, this year. She is president of Alpha Phi Sigma; a member of Choir, Sodalitas Latina, Kappa Delta Pi.

Sue Eastham, junior from Culpeper, was elected vice-president. Sue was also vice-president of the A. A. for the past year, and has taken an active part in athletics playing on the basketball team three years, and also on the hockey team.

Jennie Carroll, a sophomore from Rocky Mount, Virginia, was elected to office of secretary for the second time. Jennie has played for two years on the basbet-ball team and tennis team, and has been active in all sports.

Jennie Belle Gilliam, junior, from Petersburg, was again elected to office of treasurer of Athletic Association. Jennie Belle has been on the Council for three years and has taken a great deal of interest in athletics. She has been on the varsity basketball squad for three years, and has also been on the hockey team.

Dudley Allen Gains Forensic Honors

Debate Season Opens With Trips Planned

Dudley Allen completes this year the requirements for membership in the highest order in Pi Kappa Delta, National Forensic Fraternity. This is the order of special distinction which gives her the privilege of wearing the diamond-set key of the fraternity.

Dudley made the varsity debating team during her freshman year and attended the South Atlantic Forensic Tournament held at Hickory, N. C. She continued her debating when a sophomore and attended the same tournament held in 1936 at Winthrop College in Rock Hill, S. C. This year as president of the Virginia Alpha chapter of Pi Kappa Delta and as vice-president of the Debate Club, she serves in forensic activities.

Besides her work with the Debate Club, Dudley has served on the House Council for two years, she is vice-president of the council this year. She is also a mem-

Farmville Defeats R. M. C. in Debate

Affirmative Team Wins on Pi Kappa Delta Question

Farmville defeated Randolph-Macon Men's College in a debate Friday night, March 12, in the small auditorium. Anthella Robinette and Nora Jones upheld the affirmative for S. T. C. while Robert Gwalthney and G. M. Waugh defended the negative for Randolph-Macon. The issue discussed was the National Pi Kappa Delta question: Resolved that Congress be empowered to fix minimum wages and maximum hours for industry.

Mr. O'Ferrell Thompson, a Farmville lawyer, served as critic judge for the debate. In his judgment Farmville won through effectiveness of rebuttal, stage diplomacy and delivery.

College High Glee Club Chooses Mary E. Peck as Sponsor

Miss Mary E. Peck of the history department of the faculty was elected sponsor of the College High School Glee Club on Friday, March 12, at a regular meeting of the club. The club is directed by Ann Graham, a student music teacher of the college.

There are thirty-two members of the glee club, which counts as a one-credit class in the training school. They have made two public appearances this year, in S. T. C. chapel and in assisting the College Choral Club and Choir in their recital at the Methodist Church.

At the present time the group is working on a special musical program to be given in the near future. Their officers are Dorothy Reynolds, president; Margaret

Quarterly Review Announces Staff

Spring Contributions Are Due April 9th

The complete new staff for the Farmville Quarterly Review as announced last week is as follows:

Chairman, Norvell Montague; business manager, Johnnie Lybrook; assistant manager, Virginia Jarman; literary editor, Frances Collie; assistant literary editor, Sarah Button; poetry editor, Kitty Roberts; book reviews editor, Anne Dugger; typist, Lillian Anderson.

April 9 has been set as the last date on which student contributions will be accepted. All persons who have material to submit are urged to do so as soon as possible before that date.

Students Hear Choir Broadcast Program During Dinner Hour

The Farmville State Teachers College Choir broadcast a program of semi-classical music from Richmond over WRVA on Friday, March 12. The students of S. T. C. heard the program in the dining hall over a radio which had been installed for this occasion.

The choir, with Mr. Alfred E. Strick accompanying, sang "The Lord is My Light," "I Love Life", and "Liebestraum." "Hilltops Clear" was skillfully sung by Miss Irene Leake, soloist. The A capella choir offered "Panis Angelicus" and "Where'er You Walk."

Those girls making the trip include Elizabeth Ball, Gwendolyn Bell, Carrie Boswell, Edith Bradshaw, Katherine Broslus, Frances Bryan, Elizabeth Burke, Emily Channell, Frances Channell, Bruce Crowell, Mildred Davis, Martha

Morris Will Head Student Council

Upshur, Roberts, Buckland and Beebe Hold Offices on Student Council Second Time

Miss Elizabeth Morris, Big Stone Gap, was elected president of the Student Council by the student body on March 11. The following Friday, Caroline Upshur, Kitty Roberts, Dorothy Buckla,nd and Esther Beebe were elected vice-president, secretary, treasurer, and Campus League Chairman, respectively.

Elizabeth has served on the Student Council for past two years, holding first the office of Campus League Chairman then Secretary of Student Council. She has proved herself outstanding and a leader in the student body by her participation in various other extra-curricular activities, among which are Alpha Kappa Gamma, Kappa Delta Pi, Alpha Phi Sigma and several Y. W. C. A. committees.

Caroline has been a class representative on the Student Council for two years and has worked in other school activities. Kitty was Sophomore Council Representative this year and has made herself a vital part of the work of the Council. Dot has also been on the Council for two years. Her freshman year she served as class-representative and was this year Campus League Chairman. Esther has represented the freshman class on the Student Council this year.

Allen Will Serve As House Council President in '37

Secretary of Council Is Virginia Agee

In the elections held Thursday, March 11, and Friday, March 20 Dudley Allen was elected president of the House Council for 1937-38, and Virginia Agee was elected secretary.

Dudley has taken a very active part in extra-curricula activities ever since her entrance in the college. As a freshman, she was outstanding as a debater, making the varsity debating squad and Pi Kappa Delta. She was Hall president in her sophomore year, and was given a bid to Beorc Eh Thorn. This year she added to her laurels by becoming a member of Pi Gamma Mu, Alpha Phi Sigma, and Kappa Delta Pi. She is president of Pi Kappa Delta and vice-president of the Debate club. This year she is on the Handbook staff and for the past two years has served on the membership committee of the Y. W. C. A. She has served well as vice-president of the House Council for the past year, and was a member of the Student Day Chapel committee.

Virginia has taken an active part in extra-curricula work, also. Her attention has been centered more on dramatics than anything else. She has been in several plays, taking the lead in "The Taming of the Shrew," and one of the leads in "The Third Mary." She is now head of the acting group. Besides being a member of the Rotunda staff, she has been head of the Service committee of the Y. W. C. A. She has served her class as vice-president during her junior year. Ginny is a member of Mu Omega sorority.

Miss Mary Daniel Visits This Campus

Student Secretary Talks to Girls in Lounge

Miss Mary Nance Daniel, one of the Baptist Student Southwide Secretaries from Nashville, Tennessee, visited this campus Sunday, March 14, 1937. She is on a tour of the college campuses of the South. For the next ten days she will be visiting other campuses in Virginia.

While here she taught the S. T. C. Sunday School Class at the Baptist Church. She brought the message that daily contact with God, through Bible Study and prayer, is one of the greatest ways to help college students to solve their problems in life and the college campus.

At the morning church service she spoke of the B. S. U., its purposes, work, and opportunities in relation to the local Baptist Church and the college.

Selman's Players Appear in Drama By Shakespeare

Merchant of Venice is Presented at S. T. C.

Through the courtesy of the English Department and Beorc Eh Thorn, students of the college recently had the rare opportunity of seeing a professional portrayal of the Merchant of Venice. On Tuesday, March 23, Joseph Selman presented his Avon players in Shakespeare's immortal play.

Mr. Selman, pronounced by many critics the greatest "Shylock" of the American stage, gave an unforgettable interpretation of the unhappy money-lender. Miss Martia Kyle, young, lovely, college bred and theatre reared, combined natural grace and vivacity with a wealth of experience in her performance of Portia. Miss Eugenia DuBose and Mr. Lance Jackson, Mr. George Colbert, and Mr. Lance Davis (who made his first stage appearance with Ralph Bellamy) were especially pleasing among the minor actors.

The Avon players, comprising a cast of eleven, have appeared in many of the leading colleges and universities in the South and Middle West. The company is one of the few remaining professional touring groups, and this is their eighth season under Mr. Selman, who was long associated with George M. Cohan as well as the late Mrs. Fiske.

Through special arrangements with the manager of the company, it was possible for students of S. T. C. and nearby colleges to see The Merchant of Venice at a re-

SWAN SONG

"The time has come—." How varied are the meanings that phrase can convey. To us, the out-dated, out-going staff, they mean we must step aside—give up our cherished tasks of news-gathering, headline writing, measuring off the make-up.

We cannot bow ourselves out without pausing to reflect upon the thrills, excitements, wearinesses and practically every other human feeling that work with The Rotunda has brought us. The publication office has been a "melting pot", bringing together about forty girls with various services to perform, ably aided and advised by Miss Lucille Jennings, Mr. S. M. Holton and Mr. Barrye Wall. We have struggled along together, turning to them when things were too big for us to handle. It has been a wonderful experience for which we are grateful even amidst our regrets at our exit.

With Mary Harrison Vaughan and Elizabeth Roberts ready to step into our shoes with their own staff, we anticipate great things for The Rotunda. We look to them to do for our paper what we have not accomplished—and wish them all the joys of success and happiness.

SUPPORT THE NEW OFFICERS

For many years activities here at Farmville have grown under the leadership of many different girls, with the cooperation of the students.

No one person is able to do all of the work of an organization, and if she should try, the members become dissatisfied because they lacked a part in it. To let one girl or group of girls handle the work is not fair to them nor is it fair to you. This group cannot put the organization ahead or make it grow without support of every member.

We do want our school on top and we want to make it very pleasant to live in while we are here. However, we cannot get everything out of it if we put nothing into it. Our support to each officer of each organization is needed.

Plump gals at St. Lawrence University are "daily-dozening" in old-fashioned style to make the red-hand on the scale tell less weighty truths. Knee-bends and arm exercises are just a few of the "pound-dissolvers" included in this new course instituted by Miss Jean Bell, head of the women's physical education department. "The course," explains Miss Bell, "is designed to do away with foolish dieting practices and provide a sane means of reducing.

Photographs of cud-chewing milk cows instead of those of sixteen lovely coeds competing for the title of Miss West Virginia looked up at readers of the Shampain, humorous publication of West Virginia University.

Sizzling with anger at Editor Frank Neill's picture substitution, females held three hectic indignation meetings within the 24-hour period after the magazine was distributed. The whole controversy hinged on the fact that in order to cast a vote for the beauty queen, a choice of one of the sixteen, a student would have to purchase a copy of the Shampain. Editor Neill ran the cow photographs because the coeds and their dean, Ruth E. Ner, objected to the publication of the girl's pictures as "commercialization of beauty."

"Wanted—Good-lookmg daughter of a railroad man to accompany me on a trip to Tacoma, Washington for spring vacation" reads a sign on the farm bulletin board at the University of Minnesota.

Chapter I—Glad to meet you.
Chapter II—Isn't the moon beautiful?
Chapter III—Just one more, dear please.
Chapter IV—Do you? I do.
Chapter V—Do-do ta-ta-ta.
Chapter VI—Whereinell's dinner?

After scribbling three pages during an exam, a Marquette University student wrote: "I don't think you'll read this far, and to prove it, I'll tell you about the basketball game I saw yesterday."

Old Man Opportunity beating a knock-knock tatoo couldn't ever get a certain University of Texas professor to open the door once the bell had run and the class had begun. Likewise, all students are barred. They might just as well go home as try to force the locked door. Annoyed at his unusual procedure, members of the class burned inwardly and waited for a chance to get back at him.

"We'll have an exam during our next lecture meeting," announced the professor not long ago. On the day for the test all the students were in their seats long before the ten o'clock bell rang. But no professor. Two minutes passed. Hurried footsteps sounded in the corridor, but before they stopped at the door, one of the revenge-seekers had turned the lock. Ignoring the pounding, students stayed in their seats. Five minutes later they all went home.

SENIOR PERSONALITIES

Virginia Baker

"Baker," as she is known to us, has filled a niche way up in the hearts of many of her fellow-classmates and students. Always gay and cheerful, with an infectious laugh that set everyone smiling, she is a happy companion. With her propensity to sit up all night and sleep through eight-thirty classes habitually, we are accustomed to seeing her dashing madly across the campus with books and papers flying.

In her four years here she has proved herself a worthy and capable person overflowing with school spirit and love for her Alma Mater. This year she has been up to her ears in "annual" secrets, as editor-in-chief of the "Virginian". She had served on the staff previously as associate editor. Her class knows her well, as she has been its treasurer for two years. As a successful English major, she made Beore Eh Thorn, the English honor society.

Recognizing her qualities as a leader and an influence, Alpha Kappa Gamma tapped her last year. She has been treasurer of that organization this year. "Baker" has served on Student Standards Committee, and is a member of the Cotillion Club and Gamma Theta sorority.

Dear Editor:

"Education is learning to do the right thing at the right time." Thus defined, we wonder if our education is what it should be when we continually come to meals from ten to thirty minutes late. It certainly is not! Besides developing the habit of unpunctuality which no really cultured or educated person wishes to be guilty of, we are being inconsiderate and unkind to the people who work in the dining room. Our tardiness delays the whole mechanism.

Let us all try to form the habit of doing the correct thing at the correct time and both we and our associates will be benefitted.

Easter

Helen Weishimer

I never see white candles
That march in proud parade
On altars Easter morning,
Or lilies, slim and staid,
But I remember Mary
Who saw a tall lad die
Upon an Eastern hillside
One day as Spring came by.

The high road to Golgotha
Held half the crowded town;
Long,long before the twilight
Strange darkness settled down . .
Did Mary leave recalling
How He who hung so high
Once asked for love and stories
As April dusk swept by?

I never hear glad anthems
That tell how He arose,
How angels moved the great stone,
And loosened the binding clothes,
But that I know a gladness
Because each grief and loss
Must find a gracious healing . . .
Some Spring will hide the cross!

The great Easter truth is not that we are to live newly after death—that is not the great thing—but we are to be new here and now by the power of the resurrection; not so much that we are to live forever as that we are to, and may, live nobly now because we are to live forever.

—Phillips Brooks

Fair lilies with their crystal light
And eager, joyous greetings bright
Proclaim the Lord has risen again,
And put asunder death and pain!
—Creelman, "Easter Day"

Easter Lilies

Susan Coolidge

Darlings of June and brides of summer sun,
Chill pipes the stormy wind, and the skies are drear;
Dull and despoiled the gardens every one:
What do you here?

We looked to see your gracious blooms arise
'Mid soft and wooing airs in gardens green,
Where venturesome brown bees and butterflies
Should hail you queen.

There is no bee nor glancing butterfly,
They fled on rapid wings before the snow:
Your sister lilies laid them down to die,
long, long ago.

And here, amid the slowly dripping rain,
We keep our Easter feast, with hearts whose care
Mars the high cadence of each lofty strain,
Each thankful prayer.

But not a shadow dims your joyance sweet,
No baffled hope or memory darkly clad;
You lay your whiteness at the Lord's dear feet,
And all are glad.

LIBRARIAN - - - - - - - - - - - by Jacqueline Johnson

"The Delight of Great Books" by John Erskine is a book dedicated to the proposition that the reading of great literature can be made a pleasure. It is one of those companionable books to which we sit down with a pleasurable feeling of anticipation as to a long talk with a sympathetic friend. The author wants to make his readers feel exactly that way toward the great books about which he writes, and he has been understanding and tactful and subtle in his way of going about it. A book about books written with quiet wit, and keen insight, it should open vistas for those who want to know and understand the classics.

"The fact that a book is famous is enough to scare off some people who, if they had the courage to open the pages, would find there delight and profit," says John Erskine. "The method I should advise in reading great books is a simple one. I should try, first of all, not to be awed by their greatness. Then I should open the pages and find out how much they mean to me. But the books should be read over and over. Until we have discovered that certain books grow with our maturing experience and other books do not, we have not learned how to distinguish a great book from a book." Many of the classics are discussed, from Canterbury Tales to Virgil, the modern poet.

"The Kinds of Poetry" by John Erskine.

One of the essays of especial interest in this book is the Teaching of Poetry. John Erskine says if we are teachers of poetry it is love of poetry, one may suppose that made us so. It is the desire to provide others with just such new-births into the world of imagination as we have received from books and from instructors. Teaching poetry, in this sense, is not teaching meter or verse forms, nor ever teaching the subject-matter of poems; it is the multiplying of those unfortunate moments when the soul is dilated and the universe enlarged.

But when we start out to teach poetry in our enlightened way, we soon fall into a suspicion that it cannot be taught at all. We begin with an exuberant purpose to reproduce our good fortune in the lives of others, to give them the books that helped us but somehow the magic illusion does not get created.

However, we are not likely to agree on any advice for teaching poetry until we have disposed of this primary discouragement. We know there are many successful teachers of poetry. Very simply, we may observe and imitate what the successful teachers of poetry have in common.

John Erskine closes this essay with this important bit of advice—to be still as we were at the beginning, lovers of poetry. It was from the example of our teachers that we learned most. If we are to give our own students what they look for, we must keep fresh for ourselves, as we grow older, a capacity for that poetic experience which lighted our youth.

Other essays in this book are "The Kinds of Poetry," "The New Poetry" and "Scholar ship and Poetry".

LOOKIN' 'EM OVER

Virginia L. Agee

"To him who in the love of Nature holds
Communion with her visible forms, she speaks
A various language. For his gayer hours
She has a voice of gladness, and a smile
And eloquence of beauty; and she glides
Into his darker musings, with a mild
And healing sympathy, that steals away
Their sharpness, ere he is aware."

When one beholds the glowing beauty of an early Spring day, he is filled with a wonder of it all — when one arises to see the sun spinning a warm golden web that unfolds the entire world, that glorifies and purefies it —when one hears the placid warbling of a bird and looks out of the window to see a Robin-Red-Breast or a brilliant Cardinal perched on a limb outside—head cocked—eyes twinkling—throat swelling with the joyousness of his song—when one steps into the sunlit world and feels the sweetness of the gentle breezes and inhales the first rare, faint perfume of budding life—then, it is Spring!

Those who are truly lovers of Nature thrill to see the tender blades of grass and the tiny flowers—to feel the soft yielding of the earth and the perfume-laden breezes—to look at the heaven by sun and see a blanket of azure, free from the downy wisps of white clouds—and to gaze at the same heaven by moonlight and see the blanket of mid-night blue spangled with the glory that only stars can give.

It is strange and fascinating to watch the various effects of this intoxicating season of the year on each group of individuals.

A few acquire the energy and strength of spirited horses. Roller-skating seems to be the most popular method of getting rid of the excess energy—racing up and down the sidewalks at top speed—hair blowing—eyes sparkling—cheeks flushing. Freedom is written in every line of the body and its actions. At times there are falls that would ordinarily half-kill one—but with a quick movement away they sail — oblivious to hurt.

Then there are those who are truly to be pitied. The playful breezes gently deprive them of all thier energy. Their eyes acquire a surface blankness that is practically unfathomable—the faces of them become calm and serene—their actions are deliberate—their movements, slow.

Those who strike the median-line are the happiest. What is more powerful than a combination of joy and serenity—of energy and mildness. Those who are able to take things in their natural stride and yet be calm—those who are meditative and remote yet bubbling with the wild sweetness of Spring!

To the light of heart Spring brings an eloquence that is worth speaking of. All our joys and animations and dreams take on brighter colors and are indispensible to us. All the troubles and woes that darken our minds and hearts drop their gloomy mantles for those of lighter-weight and coloring. Shadows that hung low during the grayness of wind and rain and snow lift higher with the using of each morning's sun and finally glide away to oblivion.

Yet sometimes there are minute occasions that even the gladness of the season cannot dispense with. When our thoughts are edged a bit with gloom the sky and the earth—the very heart of nature—creeps in and gently gilds the darkness with the richness of sympathetic sunshine. Before we fully realize it, the bluntness and sharpness has been stolen and our hearts and peace of minds are healed with a balm that is quite unfathomable.

Thurston's Orchestra Plays For H.-S. Spring Pan-Hells

Tub Oliver, Former H.-S. Student Sang

"In rhythm are swaying". More than a few S. T. C. girls found magnetic attraction in the Hampden-Sydney dances Friday and Saturday nights.

The dimly lighted dance hall, the colorful array of evening gowns, the dancing feet and music from Hal Thurston and his orchestra presented a picturesque scene. Tub Oliver, former Hampden-Sydney student and orchestra director, sang.

Those S. T. C. girls and their dates who attended the dances were:

Sue Adams, John Kincaid; Shirley Andrews, Frank Pollard; Jane Baldwin, Gill Hilton; Esther Beebe, Bob Mitchell; Gwen Bell, Bob Byers; Anne Billups, Everett Meredith; Mary Bowles, Jack Gray; Margaret Britton, Jimmie Christian; Elizabeth Bundy, William Bundy; Jane Burke, Billy Ligon; Army Butterworth, Jack Davies; Mable Burton, A. Y. W. Cabinet Has Birthday Banquet

Miss Mary Enjoys Dinner Held at Longwood

A birthday party in Miss Mary's honor was given by the Y. W. C. Cabinet at Longwood March 12.

Before dinner the guests listened to a program by the choir over WRVA which was dedicated to Miss Mary. Between courses of the dinner Kitty Roberts in her own original manner wished the guest of honor a happy birthday. The cabinet and council presented her with telegrams and gifts. At the conclusion of the dinner, Dr. Jarman sang.

Guests at the party were Miss Mary, Dr. Jarman, Jane Royall, Miss Winnie Hiner, and the Student Council.

Rotunda Reverberations

Ah—spring—it's practically here—and then comes Easter with new clothes—plus flowers — and candy—and a man!!—girls—one that you aren't afraid eight hundred other girls are going to try to captivate.

This past week was better known as a 'brain-wracker'; cram and cram some more—most of us feel the after effects this weekend, and some felt the effects of spring turning certain people's fancies to others rathen than themselves. It's no use to think boys don't catch on after awhile. Even if they are dumb—I might suggest a change of tactics: instead of trying to make them all put all your attention on one—it works sometimes.

Fight? fight in room 44 Senior Building. Just two girls who have had a case of "after-exam jitters" for about three days . . . a hair pulling—fist using—tongue lashing fight—and then silence the rest of the day and night—it's catching—so stay away—only one had it the first of the week—now look at them.

Isn't it a shame grades get home on about the same train you do for the holidays? That suit you've set your heart on will probably stay in the store—you knew it was too expensive, but it was just like the one Joan Crawford wore in her last picture and your true-love admires her so, but now you'll just stay as far away from Dad as possible—waiting for both parents to jump on you at once. Why didn't I go home with my roommate? (the question you ask yourself). But maybe your grades will be good, then you can rest easy and won't be the nervous wreck you might have been if you hadn't. So study this quarter. Why even Virginia Allen passes everything. She isn't worried.

Those dances seemed quite good at H.-S. C.—'cept for the orchestra. Quite a rushy affair—sorta dark and everything. I'll bet there's one boy who didn't enjoy them though—the editor of the Tiger—that is unless a tooth throf can be made to keep time with Hal Thurston—and then came a sound of the siren Saturday night—of course everyone rushed in the direction of the fire engine too—it was an almost false alarm but it kept Smitty from getting that promised sandwich and scared Kitty Fitz out of her wits—anyhow to the extent of putting on her clothes and reaching for that new dress she bought at home. Ruth Sears was so disappointed, she thought it was Huey's.

What is this younger generation coming to? There's Elsie Dodd and Vera Ebel tripping to "Philey" for Easter, and I'm told Elsie's going to see someone that used to wear a uniform. Brass buttons will do it everytime. And is her heart beating double time? But Lucy P. says that the softness of the lips is a big asset in any generation—oh boy!

And so—"I tank I go home."—Thursday.

Happy Easter Egg.—

Senior Class of '38 Elects McGlothlin; Agee is Vice-Head

Officers to Resume Duties Third Time

Madeline McGlothlin was re-elected as class president in the election held on Friday, March 12.

Madeline has taken a very active part in various phases of school life in addition to being president of her class as a Sophomore, Junior and now as a Senior.

She has for three years been on the executive board of the Dramatic Club. She has also been on the Rotunda staff for three years serving in that capacity as a reported. She has been a member of Alpha Phi Sigma for three years, and now has her Master's degree in that organization. She is also a member of Beore Eh Thorn, Le Cercle Francais and in recognition of her leadership ability was tapped by Alpha Kappa Gamma.

Virginia Agee, Carter Belle Munt and Elizabeth Harris were reelected to the offices of vice-president, secretary and treasurer, respectively, of the Senior class at the regular class meeting on Tuesday night, March 23.

Virginia has been an active member and leader in the class, serving as vice-president the past year and she has represented the class on the Student Standards Committee for three years. Carter Belle and Elizabeth have served as secretary and treasurer of their class for the three years they have been in school. Both have shown ability and interest in their participation in the class activities.

Josephine Quinn and Marjorie Robertson were elected as class representatives on the Student Council. Jo was a class representative on the council this year and has served her class and the school in various other capacities. Marjorie has been a member of the council all three years she has been here, serving as class representative her freshman and sophomore years and as treasurer of the council this past year.

Jennie Belle Gilliam and Jacqueline Johnson were chosen as representatives on the Student Standards Committee. Jennie Belle has been on Student Standards three years, serving as secretary of that committee this year. Jack, although she has never been on Student Standards before, has shown her ability by helping with and participating in the work of her class.

Spring Flowers Take Campus by Storm

"Mistress Mary, quite contrary
How does your garden grow?
With silks and satins
And needles and patterns
Lined up on the store counter row."

Flowers have taken our campus by storm—or by spring. Violets, roses, daisies, nasturtiums snuggle under the chin in little bunches. Gay floral patterns scatter over silks, prints and chiffons. Many of them look as if they have just been thrown there by a temperamental artist. Some of them are so lifelike that one can almost see them growing. And a dance floor seems to be a flower garden floating in rhythm with a breeze. The gardenia is the belle of the ball. It sprouts up from the back of the hair, or the side, or the top with equal ease. Dainty forget-me-nots, complete with stems and leaves spread across narrow bands worn over the new wave. It's enough to make anyone feel like a "Queen of the May."

Vera Ebel Heads Junior Officers

Smith, Nottingham and Anthony Are Elected

Vera Ebel, outstanding member of the Sophomore Class, was chosen their president for the school year 1937-38 at a recent election. Secretary of the Freshman class last year, Vera has become an increasingly prominent participant in the activities of the college. During her sophomore year she has served as vice-president of the class, president of the class basket ball team, member of the hockey squad, and manager of the class circus stunt. Under her leadership the Juniors of '38 look forward to a happy and successful year.

The minor officers elected at the meeting were: vice-president, Virginia Whitehead Smith; secretary, Clara Nottingham; treasurer, Louise Anthony.

Sport Slants

Volley Ball

With beginning of spring and a new quarter, in comes that exciting sport, called volley ball. Volley ball practices have not yet been scheduled, but they will be posted later. We have class competition in this game and points are awarded toward the color cup. So we are expecting some exciting class games between the "rival colors". Come on green and white—and red and white!

Tennis

Tennis practices will start soon, and we are sure our tennis team is really going places. The courts are to be finished soon and then we are planning on competing with other schools. This, of course, does not mean that no one else can use the courts. Everyone is invited to use the courts at anytime.

Archery

Out with the bows and arrows. Spring has sprung, and so now is the time for archery. By the way, have you heard? We may (if we are good enough) enter into archery contests against other schools. So come on out and get in practice and help keep blue and white on top! Maxine Burke, manager of archery, is always ready to help or instruct you, and she really knows how.

The Debate season for this year has just begun. Teams from Farmville plan three major trips for the year. Representatives of S. T. C. will attend the Pi Kappa Delta convention at Johnson, the Grand Eastern Tournament at Winthrop College in Rock Hill, S. C., and will make a trip through West Virginia and Pennsylvania.

Her time from two to four was spent in individual and group conferences concerning the work of the B. S. U. Council.

There was an open meeting in the Y. W. Lounge at five o'clock. She talked on what students as individuals can do in service for Christ on college campuses. A mother's words to her son which have meant a great deal to him in his college life were the words Miss Daniel left with her listeners. "A little bit in the Lord's hands goes a long way."

Decision Favors Annex of H.-S. C.

Debate by Freshmen Has Humorous Outcome

Using the subject, "Resolved that Hampden-Sydney should be annexed to S. T. C. and used as a training school," members of the S. T. C. Debate club gave an unusual debate in the small auditorium the evening of the tenth. After serious consideration, the judges, Dudley Allen and Sue Adams, decided in favor of the affirmative side. Sue Adams, as critic, justified the decision.

Grace Waring and Sudie Yager upheld the affirmative and Lorano Moomaw and Betty Brooke the negative.

Some points brought out by the affirmative were that if Hampden-Sydney boys were pupils of S. T. C. girls, it would be easy for them to climb up to their teachers' windows and chat at night. Another fact they claimed the judges should consider was that Hampden-Sydney boys are already so well educated that teaching them would be a valuable experience to prospective teachers. These points impressed the judges even more than the fact that Hampden-Sydney's dignity would be hurt, as the negative side claimed.

"To prevent children from getting their fingers nipped, a turtle in the London Zoo has a sign painted on its shell. "This end bites!"—W. E. Farbstein.

A student at Holy Cross submitted a rather thin notebook for a junior English elective, with the following verse on the cover:
The Turtle has a tough shell,
Its meat is lush and tender,
And so your judgment of this book
By its cover never render.
The professor, who is somewhat of a poet himself, replied as follows:
The turtle far outweights its shell;
It has more meat and bulk as well.
I fear these lush and tender findings
Seem slim beneath such heavy bindings.

Powell Will Serve For Second Term

Seitz, Hardaway and Eades Hold Offices

Jane Powell will be president of the sophomore class for the 1937-38 session, following her election at a called meeting of the class on March 12. Other officers of the class elected on March 23, are as follows: Martha Seitz, vice-president; Martha Meade Hardaway, secretary; Dorothy Eades, treasurer.

New representatives to Student Government from the class are Judith Gathright and Marie Eason. Laura Morris and Sarah Keesee will represent them as members of the Student Standards Committee.

Jane Powell ably served her class as president this year, and her reelection was accompanied by a pep rally on campus the night of the election. Martha Seitz and Dorothy Eades will also be serving their second terms in office. This will be Sarah Keesee's second term on the Student Standards Committee.

A bookkeeper for the new point system established by the class will be elected in the near future. The point system is a program whereby each member of the class may be allowed to serve on a limited number of committees only.

This is our place of meeting
Here within these cozy booths.
Sit the carefree girls and youths,
Gathered thus to hear the new
Or chase away a case of blues.
Thro' a bluish haze of smoke
Charlie yells "Two nabs and a coke!"
A sophomore forgets she's broke—
Laughing at a brand new joke.
Returning 'lumnae here are greeted;
Here the "cute" girls all get treated;
Here gay schemes are oft completed;
Here latest scandal is repeated.
Any time, you meet a new beau
Or someone takes you to a show.
While music plays fast or slow,
Boy! how you can spend the dough!
When college days have flown away,
When shining hair is dulled to gray,
When wrinkles play around my face,
I'll think of this old meeting place.

Coed chatter: "Why shouldn't I go to the party with him? Maybe I'll meet someone else."

Soprano Presents Concert At S. T. C.

'Cellist and Soloist Take Part In Program

ARTISTS TO SING

Former Voice Pupil of Prof. Strick Appears

Alma Milstead, National Broadcasting artist, and one of the outstanding sopranos in America will be heard in a recital in the College auditorium on Friday evening, April 9 at 8:15 o'clock. This concert is sponsored by the Woman's Club of Farmville and is under the direction of Mr. Strick.

Miss Milstead is soloist at the Broadway Tabernacle, New York City, and for the past four years has sung the leading operatic roles in the Chautauqua Opera Company. This year she was selected by the National Oratorio Society to sing the soprano solos in the "Elijah", which was given in Carnegie Hall, New York City, recently, under the direction of Albert Stoessel.

Miss Milstead's career dates back to her first musical training under Mr. Strick. Under his tutelage she won the State Music Federation contest held in Dallas, Texas, being awarded a year's study in the music school of Dudley Buck in New York City. She studied with Mr. Buck for three years, after which she was awarded a fellowship in the Juilliard Graduate School of Music, studying under the late Mme. Marcella Sembrich.

Appearing with Miss Milstead will be Paul Cartwright, 'cellist, who was 'cello soloist for Anna Pavlowa's dancing partner, Michael Mordkin, when touring with the original Russian Ballet. He is a former member of the Rochester Philharmonic Orchestra and of the National Symphony of New York City.

Mr. Luther Richman, tenor soloist, is State supervisor of Music in Virginia. He is a graduate of Northwestern University and of the Cincinnati Conservatory of

Dr. J. E. Morgan Speaks in Chapel

Education of Today Is Topic of Talk

Dr. Jay Elmer Morgan, editor of the Journal of the National Education Association, spoke to the student body in chapel, Friday morning on education in this present age.

Dr. Morgan praised this institution for its faculty, its policies and for the students themselves. He urged future teachers to remember that this is an age of transition and that each teacher must adjust herself, as a teacher, to changes. He declared that the school is not a thing apart from lives, but rather a living instrument for furthering better homes, better citizens and a better country.

"The most important idea stressed by Dr. Morgan was that greatness must begin here in this institution. It's here that creation of new ideas and better teachers must take place. The National Education Association has as its main aim the advancement of better teachers and more practical courses, and the building of better schools.

Old President Gives Y. W. Oath To New Officer

Nan Seward Installs Other Officials Into Cabinet

At an impressive service on Friday evening, the new officers of the Y. W. C. A. took oath of office and were sworn in for the new year.

Rev. Mr. Tucker prayed, after the old and new officers had marched in to "The Holy Grail". Before the background of a blue triangle on which was written "Y. W. C. A." and tall lighted candles, Dorothy Wise, outgoing president, gave the oath which was repeated by Nan Seward, the incoming president of the Y. W. C. A. Her candle lit, she, in turn, installed Isabel Plummer as vice-president, Carter Belle Munt as secretary; Sarah Butten as treasurer; and Ruth Curtis Robeson as freshman counselor.

The minor officers lighted their candles from the outgoing minor officers, Elizabeth Shipplett, outgoing vice-president of the Y. W., read the duties of the various officers immediately preceding the oath.

Dramatic Club Has Play Tournament

Eleven Schools Are Entered In Contest

The Southside Virginia Play Tournament will be held at S. T. C. on Friday and Saturday nights, April 23 and 24. The college Dramatic Club is sponsoring the contest, and members of the club will entertain the representatives from the various high schools. This is the third year the contest has been held.

All the high schools in Virginia are eligible to enter and each school presents a one-act play. There will be six plays the first night and five the second. A cup will be presented to the winning school each night. Mrs. Walker Decourcy, Director of John Marshall High School Dramatics has been chosen as one of the judges.

To date, eleven schools have registered for participation in the

Speakers, Debaters Leave for Contest In South Carolina

Winthrop Is Scene of Annual Forensic Meeting

Five delegates, representing Farmville State Teachers College, left this morning for Rock Hill, S. C., where they will participate in the Grand Eastern Tournament of South Atlantic colleges and universities to be held at Winthrop College April 8-10.

Farmville will be represented in debating on the affirmative by Anthelia Robinette and Nora Jones, and on the negative by Pattie Bounds and Ruth Sears. Florence Bress will participate in oratory. Other oratorical phases of the tournament are in after-dinner, extemporaneous, and impromptu speeches.

Probably forty South Atlantic Colleges and universities will be represented. Schools may enter into as many phases as they wish.

The convention is under the management of Dr. John Keith of Winthrop College, of which the delegates will be guests during their stay.

Winthrop College is the annual seat of the convention in which Farmville always participates.

Elizabeth Morris Is Made Officer At Student Meet

Student Government Association Meets at Converse

At the Southern Intercollegiate Association of Student Government at Converse College, Spartanburg, South Carolina Elizabeth Morris president of this Student Body ,was elected treasurer of the association.

Bonnie Lane also attended the convention which took place during the Easter holidays. Thirty-eight colleges were represented.

Dr. Gualtmey of Converse was a principal speaker. Other speakers came from Columbia University and Randolph-Macon Woman's College.

Everything possible was done to make the meeting a success. One of the entertainments was a trip through an up-to-date cotton mill.

Beorc Eh Thorn Honor Fraternity Elects Munt Head

Margaret Black Made Vice-President of Society

Carter Belle Munt was elected president of Beorc Eh Thorn, the English honor society, for 1937-38. Carter Belle will succeed Dot Price. The regular meeting was held at eight o'clock Thursday, April 1 in the Honor room. Other officers elected were: vice-president, Margaret Black; treasurer, Lois Vassar; recording secretary, Frances Collie; corresponding secretary, Kathleen Sawyer; historian, Pattie Alston Bounds. Following the election, the new officers were installed.

Plans for a reception honoring Mrs. Julia Johnson Davis were discussed, and Dot Buckland was made chairman of the social committee for the reception.

Mrs. Julia Johnson Davis of Norfolk will be the guest of Beorc Eh Thorn at a reception given April 15.

Writer of Theme Urges Cooperation For 1937 May Day

Students Vote On Additional Amendment

Elizabeth Morris, the new student body president presided over her first meeting Monday night in the auditorium.

Esther Beebe reminded the students of some of the Campus League rules. She introduced Nancy Moss, Sara Keesee, Frances Alvis, Pattie Jefferey, Helen Jeffries and Gwen Bell as members of Campus League for the following year.

The amendment that the three publication editors be elected by a committee one week prior to major elections was voted on and unanimously passed by the student body.

Mary Harrison Vaughan, theme chairman for May Day, made a plea for cooperation on the part of the entire student body so that May Day for 1937 will be up to the usual standard. She asked that persons not taking part in the drama help with scenery, costumes or other activities.

Will To Win Is Expressed In History Of Miss Milstead

From a small town in East Texas to New York City is a long step, but those who have the will to win can accomplish their desired purpose. From obscurity to fame is a long step, and it spells hard work and concentration. Miss Milstead who sings in the college auditorium on Friday night is a living lesson of that purposeful planning of life in which concentration and hard work were the chief factors, and her story reads like a fairy tale.

Born to humble parentage, this young lady in the space of ten years has achieved one of the most remarkable successes in the musical world today, and her life is one that we can well emulate.

As a child she assisted her parents in the household duties, looking after a large family and helping on the farm, but her great desire, in other words, her will to win saw no obstacle, and from one success to another she eventually has achieved a great success.

A letter was recently addressed to Mr. Mark Levine, manager of the artists' edpartment of the N. B. C. asking his opinion of Miss Alma Milstead. He replied as follows:

"We are very happy that you are presenting this gifted singer on April 9, in Virginia, as we consider her one of the most promising young artists who has ever come under our management. I know that in years to come you will be very proud to have sponsored her at the inception of what is sure to prove a very brilliant career."

The will to win is personified in Miss Alma Milstead, and this young artist should be a model for every student who has on her mind the desire to do something really worth while.

PRESIDENT JARMAN ANNOUNCES PRINCESS

Dr. J. L. Jarman has announced that Elizabeth Shipplett of Roanoke will attend the annual Apple Blossom Festival in Winchester as princess from Farmville. The exact date of the Festival has not been made known.

Elizabeth will take her place as princess in the court of Queen Shenandoah fourteenth, whose identity is as yet unknown, with around thirty other girls. The princesses are representing various schools of this vicinity.

Many plans are being made to entertain the queen and the princesses. Part of the celebration will be a parade with the queen and the princesses appearing on elaborate floats. The coronation of the queen, attended by princesses, will be the biggest event. There are numerous social functions to which Elizabeth will be invited.

Elizabeth Morris Installs Officers Of Student Body

New President Takes Oath of Office From Lane

Installation of the Student Council for the coming session was held in the large auditorium on Thursday, April 1.

Before installing Elizabeth Morris, the incoming president, Bonnie Lane, the outgoing president thanked the student body for its cooperation during the past year. Libby Morris reminded the students that "a body was only as strong as its weakest part" and asked them for their support.

The officers for the coming year which were installed by the new president were Carolyn Upshur, vice-president; Kitty Roberts, secretary; Dorothy Buckland, treasurer; and Esther Beebe, campus league chairman.

The class representatives are Marjorie Robertson and Josephine Quinn, seniors; Charlotte Minton, and Elizabeth Burke, juniors; and Marie Eason and Forensic Fraternity to Hold Convention In Tenn.

At the Pi Kappa Delta Convention held at the State Teachers College in Johnson City, Tennessee, on April 2 and 3, plans were discussed for the Youth Congress to be held in Topeka, Kansas in April, 1938. This forensic fraternity plans to extend its field of activities by holding this congress —the first of its kind ever organized. Each province is entitled to three senators to the Congress. Farmville will have the first alternate for a senator and each chapter will send a representative. This Congress will follow the procedure of the Congress at Washington and will discuss the bills before the body. It will be organized with committees, lobbyists and will follow in detail the session of our National Congress.

The South Atlantic and Kentucky provinces of Pi Kappa Delta held this convention. Colleges from Mississippi, Indiana, Florida, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, and Virginia were represented. Those girls from Farmville at the convention were Anthelia Robinette, Nora Jones, Dudley Allen, and Juanita Callis. Dr. Walmsley was also present and served as judge for many of the contests.

There were five rounds of debate before the winner from the Kentucky province was announced. Farmville was eliminated in the fourth round of women's debate. There were contests in oratory, debating, impromptu, extemporary and after dinner speaking.

A TORCH IS PASSED ON

We, Mary Harrison Vaughan and Elizabeth Roberts, now take up the torch and carry on the word. Ours is the job of following in the footsteps of two who have left a worthy record. We wish to acknowledge the accomplishments of Virginia Bean and Elsie Cabell, to admit that we accept their work as a challenge, so praise-worthy has it been.

This is a time of new things—of new officers, of new ideas, of a new spring on this campus. It is a time to make note of work well done on the part of old officers, a time to congratulate new officers and to wish them well. We urge cooperation on the part of the student body so that the newly installed administration may find its work easy and pleasant ,so that the glory of our beloved school can be furthered.

BEAUTY AND THE BEAST

The attitude of the majority of students toward their professors is that of a race of superior and privileged beings toward a lower and not altogether desirable order of animal life. We as college students and particularly in a teachers college should be above that, but we are too apt to look upon the whole tribe of teachers as a nuisance to be put up with for the time being. Too often our opinion of a professor is based upon our own unwillingness to exert ourselves. We look upon the professor who requires us to do a little work as an unfeeling brute who takes great pleasure in seeing us squirm. It is an unfortunate attitude, for it puts the teacher on the defensive, and he cannot do his best work, nor can we gain all we might from his classes.

We have been in a number of classes in which the general attitude is, "I dare you to make me do anything I don't want to." The joke about sleeping in classes has become so nearly true that it is no longer a joke, though the sleep is mental rather than physical, and the whole atmosphere has a deadening effect. The tragedy is that we cease to wake up outside of class.

Perhaps some of the fault lies in the professors. We admit that they are not perfect; but neither are we, however much we may like to think so. The greater fault lies in us who expect the teacher to pour forcibly and painlessly into our heads enough facts to get us through an examination. If he does not do it, we pass adverse judgment upon him and put him on the list of those to be avoided if possible.

When we go to a class that attitude, it is little wonder that we get nothing from it. We, as college students, should be old enough to get away from so trifling an outlook. Though most of us do not know it, the professor compliments us when he expects us to do a little of our own thinking.

WELCOME HOME, AUNT LUCY

Welcome home, Aunt Lucy! This school has missed your smiling face, your gentle "all right, girls" on Sunday nights. We've missed your slight ,aproned form huddled in a chair in the Rotunda, your nodding head and ready chuckle.

We just couldn't get on without our Aunt Lucy!

INTERCOLLEGIATE NEWS

A "ten-cents-a-dance" girl, pretty Fayette Dale, of an Oakland, California dime dance hall, talks of university men from her "cheek-to-cheek" observations of them:

"It's an easy matter to distinguish between California and Stanford stags. A Cal man talks more, asks for more dates and brags about his 'rowdy complex.' The Stanfordites are all 'Cards.'

"The boys from the 'Farm' do more of their dance steps on their partner's toes than do the California lads. The famous Stanford gentleman complex is true as far as my observation goes. They read a higher grade of books and more punctual in excusing their dancing faux pas.

"The best dancers claim to be econ majors, and the worst," says Miss Dale sadly, "are the engineers."

Rather than marry hastily and regret it later, listen to the note of advice from Dean Arthur C. Becker, of the De Paul University school of music, who advises college men to be sure that the girls they inten to wed can sing.

It may sound unnecessary to you, but demanding that your future wife be able to sing is very practical, claims Dean Becker.

"Girls who can's carry a tune can't be expected to properly time the broiling of a steak. An unmusical girl overcooks, undercooks and half-bakes a meal. Nothing is so unharmonious to a home as chronic indigestion."

Princeton, N. J.—(ACP)—Criticism that college students are not allowed to break their shackles long enough to exercise initiative is being met at Princeton University by the introductio na "free week", during which upperclassmen can carry on study independently.

This plan designed for juniors and seniors, will be conducted experimentally for one year. Upper classmen are being released from classrooms for the week preceding the annual spring vacation.

An outstanding feature of the Princeton curriculum has been the amount of self-education expected of juniors and seniors. The free study week is being established to give the student even more chance to use his own resourcefulness.

"College students produce two kinds of literature, neither of them good. Either they try revealing their own hearts, which are not very full yet, and which they are generaly unable to interpret, or they decide to imitate some well-known author in describing artificial situations which they know even less well than themselves," Vassar College's Pres. Henry N. MacCracken short-circuits the literary lights.

LIBARIAN COLUMN

Sigrid Undset, the Norwegian novelist who won the Nobel Prize for Literature in 1928, was born on May 20, 1882. Her father was a prominent archaeologist and author.

She recalls that her childhood home was in a dull and dusty street. She spent her summer holidays in the country, or with her mother's family. She liked particularly to stay with an aunt who told her strange gory tales for hours at a time. From early childhood she loved stories, and as soon as she was old enough she became an avid reader.

Sigrid helped her father in his research work. In this way she developed a profound taste for sagas and ancient traditions of the Viking period, and collected that wonderful store of knowledge which is seen especially in her books of the medieval periods, as the Kristin Lavransdatter triology. In these, the religions and manners of the Norweigian people in the fourteenth century are reproduced down to the minutest detail.

Another type of Sigrid Undset's work is exemplified by her "Jenny", a realistic description of middle-class homes and families.

Two of her more recent books, "Longest Years", and "Gunnar's Daughter", are discussed below. (The reviews are excerpts taken from Book Review Digest).

"Longest Years" has as its basis the author's own childhood. It is the story of a very real and vigorous little girl. Its genuine value lies not only in its being an autobiography but also for the light it throws on a child's reaction to life. It is a touching, penetrating, honest record of family life and a child's first impressions of fundamental experiences. Hers was a childhood eventful but not unduly dramatic, and the story is written in a manner which is measured, and richly detailed.

Sigrid Undset's admirers, who beside the joy they take in the book for its own sake will find here hints of the originals of many of the scenes and characters from her novels.

"Gunnar's Daughter" in simple, unadorned style tells the tragic love story of a beautiful Norwegian girl and a hot-headed Icelandic youth. The scene is laid in the time of King Olav Tryguesson.

At first the style of this book appears too simple, but gradually the reader falls into the mood, not merely of the novel, but of the method of its telling. He discovers that adventures briefly and lucidly set forth can be as absorbing as the most eloquent palysyllabic description on record. He is forced to admire the effectiveness of simple words put into the mouth of the hero or heroine in moments of triumph or despair. It is effectively bleak and grim in creating the feeling of the time.

ROTUNDA REVERBERATIONS

SPRING! A steady parade of new Easter frocks and bonnets . . . and such bonnets! (Some appear to be a good idea gone wrong). Girls trucking off to Virginia and Tech with such expressions of triumph on their youthful faces. Romance at every turn.

Ginny Agee proudly strolling up and down, discoursing on the beauties of nature to her latest conquest. Oh no, not that one . . . the one who gave her his K. A. pin on the third date. No rushing now girls . . . the nature study course is open to every one.

Lloyd Kelly coyly swinging hands with none other than that dashing young Lochinvar from our neighboring institute . . . "Kinks" Thompson.

Bridge playing and more bridge playing! Even the call of spring cannot overcome the thrill one gets from fingering those fifty-two little pieces of paper. In looking in on a game the other night one might have seen Elsie Cabell, the bridge shark, being subjected to a lesson or two. We expect better things of you now, Elsie.

Army Butterworth shrieking with joy over acquiring a picture of that gay Midshipman, Johnny Bland. Congratulations! True labor always merits its just reward, eh, Army?

Susan Lane looking mighty chic over the week-end. Was it Jack or Bob that brought that gleam in your eye, Susan?

Dot Tillet and Margaret Hannah explaining the art of getting around at S. T. C. to a certain shy, but handsome freshman at H.-S. C. (You remember the lad that so many girls were smitten with at Mardi Gras. They were simply crazy for him!) These two fair maids, it seems, jointly asked him for a date for Sunday night and because he just couldn't make it, he's suffering under the delusion that he's on the black list.

Ruth James and Anne Hardy off to conquer new worlds last week-end. Gee, but they were looking good! Was it a successful conquest?

Nothing ever happens . . . that is nothing to . . . ah, write about Now, how can such tripe as this be interesting with no gossip? Each choice bit of news contributed shall be duly rewarded. No tales shall be told on those who contribute. Sooooooo 'till we meet again, friends (?) . . . And woe be unto those who don't contribute.

SENIOR PERSONALITIES

Virginia Bean, retiring editor of the Rotunda.

Hers is the gift of wisdom, of warm, loyal friendship and love of life. Duty, to her, is part of the joy of being alive. She is vitally alive, the possessor of a keen sense of humor and easy conversational powers. Above all, she enjoys living, takes it seriously and makes the most of it. Opportunity never has to knock but once at her door Swiftly and silently, she accomplishes, asking few things of people, getting her honors by unending effort. She is utterly dependable. She works hard, but few know she does, so easily does she prove her worth.

Virginia has just finished her position as editor of the Rotunda. Alpha Kappa Gamma has recognized her leadership, Kappa Delta Pi and Pi Gamma Mu her scholarship. She is a member of the Cotillion Club and Sigma Sigma Sigma sorority. In June 1935 Virginia delivered the salutatory address at graduation exercises. In June 1937, this school will feel a distinct loss in Virginia Bean.

Literary Column

A young thing begins when buds burst into beautiful blossoms—when a warm sun sends its bright rays down upon awakening leaves of grass—when birds begin to sing with a newly felt and young joy. Like the gentle calm of dawn does spring come. Warm is spring, yet firmly does it come in a burst of brightness—a burst of something warm and young.

"For the winter's rains and ruins are over,
And all the season of snows and sins;
The light that loses, the night that wins;
And time remembered is grief forgotten
And frosts are slain and flowers begotten,
And in green underwood and cover
Blossom by blossom the spring begins."

When spring comes, young people and old people wear a new smile. We might ask ourselves, "Does this thing called spring send a contagious joy through every heart? Do people laugh and sing because they have come upon a new happiness, or is it because the sun shines warmer and trees and flowers take on new life?

It is because of an intermingling of both these queries. Spring does bring people a refreshed and awakened joy that has lain smothered beneath winter's "rains and ruins". It is indeed a new happiness that grows and reaches its height in the light of warmth and beauty.

"Let me go forth and share
The overflowing sun
With one wise friend, or one
Better than wise, being fair,
Where the pewit wheels and dips
On heights of bracken and ling,
And Earth, unto her leaflet tips,
Tingles with the Spring."

A new "entrance-exit" course in matrimony has been added to the Utah State Agriculture College curriculum. "Marriage and divorce" is the name of the study.

LOOKIN' 'EM OVER

Virginia L. Agee

With the rapidity of wind-swept fire, "sit-down" strikes have spread over the entire United States. Sit-down strikes — a most absurd phrase with an equally absurd meaning, and yet they have caused the great machines in big business to stop, and the executives to tear their hair and swear deeply under their breaths!

It is true that have been taking the country by storm; they have caused the closing up of huge automobile, textile, and pulp factories—and they have gained the front-page notoriety worshipped by those people who are eager to follow the advice—good or bad—of others.

And that is also true. These strikers are people who have been talked and urged into this sort of action not by law abiding and peace loving citizens, but by agitators such as John L. Lewis and his associates.

In our own state we have begun to feel the effects of this new style of strike—especially in Covington and Clifton Forge. The mode has spread with rapidity all over the nation and has begun to be obnoxious—newspaper headlines are crowded with it—every night radio news commentators have a bit of news to contribute—the news reels are featuring it now. The next step is the comic stripes: perhaps the ridiculousness of the idea could be best portrayed there.

During the Easter vacation we heard rumors of more strikes that are expected in the West Virginia coal mining section. Another bit of agitation is displayed by conceited ne'er-do-wells who take the hard-earned cash of hard-working people. They use that money not only for their own pleasure but also to work against mine officials who do their level best to make living as easy as they possibly can for those under their supervision.

Strikes are plain cases of "biting the hand that feeds you"—taking a huge chunk out of it, at that.

Perhaps if these strikers, who are like a herd of strong, healthy, but dumb goats who know how to follow but who have no discrimination as to what to follow, were put completely out of work—if they could watch their food supply sink lower and lower—if they could watch their families go hungry—perhaps their attitudes of indifference and sullenness would disappear, and they would be glad to work at any wage, at any time. If only that could be done—and it couldn't very easily—strikers would strike, and striking would then be a case of "biting off the nose to spite the face." Officials could rear back in their swivel chairs and smile and sing, "We turned the tables on you!"

Anyone can see why this won't work. Closing mines would mean closing iron and steel mills—and the doors of countless others; because coal, in spite of its blackness and dirtiness, is a precious jewel to the wheels of industry.

Another solution—(and perhaps a more applicable one) would be the tar and feathering of agitators and exiling or deporting them to the far away Northern Sea. The country has gotten along without them in times gone by, why is their presence necessary now? It isn't!

It seems that there has been quite a clamor raised over the destruction of our birds of prey—namely, the owl and the hawk. The hunter and the farmer complain that these birds kill such things as quail and poultry. Now how is this fact to be accounted for? Those who have the most deep-rooted hatred for these birds of prey should be the first to clamor for their protection.

Freshmen Triumph In Swimming Meet With High Score

Sophomore Class Is Second in the Contest

The Freshman Class with a score of thirty-five points, came out triumphant in the swim meet held last Thursday night. The Sophomores were a close second with twenty-three points, while the Juniors and Seniors trailed with three points and one point respectively.

The first events was sculling for form. Those competing were Sarah Keesee, who came in first, Nancy Taylor, second, and Chlotilde Jarman, third.

In the second event, the Intermediate Crawl, Marjorie Nimmo, Katherine Underwood and Vera Ebel came in, in the order named.

The contestants in the back stroke for form were Mary Bowles, Norvell Montague, Sidney Yonce, Vera Ebel, Mary Wilson Clarke. The winners were Vera Ebel, first; Norvelle Montague, second, and Mary Bowles, third.

The fourth event was the Back Stroke race. Those participating

Volley Ball Season Opens With Noise

Sleepers on Annex were greatly vexed when their afternoon naps were broken by such calls as: "My serve!", "Wow, a pretty hit!", "Let it go!" "Come on, just one more", and other meaningless phrases. They swarmed to the halls and found the sound coming from the gym. What was their surprise to find Spring had come, ushered in to the tune of Volley Ball.

The players were entering into the game with fervor, putting all their force behind each hit. Good losers and good winners were spread over all the courts.

"O had some power the giftie gie us
To see oursel's as ithers see us!"

—mouths open, screams of excitement, graceless jumps and clumsy falls.

From Monday until Friday the sleepers have no rest. However after the class games on April the fourteenth, the excitement will be over and the "Annexers" can partake of that "gentle sleep—beloved from pole to pole."

Schedule: Practices will be held from 4 to 5 p. m. every afternoon until Tuesday, 14. Five practices are required in order to take part in class games.

She Rules the Foxhounds

Miss Dorothy Vernon Montgomery, of Warrenton, is master of foxhounds—an honor usually held only by men—of the Casanova hunt, which recently decided to re-establish its pack of hounds and resume chases after two years of inactivity. She has ridden since childhood; studied abroad.

SPORT SLANTS

More sore wrists and swollen fingers to say nothing of a groan or two caused by sudden pains in a twisted muscle. It can't be denied girls. Spring is in our bones and every "Annie Athlete" has dug her shorts 'n shirts out of the moth balls and followed the crowd to the gym, the pool, the tennis courts or the archery targets.

Volley ball practice is in full swing and there has been a fairly good crowd. Remember, though, that points are needed for the color cup. Come out to support your colors. Even though you may not be another Babe Didrickson, you can certainly find entertainment of one kind or another, and exercise will help to do away with that avoirdupois which is very unbecoming under summer clothes. Dot and Pat, those two "stand oys" have exhibited some powerful serving and there are some who are no "droops" when it comes to returning a ball. There's nothing slow about volley ball the way it's played 'round here! You'd better try it!

The freshmen came through with flying colors in the swimming meet with three first places. Dot Noehren won in diving and in the backstroke and Marjorie Nimmo placed first in the crawl. The seniors represented by Mary Bowles came in last in scoring, but not least in spirit—having one point to their credit. The sophomores placed second with Vera Ebel, Frances Irving, Jenny Carroll and Bunny Yonce starring for green and white. The Juniors took third place—Norvelle Montague placing fourth in diving and other members of the class taking part in various events.

So far, there hasn't been a great deal of activity on the tennis courts. Although the courts aren't in condition yet, some brave souls have weathered the cool breezes and have donned their tennis togs to swat a few balls here and there. Give 'em a week or two and look for bigger and better champions. We've really got the material, and from the looks of these shiny new rackets that are very much in evidence, there ought to be plenty of competition.

Archery is one place where this "straight from the shoulder" stuff doesn't pay—there really are strings attached to that sport! We've seen more inexperienced arms with all the skin scraped off! It may look easy, but there is most definitely a technique to it—let Maxine show you how. She really knows the ropes! Lula Windham is going in seriously for archery; to her may we dedicate the following:

"I shot an arrow into the air;
It came to earth, I know not where—
I lose more arrows that way!"

Baptist StudentUnion Elects Term President

Virginia Pilcher was elected president of the Baptist Student Union of S. T. C. at a meeting of the Union held on March 31. She is now serving as first vice-president of all Baptist Student Unions in the state.

"Their minds are soft and dormant. They do not know how to work; they do not know how to study; they do not know how to reason; they do not know how to discriminate between the central core of things and the surrounding trimmings." Pres. Patrick J. Maham, S. J., of Creighton University give incoming freshmen a frank look at the scoreboard.

An anonymous contribution from Adrian College: "Going around with women keeps me young. I started going with them four years ago when I was a freshman—and I'm still a freshman!"

DODD IS IN COURT

Elsie Dodd of Richmond who received the next highest number of votes for the May Court in the winter elections, will take a leading part in the dance drama.

CORRECTION

This paper wishes to correct the statement printed in the Founder's Day issue of March 10 that Mary Ellen Cato was editor of the college magazine in 1929. Julia E. Wilson held that position.

Athletic Association Has Annual Banquet

The annual Athletic Association banquet was held in the college Tea Room at six o'clock Thursday, April 1. Dr. Jarman, Miss Mary White Cox and Miss Barlow were the guests of honor.

The members of the A. A. Council and the varsity basketball and hockey squads were present.

The color scheme was blue and white. Beautiful white carnations and a long blue streamer were table decorations.

Tennis is Essence Of Spring Season

Flash!! Campus extracts!—"Do you have a tennis racket?" "Don't forget to borrow an extra ball"—Who wouldn't guess that we play tennis—and like it? Of course we do. So what. The court is being cleaned, improved, etc. And girls, don't let's go to play tennis unless we wear tennis shoes. You wouldn't want to wear oxfords to a dance, would you? It's the principle of the thing.

If you don't play tennis, you don't know what you're missing—just the feel of that racket in the palm of your hand, the "zing!" of the ball as it wings over the net, that lightening quick action. It keeps you on your toes, all right, and what fun!

There's something about tennis that just breathes spring. It's as inevitable on a college campus as April showers and much less of a wet blanket!

Rising at six o'clock, racing to the tennis court for a fast game—then a dash to the shower room and just maybe that breakfast isn't appreciated!

Spring and tennis are in the air, girls—come out and play! Make those balls zing over the net! Get peppy and full of vim and vigor. It's spring.

Bress Addresses Students on Hull

Speaker Will Attend Annual Convention As Delegate

"Justice is the greatest interest of man on earth", declared Miss Florence Bress in addressing the student body on Wednesday, March 31. Choosing as her topic "Cordell Hull—The Good Neighbor", Miss Bress gave an exposition of the indubitable success which has crowned recent efforts to foster pacifism between the American countries.

"And when a war-racked world shall turn, as turn it must, to the continent of peace, and shall look with hopeful gaze at the vision of peace and good will from Canada to Chile, one name shall stand forth as an inspiration for some European diplomat of the good life—the name of Cordell Hull—the Good Neighbor," concluded the speaker.

Miss Bress, talented orator of the sophomore class, will represent State Teachers College in the intercollegiate contests at Winthrop this week, where some forty Eastern Colleges will compete.

Girls Are Handed Bows and Arrows For Latest Team

Archery Practice Will Begin Soon at S. T. C.

Perfect posture, poise, ease, calmnes, steadiness—sounds like calmness, steadiness—sounds like ioned girl but the modern archer has to have these and more. She has to have what it takes to miss the target weeks on end and still believe she's got something! She has to take a blue-black arm, blistered fingers and a scratched nose as marks of honor. The matter of going to a number of required practices and then no more isn't the ideals nor ethics of a true archer. Her ideal is to put more and more arrows in that deceiving bull's eye.

After the class volleyball games are over archery will be held on Tuesday and Friday afternoons from 4 to 6. Tuesday will be the afternoon for beginners and for those who have not yet made a score of 70 in 6 ends (36 arrows). After this score has been reached the beginner may move in to the Friday group where she will begin

Collegeiate Dance Complete Easter

V. P. I. and U. of Va. Are Centers of Attraction

"Easter Week" at the University of Virginia with Horace Heidt and Count Dussey, was the center of the social whirl last week-end. The dances started on Wednesday and extended through Saturday night. The gym was most attractively and originally decorated to represent the school campus. At one end of the gym was a lighted up replica of the outside Rotunda. The sides of the gym were brick representing the buildings which overhead twinkled stars against a blue back-ground. S. T. C. girls attending the dances and fraternity parties were Irma Carpenter, Margaret Eckford, Betty Harwood, Lois Ruth Jenkins, Bernice Jones, Lucile Mosley, Rose Moore, Clara Nottingham, Vincinia Tilman and Jean Willis.

V. P. I. uniforms with their usual appeal attracted many girls to Blacksburg where they danced to the allaying tunes of Sammy Kay and Little Jack Little. Seen at this set of Easter dances were Ann Billups, Erna Dickerson, Jennie Belle Gilliam, Elizabeth Hoag, Mary Hale, Eugenia Jolly, Edith Kaylor, Luella La Fon, Hope Minter, Marjorie Robertson, Martha Seitz, Gay Stieffen, Frances Warriner, Margaret Williams, Frankie Bryan and Frances Lee Russow.

were: Sarah Keesee, Francis Irving, Mary Wilson Clarke, Katherine Newman, Dorothy Noehren, who came in first, Sidney Yonce, second and Chlotilde Jarman, third.

In the Intermediate Side Stroke race Frances Irving, Elizabeth Burke and Marie Eason came in in the order named.

The sixth event was the Crawl race, two lengths of the pool. The racers were Jenny Carroll, who came in first, Katherine Newman, second, Dorothy Noehren, third, Sarah Keesee, Mary Wilson Clark and Chlotilde Jarman.

The next event was diving. Norvelle Montague did a straight dive, Dorothy Noehren came in first with a back jack and a twist. Katherine Newman took second with a flip. Brownie Johnson was third with a jack knife.

In the last event, which was a tanden race, Jenny Carroll and Sidney Yonce came in ahead of Sarah Keesee and Dorothy Noehren.

Girls Travel Here And There Easter

Holiday Brings Fun to Would-Be Teachers

Easter trips carried S. T. C. girls in all directions. Some preferred the large cities and skyscrapers, some visited friends in other towns, but home to most girls was the choice place to spend the holidays.

Among the girls who went to New York City for the holidays were Nan Throckmorton, Caroline Gwathney, Macon Raine, Margaret Watkins and Nancy Sellman. Nancy had as her guests Vera Ebel and Elsie Dodd.

Three girls spent their vacation in Philadelphia. They were Helen Reiff, Phil Schlobohm and Alpha Lee Garnett.

Rosemary Brown visited in Washington during Easter.

Jeanne Nichols spent the holidays in Chicago.

Esther Beebe returned to her home in Spartanburg, S. C., for Easter.

home of Miss Mary Finch at Chase City.

Dot Henderson had as her guests at her home in Saltville, Martha Hamlet, Fletcher Walker and Virginia Irby.

Rebecca Glenn visited her sisters in Elizabethton, Tennessee.

Madeliene and Bess McGlothlin visited Robert Loving at Hot Springs and attended the Shep Field dance in Lynchburg.

India Martin visited friends in Ocean City, New Jersey.

Marguerite York visited the Naval Academy in Annapolis during Easter.

Sorority Entertains At Spring Banquet

In the softly lighted dining room at Longwood, on Saturday, April 13, Alpha Sigma Alpha entertained at a banquet in honor of the new girls. Besides the members of Alpha and their adviser, Miss Moran, Dr. Jarman Miss Mary White Cox, Miss Peck, Miss Mix, and Miss Winnie Hiner were present. The theme of spring flowers was carried out in the place cards, and in the toasts.

to regularly shoot the Columbia round. This round consists in puncturing the ole bull's eye from three distances with 24 arrows (4 ends) at each distance. Constant practice in the right way is the only way to pull that score up. Anyone may shoot outside the open practice period by getting in touch with the manager or with Casey Coleman, the assistant manager. Students are urged to take part in this sport so that it can hold its proper place on this campus.

Mrs. Gray Cat Is Mother of Four

Quadruplets' Father Reported Missing From Scene

Mrs. Gray Cat became the proud mother of four, Thursday morning in the fashionable Anne Scott Closet Apartment. The offspring have been named Alas, Alack, Wahoo and Boo-hoo. The mother and children are doing well.

The family is now occupying an exclusive suite under the stairs. When asked to make a statement for the press on the event of quadruplets, Mrs. Cat only yawned, sophistication personified. The father could not be located by your reporter.

You Wore An Easter Bonnet With All The Frills Upon It

So you, and you, and you, were in the Easter parade in your Easter bonnet with all the frills upon it, brightening the avenues of Spring with the gay new colors and the flowering frocks of the newest creations. Nature bedecked in her fairest apparel—sunshine, flowers, green grass, and budding trees—was not more beautiful than fashions' fair damsels.

Let us again catch the vision of the parade as it filed past last week. Here comes one young miss wearing a skirt of black alpaca, pleated in the front and back, with a jacket of beige flannel and a bright apple-green polka-dot scarf tucked in at the neck. Over this was slipped a loose reefer coat of camel's hair of dull greenish yellow. Her hat is one of those best and most beloved boaters—a stiff and shiny black straw with a spray of lily of the valley sprouting from the cross grain ribbon. She is carrying a black pleated antelope bag with a long handle and a black wood frame. A corsage of lily-of-the-valley to match those in her hat finishes the suit off to a tee.

She is followed by milady dressed in a "forecast" suit (a forecast to popularity) fresh as crocuses and crisp as celery—a new two-piece one in natural that has new stitched pockets that do fine things for the waist line and a skirt that hangs like a dream. A saucer beret, also in natural, gives a saucy air to the whole.

On, on the parade marches into the holiday dance hall and there we find the great waltz of net evening dresses. There's a modern Camille in jersey net patterned in lacy stripes, breath-taking over a pink slip. Strap decollete. It is touched off by pink chiffon camillias.

Or maybe you prefer the "basque pinch"—a dancing figure for a dancing mood. This diamond net is airy, light, and crisp enough to swing. There are white mousseline accents and a matching taffeta slip. Then here's another that invites the whirling, gliding measures of a waltz—the pick of Spring from a mass of purple—a violet silk crepe printed with bunches and still more bunches of violets ranging in color from pale mauve to the deep pulple of the Parmas.

This is no year for masculine guffaws about clothes. If you get a laugh don't shrug your shoulders and glory in your craziness. He's right and you're wrong this year. It's chic to be simple. In the progress of this Easter parade we see one young lass who progresses in style by variation. First, she starts with a dark blue wool dress and then she varies in her jackets—an absinthe yellow tweed jacket, then one of hyacinth blue, or a faded raspberry rose with an infinitesimal touch of white at the neck. Her gloves are white too, white as the lily-of-the-valley that shoots up the crown of her sailor hat.

The Easter parade hasn't ended yet for everywhere we turn we catch lovely visions of the pictures painted by Dame Fashion's artistic style brush.

Mrs. Davis Will Read Poems in Student Lounge

Farmville Alumna Has Recognition as Poet

Beorc Eh Thorn will present Mrs. Julia Johnson Davis, noted poet, in the Student Building lounge on April 15, at 8 p. m. Mrs. Davis, an alumna of Farmville and a native of Norfolk, Virginia, has received recognition as one of Virginia's and the South's best writers of fugitive verse. Her poems have appeared in such leading magazines as The Century, The Forum, The Nation, The Lyric; and in various anthologies: Braithwaite's Anthologies of Magazine Verse, Stevenson's Home Book of Modern Verse, and other collections. When she attended the Farmville Normal School back in 1908-10, Mrs. Davis was editor of the school magazine The Guidon and was frequently a contributor to the publication.

Beorc Eh Thorn has made it possible for a large number to have the privilege of hearing Mrs. Davis read her own poems by issuing two tickets to all members of the society, enabling each to bring a friend. A reception in the Student Building Lounge is to follow the reading.

Forensic Team Is Second in Finals

New Type of Debate Is Accepted at Meet

At the Grand Eastern Tournament held at Winthrop College, Rock Hill, South Carolina, April 8-10, Farmville placed second in the finals.

Anthelia Robinette and Nora Jones upheld the affirmative side, and Ruth Sears and Pattie Alston Bounds debated the negative of the Pi Kappa Delta question: Resolved that Congress be empowered to fix minimum wages and maximum hours for industry. Florence Bress took second place in the preliminary with her oration, "Cordell Hull—the Good Neighbor", and in the finals took third place. Nora Jones entered the after dinner speaker contest Anthelia Robinette entered the Extemporaneous contest, and Ruth Sears participated in the first round of Impromptu speaking.

One of the high spots on the program was a demonstration of the new type of direct-clash debate by the teams from N. C. State. The new plan, as worked out by Dr. Paget, also of N. C. State, was enthusiastically accepted by all.

The "Vernal Fiesta" was held at ten o'clock Friday night.

Sam Moss, N. C. State, and Lilla Bush, Winthrop College, led the procession as King and Queen of the candle lighting service. Pattie Alston Bounds, representing Farmville, had as her escort Bernard McKenna, University of Pittsburgh.

Anthelia Robinette represented Farmville at the Grand Eastern Banquet, Saturday night and gave a short after-dinner speech. Her escort was William Grass of Waynesburg, Pa.

The following colleges were present at the Grand Eastern Tournament—University of Pittsburgh, Waynesburg, Farmville, Erskine, The Citadel, College of Charleston, Furman, University of Florida, Franklin, University of Cincinnati, Heidelburg, University of Maryland, Emory and Henry, Asheville, Elon, Milligan, Roanoke, St. Tho-

Debate News

S. T. C. Is Defeated by Wheaton College

Representatives from Wheaton College, Wheaton, Illinois, defeated a team of Farmville in a debate held in the small auditorium on Tuesday night, April 13th. The question for discussion was the national Pi Kappa Delta question covering Congressional regulation of industry. Donna Ruth Breivving and Mary Troutman of Wheaton upheld the affirmative. Opposing them were Ruth Sears and Pattie Bounds of S. T. C.

Mr. O'Ferrel Thompson of Farmville served as critic judge and Dudley Allen was chairman of the debate.

Farmville also lost a debate with Randolph-Macon at Ashland on their campus on Monday night, April 12, although S. T. C. defeated Randolph-Macon when their teams were on the Farmville campus. Robert Parker and James Turner debated for Ashland and Ruth Sears and Pattie Bounds again represented Farmville. This discussion was centered around the Pi Kappa Delta question also.

Virginia Agee Is In Auto Accident

Word has been received that Virginia Agee of this student body was in an automobile accident Saturday evening in Roanoke. The extent of her injury in unknown. The telegram sent here Sunday morning merely stated that she was painfully but not seriously hurt and would be unable to return to school for a week or two.

Virginia is one of the most popular students on this campus. She is outstanding in dramatics, secretary of the House Council and vice-president of the junior class.

Bean Will Deliver Valedictory Speech At Commencement

Dugger Is Selected as Salutatorian From Class of '39

Dr. Jarman announced in chapel last Wednesday the first and second honor students in the graduating Sophomore Class and in the Senior Class. The faculty voted on the girls for these positions after considering their scholastic records as well as their work in extra-curricular activities, as presented by Miss Bugg.

Virginia Bean has been chosen as first honor student in the Senior class and she will deliver the valedictory address at Commencement. Virginia was first honor student in the diploma class when she was a Sophomore. Her outstanding scholastic ability and leadership have been recognized by Kappa Delta Pi, Pi Gamma Mu, Beorc Eh Thorn and Alpha Kappa Gamma, all of which she is a member. She is a member of Sigma Sigma Sigma Social sorority.

Bess McGlothlin was selected as second honor graduate in the class of '37. She, too has been an active

Rev. J. K. Morris Speaks on Japan

Minister Is Returned Missionary of Japan

On Wednesday, April 7, Reverend J. Kenneth Morris, of Tuscaloosa, Alabama, arrived on our campus to spend several days. Mr. Morris, who is a return missionary from Japan is in this country at the present time on leave. It is interesting to know that Mr. Morris, who does missionary work in Kyota, is located quite near Miss Mary Finch in Japan.

Mr. Morris's first appearance was before the open meeting of the Y. W. C. A. Cabinet on Wednesday afternoon. In an interesting talk he acquainted those present with certain facts about Japan in general which are well to know. On Thursday in Chapel, Mr. Morris spoke on the economic status of Japan and continued this theme at Chapel on Friday. At this time he clarified the Chinese-Japanese relationships, and explained the friendly attitude of Japan toward America.

Mr. Morris spoke twice also at Prayers, on Thursday and Friday evenings. In each of these talks,

Cox Is President Of Dramatic Club For Coming Year

Quinn Is Re-elected to Office of Vice-Head

Mary Joyner Cox of Smithfield will hold the office of Dramatic Club President for the coming year. For the second consecutive year Josephine Quinn, will serve as vice-president. Ann Shifflett will be secretary. Virginia Whitehead Smith was unanimously elected treasurer.

Mary Joyner has been active in the Dramatic Club since her freshman year. She has taken part in many plays; she has an important part in this year's spring play and has been prominent in the staging group of the club. She is a member of the Artists' Dance Group, the Cotillion Club, and Sigma Sigma Sigma Sorority.

The new heads of the groups are Mary Wilson Clark, costuming; Janie Lee Young, lighting; Mable Burton, make-up. Elizabeth Seiber is leader of the music committee, while Virginia Jarman is in charge of the staging group. The properties are to be under Musse Hoyer. Elizabeth Price will serve as roomkeeper for the coming year.

Poyner Will Play For Spring Dance

Cotillion Club Figure Is Led by Bowles and Smith

The Cotillion Club will present its annual set of spring dances on Saturday, April 17, in the gym. A tea dance will be held from four until six o'clock in the afternoon followed by the formal dance Saturday night from eight-thirty until twelve. Jimmy Poyner and his orchestra will furnish the music for both dances.

Mary Bowles, leader of the Cotillion Club, and her escort, Raleigh Powell of Petersburg, and V. P. I., and Elizabeth Smith, president of the Cotillion Club, and her escort, Johnny Walden, of Richmond and Hampden-Sydney will lead the figure which will be held Saturday night. Ruth Montgomery, business manager, her escort, Dr. R. S. Montgomery, of South Hill, Sue Mallory, secretary and treasurer, and her escort will follow. Others in the figuer will include all Cotillion Club members in school who have been members for a year.

Simplicity Of Convent Life Makes Audience Feel Beauty

Simplicity — directness — beautiful — truth — serenity — implicit faith — these are the characteristics of the "Cradle Song". The appeal and beauty of the play lies in its complete lack of conscious effort to hold the audience's interest. The quick world-aloof life of the nuns within the sheltering convent, their days filled with uneventful events, prayers, and self restraint give to the play a delicate wistful loveliness.

The Prioress' gentle correction of her charges' misdeeds and the calmness with which she accepts everything makes her beloved by all the nuns. Just the opposite is the Vicaress who gets shocked at least once a day by some trivial incident, and who continually expects the worst to happen. The Doctor is the convent's only connecting link with the outside world and he serves them very well with his visits and his light humor.

The play's air of serenity and peace is definitely felt, yet it has movement, interest, and human appeal that is different and quite entrancing.

Students, who are taking parts in this play seem to feel the mood of the quaint sisters. They seem to be the characters themselves. As nuns they no longer possess the boldness of modern Americans, but are trans-figured to an ethereal atmosphere of calm acceptance of faith.

"The Cradle Song" Will Be Presented As Spring Drama

Dramatic Club Gives Annual Performance Friday

LYCEUM NUMBER

Unworldly Nuns Are Characters In Play By Sierra

The Dramatic Club will present "The Cradle Song" by Sierra on Friday night, April 16. It will be a lyceum number and marks the annual spring presentation by the club. It is under the direction of Miss Leola Wheeler, the club adviser.

As a contrast to the usual drama, this little Spanish play has scant action, its great charm lying in its tremendous intrinsic poetry and exquisite humor and pathos. It was presented first in this country at the Civic Repertory Theatre, New York by Eva Le Gallienne and her company. Its success and continuance there was a surprise because of its difference from the ordinary loud comedy. One critic says of it that there is such a wistful, delicate loveliness about this "Cradle Song" with its unworldly nuns, its admirable convent, its bells, its music, and its beautiful simple life.

Sierra sets his play in the cloister of an order of nuns whose simple peasures and petty jealousies are interrupted by a bell which announces the abandoning of a girl baby at the nunnery grill. The Prioress gives permission to keep the child. Years pass and the rest of the story concerns itself with the foundling as she is experiencing life as a young woman.

One must not look for a great, hurrying drama in the "Cradle Song" but witnessing it one experiences one of the very rare joys of the theatre and it is hard to imagine a more beautiful experience. Alexander Woolcott wrote after attending its first presentation: "Not this season in the theatre anywhere in the town have I been part of an audience so obviously and so genuinely moved."

Sierra is the leading Spanish

McCann In Charge of Morning Absences

A recently selected chapel committee has its duty of checking chapel absences with vim.

Kathleen McKann is head of the committee composed of Virginia Carroll, Nen Seward, Miriam Ficklin, Eugenia Jolly, Isabel Plummer, Lula Windham, and Elizabeth Morris.

The committee not only checks the excuses but is also responsible for the conduct of the student body during chapel.

S.T.C. Editors Will Attend Convention

Delegates to the 1937 convention of the Virginia Intercollegiate Press Convention will meet at the Jefferson Hotel in Richmond on April 16 - 17. Mary Harrison Vaughan and Elizabeth Roberts will represent the Rotunda, Ruth Montgomery the Virginian, and Zaida Thomas the Handbook.

This year's convention which has promises of being one of the most outstanding in the history of the organization is the tenth to be held. The organization was formed in Farmville in February 1928. Since then rapid progress has been made in the student publications that hold membership in this organization.

Many topics of vital interest to staff members on college publications wil lbe discussed at this convention. All the ifs ands and buts of publications will be given special attention with a contest being held between the colleges for judging the publications.

Dr. George Opdyke Gives Art Lectures Using Picture Slides

An illustrated lecture, in which slides of famous pictures and paintings were shown, was given in the auditorium on Wednesday night, April 7, by Dr. George Opdyke, art appreciator and lecturer. Again at chapel time on Thursday morning, Dr. Opdyke talked on "Art Appreciation".

Dr. Opdyke asserted that art is a language and should be approached as such. Moreover, he said, one does not have to be an artist to love art. The appreciation of the beauty and truth of art is the point that counts.

An architect and mining engineer from Texas, Dr. Opdyke himself has never taught or painted. In his travels he has visited museums and trained himself to an appreciation of the best in all types of art. Several years ago his book, Art and Nature Appreciation, was published. Dr. Opdyke is now connected with the American Institute of Architects in New York. He spends his time traveling and giving illustrated lectures on his hobby to schools and colleges.

ABSENT WITHOUT LEAVE

Books placed in class-rooms at the disposal of a class by teachers are the property of that class for the period of their usage. Anyone else who moves these books is guilty of taking things that don't belong to her.

Books in class-rooms have a habit of taking wings and flying away. Often they are valuable and expensive books. Often classes are hindered in their work because certain thoughtless students see fit to borrow books without teachers' knowledge. Usually, the books return, so it is obvious that no dishonesty is meant, but their value has perhaps ceased to exist for the intended class. A proper regard for fellow students will make each person see that these books should not be removed, and no longer will classes be hampered by texts A. W. O. L.

SOMETHING TO FIGHT FOR

We have been told innumerable times that Joan of Arc is the guiding spirit of S. T. C., and her statue stands in the Rotunda to prove it. We have been showered occasionally with sentimentalities on the glory and beauty of that ideal, but how much it means may be judged by the names on her face and dress put there apparently in an effort to attain some sort of recognition—a barren recognition at best.

Joan or Arc had a vision, and it led her to the stake; but her spirit is immortal. Those who have no opinions, no flaming belief to fight for, have little else. It is too easy to accept conventions, to capitulate when challenged by authority; but those who do so never arrive. An idea is never right because someone else has thought so, or because past generations have accepted it. Its worth lies in its value to the individual and its application to humanity.

The world is all too willing to burn you at the stake if you challenge public opinion, but the world moves forward on the shoulders of those who dare to have passionate beliefs and to fight for them. It is even better to be wrong and fight for your own opinion than never to have an idea at all, for in time, unthinking acceptance of arbitrary opinion, lies defeat.

CAMPUS HINTS

Now that Spring has really sprung, how about a campus clean up, both inside and out?

Really now, paper, trash, and trampled ground just don't tone in with all these pink and pale green spring hues. We suggest that the paper go in your jacket pocket until you reach a waste basket, and that you stick a little more closely to the side walks and give those struggling green shoots their rightful chance to reach maturity.

Well, it's no use to say that the halls look slightly better when minus the paper and scraps which we thoughtlessly drop.

We want our campus and buildings to have an appearance of which we'd be proud. You heard a Campus League pep talk the other night. Keep in mind these printed points, and those omitted. You'll profit by it.

SENIOR PERSONALITIES

Claire Eastham, former vice-president of the Student Body.

Her closest friends find in Claire the harmony of sincerity, dependability and an effervescing gaiety. There's something in her charm, a twinkle in her eye, that makes her animation and her vivacity irresistible. Her plan of living is well formulated; her mind is her own. Untiring zest, intensity of purpose, conscientious effort, and a sense of humor to lighten rough going, have characterized her achievements for these four years.

Alpha Kappa Gamma, her class, and the Student Body in making her its Vice-president, recognize her willingness to serve, her ability to lead, and the quality of her ideas and ideals. With a combination of high scholarship and a variety of interest, Claire has made a place for herself in Kappa Delta Pi, Pi Gamma Mu, Beorc Eh Thorn, and Beta Pi Theta. She is a member of the Dramatic Club, the Cotillion Club, the May Court, and the Mu Omega Sorority.

Solely on her own merits, no matter how steep the grade—we do not doubt—we know—that Claire will come through!

Literary Column

There isn't any real or true definition of beauty. We see it lying about us and all around us every day. Beauty is in the flowers—and in the trees. Beauty is in the songs of birds—in the humming of the bees, and in the fluttering of the butterfly wings. Yes, we know it really does exist—the pleasing fragrance of beauty. We catch phrases of admiration as people admire fashions and the faces of people about them, but there is another kind of beauty. It is the beauty that does not shine in actual color or form—that which does not please with its harmony or rates in music—but rather the unseen beauty of lives. They are immortal lives that will never pass into nothingness, because they have experienced life as life should be—clean and fine and great—

"A thing of beauty is a joy forever:
Its loveliness increases; it will never Pass into nothingness; but still will keep
A bower quiet for us, and a sleep
Full of sweet dreams, and health, and quiet breathing."

"Rhodora, if the sages ask thee why
This charm was wasted on the earth and sky
Tell them, dear, if eyes were made for seeing Then beauty is its own excuse for being."

"Now Beauty walks at dawn beside the sea
Or sits enthroned upon the misty hills;
She walks earth's garden ways and gathers flowers,
Their color scatters, and their perfume spills."

"Beauty is truth, truth beauty—that is all
Ye know on earth, and all ye need to know.

A REVIEW OF PATTI BROADHURST'S "FOR FLORIDA"

It is gratifying to her Alma Mater to see Patti Smith Broadhurt's second volume of poems, "For Florida," just published by the Dial Press. It is what the title suggests—and more. The color and the beauty and the wonder of that romantic land of flowers is here, its emerald and sapphire seas, its "gold flamboyant moon", its "blue skies washed by rain," its royal palms that are unearthly fans", its flaming hibiscus hedges. But the title and the poems mean more than a tribute to the physical attractions of a delectable land. "For Florida" suggests a love of the wind and the wave, of lake and tree, of patio and boulevard, but to the poet all these are symbols

"Of something far more deeply interfused,
Whose dwelling is the light of setting suns
And the round ocean and the living air,
And the blue sky, and in the mind of man
A motion and a spirit, that impels—
All thinking things, all objects of all thought,
And rolls through all things."

The arresting title poem, which must be quoted in full, is indicative of the form and content and spirit of the collection. It possesses the rare combination of color and feeling that Lizette Woodworth Reese pays tribute to in the whole of Patti Broadhurst's work.

Florida

When I am old I shall go back
And sit watching, day after day,
Watching the emerald waters striking the jetties
And rising in crystal spray . . .
Until the last tide comes in and gathers me up
To carry me out, as a mother gathers her babe—
Out where the purple waters sleep
And mermaids scream
And Triton blows ten thousand horns—
There in the soothing deep, under the jubilant sun,
To dream.

The recurrence of the mystery of the unending waters, of the sleeping purple waters, of the soothing deeps, is but one of the charms of the first devision entitled "Wind and Wave." In another division, "Patios and Boulevards," there are vignettes and portraits such as the person "At the Next Table" "full of anesthetizing talk"; "Mimi," "like naked emotion"; the junk-man in "Trash Day"; the "Woman Eating Pie". In the last division, particularly, there are some graceful and thoughtful brevities. "The Lost Moment," though not quite typical of the group, expresses what many have felt.

"Once I stood on the edge of paradise
Where all was light.
One step further and I should have entered.
But I was weighted and earth-bound;
All the elements of my body that made it possible
For me to enter in
Conspired to hold me frightened and confused—
I shouted earthward to regain my confidence
And found myself immediately identified only
With the earth.

Occasionally there is a satiric touch, as in "Adios", but this is the least of the moods .Love, hate, jealousy, sorrow, exaltation of the spirit, all are here. In the molding of the feeling and the thought, the free verse employed makes effective use of assonance, achieving a beauty of cadence that is individual.

Patti Broadhurst's first volume, "Worn Shoes", published nearly five years ago, has been read and enjoyed by many of the alumnae of the college. "For Florida," which has won praise from distinguished literary critics, Carl Van Doren and others should be even more widely read. It is, to a reviewer in the "Philadelphia Record," a deeply moving and human book. Against overwhelming odds and inevitable ironies the spirit rises in triumphant self assertion."

ROTUNDA REVERBERATIONS

LEGS! Millions of green and yellow ones! Queer coiffures! Faces devoid of cosmetics! On first glance one would think a circus had passed through town and forgotten to take its freaks with it. But, no, it's merely Cotillion Club initiation. Clothes may not make the man . . . but they certainly contribute a lot to the woman . . . and the man who invented cosmetics deserves an extra star or two . . . for surely it must have been a man! Deepest sympathy to those whom the Hampden-Sydney heart throbs have been shorn of their artificiality! Take heart, oh goats, perhaps their shattered illusions will mend when the shock has worn off.

It is rumored that a certain little blonde is having quite a bit of trouble over her date list for this week-end. Your sins will find you out, you know! Try the same gag you used last time! The blessing of ill health is ever the privilege of the frail!!!

And speaking of trouble . . . it seems that Don Farnsworth is in a quandry over which of his bids he will accept. Let's hope he weighs the matter carefully . . . red heads can be regular spitfires!

Since this has turned into a sympathy column . . . shed a few tears for Will. Imagine her chagrin when she greeted Horace so profusely and it turned out not to be that young gentleman.

Wonder if the Beebe-Billups feud will blossom forth again this week-end? Some Folkes do cause a lota' trouble, don't they?

Don't miss the play Friday night . . . "The Cradle Song". Clara Nottingham does a neat piece of acting . . . 'tis said. And some of those who take the role of nuns will be a mighty nice surprise!

Sara K. A. pin in the school? Of course it is and you don't have to Reed about it in this column—you can tell by that beaming face.

The election of the president of the student body at Hampden-Sydney has made one young lady sing a merry tune these last few days. You don't, by chance, know who it could be, do you?

In conclusion, let's nominate for oblivion those people who just can't seem to take it . . . strange that they never seem to get around to it when they—Ah—shall we say . . . dish it out so well.

LOOKIN' 'EM OVER

Bridegroom is killed few hours after wedding—how cold those words sound in print! The bride will live. Why? That question is one that will never cease to puzzle the minds of poor mortals buffeted here by Fate. Could anything be more heart-rendering than a happy wedding day's ending with the bride a widow? It is hard to feel that there was some power behind such a disaster that deemed it necessary. Someday, maybe, even the bride may see. Now, perhaps, it is too soon. Men and women can only say "How horrible!" and pity. . .

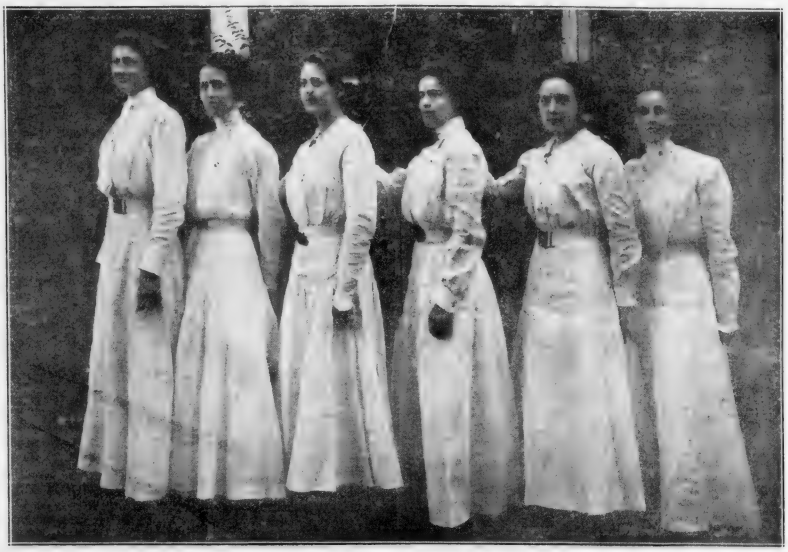
How close this generation can get to great people! It's such a wholesome feeling to know that the wife of our president is one of us, that she drives her own car and visits Natural Bridge as unassumingly as Neighbor Jones' wife would do it. It makes Mr. Average Citizen feel that this is truly his country, where he can make himself heard and feel his own importance.

So Prince Carol of Rumania is going to take away Prince Nicholas' estates, name and social rank because he refuses to give up his wife. A man is supposed to surrender his wife willingly if he is a Hohenzollern prince. It matters not that he loves her, that she loves him, and is the mother of his children. He should forget all such trite matters and remember only her lowly state in contrast to his own exalted position as prince. Carol finds himself in the peculiar position of "a pot calling the kettle black." The difference is that Carol deserted a royal wife for a commoner while Nicholas seeks only to be true to his wife. Rumanians should back this great Prince Nicholas in his decision to keep the sanctity of his home. The day of forced marital decisions went out of date with Queen Victoria. It's time nations accepted the fact.

"Do you believe in wireless telepathy?" A short subject shown at the Lee Theatre on Thursday and Friday of last week left spectators gasping. By wireless telepathy, a mother delayed a son fifty-seven seconds. By fifty-seven seconds, the son missed death in a horrible automobile accident. If only wireless telepathy or some form like it could be used to prevent the continuous deaths that occur on American highways. Death is tragic enough to those left behind when it comes of natural causes, but when it comes suddenly on a highway, when it could so easily be prevented, then it is really terrible. This modern age will destroy itself in its hurry if it does not hesitate and think more clearly. No dare-devil speed is worth a single life, no risk worth a ghastly headline telling of a highway toll.

For appearing on a set with face covered with grease paint a few hours a day, movie stars get more money a year than industrialists who are responsible for hundreds of workers. For riding beautiful horses, swimming in beautiful pools, wearing beautiful clothes, and making love in beautiful ways, stars receive more money per year than capitalists. And we call this a capitalist country and spend our time fighting capitalistic wealth with idiotic strikes. Maybe a few extras on movie lot should sit down and refuse to risk their necks for paltry thousands so that movie kings and queens can look smooth and unruffled for hundreds of thousands.

This is an excerpt from the Vassar Miscellany News: We like husbands. We wish there were more of them. We deplore the fact that the average Vassar graduate has only 1.2 children. We are in favor of 5.2 children, 4.2 husbands, and 3.2 beer, and we will fight to the last decimal point on this issue. We frown on the attitude that some husbands are more desirable than others. A husband is a husband is a husband, as any Freshman knows.



Packed Auditorium Hears Artist Sing

The Woman's Club of Farmville sponsored a rare feature in the coming of Miss Alma Milstead, famous N. B. C. artist. Her recital Friday evening, April 9, in the S. T. C. auditorium was largely attended by local and out of town people. Her selections included "Tu Lo Sai", by Torellis, "Verdi's Area", "Caro Nome", from Rigoletto, Taylor's "May Day Carol", Sanderson's "Quiet", Watt's "Shepherds' Song", and Gounods "Aria", "Juliette's Waltz" from Romeo and Juliette. She sang as her encores a Swedish song, "Shortenin' Bread", "Swanee River", "The Rosary", "The Last Rose of Summer" and "Little Pickaninny Kid." It was a privilege that will never be forgotten to hear this wonderful voice from our stage.

Others who contributed to the evening's program were Mr. Luther Richman, State Director of Music, as tenor, Mr. Paul Cartwright, violincellist, Miss Cornelia Gills, pianist and the Choral Club and Choir of the college with the lovely voice of Miss Irene Leake as soloist.

Mr. Alfred H. Strick was the accompanist during the whole program.

Brumfield Urges Study of Nature

"Appreciation of nature" was the subject chosen by Dr. Brumfield when he talked to the members of Alpha Phi Sigma at an open meeting last Tuesday evening, April 6. Dr. Brumfield discussed nature from a generalist's rather than a specialist's viewpoint. He touched on nearly every phase of animal life, and showed how all of them are connected to make up the perfect whole of nature. Dr. Brumfield closed his talk by saying that many people unwittingly kill harmless animals, in fact helpful ones, through crass ignorance, thus showing the real need that the majority of people have for studying nature and learing something about it.

Roberts and Fagg Hold Class Honors

Kitty Roberts and Betty Fagg were selected by popular vote from the graduating sophomore class of 1937 to act as historian and giftorian respectively, and will take part in the graduating exercises in June. Pattie Bounds was chosen from the class at large to act as their assistant.

Ann Dugger was formerly chosen to act as historian, but she will be Salutatorian. Kitty Roberts was elected to take her part as historian.

These girls will act as a committee to plan the program for Sophomore Class Day.

Athletic Styles For Ladies Are Set By Class Of 1909

In the above snap are revealed the ultra-fashionable members of the Athletic Association of 1909.

The fair damsels are exhibiting the very latest of the 1909 styles for the athletic girls. Note the length of dress, the high colors and slender hip-lines. Shoes cannot be commented upon as they are carefully concealed. The hair is dressed high so that the greatest ease of movement can be accomplished.

Under the direction of these girls, the Farmville Athletic Association soared to great victories. Tennis teams, basketball teams and possibly croquet teams prospered. There was no swimming team. Archery was a favorite sport. Perhaps the costume of the group was used in tendering the bow or in slinging a wicked racket.

The spirit of S. T. C. was not lacking in 1909. Ease of movement was lacking, but the grit and determination that is traditional lived and was inspirational.

SPORT SLANTS

Everybody dug way down deep in the closet and found a pair of roller skates they'd thrown back out of sight last fall and now they're at it! Every night after dinner you can hear them "out front" of the main building. Up and down the street they go—faster and faster! It's great fun even just to watch. Feet and hands swinging from one side to the other—perfect balance, rhythm, and harmony, too. It's got to be that way, or down you go and a side walk isn't the softest thing in the world to sit rather abruptly down on!

Carefree lassies are seen walking out the road. Where are they going? They're going to Longwood. They're walking off that restless "want to do something" feeling.

Down in the pool a splash is heard, a diving board quivers and pretty soon a figure appears. It isn't a mermaid, but a young lady anxious of making a hit at the beach this summer. Some little lady that wants to know how it's done. You'd be surprised how many ambitious girls have been down. They aren't half bad either. The worst of it is the way the water leaves those permanents, and the way they've taken to wearing kerchiefs to hide that hair. New sports, new styles—what next?

Schedule Practices Begin Spring Sports

Now that volley ball has passed on, thoughts turn to those spring games. Archery players are still going strong and it is hinted that this school may compete against other schools in that sport.

On Monday, April 19, soccer and baseball practices will begin. Soccer will be played at 4 o'clock and baseball at 5, Wednesday and Thursday soccer will be played at 5 and baseball at 4. The manager of soccer, Elizabeth Kent, will take charge of the soccer practices. Judith Gathright, the manager of baseball will supervise the baseball practices.

Tuesday and Friday afternoons have been reserved for archery practices. The new manager, Louise Anthony, with the help of Maxine Burke, will meet the girls interested in this sport.

Tennis courts will be ready for the game soon. In fact, plans for a tennis doubles tournament is under way. All girls interested in entering this contest have been urged to sign up on the chart on the A. A. bulletin board.

Baptist Students Announce Officers

The Baptist Student Union unanimously elected a group of girls whose names were submitted by the nominating committee, composed of India Martin, chairman; Miss Norris, faculty adviser; Dr. Cook, Dolly Ball, and Ivalyn Jordan. Those girls elected are: Virginia Pilcher, President; Evlyn Hastings, Enlistment Leader, First Vice-president; Hazlewood Burbank, Social Director, Second Vice-president; Marion Harden, Devotional Chairman, Third Vice-president; Evelyn Beale, Secretary; Dorothy Kessler, Treasurer; Elizabeth Burke, Reporter; Caroline Gwaltney, Chorister; Helen Reiff, Pianist.

Virginia Pilcher and Evelyn Hastings are serving on the Council for the third year. They were two among those girls who were instrumental in having a B. S. U. organized on this campus. In November at the State Baptist Student Convention held in Charlottesville, Virginia Pilcher was elected first vice-president of the state.

ces, is a college orchestra. Jimmy Poyner, who is 22, is the oldest member of the band of ten. It has been predicted that Jimmy Poyner and His Collegians, now ruling the heights on North Carolina dance time, will become nationally famous when the band turns professional this coming June after graduation from N. C. State College at Raleigh, North Carolina.

All numbers played by Jimmy Poyner and his Collegians are especially arranged by Poyner himself and his three assistants, Ray White, Bill Aiken, and Andy Phillips. Key Scales' rendition of "Annie's Cousin Fannie" always brings forth much applause and requests to repeat this novelty. Key Scales' interpretation of other popular swing songs have made him a leading vocalist and entertainer. Other vocalists with Jimmy Poyner's band are Tuni Paly, who sings the sweet vocals, and George Poyner.

The decorations for the dance will be arranged by members of Gamma Psi assisted by the Cotillion Club goats.

Amid Much Hurry and Bustle Happy Girls Take Departure

Suitcases on top of suitcases, bus tickets flying around, light laughter and bustle signifies the departure of S. T. C. girls off for a gala week-end.

Those finding attraction in Lynchburg, with perhaps the R. M. W. C. dances as the center, were Nancy Gray, Gwen Bell, Martha Harding, Martha L. Seitz, Frances Alvis, May Bates, Marguerite Blackwell, Helen Bell, Macon Raine, Louise Davis, Bessie Eberwine, Dorothy Nachren, Elizabeth Morris, Rosabelle Seay Martha Hamlet, Juanita Callis, Grace Allen Pittard, and Frances Gaskins.

Among those to whom Richmond as an ideal week-end destination porved promising were Virginia Ritchie, Jean Williams, Martha Glenn Davis, Clara Nottingham, Alpha Lee Garnett, Helen Callihan, Jean Taylor, Katherine Roberts, Margaret Russell, Dot Tillett, Josephine Quinn, Sara Buchanan, Mary V. Blankenship, Margaret Coolter, Mary Wilson Clark, Margaret Hannah Critcher, Dorothy E. Davis, Elsie Dodd, Vera Ebel, Marie Eason, Julia Furnival, Mariam Ficklen, Helen Gage, and Virginia Woodward.

There are still those to whom home is the sweetest. Those were Nan Page Trent, Ruth Phelps, Frances Ann Steed, Pauline Scott, Lucy Smith, Prince Smith, Elizabeth Tindall, Charlotte Rice, Merwyn Gathwright, Eleanor Haag, Evelyn Kail, Pearl Panton, Frances Barnes, Inez Chappell, Marguerite Faulconer, Louise Faulconer, Lelia Hill, Jacqueline Beale, Jane Baldwin, Livia Powell, Beverly Baptist, Dorothy Harmon, Caroline Gwaltney, Ida Sue Carter, Bernice Copley.

Aunt Lucy Has Been Dear To Hearts Of Many Girls

"True worth is in being not seeming
In doing, each day that goes by
Some little good--not in dreaming
Of great things to do by and by"

Each night throbbing echoes of our bell rings out on the night air clamorously announcing the beginning of study hours at 7:15, their end at 10, and finally bedtime at 10:30 o'clock. It is an iron-throated herald sounding tribute o one who has faithfully performed her duty for twenty-five years—our Aunt Lucy.

Yes, twenty-five years ago she came to S. T. C. to help in making our school a more home-like and pleasant place to live—ringing the bells at night and receiving the girls' guests on the week-end.

Born in Amelia, she has lived in Farmville most of her life. She has six children; two daughters teach school in Norfolk. Aunt Lucy is very proud of them.

She has a singular record of faithfulness, for she had never missed a night in coming to the school until three months ago when she was in an accident which kept her away until Easter. She described the accident in the following vivid manner.

"We were driving along just as fine, and I'd just said to my friend how good my grandson was driving, when I heard a loud noise, then came the crash, and I didn't remember anything 'till I woke in the Norfolk hospital with this cut on my head. I didn't suffer for anything while I was in the hospital. Everybody was so good to me. The room was always full of flowers and fruit, and Miss Mary wrote me such nice letters. The Lord surely did take good care of me." Thus, Aunt Lucy revealed the characteristic faith of her people.

When Aunt Lucy first came each room had its own stove, and wood and coal were brought in from the wood-pile and coal-bin at the back of the school. There were kerosene lamps, and one of the chief duties of the maids was to clean lamp chimneys every morning. (A maid's prayer — "Praise be to Edison"). Water was brought in buckets from a well that was located where the Training School is now. It was kept for drinking purposes in coolers placed in the halls.

Many are the girls that Aunt Lucy has seen come and go and many are the hearts in which she has won a place.

"A life spent worthily should be measured by a nobler line — by deeds not years."

School Entertains Visiting Soprano

A colorful reception was given by the choral club and college choir in the Student Building Lounge for their guest artist, Miss Alma Milstead, following her concert Friday night, April 9. The lounge was decorated with narcissi, jonquils and fruit blossoms. Miss Bugg and Mrs. Watkins presided at the punch bowls. The a capella members of the choir served the numerous guests from the neighboring towns and Farmville.

Longwood Tea

The Woman's Club of Farmville entertained Miss Milstead and her New York friend at tea Saturday afternoon, April 10 at Longwood. Members of the faculty and choir were among the guests.

Ten Girls Receive Bids to Sororities

VOL. XVI. FARMVILLE, VIRGINIA, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 21, 1937 No. 24

Committees Work To Make Success Of 1937 May Day

Dance Drama Plans Are Nearly Complete

Committees have been appointed for the various phases of May Day production, and work is progressing rapidly.

Marguerite York has charge of the Hansel and Gretel dance. The May Pole, May Court, Gingerbread Men, Lullabye, Shadow, Witch, Proclamation, and Folk People's dances are under the guidance of Gwen Bell, Chic Dorch, Mary Bowles, Katherine Irby, Virginia Bean, Helen Glass, Mary Joyner Cox, and Essie Millner respectively.

Geraldine Hatcher, Jane Hardy, Bruce Crowell, Vivian Davis, Buelah Ettinger, Elizabeth LeGrande and Virginia Ritchie are helping with the music for the dances.

For the costumes Margaret Thomas, Will Scott, Ruth Montgomery, Charlotte Minton, Ruth Crumley, Miriam Pickles and Frances Thomas are working with Isabel Plummer, the chairman.

Mary Ellen Mimms is designing the float and Norvelle Montague has charge of the building of the cookie house, Norvelle's committee is composed of Meade Hardaway, Sue Owen, Margaret James, Elizabeth Kent and Chlotilde Jarman.

Mary Harrison Vaughan, theme chairman, has urged everyone to cooperate with these committees to make May Day this year a success. The program is nearly completed, and a large crowd is expected to the celebration on May 1.

Five Representatives Attend Press Meet

Ruth Montgomery, Charlotte Minton and Charlotte Rice from the Virginian Staff and Elizabeth Roberts and Mary Harrison Vaughan of the Rotunda staff attended the Virginia Inter-Collegiate Press Association in Richmond Friday and Saturday.

Headquarters of the convention were at the Jefferson Hotel. Nearly a hundred and fifty students of Virginia and District of Columbia colleges and universities attended the association. This was the tenth annual meeting of this group. The eleventh meeting will be held in Lexington in October 1937.

William H. Hudgins of Chase City was elected president of the V. I. P. A. for the coming year. He is editor of the Calyx, Washington and Lee annual. Frank Pancake, editor of the V. P. I. annual, was named secretary-treasurer and Miss Scotia Mozing, of Darlington, S. C., a student of Blackstone College, vice-president, Mr. Frank Strauss, Richmond newspaperman, was elected executive secretary to succeed Alex. Hudgins of Blackstone.

Saturday morning, James C. Nelson, acting professor of economics at University of Richmond, addressed the group on "The Student and Social Security." Various discussions on different phases of editing and on business managing were held Saturday. Friday night there was an open discussion of College Board Control of Publications led by Dr. Charles H. Wheeler of the University of Richmond. Delegates were invited to attend a dance at Richmond College Friday evening. The representatives were welcomed by Emanuel Emroch, second V. I. P. A. president.

Issues of the Rotunda, the 1936 spring issue of the Farmville Quarterly Review and the 1936 Virginian were entered in the publication contest.

Kathryn Jamison Heads Fraternity

Miss Moran Remains Faculty Advisor of Group

Kathryn Jamison, of Roanoke, has been selected president of Pi Gamma Mu, national social science fraterity for the coming year. Other officers are as follows: Doris Carper, vice-president; Marjorie Robertson, secretary; Nora Jones, treasurer; Deane Saunders, reporter; Miss Grace Moran, faculty advisor.

Kitty was second honor graduate of her diploma class, and delivered the salutatory address. She is vice-president of the Association of Childhood Education, and belongs to Kappa Delta Pi. She is a member of Pi Kappa Sigma sorority and of the Cotillion Club.

Doris came here new this year, having attended Harrisonburg. She is a member of Beorc Eh Thorn and of Alpha Phi Sigma.

Miss Moran served as advisor before, and was reelected for two years.

Columbia Awards Fellowship to Lane

Former Council Head Will Study In Paris

Bonnie Lane, Senior, and president of the Student Body for the past year, has been awarded a fellowship to Columbia University. This will enable her to apply for a Master of Arts degree in French or Spanish. She was picked from students of colleges all over the United States.

Dr. Isaac Fisher Lectures on Races

Negro Educator Talks to Sociology Students

Dr. Isaac Fisher, one of the outstanding Negro essayists of the present day, spoke on "Race Relationship" in the college auditorium on the afternoon of April 13. That night at the Methodist church he continued his talk. It was through Miss Florence Stubbs influence that the speaker was obtained.

Dr. Fisher is now editor of the "Southern Workmen" and of the Hampton Institute publication. Among the outstanding positions he has held are president of State Teachers College in Pine Bluff, Arkansas, head of the department of English at Fiske University, editor of the Fiske University paper, holder of the Guggenheim Fellowship, winner of fifty-odd essay contests, and a member of the Race Committee for Peace after the World War.

Dr. Fisher began his career as a messenger boy in Vicksburg, Mississippi. He has worked his way to the place in the world that he now holds. He has merited a place in Who's Who of America. He was a personal friend of Booker T. Washington, having worked with him for five years. Dr. Fisher said that he owed much of his present standing and outlook on life to Washington who taught him to tread—but of course—they're off equal toward all men.

Dr. Fisher has taken advantage of his southern heritage and from a Southerner's viewpoint he spoke on the race problems.

Button Will Head Honor Fraternity

Sarah Button was unanimously elected President of Alpha Phi Sigma, the national honorary fraternity for scholarship, at the meeting on Tuesday night.

Margaret Black will be the vice-president for the comnig year, while Pattie Jeffries will be the secretary; Scottie McAllister, the treasurer; Virginia Yager, the historian and Evelyn Beale, the Corresponding Secretary. The head of the social committee will be appointed later by the new president, following the installation.

Sarah, who will succeed Ruth Phelps as president of Alpha Phi Sigma, has been very active in the fraternity. While only a sophomore, she now holds a Masters Degree. She also is a member of the Y. W. C. A. cabinet, serving

Dr. Ben R. Lacy Will Preach Here At Senior Service

Seminary President Is Not Unknown Here

RHODES SCHOLAR

Dr. Lacy Is Alumnus of Hampden-Sydney

Dr. Benjamin Rice Lacy, president of the Union Theological Seminary, Richmond, Virginia, will deliver the Baccalaureate sermon at Farmville State Teachers College. Dr. Lacy is one of the most popular speakers in the state.

Dr. Lacy has had an interesting and worthwhile life. He was born in Raleigh, N. C. He attended the Raleigh Male Academy and Davidson College, graduating with a D.D. degree. As a Rhodes Scholar he obtained a B. A. in modern history at Oxford University in England. He also attended Union Theological Seminary and Hampden-Sydney College.

He engaged in evangelical work in North Carolina after being ordained in the ministry. In 1917-19 he served as Captain and Chaplain in 113 Field Artillery with the American Army in France. At the close of the war he was called to the pastorate of the Central Presbyterian Church in Atlanta, Ga. During his seven years pastorate in that church, Dr. Lacy was rec-

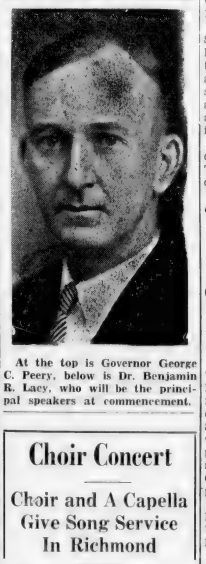
Senior Class of '37 Holds Ivy Planting



The members of the senior class in caps and gowns, led by Mary Bowles and Virginia Baker, marched out on the lawn of the senior building Monday night singing the Alma Mater, to take part in the annual ivy planting service.

The members of the class of '37 stood silently by while Mary Bowles, the president, and Virginia Baker, the treasurer, placed a glass jar containing the class roll tied with the class colors, green and white, in the ground. The ivy was planted then on top and covered with dirt.

The service closed impressively with the singing of the senior class songs. Following the singing Anna Shiflett played taps on her bugle.

Finals Speakers

At the top is Governor George C. Peery, below is Dr. Benjamin R. Lacy, who will be the principal speakers at commencement.

Virginia Governor Delivers Address At Commencement

Speaker Spoke Here Founder's Day In 1936

FINALS JUNE 8TH

Subject of Speech Has Not Been Chosen

Governor George C. Peery will deliver the primary address at the commencement exercises in June, according to an announcement by Dr. Jarman. Governor Peery has spoken before at Farmville, on Founders Day in March 1936.

He will give his address to the Seniors on Tuesday, June 8, the last day of Commencement. At the same time the valedictorian and salutatorian will deliver their speeches and Dr. Jarman will award the degrees to the Seniors and the diplomas to the graduating sophomores.

Governor Peery has not yet decided on the topic for his address. This will be anounced at a later date.

"The Cradle Song" Is Given Friday

Cast Includes Girls Who Are New On Stage

The Dramatic Club presented "The Cradle Song" by Sierra on Friday night, April 16, as its annual spring play. The play was directed by Miss Leola Wheeler. She was assisted by groups of girls working under the following department leaders: Isabel Plummer, costuming; Kathleen McCann, staging; Marie Moore, properties; Janie Lee Young, lighting; Mildred Davies, make-up; Elizabeth Seiber, music; Virginia Whitehead Smith and Madeline McGlothlin, business.

Cast members included a number of freshmen who were making their debut on the college stage. The type of play did not provide a real leading role. However, among the heaviest parts were those of Teresa, played by Clara Nottingham; Sister Joanna of the Cross, Frances Hutcheson; the Prioress, Elizabeth George Wilson; the Vicaress, Mary Joyner Cox; and the Mistress of Novices, Edith Kaylor. The only two male roles were portrayed by Betty Hardy as the old Doctor and Elizabeth Carroll as Antonio, the lover. Others in the cast were Sara Keesee as Sister Marcella, Anne Scott as Sister Sagrario, Frances Alvis as Sister Maria Jesus, David Terry as Sister Inez, Macon Raine as Sister Hornera, Martha Meade Hardaway and Martha Seitz as the monitors, and Nan Throckmorton as the poet.

Third Term Is Topic Of Debate Discussion

Discussion at the Debate Club meeting on Wednesday night, April 14th, centered around the question of a president of the United States accepting a third term of office. Extemporaneous discussions on phases of this policy were presented by members of the club as follows: "What Washington and Jefferson thought of a Third Term", Grace Waring; "How Grant and Roosevelt Handled the Situation", Sudie Yager;

Spring Cotillion Recalls Many Happy Returns Of The Day As Poyner Plays And Alumnae Return For Annual Dance

Gym Is Decorated by Gamma Psi Committee

Spring Cotillion! What a wealth of happy thoughts, hidden possibilities, and fun are remembered when that magical name is heard. The dances of the past fade into nothingness—or a forgotten favor pasted in a scrapbook—when Spring Cotillion is here. Dances seem to carry with them an air of good humor and light-heartedness, and Miss Mary's talk, Friday night, expressing her trust in the girls and her good wishes was the only thing needed to produce a perfect atmosphere for enjoyment.

For weeks ahead the postoffice was haunted "Night and Day"—but not in the Jimmy Poyner style—by future figure members, who were anxiously awaiting the all-important letter. Perhaps it's wise that Saturday classes are fewer than on other days because all attempts at learning were crowded aside by thoughts of frills, flowers and fun.

Certainly the "goats" were happy, for it meant the end of their seemingly endless week of silent suffering, curious costumes, shockingly absurd hairdresses, and the typical yellow and green stockings. Not to mention the question asked at least ten times an hour, "What are you trying to represent today?" It was quite a thrill to be allowed to wear the "latest spring silk" to the Dansant and have someone say how nice you looked instead of how queer.

Everyone had been saving her most beautiful and colorful dresses for the dance. The floor viewed through alternating strips of green and yellow, appeared to be a fairy garden the black tux of the boys being the tree trunks, while the gay dresses of the girls were spring flowers of all kinds. There were quite a few bright yellow jonquils, several pale violets, a red, red rose, a talisman rose, numbers of always beautiful white flowers, and many such a variety of colors that to name them would be impossible. Gamma Psi furnished the setting, and the hundreds of streamers completely changed the usual appearance of the gym. Corsages were every where; perhaps it was the weather for 'tis said that "in the spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of—flowers."

The masterpiece of the evening was Jimmy Poyner's rendition of

New Members Look Human After Goat Week

"Tiger Rag", "Washington and Lee Swing", and "Moonlight and Roses." All dancing stopped and the orchestra was the center of attraction. They quite appropriately played "Trust in Me" after the figure. Regardless of tricky arrangements or new pieces, there is one piece that will always be popular, "Stardust". It was really criminal to break on girl-dancing with their dates when "Stardust" was played. The piece seemed to bring back too many "special" memories.

Perhaps it's human nature to think that things enjoyed last are best, but to us, Spring Cotillion this year was the best ever.

THE CRADLE SONG

The Cradle Song is one of the most beautiful plays we have ever seen and its performance Friday evening is something that S. T. C. should be proud of.

To a people accustomed to interpret drama in terms of hectic action and conflict of forces and ideas, the widespread appreciation of The Cradle Song is complimentary. There is little action; the story is unimportant; yet the Sierras have caught an elusive beauty in their picture of the Dominican nuns that is rarely seen in modern drama. The play is moving in its quiet simplicity. Its appeal is to the aesthetic and emotional rather than to the intellectual.

We are no authority on drama, but we think the performance here was an excellent one—that is to be expected—and on the whole it made a deep impression upon the greater part of the audience.

We offer our sincere congratulations to Miss Wheeler and the Dramatic Club for their successful presentation of so unusual a play.

GIVE YOUR SUPPORT

Sports in a school are the basis of school spirit. Never do college students develop such enthusiasm over college life, such zest, as when they enter into the support of their teams with hearty cheers to victory. Schools with real interest in athletics are top-ranking in other activties too, because the co-operation is transferred from the game to other things.

This school is well enthused over some activities, but lits interest in sports has waned considerably. When we play bitter enemies in lively games, we come off our perches long enough to get excited, but class games and games of prowess have little interest for most of us. Maybe it's because we're too close to shows and drug stores. Whatever the trouble, our teams need our yells, our hearty encouragement—in order to "keep old S. T. C. on top." It won't hurt us to rumple finger waves, get a little hoarse and even to lose a bit of that dignity.

WE AS HOSTESSES

A speaker in this school is a guest. As such he or she is entitled to every courtesy a house guest can expect to be given. Most speakers or entertainers in this school find themselves confronted with bored adolescents who fidget, read letters, talk in loud stage whispers and fill the atmosphere with the noise of their activities.

Under such conditions, how could a visitor leave this school with a feeling of respect for us as future teachers? How can we claim to have refinement when we so obviously lack the main essentials that make ladies?

Maybe we are bored. Maybe we don't appreciate the speaker. That is beside the point. The speakers would not speak here unless they were invited especially by some student or member of the administration. Then we should be hostesses of more politeness than to reveal that we wish our guests weren't here to bore us for as long as half an hour.

SENIOR PERSONALITIES

Bonnie Lane, ex-President of this Student body.

With all the qualities of goodness, cheerfulness, gaity, and strength her name implies, Bonnie is endowed with a superior character, singular in its purity and individualism. Sincerity and unselfishness mark her word, her work, and her relations to others. Her ideals are fine and exhilarating. With these qualities, after recognition from Alpha Kappa Gamma, her capability and leadership were epitomized in her year's service as President of the Student Body, after serving on the Student Council as Class Representative and Secretary.

With versatility in intellect, as well as in leadership, Bonnie's scholastic honors are numerous. She was president of Alpha Phi Sigma, national honorary society for high scholarship, and holds memberships in Kappa Delta Pi, Beorc Eh Thorn, and Beta Pi Theta. She served the Y. W. C. A. as Chairman of the Sing Committee during her Junior year, and as ex-officio member her senior year. Bonnie belongs to the Dramatic Club, the Cotillion Club, the Mu Omega sorority, and has been in the May Court for three years.

With four years of such service as she has given here, Bonnie is prepared for maximum efficiency in any field. With her, departs "an intellect of high worth, a heart of purest gold. . . "

Literary Column

Courage enables a person to meet dangers and to face difficult situations with firmness and without fear. Courage is valor; courage is bravery. Courage is not the willingness to set oneself in the path of destruction in order to meet with the approval of many or of a few people. It is not boldness to the extent that it becomes risk. Courage, then, is the ability to stand or to endure, not for a minute only, but for an indefinite length of time, something which is hard to bear—something which is difficult to endure without flinching or stopping.

Hymn of Courage
Cora Stewart

What though my dreams break on some rock-bound shore
And leave but fragments scattered on the sands!
Shall I be grieving for them evermore,
Or shall I bind them up with eager hands,
And laugh again, and dance again
. . . and keep
As souvenirs their broken wings, nor bide
Their scars, nor be afraid. Fate yet may sweep
Them back to sea on some outgoing tide?
Why should one fear the vague,
oncoming years
If courage speak the final, dauntless word
That puts the seal of silence on our fears?
For I can tell you this: that I have heard
A wondrous melody on Hope's last string,
Seen Winter's icy grip give way to spring!

ROTUNDA REVERBERATIONS

Relax! Take a deep breath! Cotillion week-end has come and gone and with it all the usual gayety and hilarity. Even a sigh or two is in order. It's such a long time between gay moments . . . And so once more we have the static atmosphere.

Did you catch a glimpse of Mary Virginia Walker's "little Tommy?" Why he wasn't an inch over six feet four! They sure do grow 'em in small packages over on the Eastern Shore.

On to Burkeville was Bonnie Lane's cry over the week-end. Though 'tis rumored that she lost her way . . . Lawsy, Miss Bonnie, aint you found the difference between a stammer and a stutter yet? And by the way, just why didn't you bring that little table back as a souvenir?

The honors for conquering W. & L. week-ends go to Eugenia Jolly . . . Last time she came back with fever blisters . . . this time, she's sporting a Phi Kap pin.

What is this power that these Georgia men have over women! Whatever it is it must be a wow . . . Miriam Ficklen and a couple of other fair damsels arose in the middle of the night at 7 o'clock in the morning just to have breakfast with them.

Will was certainly profuse in congratulating Adolph on his recovery . . . you mustn't make a practice of it or you'll have too many young men running around trying to get their jaw bones broken or something.

Weren't there some smooth numbers floating around campus . . . rather an unusual quantity and quality. Jack Johnson's man for the moment was quite a bit on the suave side . . . If she doesn't keep an eye on him all kinds of competitions may set in.

Those eye and them mouth!! Why are pictures like "History Is Made at Night" brought to towns with girls schools in them? Charles Boyer is a very remarkable fellow.

Wonder if some kind soul couldn't be induced to scandilize just a tiny bit. Without it things like this can't be made interesting. Won't you see if you can't do something about it?

LIBARIAN COLUMN

"The Word of Love is the Word of Life.
And he that goes with that word unsaid, though he walk with the living is damned and dead." Henley

And so Walter Duranty in the April issue of Vogue writes "Words of Love" or five unoffcial dispatches on affairs—foreign and domestic. According to Duranty, to people of intelligence there are only four important things in the world, once the necessities have been satisfied. The four things are: the use of power, the gift of artistic creation, the enjoyment of simple things like birds and bees and scenery and flowers . . .; and Love.

There are five letters written in Duranty's inimical style. They are as follows: To the girl I lived first, but lost because I didn't know enough; To the girl who loved me best; To the girl I loved most dearly in all my life; To a little French girl in Marseilles; and To my wife and the mother of my children.

Durante, I gathered, feels that there is some truth in Plato's legend of the human soul, that it first was a round thing, equally male and female, and completely happy. Then the gods grew jealous of this thing they had made, and split it in half and sent the two halves to wander desolate across the world, divided by race and creed and age and colour; but sometimes, if the two halves were incredibly fortunate, they met in their earthly life, and knew each other instantly, and were lovers until they died.

Read the letters. I think you'll enjoy them.

Intimate Vision
By Josephine Bates

Shall we regret the lost and lovely spring
That woke while you and I were yet apart
And must we mourn because a bluebird's wing,
Unseen by me, was thrilling to your heart?
What radiant constellations crossed the sky
While I was witness and you lay asleep!
Such countless gifts, beloved, you and I
Have separately received and separate keep.
Yet, though the star and migrant bird were fair
And we were young—such benefit is proved
But dust to the munificense we share
Within a world awakened by our love.
We had no intimate vision of the Lord
Until we watched together, hand in hand.

From a collection of Sonnets for Spring, found in The Atlantic (April).

INTERCOLLEGIATE NEWS

The theatre was crowded and a devoted couple had been forced to accept single seats. The young lady didn't care at all for the arrangement and tried to remedy matters. It occurred to her that her neighbor might be willing to exchange seats with her fiance.

Accordingly she leaned over and whispered: "Pardon me, are you alone?"

The meek little man gave no sign of having heard, so she repeated her question a little louder. Still no answer and she tried again .

At this, the little man turned toward her, keeping his eyes upon the stage.

"Cut it out," he whispered savagely, "My whole darn family's here." (Growler).

Camel Verse

What a funny little insect a camel do be,
Him neck are long and like a tree,
He back are a saddle, him tummy a tank;
Him feet are a cushion, he mind a blank,
It do got me muddled—I cannot see why,
If him are an insect—why him can't fly? (Yellow Jacket)

Since the motion picture "Mutiny on the Bounty", the population of Tahiti has increased to 1,000 natives and 50,000 college

It is a well known fact, explained the professor, that there isn't much difference between a genius and an insane person. Both have intense powers of concentration for a certain subject. But a genius can think of other things when he tries, and an insane person can't.

Geneva, N. Y.—(ACP)—To get beihnd the complexion of war and reveal its underlying causes is the purpose of the new course, "War and Peace" which will be added to the curriculum of Hobart and William Smith Colleges next year.

The course will offer a scientific scrutiny of the cultural factors, the economic conditions and nationalistic politics which frequenlty lead to armed strife, announced Dr. William Alfred Eddy, president.

"War and Peace" will be elective to juniors in completing their four-year study of citizenship required of students at both colleges who are working for their Bachelor's degree.

How porvoking incidents cause war or may be prevented from causing war will be studied. Examples such as the assassination of Archduke Ferdinand at Sarajevo, the invasion of Manchuria and Ethiopia and foreign intervention in Spain will be considered.

The war-study will be divided into three parts, the first dealing with the 1913 pre-war period. Efforts will be made to determine the effects of isolation and alliances.

LOOKIN' 'EM OVER

Nearly 2000 wooded acres of Virginia were destroyed by fire over the week-end. The beauty of our state is based mainly on its lovely trees and foliage. Other states have destroyed their forests, but Virginians can be proud of the green line where her trees meet the blue of the sky. Scallions to any careless soul who would destroy unnecessarily even one tree of this state.

The old practice of bleeding a patient, which has been so ridiculed by modern physicians is being used again. By withdrawing some blood from a patient's veins the "relative volume of red blood cells" may be reduced to a lower level. This treatment is being used in cases of abnormal production of red blood corpuscles. Physicians believe that final proof of this chemical theory might lead to the prevention of a large number of deaths due to abnormal chemistry of the heart.

London is the scene now of gala festivities honoring George VI and Queen Mary. Notables from all over the world have arrived for the coronation. Entertainers have come to make the time more gay. Jewels will sparkle and clothes will be resplendent. A most solemn occasion confronts the greatest empire of this age. And what of that outcast who dwells in Austria? One wonders perhaps if just once in a while he does not feel sad and regretful. Is the love of a woman so great that man can easily surrender greatness? Love may not be so great. However, men and women of the future will forget the glorious coronation of George VI, but they can never forget that cultured English voice that told the world he preferred "the woman I love" to the British Empire. Love endures beyond history. One forgets the battles that have taken place, the men that have died, the conquerers that have passed through the Hellespont and remembers the river for the love of a maid and a youth—of Hero and Leander. One remembers Virgil's Aeneas not for his courage in founding a race but because he was the man Dido loved. And so it will be with Edward and the American woman he loves.

Mussolini has found an ideal Italian family in the sixteen offsprings of Ambrogio Martinolli. Il Duce boasts large families in every possible way in a country where there are few natural resources, little chance for industry, no further chances of agriculture and little money. Either Mussolini is impractical or he has his eye on more lands. Certainly, it would seem absurd to believe he'd purposely advocate an increased population in a country where development has gone as far as it can under present conditions.

Flowers and flower shows fill picture section of newspapers, coming second in popularity only to machines of war. It does seem strange that flowers—such perfect symbols of life—should come second to death-giving instruments. Man's dual nature is thus revealed. He loves what life stands for, yet he is willing to kill to further his own gains. Few realize that the biggest gain is concerned not with material things.

Baseball season confronts our country. Bleachers in the hot sun, whizzing balls, excited cheers and cold drinks! Handkerchiefs wipe wet brows, but enthusiasm does wane as the thermometer goes up. How much discomfort man will endure for a minute's excitement!

Today is the birthday of Princess Elizabeth of England. Yesterday she received a large iron box from "Uncle David" in Vienna. Today she will be given a birthday party like any normal child. And there will be a pink white-iced cake. The heir presumptive to a great throne is in great glee over her party.

Senior Life Saving Exams Will Begin

Walmsley and Yonce Instruct Seven Swimmers

Senior life-saving tests will start on Wednesday, May 5, as soon as May Day is over, Mrs. Fitzpatrick, swimming coach has announced. The entrants will be those who have been taking the life saving course since the beginning of the winter quarter.

To be qualified for the course one must be able to swim eighteen lengths of the pool and must be at least eighteen years of age. Testing will be based on the standard life saving requirements. Those meeting the necessary requirements will receive a life saving emblem for their suits.

Life saving exams are conducted once every year. In 1935 eleven girls were awarded badges, and last year eight passed the course. This year's life saving class, who will try for badges soon ,is composed of Margaret Thomas, Dot Fischer, Katherine Newman, Marjorie Nimmo, Sara Button, Jean Clarke, and Katherine Underwood.

Tennis

Have you seen the A. A. Bulletin Board? If you haven't you'd better take a peep. Sign up for the tennis doubles pronto! Now's the time to show that two heads are better than one; or should we say wrists? Anyway here's our point, sign up! And may the best win.

Volley Ball

Again red and white comes through on top. However green and white, there's time left for you to climb. Under the able supervision of Captain Pat Gibson, who by the way, will be missed now that she's gone, the freshman teams worked well. Their sister team tied them with Kathleen Bailey as Captain. Now where is green and white? The sophomores showed a fine spirit placing third. It was some hard work, ask Captain "Casey". Last but not least let us mention the keen competition given by the seniors. Volley ball has come to a close, but why should we sulk. There are other fields opening to us in the form of baseball, soccer and archery. Schedules for these are on the bulletin board. There's hidden talent in your classes. Bring them out and show what you've got.

Swimming

You S. T. C. mermaids will have to remain on dry land for the next few days. Our pool needs a bath badly and is going to get it. Don't fret, my dears, we can get into clean, cool H2O by Saturday, we hope. Now don't try any of those midnight swimming parties. We'd hate for you to dive into the tiled bottom and get a bruised and scarred skull and countenance. Well, after all, it's no fun swimming in the hole 'less there's water.

Get out these warm spring days whether it be tennis courts, athletic field or the pool. You'll feel better. Mark my word—you'll look better, too—you know, lose that dopey look.

Archers Find Spring Weather Excellent for Try at Bull's Eye

Archery practice is scheduled for Tuesday afternoons from 4 to 6. Equipment may be taken out at any other time for individual practice. Week-ends are a grand time to catch up with your shooting and, incidently, have a grand time doing it. Why not brighten up your dull Saturday and Sunday by a highly mounting week-end score? A clear field, a beautiful day, a bow with arrows, and a few friends with you. What more could be desired for a happy time? Ask Prince Smith and Sue Owen. They tried it!

And by the way, we hear that a fan brought some bows (now, don't misinterpret) back with her from over the week-end. Not a bad idea anyway you want to take it, is it? Some girls just can't seem to wait for time to improve their scores. They improve the time! Nancy Cooley seems to be getting some place. And does Ruth Phelps have a spite against that bull's eye! Ask Brownie Johnson what sport she likes best of all. And don't forget we want a team to shine and do us up right. One person can't do the trick. it's up to all of us, the whole "Robin Hood Band."

Baptist Students Sponser Speakers

Each night last week from 7:00 to 7:30 in the little auditorium the Baptist Student Union sponsored a series of talks and discussions on "Vocational Problems."

On Monday night Dr. Simkins spoke on "The Economy of Vocational Decision." He spoke of the hinderances women have to overcome in making vocational decision.

Tuesday night the topic "Full Time Christian Work as a Profession" was discussed by Dr. George Kissenger of Hampden - Sydney College. He brought out that unless there is a message in hearts from God to deliver to the world there is no place for people in Christian work as a profession.

Mr. O'Ferrall Thompson, a lawyer in Farmville, talked on Wednesday about "Hindrances to Vocational Choice." He said that some of the greatest hindrances were procastination and laziness.

"A Study of Fields" was discussed by Dr. Walmsley on Thursday. His central thought was to find out what is enjoyable, start preparing and seeking that vocation, for pure contentment makes for success.

The last study was on Friday night. Miss Camper talked about "The Choice of a Life Work". The last thought she left was the picture of Christ in the temple saying, "I must be about my Father's business." From this she pointed out the many kinds of work Christ did, and how each one was a part of His Father's business.

ognized not only as a great preacher but also as a civic leader.

In 1926 Dr. Lacy was called to the presidency of Union Theological Seminary in Richmond. He is a member of the Hermitage Club, Phi Beta Kappa, Kappa Alpha, a staunch Democrat and a trustee of Hampden-Sydney College.

Dr. Lacy is well known in Farmville. He preached the pre-Easter services in 1936. During the last few months he conducted services at Agnes Scott College. He is in charge of the vesper services at the Young People's Conference at Massanetta this summer. He will teach a class there. His popularity is equal between young and old.

Classes and Varsity Begin Tennis Meets

Netmen Sign to Play In Future Matches

No definite arrangements as to meets or tournaments have yet been made, but tennis practice is starting in real earnest. Beginners in tennis will practice in the gym from four to six o'clock on Tuesday and Friday.

All not on varsity tennis and who wish may participate in inter class matches. The dates for these matches will be announced later when the courts are fixed and more practice has been put in.

The following girls have signed to play in the doubles matches: Warren Land and Lucy Blackwell, Jenny Carrol and Elsie Cabell, Kitty Brooks and May Terrell, Ellen Conyers and Louise Walmsley, Army and Betty Butterworth, Ruth Dunnington and Dot Wright, Doris Eason and Margaret Russell, Casey Coleman and Ruth Sears.

Varsity tennis team consists of Army Butterworth, Betty Butterworth, Jenny Carroll Ruth Dunnington, Mary E. Badger, Ruth Sears Elsie Cabell, Lucy Blackwell, and Agnes Sale.

Virginia W. Smith Heads Gamma Psi

Virginia Whitehead Smith of Princess Anne was reelected president of Gamma Psi at it's meeting last Tuesday. Besides being vice-president of the next Junior class, Virginia is also treasurer of the Dramatic Club. She is a member of the Gamma Theta Sorority.

Louise Painter will serve as vice-president of Gamma Psi with Charlotte Minton as secretary and Mildred Gentry the treasurer.

Miss Annie Sutton Speaks to Local Club

Miss Annie H. Sutton, supervisor of the kindergarden and first grade of the Richmond schools, spoke at a meeting of the Farmcookie house, nesday, April 14.

Miss Sutton spoke on the "Adjustment of the Child to School". She discussed the child from the point of view of a psychologist. Miss Sutton emphasized the fact that teachers must equip the child for school and social life. This can be accomplished successfully by recognizing each child as an individual and meeting the demands of healthy living—mental and physical. She stressed the importance of children feeling happy, safe, secure and independent. A good teacher must be a lover of children as well as the parents.

Miss Sutton closed her talk by pointing out the great responsibility of teachers when she said, "what the teacher is reflects in the child."

Returned Alumnae Add to Sparkle and Gaiety of Cotillion

Greetings Exchanged to Rhythm of Swing

Adding to the gaiety and enjoyment of the Cotillion club dances were the meetings and greetings of alumnae who returned to dance once more at S. T. C. With new clothes, new beaus and some with their names changed the old girls returned. Among those seen were Leila Sanford, Florence Sanford, Martha Nottingham, Elise Turner, Julia Derr, Tib Simmerman, Mary Shelton Whitehead, Wic Scott, Lilly Farrar, Retta Hardy Blackwell, Amis Montgomery, Agnes Crockett, Grace Eubank, Mary Lynn Thomas, Frances Dickinson, Helen Fern Perdue, Ann Peple, Marion Hansborough, Leslie Bradshaw, Mildred Chandler, Ruth Showalter, Nancy Burgwyn, Henrietta Salsbury, Dot Justice, Mary Emily Dunhom, Jane Main and Dorothy Deans.

Charm Chides

A Matter of Taste

College students today present as good an appearance as any group of people in the world. But taste does not stop with choosing the right clothes, the right make-up, or the right coiffure. Too much emphasis, perhaps, has been put upon physical appearance to the comparative neglect of other things. We admit that personal appearance is important, but so are actions.

Hanging over the Rotunda to stare at dates is not good taste, no matter how well dressed or undressed you may be. A gentle murmur, punctuated by an occasional titter, as an accompaniment to a speaker or performer in the auditorium is out of place even if every hair is in its appointed position. The most beautifully polished finger nails do not make grabbing food at the table a lovely gesture; nor does stamping out cigarettes on the floor improve the floor whether it is done with the latest thing in crepe-soled oxfords or the daintiest evening sandals.

Gum chewing, we suppose, has come to stay, but we are thankful that the facial acrobatics involved in the process that once were the vogue seem to be passing. There is still room for improvement, however; some of the exhibitions we have seen remind us of that ancient doggerel:

A gum chewing girl and a cud chewing cow—
What is the difference? Oh, I see it now;
It's the thoughtful look on the face of the cow.

Miss Stubbs Invites Class to Longwood

Miss Florence Stubbs with the assistance of Miss Mary Clay Hiner, entertained sixty members of her Methodist Sunday School class at a Longwood picnic, Wednesday, April the fourteenth. Leaving the Rotunda at four-thirty, the girls proceeded to the open fire where Italian spaghetti, hot rolls, lemonade, fruit, and doughnuts awaited them.

Among the guests invited were Rev. and Mrs. Bryant, Dr. Jarman, Mr. and Mrs. Graham, and Miss Winnie V. Hiner.

the cup for the best performance last year. On Saturday the larger schools will compete, the cup now being held by College High. Schools and their plays on Friday are: Clarksville, "Who's A Coward"; Amelia, "Which is the Way to Boston"; Appomattox, "Safety Pins First"; Curdsville, "The Telegram"; Rice, "The Trysting Place." On Saturday they are: Orange, "The Purple Door Knob"; South Boston, "Queen Anne's Lace"; Lawrenceville, "He Said And She Said"; Blackstone, "A Silver Lining"; Crewe, "Echo".

Acting as judges during the whole tournament of these one-act plays are: Mrs. Walker DeCourcy, Director of Dramatics at John Marshall High School of Richmond; Dr. Walter Herman Bell, Director of Dramatics and Public Speaking at Hampden-Sydney College; and Mr. Richard Hadley, Director of Speech and Dramatics at Randolph-Macon Woman's College of Lynchburg.

Bonnie Lane Visits Southern Meeting

Bonnie Lane, outgoing Student Government President, has returned to school after having attended the National Student Federation of America at an informal conference of the Southern Federation of College Students and Press Representatives held at Tulane University, New Orleans, Louisiana from April 6 to April 11.

Mr. Walter Lippman, internationally known news commentator, the dean of Tulane University, and the Editor of "The Picayune", the foremost paper of the South were the principal speakers. These men spoke on the problems of youth and college students of today. The phases of life that were discussed were financial and social problems, campus activities, systems of student government and problems that concern newspapers and other publications.

Bonnie led the discussion on "Expulsion and Freshmen Orientation of the College Today." She was invited by the chairman of the federation to lead this study.

Sigma Pi Rho Holds Annual Convention

Meetings End With Formal Banquet at Longwood

Sigma Pi Rho, Latin honor fraternity, held its fourth annual convention at Farmville from Friday through Saturday night of the past week.

The various colleges were represented by delegates of which five were from Fairmont State Teachers College, Fairmont, W. Va., and their advisor, Miss Cook; two from Ball State Teachers College, Muncie, Indiana, their adviser and Dr. and Mrs. Menk, and the active members from Farmville, in addition to nine alumnae members of Sigma Pi Rho, including two founders of the society.

The members attended the play Friday night, held two meetings on Saturday and concluded their list of activities with a banquet at Longwood Saturday evening.

On Saturday, two S. T. C. girls, Katherine Milby, and Carmen Clark, were elected National Vice-president and National Secretary, respectively, of Sigma Pi Rho.

Six Girls Receive Bids to Fraternity

Dudley Allen Receives Diamond Forensic Key

The Virginia chapter of Pi Kappa Delta issued invitations last Friday to the following girls: Anthelia Robinette, Nora Jones, Ruth Sears Florence Bress, Pattie Alston and Rose Somers.

Membership in Pi Kappa Delta is only offered to those who have participated in college forensics. Invitation to membership may be through debating or oratory.

The highest rank obtainable is that designated by a diamond Pi Kappa Delta key. Dudley Allen, the president of the Farmville Pi Kappa Delta chapter, has recently received her key.

S.T.C. Began With Forty-five Students and Three Teachers

The school that is now known as Farmville S. T. C. was opened in October, 1884. Farmville was very fortunate in having this State school located here, for both Lynchburg and Norfolk wanted it. Farmville had an advantage in that a school was already in operation on the site of the present College. Miss Carter of Mecklenburg County had been operating that school for two years. In 1884 the State took the school over, and it was organized with forty-five pupils. Dr. Ruffner was its principal; Miss Bush, vice-principal; and besides these two there were three other teachers.

Oh! look at this picture of the school as it was then. Isn't it small—just one building and a few outbuildings. Let's read what the book says about it.

"To the building that is now known as Main, Dr. Cunningham, who succeded Dr. Ruffner, added the left wing or Richmond building. It was heated by a hot blast furnace, but in the main building the rooms were heated by grates and stoves, and boxes of kindling were kept in the halls. The girls made their own fires. They filled their pitchers from immense barrels kept in the halls.

Dr. Cunningham had four rooms taken out of the first floor Main, thus creating the Rotunda.

The Assembly Hall, as it was then called, was situated where the Junior and Senior parlors are now. The gym was located where the present Biology Department is. There was only one room for the Infirmary which was then in the main building. Two colored women nursed the girls and were paid by them. One time there were forty cases of measles at once, and the whole of "Tacky Alley" was turned into an infirmary.

The dining room used to be in a wooden building which was separated from the main building. Then a new one was built, and dormitories were located above it. These were known as second and third floors "Dining-room". The first kitchen was outdoors with a pantry above it. The food was let down in a dumb waiter. Then, the kitchen was moved to the cellar.

The walks leading into the school were brick, while the street and the sidewalk in front were dirt. A paling fence extended from "Library Hall" to "White House."

Two homes were located on the site of the present "Student Building". One was the home of Dr. Thaxton, who aided in the founding of the College. Dr. Jarman, later, lived in this house for several years. A Captain Richardson lived in a house standing where "White House" is now, and the Fleming home was on the site of "Library Hall."

We close the book and pick up another one—one whose pages are fresh and new, "Farmville S. T. C. Today". We are writing that book each day; the ink from the pens of our experiences and activities is still wet on the pages of Time.

Mrs. Julia Davis Reads Selections

Invited Guests Hear Widely Known Poet

Mrs. Julia Johnson Davis, a member of the class of 1908, entertained the members of Beorc Eh Thorn and their invited guests by reading selections from her poems on last Thursday evening. Through the English honor society the opportunity of seeing and hearing this nationally known poet was offered to the faculty and a number of students.

"Although I have read my poetry in a number of towns and cities recently, nothing gives me more pleasure than being here," stated Mrs. Davis. An alumna outstanding in literary work, she expressed satisfaction at the efforts of the college to publish the Farmville Quarterly. "Every school should have some medium through which the students may express themselves in a creative way." Mrs. Davis edited the college magazine, "The Guidon", during her years here, and was instrumental in establishing the "Lyric", a poetry review, in Norfolk.

Her ballads "Dark Ellen" and the "Garnet Ring" were especially pleasing to her audience. "The Garnet Ring" has been broadcasted many times from the larger cities, and is perhaps her most popular ballad. Mrs. Davis' poem about her son, whose growth through the years she traced in verse, and her dialect poems were also enthusiastically received.

Tri Sigmas Enjoy Usual Celebration

The Alpha Chapter of Sigma Sigma Sigma held its annual Founders' Day banquet at Longwood Tuesday, April 20 at six o'clock.

Among those who attended the banquet were Dr. Jarman, Miss Mary W. Cox, and Miss Mix. The alumnae present were Mrs. Walter Putney and Mrs. Lancaster, both of Farmville.

The color scheme of violet and white was effectively carried out.

Pi Kappa Sigma Has Alumnae Breakfast

Members of Pi Kappa Sigma entertained their alumnae with a breakfast Sunday morning from 9 to 10:30 in the chapter room.

The alumnae present were Misses Mary Alice Wood, Grace Eubank, Marion Shanfric, Agnes Crockett and Leslie Bradshaw.

The guest were Misses Gene Cox, Mable Grubbs, Elizabeth Young and aJnet Smith.

Black Boys Take Bags to Station As Damsels Leave

Week-end Trips Are Irresistable to Many

Will it never stop? Little black boy—"Bag, mistess? Bag, mistess?" flocking around the door, cars swarming up and down the street as so many bees; Girls, girls everywhere. Hats with flowers, dresses with flowers, bags with stickers and feet with happy, light tread—but of coruse—thery're off for the week-end and here's where they went:

Invitations to Washington and Lee Easter dances were too tempting to resist and so even though there were dances at S. T. C. some girls left to swing it to the rippling rythm of Shep Fields. They were Frances Hudgins, Chic Dortch, Minnie Smith, Virginia Woodward, Susan Lane and Sarah Hayes.

Mable Burton attended a house party on the Rappahannock river last week-end.

Mary Hubard visited Miss Flora Whittle in Martinsville.

Virginia Read Turner had as her guest for the week-end Nan Throckmorton.

The following girls visited or returned home:

Alpha Kappa Gamma Honors Six Leaders

Dudley Allen of Hebron; Norvell Montague, of Fredericksburg; Elziabeth Roberts, of Norton; and Nan Seward, of Petersburg, were tapped into membership in Alpha Kappa Gamma, national fraternity for leadership, in chapel Wednesday.

Miss Mary Finch, missionary to China who is teaching here at present, was announced as an honorary member of the group and Miss Minnie V. Rice as active faculty adviser.

Dr. Jarman read the twelfth chapter of Romans; after which Elizabeth Shipplett, president of the circle, spoke on the characteristics of a leader as embodied in the local patron saint, Joan of Arc. She closed with the words, "Such leaders have been found among you," and the tapping ceremony took place. When the honored girls were on the stage, Elizabeth announced the honorary members.

Dudley Allen is the newly-installed president of the House Council. She has been active as a debater, is former president of Pi Kappa Delta and a member of the Debate club. She is eligible to wear the diamond pin of Pi Kappa Delta. She is on the Rotunda staff and belongs to Kappa Delta Pi.

Miss Barlow Attends Physical Ed. Meetings

Miss Mary Barlow of the Physical Education Department attended the National Physical Education Association which met in New York City from Monday of last week through Saturday.

From Monday until Wednesday afternoon, Miss Barlow attended pre-convention meetings concerned with the modern dance and other topics of interest to physical education directors in Women's Colleges.

On Wednesday, the actual convention opened with various types of subjects being discussed. Many discussions centered around government projects now being developed for the teaching of wise use of leisure time. All types of recreations were handled.

The largest attendance ever assembled at the association was present. Discussions were brought to a close Saturday evening.

Columbia Prof. Will Give Lecture

Dr. Alexander Speaks to Faculty on Education

Dr. Thomas Alexander, professor of Education at Teachers College of Columbia University spoke to the faculty this afternoon at four o'clock. Tonight he will speak to the members of Kappa Delta Pi, their invited guests, and the student body at 7:30.

Dr. Alexander has devoted most of his life to education. He has studied and taught both in the United States and abroad. His knowledge of educational trends in various foreign countries in which he has lived and worked, as well as in our own country gives him a deeper incite into the needs and mistakes in our present system of education.

His work for over twenty years has been largely in teacher training institutions. After quite a few years work at George Peabody College for Teachers, he went to Columbia to work in the International Institution of Teachers Colleges. He has been there since 1924 and is now connected with New College at Columbia.

Dr. Alexander is also an author, having written several books on Education in Prussia, France, Germany and in the United States. His texts are in different fields showing he is well acquainted with all the many studies. His papers are very numerous.

New College at Columbia is an experiment that is being worked out by Dr. Alexander and several other professors. In a recent pa-

Crewe and Amelia Win in Contests

Margaret Pollard Is Dramatic Coach of Crewe

Crewe and Amelia took first places in the Southside Virginia Dramatic Tournament, sponsored by the S. T. C. Dramatic Club, which was held in the auditorium on Thursday and Friday nights April 23 and 24.

Five high schools participated each night each presenting a one-act play. They were Clarksville, Amelia, Appomattox, Curdsville, Rice, Orange, South Boston, Lawrenceville, Blackstone, and Crewe.

On Friday night, the smaller schools took part. The prize, a silver cup, was won by Amelia on its production "Which is the Way to Boston?" "Safety Pins First," presented by Appomattox received honorable mention.

On Saturday night Crewe won first place with "Echo" and Blackstone came in second with "A Silver Lining". Margaret Pollard, former president of the S. T. C. Dramatic Club, coached the Crewe play.

The judges were Mrs. Walker G. DeCourcy, director of dramatics at John Marshall High School in Richmond; Mr. Richard Hadley director of dramatics at Randolph-Macon Woman's College in Lynchburg; and Dr. Herman Bell, director of dramatics at Hampden-Sydney. Mrs. DeCourcy presented the cup Saturday night and Mr. Hadley Friday night.

Each night, while waiting for the judges to make their decision, Miss Wheeler, director of dramatics at S. T. C. welcomed the play casts and audiences on behalf of the Dramatic Club, and invited them back next year. She explained that this contest was very helpful to all concerned, as it gives the future teachers hints as to the type of play a high school can give successfully and sets a higher standard for drama in the high schools of Southside Virginia.

The Dramatic Club sponsored the contest and furnished the make-up and staging. The casts were entertained at dinner in the dining hall by the college and the Dramatic Club.

Dr. Jarman Attends Ash Lawn Dedication

Dr. Jarman will attend memorial rites on April 28 at Ashlawn, home of the former President of the United States, James Monroe. Governor Peery and Mr. and Mrs. Jay Winston Johns, the latter being the present owner of the historic old home, will be the hosts on this occasion of the presentation by the governor of Pennsylvania of a memorial to James Monroe on the one hundred and seventy-ninth anniversary of his birth.

Ashlawn estate is only one mile from Monticello, home of Thomas Jefferson, and has been restored by Mr. and Mrs. Jay Winston Johns.

Granddaughters Club Elects Burke and Eason as Heads

Elizabeth Burke was elected president of the Grand-daughters Club at their last meeting. Marie Eason was elected vice-president; Nan Throckmorton, secretary; Judith Gathright, treasurer and Elizabeth R. Wilkinson, reporter.

Elizabeth Burke belongs to the Sophomore class and is serving her first year on the Student Council. She is a member of the House Council, the Rotunda Staff, the Cotillion Club, and Pi Kappa Sigma Sorority.

Miss Mary Clay Hiner, advisor, was re-elected. She has served for two years.

Dance Group Goes To Graham Recital

Girls From S. T. C. Attend Program at R. M. W. C.

Martha Graham and her Dance Group put on a recital Monday night, April 26, in the auditorium at Randolph-Woman's College in Lynchburg. Members of Orchesis, the Dance Club, several members of Mrs. Fitzpatrick's dance class, and several members of the faculty were present. The Dance Clubs from Hollins and Sweet Briar also attended.

Martha Graham, considered one of the three foremost artists of the Modern dance today, has been studying for many years. Since 1919 she has been dancing on the

Seafood Is Order of the Day As Zoology Class Turns Chef

When Biology lab becomes a kitchen and tea room, then it's time to investigate and see what is happening. Maybe we could get our seafood there if we put in an order soon enough. It seems that the girls in zoology classes get so very much interested in their work that they can't bear to leave but must stay and cook their specimens. That's what happened to certain blue crabs that were to be used in lab several weeks ago.

Botany has its followers, too. They tramp miles and miles through heaven knows what and appear quite pleased and excited when they return covered with mud and briar-scratched but triumphantly holding aloft an ordinary-looking pale blue flower. This wonderful object turns out to be, when you ask, the one flower missing from an important collection of violets.

Remember the bell-shaped flowers seen in pastures and fields, when you roamed the woods in your younger days? "Cowslip" is their name—or, so the Botany class says if they have to classify any more plants they will get the habit and try to classify their best friends. What chance do you have?

Black widow spiders, ants, painted turtles(rainbow colors) and lizards have been brought in by brave collectors until the door labels have to be consulted to find out whether you are in the "zoo" or the right classroom.

Perhaps some of this interest has been encouraged by the new equipment in the lab rooms. Three of them have been painted and have new tables. There is a surprising amount of interesting information to be found in these rooms, and it is available to anyone interested. So let's have oyster stew a la zoology lab!

Music Floats Up From Gym As May Day Practices Occur

In the beautiful amphi-theatre at Longwood where fairies have danced and courts have gathered for many years at those fetes, Minnie Smith, a member of the graduating class, will be crowned by Hans of the fairy book stories as Queen of the May.

The theme of May Day this year is Hansel and Gretel. The little couple stray into the woods. They are lulled to sleep by the lullabye dances. While they sleep, a black witch enters. She tries to persuade the children to come away with her. The dance of the Shadows frightens the children, but they do a dance of Courage and the old witch dies. The gingerbread men carry the dead witch away. The Court enters and so unlike most dignified courts, this one dances happily. They are followed by two peppermint sticks pulling the Queen on a beautiful candy float. The Gingerbread men carry the crown to Hansel who places it upon the lady's head, she is Queen —yes, Queen of the May. The entire group bows to her, recognizing her as a queen of beauty. Fairies proclaim her queen and then they leave—May Day is over.

The people who come back to Farmville for May Day make the occasion as great as Founder's Day. You will see groups gathered everywhere that day, talking, chattering and laughing. May Days are held as a tribute to the beauty of nature. The most beautiful of young women are chosen to reign over nature and all its loveliness as a token of appreciation of her beauty. They are held because all the world wants to dance and sing, to taste and drink of all the loveliness of spring.

Hours of labor and toil will be jutified as the sun sets happily on swaying bodies and smiles.

SUPREME COURT

How could President Roosevelt be ambitious in his desire to change the supreme court's number? How can he be "stuffing" it when he has the mass of people so completely back of him that he could possibly get on without it? Must we distrust our executive so soon after re-electing him so heartily?

Maybe the Supreme Court does need a little "stuffing". After all it seems absurd that a progressive nation should allow nine old men declare unconstitutional a law passed by representatives from every section of our country. That was never intended when the constitution was framed so why should we who have progressed two centuries sanction such conservatism?

ON THIS MOTHER'S DAY

How inadequate it is to attempt to add bouquets to those cast at mothers' feet by real artists the world over. They have paid worthy tributes of deeds, of poems, of songs, of pictures. We can only add words that would be dull and meaningless except to understanding mothers. We can only pause on her day and think of her and love her.

SPRING ATTITUDES

With the coming of warm weather we begin to get slack about regarding rules. If a rule is not a good rule, let's get together and change it, but as long as the rule is on the books, it should be regarded as such. We should respect the administration and council we chose enough to make their jobs easy and to make spring on our campus a happy time for everybody concerned instead of a few who choose to be poor sports.

Sooner or later, the bum sport gets in trouble. Is a minute's pleasure worth the price that will be paid for being caught?

SENIOR PERSONALITIES

Martha Hamlet, retired president of the House Council.

Martha has such a sincerity of purpose, strength of systematic thinking, and a symphony of good nature that she draws all people to her. Steadfastness, dependability, and vitality permeate her life. As President of the House Council, she maintained that high standard of thoroughness in work that her service on the Student Council as treasurer and on the House Council as hall president deserved. Thoroughly complete in a well-rounded personality she followed many fields of endeavor, receiving recognition in Kappa Delta Pi, Alpha Phi Sigma, and Beorc Eh Thorn. Martha also served as Chairman of the Costuming Department of the Dramatic Club her Junior year. She belongs to the Cotillion Club, the Mu Omega sorority, and is in the May Court this year.

Fulfilling her responsibilities with a steady zeal, Martha has always been the standard bearer of complete efficiency. She will give to the world a quality that will raise the standards of men. She faces the future with a fine appreciation of the worthwhile.

Excerpts from "Friendship"

'A friend is a person with whom I may be sincere. Before him I may think aloud."

"I must feel pride in my friend's accomplishments as if they were mine, and a property in his virtues."

"I do not wish to treat friendships daintily, but with roughest courage. When they are real, they are not glass threads or frostwork, but the solidest thing we know."

"The other element of friendship is tenderness."

"The only reward of virtue is virtue; the only way to have a friend is to be one."

"I do then with my friends as I do with my books.I would love them where I can find them, but I seldom use them."

Friendship
Ralph E. Emerson

A ruddy drop of manly blood
The surging sea outweighs,
The world uncertain comes and goes;
The lover rooted stays.
I fancied he was fled,—
And, after many a year,
Glowed unexhausted friendliness
Like daily sunrise there.
My careful heart was free again,
A friend, my bosom said.
Through thee alone, the sky is arched,
Through thee, the rose is red;
All things through thee take nobler form.
And look beyond the earth.
The mill-round of our fate appears
A sun-path in thy worth.
Me, too, thy nobleness has taught
To master my despair;
The fountains of my hidden life
Are through thy friendship fair.

ROTUNDA REVERBERATIONS

Queens! Blonde queens! Brunette queens! Blase' and decidedly bored queens! All of them reigning over S. T. C. campus . . . attractive as our campus may be, taken in too large doses it tends to lose some of its allure . . . such is the opinion of those unfortunate maiden who have graced it wit htheir prescnce for the last week or so. Of course it shouldn't prove so boring for those who have the constant attendance of such charming Beau Brummel's as Pedigo and Kinks Thompson, or should it?

Lib Harris chose to pass her stay in campus by indulging in that figure reducing game of tennis. One day, however, as she gaily tripped about the court in shorts the approach of a certain young man, Morton by name, caused her to scurry for shelter. Could it have been modesty that neccssitated such a hurried flight?

A close observer might have seen Lula Windham and Nan Armistead doing a mean piece of running the other night . . . a second look would have revealed Mr. Reed in close pursuit. What material we have for a track team!

This weeks orchid for magnetism goes to Virginia Tillman. Even the Boston Belles apparently are not match for her! At least Jim Elder seems to be of that mind . . . Can't you tell us, Tillman, just how you go about getting them to take a week off from Harvard?

Poor Margaret Hannah can't overcome her dislike for a certain young Lynchburg lassie. In the opinion of said young thing she couldn't be expected to . . . for, said she, can we be expected to forgive those who take our loves away from us?

And then there was the gentleman who asked one of our fair young ladies if her progress on her Hampden-Sydney major were satisfactory. When she replied that she had practically secured her M. A., he hastily corrected her . . . "Your MR you mean"!!

According to Mrs. Fitz the May Court in general lack fairy like grace . . . as buxom country lassies blithely swinging milk pails they would take all the honors. . . but when it comes to dainty flitting . . . no, no, a thousand times no nothing!

Glimpses here and there: Martha Glenn Davis, Sarah Buchanan and others off to attend Virginia Leonard's wedding. Lucky girl . . . Nan Throckmorton and June Irby in deep conversation . . . Susan Lane sporting a Phi Kap pin again . . . Mary Joyner Cox receiving an anonymous letter with a picture of "Soap" therein . . . Jane Baldwin chewing gum as vigorously as usual . . . girls hurrying to the roof to enjoy a sun bath . . . Jane Burke affecting a new coiffure . . . envious glances at girls down for the Kappa Sig party.

Typical slip on file in the Home Office: Vera Ebel, Margaret Britton, Army Butterworth, Mary Sullenberger, and Prince Smith . . . Out with mother.

Really don't you think that Margaret Bailey should begin charging for writing love letters for other people and answers to letters that you yourself think are unanswerable? She'd make quite a salary if she would make a sign and put it out in front of Venable Hall.

I didn't see you and "Four Million" eating lunch in Shannon's Monday, Ruth. What's the matter, have you robbed him so soon?

Merwyn, I haven't seen your name gracing the Rounder's Column in the Tiger for quite awhile. What ever is the Matter? You haven't lost your grip, have you?

V. P. I. called quite a few of our girls this week-end. I do wonder if Gay Stieffen had a grand time? Maybe some of you that saw the Follies could tell me if the little boy on the bicycle that some call Tommy could have been the reason. I guess he was.

Abruptly changing the subject, I wonder how that wild-fire tennis team of Brooks and Terrell is getting along in their practices? Give them time and they will surely win the tournament.

LIBARIAN COLUMN

Rats, Lice, and History

Rats, Lice and History approaches the subject of typhus fever, the theme of the book with a regard for the influence of epidemics upon social evolution. Dr. Zinsser estimates that more military campaigns have been decided by plague than by Hannibal, Napoleon, Caesar, and the other great generals. Civilization has been seriously retarded by the havoc which disease has wrought. "If ancient Rome had known as much about sanitation as we do, there would probably have existed a civilization closely akin to our own a thousand years ago."

After an interesting discussion of art, science, and religion, the lowly louse is introduced in Chapter IX. It is Dr. Zinsser's claim that the bourgeoise parasite has fallen from a high estate to his present ignoble position. He points out that lousiness was universal in the middle ages, and the problem of scratching a serious one in even the best social circles. There is a quotation from Rebaux who relates an incident concerning a young princess who received this instruction during her daily lesson on etiquette. "It is not proper to scratch when doing so by habit and not because of necessity."

A comparison is drawn between the rat and man. The reader is reminded that both are omniverous and both fight their own kind, although there is no record of a Nazi rat having contended with a Jewish rat. However, in the years to come, who can tell? The rat began its existence in prehistoric times and continues to the present day—a dread carrier of disease and death.

After much wandering in the field of poetry, war, etc., Dr. Zinsser comes, in Chapter XII, to the hero of the story—typhus fever. Typhus is transmitted from the rat to a louse or a flea, by which man is infected. If the individual contracting the disease has lice on his body the germ is also carried to other persons. Thus the disease has become the terrible, inevitable companion of wars, floods and poverty.

Rats, Lice, and History is scientific, yet an appealing account of disease. The style in which the book is written is salty, humorous and invigorating. The discourse is marked by that same degree of wit which is characteristic of Dr. Zinsser's lectures.

Rats, Lice, and History, by Hans Zinsser, Published by Little, Brown and Company. Price $2.75.

When they saw two skunks strolling through the living room, members of Sigma Chi fraternity at Colgate University sprinted for open spaces.

Daring men who inched their way back into the room got a surprise when they saw Richard Dallison a brother, stroking the pole cats. Dallison laughed at their wariness and announced that Jimmy and Mitzi were skunks that just couldn't be offensive because of surgical operations that had fitted them for society.

LOOKIN' 'EM OVER

By Mary Mahone

A humorous episode occurred in the British House of Commons last week. A spirits bill for Scotland was before the House. When an expert on Scottish peculiarities was called up, he revealed that by mixing milk with Eau de Cologne, a potent drink can be made for next to nothing. The expert added that the drink was a common one in Scotland and that four gallons would be enough for a whole football crowd. It is strange to think that the citizens of a country as famous for it's whiskey as Scotland should drink such an unusual beverage. Maybe this is just another example of Scotch thrift and inventiveness. It is interesting to notice that a check on all sales of Eau de Cologne, in Scotland, has been recommended by a Scottish member of the House of Commons.

The famous blind and deaf Helen Keller is making a lecture tour of Japan. When she arived in Yokahama she was received with great enthusiasm by the Japanese. The newspapers referred to her as the "American Miracle Woman (which she certainly is). In return she remarked that their wonderful greeting had pleased her and that she would feel strengthened by it forever. In spite of the good feeling on both sides, a Japanese pickpocket did not hesitate to steal Miss Keller's purse containing sixty dollars. The next day an anonymous Japanese vindicated his country's honor by leaving sixty dollars at Miss Keller's hotel. Miss Keller gave the money to Japan's blind relief fund. The oriental idea of honor is amazing. It is even possible that the money was returned by the pickpocket. How many Americans would be willing to replace the money stolen from a foreign viistor? If one of our countrymen did such a thing, he would be branded eccentric.

There is an old joke about the farmer who went to New York and bought the Brooklyn Bridge, but the farmer has turned the tables. In Iandalia, Illinois, the steel bridge over the Kashaskia River disappeared. It was found, dismantled, in a junk yard; where it had been carted by a junk man, who claimed to have bought it from a farmer who lived near the bridge.

There are a group of Hindus in India who call themselves Yogins and who practice a strange religion called Yoga. Their belief is that they can reach the highest peak of spiritual and mental development only by mortifying the body and having it completely under control. They have a number of strange exercises. One of the first things a young Yogir learns is to stand on his head for at least half an hour. When he has mastered this he learns to stand on his head with his legs folded tailor fashion. This causes all the blood to rush to the brain and is supposed to stimulate clear thinking and to aid concentration. It may be all right for the Hindus, but it would seem strange to see a room full of girls, standing on their heads, taking an examination.

Shirley Temple, Hollywood's biggest box office attraction, is now eight years old. In spite of all reports to the contrary Miss Temple is not a midget. She is one of the really famous Hollywood stars who has never been married or divorced and whose name seldom appears linked with that of male stars in the movie gossip columns.

A bridge foursome in Batavia, New York, all received perfect hands in one deal. They called in a lawyer who took affidavits that the hands were fairly and legally dealt. Any person who got the bid would have made a grand slam. The lucky foursome did a wise thing in calling in a lawyer to prove that the cards were not stacked, but few people would have that much foresight. Most people take one look at a hand like that and pass quietly away.

A Cappella Choir Is Invited to Sing

Plans to Visit Points of Interest Are Made

The A Cappella Choir of this school has been invited by the minister of the Broadway Tabernacle, New York City, to sing for the morning services at his church one Sunday morning during May. This invitation was secured by the influence of Miss Alma Milstead, who sings regularly at this church.

If plans go through the choir is planning to attend an opera, and to visit Radio City and other points of interest. The choir has not yet decided upon a definite date. The members of the A Cappella are Helen Hoyer, Helen Glass, Macon Raine, Ruth Curtis Robeson, Frances Bryant, Eloise Whitley, Grace Waring, Eugenia Reeves, Frances Steed, Elizabeth LeGrande, Bruce Crowell, Martha Etter and Miss Irene Leake.

Charm Chides

Always remember who your ancestors were. They may have been shady and again they may not, but that is not a reason for burning yourself to the proverbial crisp. There's your reputation to think of. Those of us who were here last year know only too well that some of our students spent the best part of their waking hours either at the "Beach Club" over the dining hall or in agony of aftermath.

A little sun-tan is a good thing for those whose complexions are suited to it, but enough of a good thing is enough. Beauty specialists say that an over dose of the famous ultra-violet ray spells ruination for the skin. They also say that if we continue this sun-tanning in future generations, there will be no "skin you love to touch", but instead, a most unpleasant pigment closely resembling the rougher types of leather. Now, can you willfully bring this horrible degradation on your little great granddaughter? Think of the harsh feelings she would have toward you!

If you must get such black sunburns, do sacrifice yourself for your public and try not to get so much on your face. Not only is that unattractive, but dangerous to your health. We have already had an excellent example of this this year. We realize that it may be embarrassing to be the only paleface at a party, but there's always the possibility of originality, if you have the courage to carry out the old adage that "Variety is the spice of life." So, with a clear conscience, you may curb your desire for having the darkest sunburn on the campus.

With the arrival of warm weather, the students, (and teachers) found it much more pleasant to work out-of-doors, and with a convenient park, located only one block from the school, it's not unusual to find a class of T. J. art students hard at work, almost any afternoon now in Sauer's Garden Park.

SPORT SLANTS

"Strike three, you're out! Slide! Come on, make home plate!" Follow those calls and come on out for baseball girls, because this sport is now in full swing. All you "lefties" come on and show us what a wicked "south paw" you have. Maybe you can lose a few pounds running bases, and if you can't run them off, you can surely slide them off. When spring gets in your bones, use some of that energy by playing baseball.

Maybe you'll notice a few bruised shins and sprained toes around school now. Well soccer has started. For all you girls who've wanted to be boys or who have been "tomboys" this is the game. It certainly has a kick to it, and is everything that its name implies. Maybe your hidden talent will be found in this game.

If you want to loosen up every muscle in your body, or maybe I should say knot up every muscle tennis will give you a fine work out from your head to your toes. The courts are being fixed now and we shall see some rare form behind those balls. This is also a good way to get some of that golden sun tan if you've dreamed about it since last summer. Don't forget to sign up for doubles on the bulletin board.

The pool is clean once more and all you mermaids can take your daily dip. The senior life saving test will be given before long, so you had better practice now. Pass your test, and when that cry of "help" comes, be the beautiful dashing heroine.

Have you noticed the bruised arms around here? S. T. C. girls are going to give Dan Cupid some close competition. Those arrows are flying every day, all during the day. In your vacant periods go out and learn how to "hit the spot". Practice is one way of doing it. With a choice of four sports certainly you can find one to suit your craving.

Dr. Jarman Attends Education Meeting

Dr. Jarman, accompanied by Mr. Graham, motored to the Fredericksburg State Teachers College to attend the State Board of Education meeting on Wednesday and Thursday, April 21 and 22.

Preceding the business session on Thursday was the annual reception held Wednesday evening.

Dr. Jarman, Miss Royall, Miss Jennings, and Mrs. Watkins attended the alumnae luncheon at Staunton on Saturday, April 24, and the president will visit the Culpeper alumnae tomorrow.

per before the National Education Association Meeting, he said that these are two chief functions of New College at Columbia. "Its first, and its chief purpose, perhaps, is to serve as a laboratory in the training of college and university teachers for professional schools engaged in the training of teachers, just as a university high school or teachers college demonstration on practice school serves in the training of teachers for secondary and elementary schools." The second purpose, he stated, was to provide the professors themselves with an opportunity to try out or test old procedure and theories in the field of teacher training.

One of the most outstanding facts about the course at New College is that a student does not get a degree until he is really well-trained, no matter how many years it takes. There is no system of points and hours by which after obtaining so many one may receive a degree.

Tennis Courts Are Prepared For Figure Conscious Girls

Tennis courts are "right" now, so any time you may so desire wander out to the courts and practice. Week-ends are grand times to catch up on the practices, and what could be more fun than a game of tennis on a day in April or May. Gather up a few of those girl friends who need the "ole exercise" and trip out to the courts for a work out. Not only is this game, namely tennis, lots of fun—, but 'tis rumored that it helps to prevent an accumulation of excess weight. Maybe that is why several of S. T. C.'s tennis champs have been practicing so much lately. Have you noticed?

The tennis doubles chart has also had a rush, and quite a few girls have signed up for the tournament.

Girls, you had better start practicing, for this tournament is to be a great event. We hear there'll be one "whiz bang" team. The gym's a grand place to practice on rainy days. Come on out and "swing it"—I mean the tennis racquet.

Mrs. R. J. Reid, who was the former Mary Putney of Farmville S. T. C., captured a lion's share of the honors, including the Garden Club of Virginia Sweepstakes trophy, in the annual narcissus show of the Garden Club of Virginia yesterday. Of the 43 various exhibit classes, Mrs. Reid captured 21 firsts.

Mrs. Marjorie Goodwyn Davis, former Farmville S. T. C. student is now a successful art teacher at Thomas Jefferson High school in Richmond, Va. Art in many different phases is part of the term's work. The clay models created by the Jefferson students, under the direction of Mrs. Davis, vary from "Mae West" to "The Ancient Mariner".

Club Discussion Is Make-up Methods

The methods of applying various types of make-up were demonstrated at the meeting of the Dramatic Club last Wednesday evening. Ducky Davies and the make-up group were in charge of the program. Theatrical make-up for four types of character was explained. The types were a young girl, a young man, a clown, and an old man.

Before the demonstration, Miss Wheeler discussed the play contests held Friday and Saturday nights and urged the members of the club to attend.

Girls Leave School For Week-End Fun

V. M. I. and Roanoke Lure S. T. C. Girls to Dances

Beg, bum, or steal a ride, but get a ride they will, and off they go.

The music of a good orchestra called Elizabeth George Wilson, Charlotte Minton, Frances Gaskins, Chic Dortch, Selma West, and Kathleen McCann to dances at V. M. I.

Those attending the Roanoke College dances were Betty Fagg, Gerry Hatcher, Dorothy Hatcher, and Nancy Sellman.

Kathleen Johnson, Doris Carper, and Marjorie Robertson went to the Pi Gamma Mu convention at Harrisonburg.

Richmond was popular for a number of reasons this past weekend. Some went to the Tray Boy Review, others to the Hampden-Sydney game with Richmond College, and still others went to shop or visit. Those going were Katherine Erosius, Marguerite Costello, Martha Glenn Davis, Elsie Dodd, who had as her guest, Elizabeth Smith, Ruth James, Grace Allen Pittard, Elizabeth Shiplett, Doris Brandis, Janet Lemmon, Anne Scott, Virginia Lee Pettis, May Terrell and Elizabeth Kent, who visited Marie Eason.

To Roanoke went Selma Berry, Marguerite Blackwell, Mary Wilson Clarke, Evelyn Bailey, Margaret Bailey and Frances Lee Russow, and Louella LaFon.

Nan Seward, Carter Belle Munt and Mary Bowles seemed to find Petersburg interesting.

The other girls went to various places. Virginia Allen went to Lynchburg; Jane Burke, Appomattox; Virginia Bean, South Hill, Beverley Baptist, Boydton; Midge Davis, Chester; Sue Eastham, Culpeper; Jennie Belle Gilliam, Sweet Briar; Sara Keesee, Sycamore; Ruth Montgomery, Baskerville; Frances Maxey, Clarksville; Eliza Wise and Martha Meade Hardaway, Burkeville; Johnny Lybrook, Fincastle; Micou Sneed and Charlotte Doggett, Toano; and Louise Anthony visited Dot Raper at Hanover.

Campbell-Leonard Nuptials Are Held at Home of Bride

On Saturday, April 24, at 5 o'clock, Miss Mirian Virginia Leonard and Mr. Douglas McKenzie Campbell were married in the home of the bride in Richmond.

The bride was dressed in a navy blue silk ensemble and wore a shoulder corsage of white flowers.

After a reception, Mr. and Mrs. Campbell left for a wedding trip to Miami Beach, Florida, and upon their return they will make their home at 1207 West Franklin St. in Richmond.

Virginia was a member of this year's graduating class of which she was vice-president. She was also President of Alpha Kappa Gamma, national honor fraternity for leadership, a member of cotillion Club and of Gamma Theta social sorority.

Old Council Fetes New at Longwood

The old Baptist Student Council entertained the new council in the log cabin at Longwood Saturday afternoon. Visiting guests were Mr. Claude Bowen, who is educational director of the Foreign Mission Board, and Mrs. Bowen, Dr. and Mrs. Cecil Cook and Miss Georgia Norris.

Mr. and Mrs. Bowen held individual conferences with each new council member and gave helpful suggestions in planning a tentative program for next year's work.

Mr. Bowen closed with a talk emphasizing three points: mainly, do not sell your character, do as much as you can in everything and make Christ your Master.

DO YOU KNOW
How Little it Costs to Telephone Out of Town from State Teachers College?

The cost is surprisingly low—especially after 7 p. m. weekdays and all day on Sundays when the lowest rates are in effect. And the pleasure cannot be measured in dollars and cents.

Are the rates to your home or other points of interest shown below? If not call the long distance operator and inquire. She will give you the rates to any town or city cheerfully and without obligation. We believe you'll be surprised at the low cost; and we are certain you will enjoy making a call.

Bryan Is Elected To Be President Of College Choir

S. Frances Steed Is Vice-Head of Group

Frances Bryan was elected President of the College Choir and S. Frances Steed was elected Vice-president at a call meeting Wednesday night, April 28. The other officers will be Gwen Bell, secretary; Elizabeth Burke, treasurer; and Caroline Gwathmey, librarian.

"Frankie" Bryan, a sophomore, is a member of Cotillion Club, the Association of Childhood Education, the A Capella Choir, and president of the Pan - Hellenic Association. She directs the vested choir in the Training School and is House President of the Student Building. "Frankie" is a member of Alpha Sigma Tau social sorority.

Frances Steed, also a sophomore, is a member of the Rotunda Staff, assistant photographer on the staff of the Virginian, a member of the Dramatic Club, the A Capella Choir, and the Choral Club.

The College Choir, which has been one of the most outstanding organizations on the campus since it was founded in 1931 is under direction of Mr. Alfred E. Strick. This year the choir has done outstanding work. There have been numerous trips and several concerts.

Five more trips are being planned for the A Capella group and choir. The A Capella choir will appear on a program sponsored by the Keysville Woman's Club May 12 and will sing in Roanoke, May 14 and one other out-of-town concert. The Choir will sing during commencement at the Baccalaureate Sermon, Sunday, June 6, and the morning of Commencement, Tuesday, June 8.

Juanita Callis Is Elected President of Debate Group

Juanita Callis, of Mathews, was elected president of the Debate Club for the coming year, at the meeting on Wednesday, April 28. Other officers are as follows: Pattie Alston Bounds, vice-president; Janie Lee Young, secretary; Florence Bress, treasurer; Nora Jones, debate counselor with Grace Waring as an assistant.

Juanita is treasurer of Pi Kappa Delta and has been active in debate and oratory since her freshman year in college. She also belongs to the Choral Club and College Choir and is a member of the Association of Childhood Education.

Home Ec Students Will Reveal Sewing In Review of Styles

Spring styles will be shown in a fashion parade given by the students of the clothing department of Home Economics. About seventy girls will participate, each wearing the garment she has made.

All types of ensembles will be represented. Sport dresses and suits, pajamas, dresses for church and evening wear will be modeled.

Student teachers who have directed the making of garments are Ruth Crumley, Annie Watson Holden, Frances Lancaster, India Martin, Ruth Montgomery, Mabel Murden, and Isabel Plummer.

The style show will be held in the large auditorium on Monday night, May 10 at 6:45, and no admission will be charged. Everyone is cordially invited.

Shipplett Attends Festival as S.T.C. Blossom Princess

Elizabeth Shipplett will go to Winchester this week-end to represent Farmville S. T. C. as a princess in the fourteenth Apple Blossom Festival.

Queen Shenandoah XIII is Miss Gretchen Thomson of New Orleans. She will be crowned by Captain J. R. Beardall, who is naval aide to the Secretary of Navy, Swanson. The coronation will follow the old English pattern and the queen and princesses will wear court dresses of Elizabethan style. The costumes will be very elaborate; more gorgeous than ever before.

The pageant and coronation will take place at the Hanley High School. The coronation will be held on Friday afternoon.

Following the coronation, a pageant will be given, depicting the rise of America from a wild country to a great nation. The queen and princesses will be entertained at the Queen's Ball Friday night at the George Washington Hotel, and at a smaller affair Saturday night. The pageant will be repeated on Saturday morning, and on Saturday afternoon there will be a very colorful parade with many floats and bands. The only chang-

Junior-Senior Prom Will Be Sponsored In Gym on June 5

A Junior-Senior Prom, sponsored by the Juniors as a part of the Commencement program will take place June 5 in the gymnasium. Following the Senior reception for graduates and their parents, the dance will be in progress from nine until twelve. As yet the orchestra has not been announced.

Seniors and Juniors may have escorts but the other guests, comprised of graduating Sophomores and Little Sisters, will attend unescorted.

The committee composed of Kitty Walden, Evelyn Montgomery, and Kathleen McCann has not as yet completed the plans.

Educator Makes Talk Wednesday

Dr. Alexander Speaks of New Demands on Teachers

Dr. Thomas Alexander, professor of Education at Teachers College of Columbia University, spoke on "New Demands of the Young Teachers" Wednesday, April 28, in the large auditorium, as a guest of Kappa Delta Pi. Dr. Alexander is also chairman of New College of Columbia University, which is an experiment in the training of teachers.

"I am always glad to speak to young people," the speaker stated, "because they have plenty of time to do something about it." He endeavored to mark a path for the teachers, using his own weaknesses in training as milestones.

Dr. Alexander was expelled from school for six months and when he returned, he was compelled to spend a time teaching in every grade from kindergarten to the eighth grade. This gave him a little experience as to child psychology. He didn't learn much at normal school which was equivalent to college today, but insisted that he acquired his greatest knowledge during holidays and expulsion periods.

At the age of seventeen he had graduated and was teaching fifty-four children. He did not receive his job again the next year and now he realized that he was too young to teach.

The University of Missouri would not give him credit for his normal school training and required him to enter as a freshman. Dr. Alexander called it a "gift from heaven," that these requirements were so and that he did not matriculate.

The University of New York was his next trial and he had a difficult time getting accustomed to New York, instead of Missouri. "I didn't know anything about other people; I thought people in my community were the elect of the world and Scotch-Irish descent, Republican, and Presbyterian was the best combination". However, he learned that there were other

Winthrop College Sends Delegates

Farmville S. T. C. Is Host to Debate Team

The third annual meet between Farmville and Winthrop College, Rock Hill, S. C., in debate and oratory will take place on Friday, May 14.

In the afternoon dual debates will be held on the national Pi Kappa Delta question concerning Congressional regulation of industry by fixing minimum wages and maximum hours. On Friday evening the oratorical contest between the two colleges will be held in the small auditorium. Two orators representing each college will participate.

Following the oratorical contest there will be a formal installation of the chapter of the Strawberry Leaf founded on our campus last spring. The charter members of the organization to be initiated will be present. The members are: Dudley Allen, Agnes Bondurant, Louise Francis, Victoria Gillette, Virginia Hook and Gertrude Levy.

After the installation, a reception will be given in the Student Building Lounge. Members of the Club Will Present Spring Play Again

Graduation Visitors Will See "Cradle Song"

"The Cradle Song", a story of convent life, will be presented again by the Dramatic Club as a part of the commencement program on June 7.

This play was presented April 16 as the clubs' spring production, and it met with the hearty approval of the audience. Clara Nottingham, Frances Hutcheson, Mary Joyner Cox and Elizabeth George Wilson will again play the most important parts. The same cast will assist them.

The Dramatic Club is closing a most successful year. Besides "The Cradle Song", it presented "Mary III" in the fall with the assistance of the Hampden-Sydney "Jongleurs".

On April 23 and 24, the club sponsored the annual high school play contests through which it sought to further an interest in dramatics among high school students.

Under the direction of Miss Leola Wheeler, as adviser, and

Miss Stubbs Attends Social Science Meet As Presiding Officer

Miss Florence Stubbs, social science instructor at Farmville State Teachers College, will preside at a meeting of the Virginia Social Science Association to be held at Virginia Polytechnic Institute, Blacksburg, Virginia on May 7-9. Dr. James Walmsley of this school will also attend the convention.

This association is made up of members of social science faculties of the leading colleges and universities of the state of Virginia. This is the eleventh annual meeting of the association.

Miss Stubbs is the first woman president of the Virginia Social Science Association. She is also the first Teachers College representative.

Dr. John A. Lapp, assistant administrator on labor relations and Public Works Administration, Washington, D. C., will be guest speaker at the meeting.

"Hansel and Gretel" Is Enacted by Dancers

WITCH ENTICES

Drama Takes Place Before Cookie House

Minnie Smith, South Hill, was crowned queen of May Day by Kathrine Irby before a crowd from all parts of the state on Saturday, May 1, at Longwood. Zaida Thomas of Wytheville was her maid of honor.

Once upon a time Hansel and Gretel, played by Katherine Irby and Mary Bowles, were lost in the great forest. Hungry and tired and frightened by the eerie noises in the woods, they lay down at last under a tree and went to sleep. The Lullabye Lady, Macon Raine, brought them beautiful dreams and lulled them into deeper slumber.

Whey they awoke, they saw with delight a queen little sugar house with gingerbread fence. All at once the door opened, and a hideous old witch, Essie Millner, came out. Weaving her magic spell she sought to entice Hansel and Gretel into her oven that she might bake for herself two more cookie children. Bravely, the little brother and sister resisted, and at last with a great shove, they overcame the wicked witch and freed themselves.

With the downfall of the witch, joy reigned in the forest; the little sugar house came to life, and the gingerbread fence danced with glee. The wild-wood princess, Minnie Smith, and her maidens, whom the witch had enchanted into fancy pasters!, came out to share in the celebration. The cookie children joined Hansel and

Frances Bryan Heads Pan Hel Association; Sorority Is Admitted

Frances Bryan was installed as president of the Pan-Hellenic Association by Lucille Moseley, outgoing president, Monday night in the little auditorium. Other officers installed were Vera Ebel, vice president; Eleanor Dodson, secretary; Louise Anthony, treasurer; Miriam Ficklin, program chairman; and Ruth Sears, publicity chairman.

The Delta Theta Alpha sorority was officially accepted at this meeting as a group of the association.

The installation was a candlelight ceremony in which the old officers passed their lights to the new officers. Members of the organization were dressed in white. Reverend Campbell Tucker led the devotionals.

Smith Takes Oath As Gamma Psi Head

Virginia Whitehead Smith, serving her second term as president of Gamma Psi, installed the other officers of the art fraternity Tuesday night. She received her oath from Kitty Roberts, out-going vice-president. Virginia installed Louise Painter vice-president; Charlotte Minton as secretary, and Mildred Gentry as treasurer.

Farmville Has All Advantages Of Co-Eds Without Problems

Farmville S. T. C. has the advantages of a co-ed school with few of its disadvantages. Come Spring, its campus blossoms out with belles who blush (or maybe it's too much time spent in the rays on the roof) as they pass in front of the critical eyes lined up on the brick walls or on Shannon's corner. Yes, Spring brings the males thumbing in from Hampden-Sydney to see what winter has done to the crop. All of this excitement adds an air of festivity to the season.

Now just suppose this were a co-ed institution. We would have been ordinary sights to the boys every day. As it is, our friends are seven miles out—far enough to appreciate our inaccessibility and yet within reach.

Then too, we should thank our lucky stars we don't have to sit through classes with the One and Only the morning after the Big Dance. Can you imagine anything more disillusioning to the Poor Soul than to see his smooth mysterious Queen of the night before yawning and dozing like any ordinary mortal — her soft curls straightened out, dark circles under her eyes, oxfords turning up at the toes!

There is less danger of the "home-town" friend finding out about the H.-S. one when the two kinds of colleges are separated. When the former hits town, seven miles out and "no ride in" can be a blessing.

For those who like the education part of co-education—may you enjoy our quiet halls and manless library.

Long live S. T. C. maleless and yet not maleless—or mailess!

WEDNESDAY, MAY 5, 1937

DO WE FEAR NAZISM?

The University of Virginia, Princeton, Yale and the important British universities have refused to send delegates to Goetinger University, Germany, in June. These universities also declined to send delegates to the anniversary celebration at Heidelberg last year.

If educators reveal such narrow feelings, how can the average citizen fail to be smug and filled with his own carelessly formed ideas on politics? Maybe we don't approve of Nazism, but the Germans have invited us to participate in an education meet, not to sanction their principles of government.

Governments come and go. Heidelberg and Goetinger have watched them change through the centuries. These guardians of learning remain intact, slowly changing to fit the times, but ever holding aloft the lamp of education so that they who run may read. A university like Heidelberg or Goetinger is greater than a temporary government.

Why cannot highly educated Americans attend a meeting to celebrate the founding of a famous university without contaminating themselves with so-called unwholesome politics? Who are we to be so particular? The German people are an intelligent race. How, then, can we refuse to accept their hospitality because of their sanctioning a certain type of government? We must recognize their intelligence as a race that is also intelligent, not as biased people who are afraid to come in contact with a government, that might influence us. When we refuse to go, we admit that we fear Nazism.

A LAUREL TO MRS. FITZPATRICK

This school can be justly proud of May Day with its graceful dances, colorful costumes and enthusiastic audience. Mrs. Fitzpatrick deserves most of the credit and this is an attempt to pay a tribute to her as an excellent teacher and the possessor of the true spirit of this institution. There is nothing in her contract that demands her work on this project. That is why she deserves the thanks of every student in S. T. C.

ROTUNDA REVERBERATIONS

May Day week-end! Proud Mamas and Papas coming to see their sweet young off-spring flit about the dell or promenade in the Court. Overheard such remarks as . . . "Yes, that is my little Sally . . . the pretty, graceful one." Really, tho' you can't blame 'em for being so proud . . . they were rather a neat looking bunch.

Sometimes we forget to look before we leap . . . at least Mary Harrison suddenly found herself in a heap in a gully the other night. Imagine poor Horace's chagrin when, after he had walked on for 'bout a block, he finally realized she was no longer with him!!

Lost: One "Cousin Mary". Also an "Uncle Jimmy" and an "Aunt Elta". Anyone having information as to their whereabouts please report immediately to the Home Office.

Embarrassing moments! Mary Harvey's face was just a shade or two lighter than her hair the other night when a certain Farnsworth boy sent her up an order from down town . . . collect.

Edna Bolick is certainly radiating all over the place these days. Wonder if the ring she acquired last week-end is responsible for her great glee?

And speaking of rings . . . Frances Lee Russow seems to be quite gay about the V. P. I. miniature she has been sporting recently.

A bit of verse from here and there:

"There was a girl named Gwendolyn
Her mother made the best potato salad
She fell in love with a farmer boy
Come, let us lean against the river."

S. T. C. theme songs: "You Turned the Tables On Me"—Eugenia Jolly . . . "Jerry's Back in Town"—Will Scott . . . "Hands Across the Table"—Lloyd Kelly . . "You're An Old Smoothie"—Jane Burke . . . "Violets"—Rose-Marie Hunter . . . "A Bench in the Park"—Joe Libby and Chlotilde Jarman . . . "Dream Girl of Pi K. A."—Virginia Doughty . . . "I've Got You Under My Skin"—Carter Belle Munt . . . "Why Dream"—Doris Adkins . . . "You Dropped Me Like a Red Hot Penny"—Nan Throckmorton . . . "Time on My Hands"—Sue Owens and Ginna Jarman . . . "I Can't Lose That Longing For You"—Susan Lane . . . "If I Could Be With You One Hour Tonight"—Elsie Green . . . "Wedding Bells"—Nellie Pierpont . . . "Egyptian Ella"—Lib Harris ... "Ants in My Pants"—Betty Butterworth.

Anne Hardy is whiling away her hours on campus doing a neat bit of snaking . . . More power to you Anne.

Wonder why some young gentlemen (?) at Hampden-Sydney enjoy seeing their name in print so much. Perhaps it's the final test of their great popularity!

LIBARIAN COLUMN

With the whole world keeping its ear "glued to the keyhole" as to the tricks of the various European countries, the times seem to demand universal consideration of the situation.

Pierre Crabites' Unhayyp Spain gives a diagnostic description of the battles and bloodshed in that war-racked nation. Its present state, the author declares, is due to the mixing of army leaders in national politics.

A former judge of international repute and now a lecturer on civil law in Louisiana University, Mr. Crabites has delved far into the past to bring to his study a deep and sympathetic understanding of the problems in Spain. He avers that the country is at his time menaced by internal stagnation, callousness, and apathy which must be wiped out before Spain will be able to catch up with the vanguard of progress.

Mr. Crabites' book, which interprets the civil war in relation to the current communistic trend, should be followed by Trotsky's The Revolution Betrayed. In this illuminating volume the author denies that the Soviet Republic operates under the communistic plan and declares that the said system has been supplanted by bureaucracy and dictatorship.

The French Revolution and Napoleon is a topic which Trotsky uses for an interesting comparison with the present situation. Equally intriguing is the contrast obtained if the book is read in connection with the political conditions existent in the United States. America, the writer claims, would be an ideal "take-off" for Communism since it possesses such tremendous wealth in money, inventions and comfort.

Since Communism, Fascism, Nazism and the other "isms" are proposed cures for economic, political, and social ills, it is well to consider one of the underlying causes of the world's headache. To do so, is to go back to the Great War.

Wythe Williams provides an excellent source of information as to the part which that conflict played in the destiny of nations. His volume, Dusk of the Empire, adds measurably to the inside history of the world-wide struggle and the many events which were comprised in that drama.

Mr. Williams discusses intimately the dominant figures of the period: Clemenceau, Wilson, Magin, Nivelle, Calmette, Madam Caillaux, and scores of others. Also a subject of major interest is the position of the United States in the world today. While Europe has started its decline, in the opinion of the author this country is rising to take its place in the sun.

Departing from the strictly historical side of the conflict, Erich Remarque has portrayed powerfully its aftermath in Germany. Author of one of the largest selling books in history, All Quiet on the Western Front, and its vivid successor, The Road Back, Remarque writes again of the war.

Three Comrades is the story of Germany ten years after her defeat. There are four outstanding characters in the novel: three boys and a girl. The bond among them for a while shuts out the restlessness and violence of universe racked by startling changes. But inevitably the shadow of the war touches them and, in an indirect and unseen way, claims them just as it had done a decade before.

The story is a simple one, but is rich in character, human incident, and mood—with mood predominant. With Remarque's characters you experience pathos, sadness, petty triumphs and fugitive joys. You live with those comrades and the girl, gripped throughout the novel with the sense of unrest and futility which troubles the world today.

A young lady recently visited the locomotive works and later told some of her friends about how a locomotive is made.

"You pour a lot of sand into a lot o fboxes," she explained, "and you throw old stove lids and things into a furnace, and then yo uempty the molten stream into a hole in the sand, and everybody yells and swears. Then you pour it our and let it cool and pound it, and then you screw it together an d paint it, and put steam in it, and they take it to the drafting room and make a blue print. But one thing I forgot—they have to make a boiler. One man gets outside and one man remains inside, and they pound frightfully, and they tie it to the other thing and you ought to see it go."

'Twas the only one she had,

She sleeps so peaceful now.

SENIOR PERSONALITIES

Virginia Leonard Campbell, former president of Alpha Kappa Gamma.

An understanding and sympathetic nature has endeared Virginia to her many friends and the influence of her fineness of character has been keenly felt not only by her close friends but by her classmates and other members of the student body as well.

That hers is the true spirit of leadership has been proved to each of us by Virginia's quietness and unselfishness in the performance of her duties. Her steadfastness and sincerity of purpose have repeatedly been brought into action in services to the student body and to the school. Her every task has been cheerfully and thoroughly performed.

Virginia proved outstanding in many fields. She served as typist for the Virginian for two years and this year was again a member of the staff, having the position of circulation manager. In her junior year she was secretary of the House Council. She was Vice President of the class of '37. In February of last year she was tapped by Alpha Kappa Gamma and this organization recognized her outstanding abilities of leadership by electing her its president for this year. She is a member of Cotillion Club and belongs to Gamma Theta Sorority.

Virginia graduated in March and since then has married Mr. Douglas Campbell of Richmond. Although she is not here for the last few months of this year, her influence is still with us, and it is certain that her Alma Mater is often in the thoughts of one who caught the spirit of fellowship and service.

Mothers

By Helen Welshimer

Mothers choose lovely, simple things
When they would make a home,
Fire on the hearth, a kettle's song,
Lamps for the feet that roam,
Chant of a lullaby in the dusk,
Cookie jars on low shelves,
Prayers that are coined with rhyming words,
Stories of kings and elves,
Cakes where the birthday candles shine,
Secrets that child-lips speak,
Brief wounds that need a healing touch,
Marbles and hide-and-seek—
Mothers give up their heart's deep dreams,
But women can understand
That there is a compensating joy
In the clasp of a small child's hand.
Borne in my heart is an image
Of someone I deeply revere,
Someone whose love never falters—
Someone who ever is dear;
Someone whose deeds are countless
Who ever is steadfast and true;
Borne in my heart is an image,
Darlingest Mother,—of you!

LOOKIN' 'EM OVER

By Mary Mahone

From nine-thirty a. m. to four-thirty p. m., at rows of battered desks in a big, grey walled room in the Treasury Building in Washington, forty old women in aprons and house dresses sit counting the worn, dirty ill-smelling United States currency sent in by banks to be changed for new bills. The room's windows have iron gratings and treasury guards stand by, but last week it was found that four grey-haired judges had found a way to eke out their thirty dollars a week pay. They had been robbing the treasury for years. When a package of currency contained fewer bills than the number marked on the teller's slip, the four old checkers invariably noted the lack. But when a packet contained an extra bill or two they pocketed the difference and marked the stack O. K. So trifling and rare were the teller's mistakes from which they profited that it was a long time before their superiors grew suspicious. Then the Secret Service planted packages of marked bills, caught the four red-handed. They were promptly discharged in teary disgrace, but because of their long service and the pettiness of their thieving, the Treasury refused to prosecute them or even reveal their names.

While New Jersey's Governor Hoffman writes poetry and makes speeches to attract attention, Governor George H. Earle of Pennsylvania came down with mumps. He was quarantined for fifteen days in the executive mansion at Harrisburg with his sons, Ralph, eight, and Lawrence, thirteen. Snorted the Democratic Governor, forty-three: "And now I guess the Republicans will acuse me of being in my second childhood."

It would appear that Rose and Russel Long, daughter and son respectively of the late Louisiana Kingfish, Huey P. Long, are preparing to follow in their father's footsteps. Rose, a junior, and Russel, a sophomore, are both majoring in Government at the Louisiana State University. Last week Russel who has been president of his class since entering, debates on the varsity team and expects to enter law school next fall, took a day off to act as campaign manager for his sister, who won the presidency of the Women's Students' Association by a majority of twenty-seven votes. Said President Rose, also secretary of the Junior class and president of her sorority: "Now maybe I can get some sleep." The next day she began campaigning for class vice-president.

Dear Mr. Dean:

That we may have the record clear, will you please let me know what provision has been made for Minnie Esso's declining years under the Social Security Act? And how are you handling her case in view of the decision to reward a flat monthly increase of fifteen dollars to those employees receiving less than $1,800 per year.

Before settling the later point, I suggest that you look into Minnie's home life and seek to discover how many dependents she has. Very truly yours, W. C. Teagle

The above letter, written by Mr. Teagle, president of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, was released to the press last week. The letter was written April, the first to Mr. Dean, boss of Minnie, the cat hired to keep the testing laboratories free of rats. Replying, Mr. Dean assured president Teagle that Minnie's dependents, quintuplets born last month, were well cared for and that her salary would be raised if inflation boomed the price of salmon and milk. Minnie's employers have been so pleased with her work in ridding the laboratories of rats that no one has attempted to investigate Minnie's private life. Since becoming a public figure, reported Mr. Dean, Minnie has received a proposal of marriage in a letter signed "Nicky." Describing himself as elegant, but lazy tom, Nicky declared, "As you have a good position with the Standard Oil Company, I'm sure we could manage nicely."

Why Can't All of Us Girls Be Queens on May First?

The first of May came, and with it many bewildered hearts, heavy with the puzzling question, "Why wasn't I May Queen?" It's a great mystery to many just how anyone could possibly overlook her when it came to the all important question of choosing a lady, lovely and fair, to reign over the merry festivities of May Day.

There are those timid, young hopefuls who, upon stealing a furtive glance at the mirrors in the Rotunda, decided that their posture resembled that of a whipped cur, and the treatment for such was a series of diligent, daily dozens, practiced in the hope of acquiring a dignified bearing, and that greatly to be desired queenly tread. Surely, after such patient, undying efforts, there must have been some mistake or thoughtlessness when, in the final choosing, the results of these energetic efforts was overlooked. The sad truth slowly dawns. The posture was there, definitely, but where was the fair countenance that should have graced it?

On the other hand, some of the would-be aspirants of the throne started out on the countenance first, on the general theory that the way to public sentiment is through a pretty face. Eyebrows were plucked to suggest the sophisticated dignity of a queen, cupid bows were painted, and high cheek-bones were accentuated, all to add dignity and queenliness to a face that was meant to look and act its age.

If a few of the optimists applied for help on this disturbing puzzle, perhaps they would receive such discouraging answers as, "Well, you know, you are a little plump," or, "You have a cute face, but did you ever see a May Queen with a boyish bob?" and "It takes all kinds of people to make up a world, but that doesn't apply to May Queens, you know."

May Day came and went in all its glory and galaxies of gorgeous girls. But what about those patient souls? Our encouraging words are: "Better luck next time?" as we hear that plaintive murmur. "I wonder, just why wasn't I May Queen?"

Baseball

"Strike three and you're out at the ole ball game. Watch first base—Look out she's going in home." These are just a few of the remarks that are heard every Monday, Wednesday and Thursday afternoons at baseball practices. The Red and White and Green and White teams are going strong, and we have heard rumored that they are contemplating a game with our neighboring college, Hampden-Sydney. So you see, our teams must be in trim—or else. You should see Vera Ebel sock that ball. The team calls her "home-run-Vera". Understand? Ruth Phelps can really make them strike out, ole Dizzy Dean in person. Why the whole team plays as well as if it had been in training camp all winter. More power to them. May the best team win.

Soccer

This new game that is seeing its first season at S. T. C. is taking the school by storm. If you've never played before, come on out and let Elizabeth Kent show you how it's done. Elizabeth is manager of this fine sport and she is making the game a real sensation. You would never guess that this was Florence Rowett's first year at it. Inez Chappell, Ellen Conyers and Ruth Phelps are also tops at this sport. Dot Fischer is another of those "home-run-gals" Wonder how long she has been playing this game of soccer?

Soccer practices are held every Monday, Wednesday and Thursday afternoons. The time alternates with baseball practices. Better try this new game.

Archery

On Tuesday and Friday afternoons the athletic field is a whizzing confusion of darting arrows. The main aim is the bull's eye, but perhaps the infirmary window is the next best thing. Our archers are really tops, and now there is not a skinned finger to be found on a single girl. They are just a band of cupids.

Croquet

"Oh, won't you come over and tramp down the clover and play croquet with me?"

Joan Court is crowded every afternoon and night with anxious girls, waiting their turn to knock the croquet ball through the wickets, and then to hit the first croquet ball in sight. It really is a swell game. Perhaps you already know all about it and just need to loosen up the muscles a bit.

For Exercise, Sport, Grace, Figure Rely on Swimming

Webster says that swimming is gliding smoothly and quietly through water. Everybody is not able to say she can swim if that is true. There is just one way to boast of it—to go swimming often. There are those on the side of the pool who are afraid of getting that new coiffure or permanent mussed up. That's not helping to learn to keep on top of the water and they might have a chance, someday, to use the old motto, "Swim or sink". There they would be, still worrying about hair. If they're afraid of that, how should those who were so frisky and wanted to walk soon feel? They shouldn't feel bad at all, because those bow legs are not a hindrance towards moving through the water with grace. Good swimmers are ever to be envied. Good girl swimmers are noticed particularly. Is that not a challenge worth spending an hour in the pool room?

The stroke to use should be the least of worries. Every kind of stroke is found in a swimming pool. Each person should glory in the one she uses if it is different. Perhaps, it's never been done before and might be hard to learn. Locomotion is easily acquired even if the four appendages don't perform harmoniously. Swimming is the best exercise for them and is good training towards grace.

Reverend Lloyd Thompson Joins Couple In Marriage Before Improvised Altar

Sing Saturday presented a new type of entertainment to the obvious enjoyment of the audience. To the dreamy tunes of the piano, the guests assembled in their seats to witness the wedding of diminutive Miss Hippy to hen-pecked Mr. Bean.

The altar was decorated with tall white candles and white kneeling cushions. Pink and green were the colors carried out in the decorations.

Miss Lily Pons rendered "I Love You Truly" in the newest version, and Martha Raye "Went to Town" with a swing. Another notable guest was little Kate Smith, who thanked the audience for listening to her usual theme song.

The bride, who was given away gladly by her father, wore a washed (again and again) dress which was probably worn by her mother and grandmother before her. Her green tulle veil (special at Rose's 10c a yard today and tomorrow only) was draped coyishly around her head.

Miss Hippy chose as her maids-of-honor her Siamese twin sisters, and her little cousins in dainty new dresses were flower girls. Among the out-o-town guests, however well-known, were Mr. Carroll Pugh, Miss Lane a la Ermine Whitehead, and Miss Fred Munt.

The Rev. Lloyd Thompson officiated at the ceremony.

"A bolt is a thing like a stick of hard metal such as iron with a square bunch of winding on one end and a lot of scratchings wound on the other end.

A nut is similar to the bolt, only just the opposite, being a hole in a chunk of iron sawed off short with wrinkles around the inside."

Archery Contests Will Be Held Soon

Six Girls Shoot High Scores With Bows

Allowance for good and bad days is given in this year's archery tournament by holding it two days. These days are Thursday and the following Tuesday. The purpose of this is to select a team which will include those individuals getting the highest scores in this tournament. Shooting will be done on both days and an average between the two day's scores will be taken as the final score. Each girl participating must shoot both days and must shoot while the manager or lady paramount is present. All girls who have had as many as six practice periods are eligible to enter this tournament. Archery etiquette for tournaments will be posted on the Athletic bulletin board, also scores for each day's shooting. The tournament will consist of shooting 6 ends (36 arrows) at the familiar distance of 30 yards.

Those girls who shot a score above 70 points are: Ivylyn Jordan, 83 points; Ruth Sears, 90 points; Anne Billups, 90 points; Mary Virginia Blankenship, 127 points; Ruth Phelps, 130 points; Maxine Burks, 165 points.

The Freshmen and Sophomore classes have the largest number of girls out for archery, but the Juniors and Seniors are not far behind. The team will decide the accuracy of each class, and the tournament will decide the team.

Soccer Manager Asks Practice For Team Work

In order to participate in class soccer games one must have attended at least five practices, Elizabeth Kent, manager of soccer, has announced. No definite arrangements have been made, but students are urged to come out for it. Class games will be played off when sufficient practices have been held.

Ruby Adams, a freshman and member of the varsity basket ball team, has been appointed assistant manager of soccer.

This is the first time soccer has been played at S. T. C.

combinations just as good as his own.

At Columbia University Dr. Alexander played basketball to get his education and he believes that everyone should be put on his own to a certain extent today. Everyone has a chance for an education today and if he really wants one, he can acquire it.

When traveling and teaching in Turkey, Germany, and Bulgaria, he learned that everyone did not believe in his combination and got along just as well.

Every year from New College a group visits Europe and works in the shops of England, the camps in Germany, or the schools in France to gain knowledge of the conditions in these foreign countries. Today, another plan is being worked out, but it is one to which the parents and teachers have not given much support. This idea is to exchange a number of students of the United States and a foreign country. The American parents will take a foreign child to replace their own for a period of time and the child will learn something of the foreign country. Since the world is becoming closer, it is necessary to become acquainted with the countries.

Before entering New College a student must work on the farm in North Carolina for three months to learn about the South, to learn something of agriculture and to weed out those who lack spirit, vision and ambition to go ahead.

Dr. Alexander does not believe in bookworms, but believes in rounding knowledge, no matter how long it takes.

Charm Chides

All of us say with complete earnestness that "Variety is the spice of life," but how many of us live by that standard. Here at school, one can almost spot a girl's associates by the way she dresses, the number of lovely little sausage curls placed here and there on her head, and, most of all, by her catch phrases which she uses as "come-backs" to every other remark or crack.

Have we no pride? It really looks bad when a girl allows all sign of her own personality to be stamped out, and takes up any imitable traits, which appear attractive in her best friend. If we persist in following this course we will surely end by making a stereotyped nonenity of ourselves. Let's have a little backbone, dress in things that are becoming to us and not because the good-looking girl across the hall looks swell in that type of outfit. It is probably not in the least suited to our style of beauty.

Last, but miles from least, don't be a "chimer-inner". Don't say "Yes, I think so, too" every time an opinion is expressed unless you really and truly do. It's a great deal easier not to do any private weighing of values. If we always take for granted that an opinion is unquestionably right because it is expressed so decisively, we will never be able to do any clear thinking of our own when the opportunity presents itself.

Let our motto be "I dress as I please, I talk as I please and I think as I please." We will find that we will be much more respected and admired. It pays to be original.

The Student Body and Faculty wish to extend sympathy to Miss Mary in her recent sorrow.

S. T. C. Graduates Direct Outstanding High School Choirs

Approaching Nuptials of Mary Alexander Is Announced

The Benhaven High School choruses which are directed by Miss Katherine Chappell, who graduated from here last year, and Mrs. C. C. McDonald, also an alumna, made an outstanding record at the contests held in Fayetteville last week.

Entering thirteen out of a total of fifteen contests at the district music contests, Benhaven won three first and four second places. Benhaven had the largest number of entries of any group participating.

Benhaven won first in the tenor solo and also first in the mixed chorus. Second place was taken by Benhaven in the boys quartet, mixed quartet, girls glee club and boys glee club.

Dr. and Mrs. Joseph Lang Alexander, of Staunton, announce the engagement of their daughter, Mary Elizabeth, to Mr. Albert Mason Rockwell, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Rockwell of Westerfield, Conn.

Staunton Alumnae Hold Meet

At the alumnae meeting held in Staunton last week Farmville was well represented by Dr. Jarman, Mrs. Watkins, Miss Jennings and Miss Royall.

An informal luncheon was held at "The Brick Triangle" tea room which is operated by Helen Cover, graduate from Farmville in Home Economics.

Twenty-one alumnae from Staunton and the vicinity were present. Among the guests were Superintendent Shelburne and his wife.

Typical S.T.C. Day Is Spent As Student Uses Allowance

Missed breakfast again. Guess I forgot to set the alarm clock. Heck no! the thing's stopped. Now I'll starve. I'll have a headache all day. Why don't I go to the tea room? Sure, that's a good point. Better take some money to get some note book paper—where's my pencil? Aw, never mind, I'll buy another one.

The postoffice is open now. Do you mind getting me some stamps, I forgot that old book. Crazy having to get a book so late in the term and two dollars and fifty cents—here it is. Do you mind getting it? I have a class. Oh, thanks a lot.

Today is sister's birthday. What'll I give her? I'll send her a telegram and say Happy Birthday I love you. Of course she knows that but I don't know what else to say.

Hello—Have I paid for my annual? No, here's a dollar on it. I'll give you the rest if I ever get it.

I'm going down town. Help me make out a remembering card—hose? Yes, I ruined my last pair up on Willis Mountain the other night. What a time we had. Soap? Yes and toothpaste, too. By the way do you know who swiped our shoe polish. Well I'm not going to get any more. I'm tired of buying stuff for other people. I'd better look after those graduation presents—Roomie, why do kids have to graduate from high school and why do they have to know me and send me bids to their graduation when they know I can't come!

Rush, hurry—come on! I'm going to Shannons before the show. I'm supposed to meet Harry, but you know boys. About this period of the season or season of the year or anyway I expect he will play baseball instead of coming to town. Just as I thought he isn't here. Adolph, give us two dopes and a pack of cigarettes—no make it two packs.

Wasn't that show rotten. Why did we go? I get bored too. Anything to get my mind off this place. Isn't Joel McCrea good looking?

Dinner in the dining room. It isn't so bad tonight.

I'll race you to Butcher's and the last one there'll have to pay for the ice cream!—lost again.

Do I want to order? Yeah—I believe so, that is, wait a minute—say—do you know. I only have a quarter and it's got to last me until June?

Covington Alumnae Entertain

Miss Hiner, Miss Royall, Mr. McCorkle, Mr. French and Dr. Jeffers attended the reception given by the Covington alumnae chapter to 38 high school graduates.

Mary Lib Slater, Polly Wall, Midge Davis and Virginia Baker were there also as representatives of the student body.

The reception was described as being very beautiful. There was a floor show with dancers and violin and vocal solos. There were about 56 or 60 alumnae present.

ATTEND PEACE CONFERENCE

VOL. XVI. FARMVILLE, VIRGINIA, WEDNESDAY, MAY 12, 1937 No. 27

Project to Depict Peace Discussions By Delegate Group

Pi Gamma Mu Holds Make-Believe Conference

ROUND TABLE

Members Represent Various Countries In Talks

Pi Gamma Mu will present its annual project on Thursday night, May 13 at 8 o'clock in the large auditorium. This year the project is a peace conference represented by the leading countries of the world today.

The United States as host of the conference invited the delegates. Ruth Sears dressed like a judge is chairman. Ruth in her own confidence way opens the round table discussion. After welcoming the representatives she begins her challenge of the reason for rearmament by the leading nations of the world today.

Each country's representative tries to justify her country. Italy, represented by Marjorie Robertson, gives as her reason the need for more territory. Chic Dortch, representing Great Britain gives the need for vast sea power for protection as her reason.

After plausible but not justifiable reasons have been given for the rearmament movement, other topics of current interest are brought up. The Spanish trouble is discussed at length. All of the nations owning colonies discuss their colonies and what they mean as a source of revenue and what the future holds for them.

It is Pan-America with its good neighbor policy that proposes a plan for just settlement of the rearmament problem. Bess McGlothlin as representative gives her plan as a plausible and workable plan, but only to be rebuked by the other countries.

The conference is brought to a close by a very dramatic speech by Great Britain's representative. Great Britain goes about rearmament in a big way and gives her reasons and views of rearmament in an equally big way.

China, represented by Kitty Walden; German, by Jean McConnaughyn; France, by Nora Jones; Russia, by Ann Scales; and Japan, by Dudley Allen, are live awake countries with wide awake discussions.

Student Body Fills Blanks for May Day Work Next Year

Students were asked to fill the blanks concerning May Day for next year today at chapel. This is the only way that all students who wish to participate can be reached. By telling what work each wants, committees can be selected more easily and with more certainty about the interest and ability of the members.

The committees will be composed of mainly those girls who sign for particular work, taking into consideration the amount of curricular and etxra curricular work the student carries and her scholastic record.

Since the custom has been to have an English theme once every four years for May Day, an occasion which originated in England, the physical education department desires one for next year. Each student is asked to submit any suggestions to the department.

Farmville Girls Meet Winthrop

Plans For Initiation Into Debate Group Completed

The third annual meet between Farmville and Winthrop College, Rock Hill, S. C., will be held on Friday, May 14. All the activities will take place in the Student Building auditorium.

Dual debates will be held on Friday afternoon at four o'clock. The question to be discussed is Resolved: "That Congress should be empowered to fix minimum wages and maximum hours for industry." Those participating are:

Affirmative: Anthelia Robinette, Norfolk and Nora Feild Jones, Rawlings.

Negative: Mary Barnes, Manning, S. C. and Mary Ellen Adams, Cross Hill, S. C. Critic judge, Mr. O'Ferrall Thompson.

Affirmative: Helen Bryant, Spartanburg, S. C. and Anne Tilghman, Marian, S. C.

Negative: Dudley Allen, Hebron and Pattie Alston Bounds, Norfolk. Critic Judge, Dr. D. M. Allan.

An oratorical contest will be held in the small auditorium at eight o'clock on Firday night. The program is as follows:

Helen Bryant, Spartansburg, S. C., "Common Sense"; Juanita Callis, Mathews, "Castes in Spain"; Mary Barnes, Manning, S. C., 'At Peace with the World"; Lorana Tillman Moomaw, Roanoke, Va., "What Shall We Conserve?" The judges are Mr. Tucker Doyne, Mr. Taylor Thompson and Rev. R. O. Bryant.

Following the oratorical contest, the Debate Club will entertain its members, the visiting debaters, judges, and faculty members at a reception in the Student Building Lounge.

LeGrande Elected Orchestra President For Coming Year

Elizabeth LeGrande was elected president of the College Orchestra at a recent meeting. Eloise Whitley will be vice - president Geraldine Hatcher, secretary-treasurer, Frances Phelps, librarian, and Elizabeth Sieber, reporter.

Elizabeth LeGrande has been outstanding in music during her two years here at college. She has composed seevral pieces and wrote part of the music for May Day.

Since last week was National Music Week the string quartet, consisting of Elizabeth LeGrande and Elizabeth Sieber, first violins, Sue Baynard, second violin, and Mary Grainger, cello, played two numbers in chapel last Saturday morning.

The Orchestra plans to give a concert at Charlotte Court House the last week in May. This concert will be given to raise money for the Cub Creek church.

Sudie Yager Heads Latin Circle For '38

Sudie Yager will be president of the Latin Circle for the coming year. The new officers were elected at a meeting on April 22. Other officers are vice-president, Helen Jeffries; secretary, Evelyn Beale; and treasurer, Frances Holloway.

The staff for the Tribitum, publication of the circle, was also elected. The Editor-in-chief is Margaret Sheffey; associate editor, Katherine Galusha; business manager, Lois Barbee; assistant business manager, Katherine Pilcher, and Literary editor, Marion Harden.

Senior Chis Doom Names Of Curious Ones to Flames

"Chi is calling you. I wanna go where you are!" Shades fly up and heads eagerly appear in windows. The witches from Macbeth seem to have added two to their number and appeared miraculously on the campus across from Senior Building. Cunningham Hall becomes a bedlam as steps race window-ward.

Mary Bowles, Hippy Hurt, Charlotte Rice, Virginia Baker, and Mary Lib Slater hover around a glowing fire and wildly chant the names of their victims to observe as they toss papers leaving their epitaphs into the flames. With solemn mein they begin their work. Libby Morris is the first to be nominated for their Hall of Oblivion since she doesn't take enough interest in Chi. Boos, shouts and shrieks accompany the reading of Ruth Sears' and Ruth Emma Chambers' names as nosey ones. Snootiness is the feature that caused Midge Davis' entry papers into the Hall.

"Aid-de-camps" aren't appreciated by the worthy members Virginia Hannah was selected as a candidate because of her work in Pi Gamma Mu. "Just Once Too Often" has been Elsie Cabell's theme song since her election to the noble hall of the obliverated members of S. T. C. on the basis of her masquerade as one of the noble Chi's. The list increases, names follow names into the fire, for various and sundry misdemeanors.

Obviously, the Hall of Oblivion grew tremendously this year. The whole of second flood Cunningham Hall is nominated for admittance. Accompanying giggles from within the building made the entry of these names notable.

Finally with weird shrieks and leaps of enthusiasm the noble order doomed their rival "the Black Widows" to the flames. Their shadows flickered with the flame as they once more chanted and retraced their steps homeward. No more planned answers to constant queries. Their days of mystery are over, just as the fires' flames are slowly dying under the windows of the slumbering dormitory.

PulitzerCommittee AnnouncesWinners Of Annual Prizes

The Pulitzer Prizes were awarded to the St. Louis Post Dispatch, the novel "Gone With the Wind", and the play "You Can't Take It With You", last week for excellence in American journalism.

The Pulitzer prize awards were established by Joseph Pulitzer, and annually they are given for the best in letters, drama, music, poetry, novels and newspaper work. Pulitzer, who was born in Budapest, Hungary and imigrated to this country, through his interest in journalism and the funds he left behind at his death, has done much to raise the standards and encourage journalism in America, his adopted country.

This year, the Post Dispatch was presented with one prize for the "disinterested and meritorious service" it did in exposing the wholesale registration frauds in St. Louis.

Margaret Mitchell's record breaking novel "Gone With The Wind", which is soon to be made into a movie was selected as the prize novel of the year.

A comedy on American life "You Can't Take It With You" by Moss Hart and George S. Kaufman, now playing to full houses on Broadway was given the award for the best play.

Anne O'Hara McCormick won $500 for distinguished service as a foreign or Washington correspondent for her dispatches and features for 1936.

John W. Owens of the "Baltimore Sun" won $1000 for distinguished service as a foreign editorial writer during the year.

The annual music scholarship of $1,000 went to Ross Lee Finney of Smith College, Mass.

Instructor and Pupil Attend Ted Shawn's Dance Program

Mrs. Fitzpatrick and Gwen Bell attended the dance program given in Lynchburg Saturday evening, May 8 by Ted Shawn and his men dancers. The program was composed of Indian dances and various modern studies. A Cuban dance, presented by Mr. Shawn himself, was considered his best number. Mr. Muman, a member of the group, was quite outstanding and the entire group gave an excellent and enjoyable performance.

Writing Instructor Attends Meetings In Washington,D.C.

Miss Craddock, of the Penmanship Department attended the annual convention of the National Association of Penmanship Teachers and Supervisors in Washington, D. C., last week-end. The convention was held at the Wardman Park Hotel on Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Some of the outstanding addresses were those of the president, Francis Harrigan, on "Modern Fundamentals for the Successful Teaching of Handwriting", and of Dr. John Kirk, director of Handwriting in Philadelphia on "The Current Trends in the Supervision of Handwriting." The speeches made by the Superintendent of Schools in Baltimore, and in Washington, were also worthy of note.

The delegates were taken on many interesting tours and sight seeing trips. They saw Washington, going through many of the Federal buildings and went to Mount Vernon, Alexandria, Washington University, and Annapolis.

They were entertained at the president's reception Thursday evening and at a banquet Friday night.

At a round table conference on Thursday evening they discussed mirror writing and left-handed writing. New officers were elected Saturday afternoon.

Student Leaders Are Annual Personalities

Those girls pictured in the new annuals as personalities for 1936-'37 represent leadership in its highest form. Mary Bowles, president of the Senior Class and active in athletics, offers an example of the valuable college citizen. Bonnie Lane, president of the Student Council; Dorothy Wise president of the Y. W. C. A. and Martha Hamlet, president of the House Council were outstanding in college life. With Virginia Baker, editor of the 1937 Virginian; Madeliene McGlothlin president of the Junior Class; Virginia Bean, editor of the Rotunda and first honor graduate in '37 and Claire Eastman, vice-president of the Student Council, the list of college personalities is complete. While active in all phases of college life, these girls have proved their ability in capable leadership and worthwhile service.

Education Classes Observe Teaching

Practical Observation Is Given Students

The Education instructors of this college have been taking classes in Education 337 to high schools to observe actual teaching these last two weeks.

This type of observation is new on this campus. Education 337 is secondary teaching preparation. Girls majoring in various fields took the trips. Amelia and Crewe High schools were the schools visited.

Before leaving, girls were instructed to visit classes where subjects that they could teach were being taught. They observed with the principles and methods of Education in mind as Dr. Wynn sees them in his new text.

Both high schools were very courteous to the students. Several Farmville graduates were among the teachers. At Amelia the Home Economics classes served delightful lunches to their guests.

Staff of Virginian Builds '37 Bonfire

Baker and Rice Hold Bag In Snipe Hunt

The annual burning of the remains of the 1937 Virginian took place Tuesday night, honoring the yearbook which arrived last week and celebrating the completion of work on the part of the staff.

The bon-fire was held after the banquet of the staff in the tea room. Beauty was added to the fire by chemicals which turned the flames many hues.

After the material had burned, Virginia Baker and Charlotte Rice agreed to go on a snipe hunt if they could hold the bag. They held the bag and held the bag. Nothing happened. Charlotte states that she was completely at a loss to understand the lack of game because she learned from Webster before giving her consent to the hunt that snipes really are birds.

Miss Stubbs Presides At Science Meeting; Walmsley, Secretary

Miss Florence Stubbs served as president of the Virginia Social Science Association held jointly at Blacksburg and Radford on May 7th and 8th. Dr. J. E. Walmsley acted as secretary of the political science section. There was a large attendance at this meeting and it was considered the most successful ever held.

On Thursday, May 6th, the Academy of Science met at Charlottesville, Virginia. Those faculty members who attended the meeting were Dr. Jeffers, Dr. Stevens, Mr. Coyner, Mr. French, and Mr. McCorkle. "Dot" Wright, Eugenia Reeves, LeNoir Hubbard and Martha Hamlett were student representatives at the Academy of Science.

Campbell Is Guest Artist At Meeting of Woman's Club

The Keysville Womans' Club held a regular meeting today at 4 o'clock in the Student Building Lounge. The guest artist for the afternoon was Mrs. L. H. Campbell, a well-known soprano of Blacksburg. The program also included a picture on "The Appreciation of Music" by Mr. Alfred H. Strick, and "Where e'er You Walk" rendered by the A Capella choir.

Graduation Plans For Final Program Near Completion

Seniors Hold Banquet As Opening Event

GIVE RECEPTION

Class Day Exercises Are Planned June 7

Governor George A. Peery and Dr. Ben R. Lacy will be the principal speakers during commencement. Governor Peery will give the graduation address, and Dr. Lacy will deliver the baccalaureate sermon.

The program begins on Friday night, June 4, with the senior banquet. On Saturday night there will be a reception at eight o'clock preceding the Junior-Senior Prom, which will begin at nine.

The baccalaureate service will be held at 8 o'clock Sunday night.

At 10 o'clock Monday morning the sophomores will have class day exercises. Senior class day, beginning at 3:30 Monday afternoon, will feature the Daisy Chain. Mary Bowles will give the welcome, Victoria Gillette will be the historian and Mary Lib Slater will present the gifts. Near the close of the program Miss Mary Nichols will welcome the graduating classes into the Alumnae Association.

The Dramatic Club will present "The Cradle Song", Monday night, and the Senior Lantern Parade will begin at 10:30.

On Tuesday morning the Graduation Exercises will be held. Governor Peery will speak, and the two first honor graduates, Virginia Bean and Ann Dugger will deliver the valedictory and salutatory addresses.

The College Choir will present the selection "The Lord is My Light" at the baccalaureate sermon. Dr. J. L. Jarman will present diplomas and certificates to the graduates.

Dramatic Club Installs Officers; Cox Becomes Head

The installation of the officers of the Dramatic Club for the coming year was held Wednesday night, May 5, in the small auditorium. The new president, Mary Joyner Cox, took the oath of office from the outgoing president, Fletcher Walker. The new president then installed the other officers, as follows: Josephine Quinn, vice-president; Anna Shiflett, secretary; and Virginia Whitehead Smith, treasurer.

The new heads of departments were also installed. Mary Wilson Clarke will be head of the costuming group; Janie Lee Young, the lighting group; and Mable Burton, the make-up group. The music committee will be under the leadership of Elizabeth Seiber, and Virginia Jarman will be in charge of the staging group. The acting group will be led by Alpha Lee Garnett. Anna Hoyer will act as chairman of the properties committee, while Jemile Rock will continue as roomkeeper for another year.

Six New Members Initiated Into Honorary Fraternity

Mary Virginia Putney, Ruth Sears, Erna Dickerson, Rose Marie Hunter, and Bessie Eberwine, were initiated into Pi Gamma Mu after the banquet in the tea room last Tuesday night, May 4th. All of these girls have shown outstanding ability in the field of social science.

RESPECT YOUR FRIEND'S SECRET

There has been on this campus for some years a secret order. It is a club which was originated mainly to remain secret. The girls who belong evidently get pleasure from their membership or the order would not have endured as it has with some of the school's most outstanding girls as members.

Because this society's very foundation is based on secrecy it seems that we should respect their secrets and refrain from attempting to delve into something which does not concern us. The pleasure to be had from belonging must be lessened as prying girls let their curiosity get the best of them. Respect their secrets and let them have peace. If humans could learn to mind their own business, so many of the world's troubles could be avoided.

IN PRAISE OF THE VIRGINIAN

The 1937 Virginian is one of the most delightful records of a college year we have ever seen. It is a remarkable piece of work for its originality and for its completeness.

It's more than just an annual. It's a piece of art as such things go. In it we see ourselves at work, at play, as students and as lively American college girls. We see ourselves as "ithers see us" and we see ourseves at our better moments.

To Virginia Baker and her staff, we doff our hats because we consider our yearbook worthy of our enthusiasm. We'll enjoy it as the years go by and proudly display it for what it is—a perfectly swell job.

ATTEND THE PEACE CONFERENCE

We all readily admit that we abhor war with its useless blood-shed, its heartaches and tears. We claim we want to do all we can to prevent further destruction. Thursday night we have an excellent opportunity to learn just what the present situation in Europe and this country is and to find more ways to combat it. Every girl on this campus who feels her responsibility as a future citizen of this country and as a teacher of future citizens should feel it imperative to attend the peace discussions held by Pi Gamma Mu in the large auditorium at 7 o'clock.

SENIOR PERSONALITIES

MARY LIB SLATER

With her inexhaustible store of humor and gaiety Mary Lib has been an invaluable part of the college with her class for four years. She has been the perfect cheerleader, spurring our teams on to victory and cheering them still in defeat. Gladly has she lent her time and effort to any task, however difficult, and for this trait she has gained the admiration and hearty cooperation of all who know her or have worked with her.

Painstaking and diligent in all things, she has been the one to handle all money and pay all bills for the Virginian staff this year as its business manager. She served the staff in the capacity of assistant advertising manager last year.

In recognition of her widespread influence, high ideals, and the attribute of serviceable leadership, she was tapped by Alpha Kappa Gamma this fall. She has served efficiently on the Rotunda staff, on the Social Committee of the Y. W. C. A., and as a member of the A. A. Council for three years. She is a member of Beore Eh Thorn, Cotillion Club, and Alpha Sigma Alpha Sorority.

As Class Giftorian this year Mary Lib will complete her active duties in school, but one, whose personality radiates an intense love of living for others, will long and pleasantly be remembered by us.

Literary Column

Youth is a quality of being young. Immediately when we think of anything as being young, we associate it with freshness and vigor. These words, then can almost be classed as synonyms. Youth carries with it an armor of strength mingled with a degree of courage. Youth is unfaltering and unafraid; youth is powerful and unswerving.

Young people are eager to dream dreams and build castles. So assured are they that those dreams will be realized. It is youth that feeds the spirit with that courage and surety. There is a tendency for courage and faith to lose their vitality as youth matures. May we design a new pattern of life in that we may keep the hopes and dreams of youth afire until they are no longer dreams but realities.

The Youth

By Marion Doyle

Here is your armor: the shield of glorious youth,
The keen spurs of the mind, the sword of vision.
Go forth and find the Holy Grail of Truth.
Unmindful of the multitudes derision.
Today is yours, and yours the confidence
Of garnered knowledge and our past mistakes;
Subdue the hosts of ignorance and pretense;
Bring back the only Cup our thinking slakes.
You shall erase the scars of this dark hour,
The lines of hunger and the wounds of pain;
Yours the great spirit that must rise to power
And give a lost world peace and faith again.

ROTUNDA REVERBERATIONS

What is it about the week-ends that calls forth the gypsy in so many people? Over three hundred maids went trucking off last week-end and as for those that stayed here . . . well, they did a bit of playing too. Ah! The world is definitely a wonderful place in which to live!!

Sara Kesee kinda' put S. T. C. on the map. From all we hear Jan Garber practically had a new torch singer. A couple of orchids to a cute lil girl with a swell elegant voice!

Doris Brandis seems to have done right well at V. P. I. For a blase lassie that wasn't very enthusiastic about going she did admirably. Could the mountains and the moon and the moment have had anything to do with the ring you're wearing Doris?

A few of our extra "cute girls" appear to have had a knock out time at the Chi Phi dances last week-end. More power to 'em! It was sort of tough tho' on those poor unfortunate girls who weren't blessed with a boy friend among this elite group . . . but who by the grace of Allah and a fast back field do manage to get around occasionally with the lads in the other various and sundry fraternities.

Thumbnail description: As active as the Virginia Hannah chapter of Pi Gamma Mu.

Chi seems to have a couple of competing organizations on campus these days. The Black Widows seem to be stealing Chi's thunder . . . the other night they even beat them at their own game by lighting their bon-fire before they could get around to it themselves. A neat bit of courage! The "Five's" have been kinda active too. Now there's a club with the courage of their convictions . . . they'll have hundreds of applicants for the first vacancy in membership. As a passing thought . . . wonder what action Chi will take . . . if any!

Things that we admire in others . . . Will Scott's jolly outlook on life in general . . . Bonnie Lane's versatility . . . and brilliant mind . . . Susan Lane' superb carriage . . . Nan Seward's quiet dignity . . . Norvell Montague's ability to derive a lot of pleasure from every little thing she does . . . Frances Maxey's cuteness . . . Prince Smith's love of fun . . . Sue Owen's sophisticated naivete . . . Virginia Polly's mouth . . . Army Butterworth's ability to swing a wicked racquet . . . and Elizabeth Butler's perfect looks.

A vote of thanks for the Kelly-Thompson love affair . . . without it there would have been nothing to write about . . . it is rumored that the latest development is a Kappa Sig sweetheart pin.

LIBRARIAN COLUMN

With England and her coming coronation the focus-point of the world's interest, a consideration of the country and crown seem to be in order.

To Andre Maurois the evolution of the British from a primitive people to rulers of one-fourth the globe in so short a time is astounding. In The Miracle of England he traces the amazing progress of the islanders who have played such a dramatic part on this planet's stage.

In contrast to the scholarly, subjectively-viewed accounts of an English writer, Mr. Maurois' book reflects the objective outlook of a Frenchman. The Miracle of England is a tale of that glorious pageant which is the nation's past, and the story is told with a regard for "truth and nothing but the truth" as the author sees it.

More limited in scope, but definitely as interesting, is J. G. Nappen's Royal Westminister and the Coronation. Recounting the events at each coronation, the author has made the book vivid with its very real human-interest. One particularly good chapter comprises various anecdotes about that supreme event in the life of every English king.

But the feminine element is anxious as to "who wears what". To appease the curiosity of those inquiring about the styles, Herbert Norris and Oswald Curtis have prepared Costume And Fashion. The three volumes which make up the set are particularly appropriate at this time.

Another herald of the approach of May 12 is The House of Windsor. Edited by the Marchioness of Aberdeen and Tremoir, the book contains excellent portrait drawings of the members of the House of Windsor. Possessing an especial appeal now, the volume is also of exceptional historical value.

Whichever of these books you might choose, your selection would not be amiss, for they are all pertinent to the coming drama.

INTERCOLLEGIATE NEWS

A girl in a western technical school is reported as defining a bolt and nut as follows:

A bolt is a thing like a stick of hard metal such as iron with a square bunch of windings on one end and a lot of scratchings wound on the other end.

A nut is similar to the bolt, only just the opposite, being a hole in a chunk of iron sawed off short, with wrinkles around the inside.

Love-making by mail is often a hard job for collegians. Some find it difficult to fill a few white sheets of paper with sentimental symbols.

"How can I put fire in my letters to Lulu when I have other interests here on the campus?" asks Fraternity Freddie. And Sorority Susie wonders about the same thing in regard to her correspondences with the grocery clerk back home.

Such worries are no longer necessary because a University of Chicago student, Rostyn Schenker, has organized a bureau to write tailor-made letters for students.

They are smart, these college lads and gals. They know it's the producers and not the directors—not the handsome leading man who waves the magic wands that bring picture contracts to unknowns.

In witness where of, the undergraduates of Colorado University's school of agriculture assigned Robert Taylor to be judge in their campus beauty contest, and students of University of Kansas chose Fred MacMurry to officiate similarly for the sunflower institution.

It is unethical to make a person with the mumps laugh—even though he is a professor.

But members of a foreign language class to Crozer Theological Seminary, Chester, Pennsylvania, did it so well that their swollen-cheeked instructor didn't mind at all.

They addressed the following letter written in Greek to Professor Morton Scott Enslin: "Our faces are great in length because thine is great in width. Return to us safely."

A long-winded panhandler left himself wide open when he approached Fred Fagal, Union College student, for some money:

"Pardon me," he said. "Without offending you in any way . ."

But Fagal cut in: "Can you lend me a quarter?"

"I was just going to ask you," he said and walked away mumbling.

LOOKIN' 'EM OVER

By Mary Mahone

Another great dirigible has followed its predecessor to disaster. Last week, at the beginning of its season of transAtlantic crossing, the giant Hindenburg crashed at Lakehurst, New Jersey. The death toll now stands at thirty-five, two more passengers are in very serious condition, while thirty-one are still in hospitals. Dr. Hugo Eckener has hinted at sabotage. Dr. Eckener, the designer of the Hindenburg, claims that his company had received several threatening letters. Meanwhile a probe is being conducted. These Zepplins all seem to be doomed. One after another they crash. Germany goes on building them. What will happen to the next?

All the world is watching while the English drama of the royal family plays itself to the end. In England everything centers around the coronation of George the sixth, which is taking place this week. All the old traditions are being carried out. But attention is being distracted from the coronation by a certain Wallis Simpson and David Windsor. Mrs. Simpson has received her final decree and has been joined by the exking. The whole world waits for the marriage. Lloyds is taking bets on almost anything concerning Mrs. Simpson. People were betting that she would never get her final decree. She has. People were betting that the marriage would never take place. It hasn't as yet but it seems likely that it will be performed in month of June. It is to be hoped that Wally and Edward will not steal all of George's publicity by marrying during the coronation week.

The coronation seems to be the center of interest at the present, on account of it a Detroit woman was dropped from the relief rolls. It sounds far fetched to connect the Detroit relief rolls with the English coronation, but Mrs. Violet Crocker was dropped from Detroit relief rolls because it was discovered that she had bought a new spring wardrobe and packed up to go to the coronation.

Recently, while all England prepared for the coronation, Princess Elizabeth, heir to the British throne, celebrated her eleventh birthday. From her father, the King, she received a white pony, named Snowball. The Queen gave her a saddle and a gold tipped crop, while her grandmother gave her doll furniture and her younger sister gave her a grey purse with silver fittings. Uncle David, whose abdication made her heir to the throne, sent her a gold wrist watch and a tennis racket. The Princess are not allowed to accept presents from the general public and Elizabeth didn't get the camera that she particularly wanted. In spite of that she had a fine time serving tea to her family. Just as every little girl wishes she had a huge pink and white birthday cake and was allowed to stay up half an hour later to see a Mickey Mouse film. That extra half hour probably contributed much toward making the birthday exciting.

About eight or ten centuries ago a squat Indian gathered a bunch of dry reeds, picked up his stone chipping axe, and entered Mammoth Cave in Kentucky. He was in search of gypsum from which he made white paint to decorate himself. By the light of his reed torch he found a deposit of gypsum two miles from the entrance. He ate his lunch of hickory nuts, then began chipping at the gypsum. By a careless movement of his cramped left leg he dislodged a huge rock which hung over the ledge. It fell and crushed out his life. The dust and dryness of the cave mummified and preserved his body until quite recently. Then the mummy was discovered, christened Lost John and his story reconstructed, from the position of the body and tools, by Alonzo Pond who claimed Lost John for the American Museum of Natural History.

Archery Team Will Be Selected Soon

Due to the Freshman baseball game at Rice and week-end pleasure seekers, the first day of archery tournament on last Friday, May 7, was lacking in many of its usual participants. Absentees will be given another chance to make up their scores. The eight girls getting the highest scores will constitute the archery team, which will schedule its own practices and get monogram credit.

Fifty-three girls have tried out for archery this year. After the team of eight girls has been chosen, practice will continue as usual except that the team will practice separately.

Freshmen Defeat Rice High School

Class Baseball Games Begin Friday Afternoon

The Freshman baseball team defeated Rice Friday on the latter's field with a score of 16-11. Helen Jeffries knocked a home run in the last inning.

The team was served ice cream after the game. The line-up follows: R. Adams, p.; B. Johnson, c.; D. Fischer, 1st base. H. Jeffries, 2nd base; E. Mann, 3rd base; J. Gathright, rf.; E. Gwaltney, cf.; Copley, rf.; A. Billups, lf.; S. Drinkard and J. Baldwin, subs.

Juniors and Freshmen will compete for the coolr award in baseball ion Friday afternoon. This will be the first of the class games. Sophomore and Senior classes did not have enough participants, so they will not compete.

Judith Gathright and Dot Fischer are manager and assistant manager respectively of baseball. Judith is also captain of Freshman class team. Junior class captain has not yet been chosen.

An article for the paper—
What shall it be?
Let's try to do something
With simple poetry.
There's May Day in headlines,
Tennis as a feature
There's nothing about swimming
Done by beautiful creatures.
So about swimming I will write:
Warm weather is at hand,
The pool is so clean. "I've had
My day, desert me," says the land.

Archery:

Watch your hats!! Look out, there goes an arrow. Oh, I hit the bull's eye! This game called archery is really thrilling, their motto being, if at first you don't hit (the bull's eye) try, try again. At the first of the season there were lots of beginners, but now you should see them. It really is surprising what a few practices can do for an archer. Take your lessons from Maxine Burke or Louise Anthony on Tuesdays and Fridays, but in any spart time you may secure equipment from the gym or Cassie Coleman's room. The archery tournament comes off soon.

Tennis:

"Come on play some tennis."

"O. K. I'll meet you on the tennis court, because I really need practice for the tournament."

These conversations are heard all the day long. Girls are practicing in order to be in "trim" for the tournament. Such whizzing, stinging serves as you have never seen before, sometimes returned and sometimes—flat. But, oh well, practice makes perfect.

Tennis fans, as well as the players, are excitedly awaiting the outcome of the Tournament, so you players had better get busy so as not to disappoint your fans.

Note: Everyone, remember to use soft sole shoes on the courts.

Baseball:

"Batter up! Strike two, ball three. Man on third base. Watch out, he's coming in home!"

On Monday, Wednesday and Thursdays the athletic field looks as if it is boasting a world series game. The freshmen evidently represent the New York Yankees. They are well represented and are really in full swing. The Sophomores and Juniors are next in line—but the seniors evidently don't know baseball season is here.

Soccer:

This is a new game, but there is going to be class competition in it. Elizabeth Kent and Ruby Adams are always ready to help you out and show you how it's done.

Mad Dash From Dining Room Made To Claim "Virginian"

"The annuals will be here in a few days"—what a welcome announcement that was! The very air was intense with excitement and expectancy as each day we looked for the much-desired event. At last they arrived and were hastily borne from the truck to the accompaniment of joyous shouts from excited onlookers who craned necks from the dining-room windows. Like a flash of lightening, word of the arrival traveled from person to person and dinner was hastily devoured by many who were too anxious to wait until after the meal to get a glimpse of them. They rushed madly to the Science Building—the Mecca of these Happy Pilgrims who line up to wait their "turn".

The long line decreased gradually as one by one, step by step, they advanced to receive the reward for their patience and hurry away with happy smiles to "pour" over the coveted book.

Every nook and corner was filled with them—the back porch steps, the walks, windows, the Chemistry "Lab", the Rotunda—everywhere, everybody had the mania.

Heads were close together and chatter reached a high pitch.

"Oh, isn't it beautiful? I love the cover, it's so plain, so unique."

"And this dedication. Isn't it sweet? It's just what I'd like to say to my roommate, but could never get up courage to express."

"Here's my picture! Don't I look terrible? My mouth—I know it can't be that large and—those freckles. I just know I'm not that ugly. Isn't it horrible of me?"

"No, I think it's exactly like you! Er-er, by the way, since you got that sun tan the other day your freckles do show up more, don't they?"

"O-o-o, aren't they beautiful; wouldn't it be lovely to be chosen a personality on the campus?

And so for hours far into the night the chatter goes on—exclamations, sighs, criticisms, compliments, and surprises, and the following days are filled with the oft-repeated plea, "Will you autograph my annual, please?"

It's one of the happiest events of the year—one that has been planned and looked forward to since school began last fall. It is the culmination of a year's work—a bird's eye view of 1937 at Farmville S. T. C. It is a valuable memory book of our Alma Mater—one that we shall cherish, and when in years to come we shall turn its pages, it will recall old friends, ambitions, successes and pleasant hours.

Winchell Sympathizes With College Editors

HOLLYWOOD—Walter Winchell rose staunchly to the defense of collegiate press freedom last week, decride recent red-baiting of editors on certain major campi, and blasted away at various school officials, some of whom he's "pretty sure were put on the pay-roll to suppress student expression of thought."

"I don't believe in censorship o fany kind as long as papers are kept clean and free of libel," vigorously declared the columnist-actor-radio commentator in an interview following his Sunday broadcast.

"Student editors, as much as anyone else, have a right to present their views. When censorship steps in, it makes parrots out of us, just as it does under Mussolini, Hitelr, or any of the other dictators."

The keen-eyed man in the blue-serge suit continued his rapid-fire barrage, oblivious of hurrying studio technicians, candid cameramen, and the bustle that ensues after a big network program goes off the air.

Apprised of the action of school administrative authorities who last fall muzzled a student publication after it attacked one of the presidential candidates, Winchell snorted:

"Yes, of course. They would. Administrative control is one of the problems college editors have to face, and nothing can be done about it.

"We had the same thing back in New York." (A college editor there was suspended a few years ago, assertedly because he charged his school with subsidizing athletes.)

Commenting upan a recent incident, wherein a campus editor was labeled 'red' because of his alleged pro-labor and pro-New Deal views, Winchell declared it was "too bad".

A group of students had written a letter of protest to the college daily, saying in part:

"When we . . . get out of school we are confronted by employers who don't like us because we come 'from that red school.' This radicalism is not so funny if it keeps you from getting a job."

The letter also suggested that the editor "change the paper's print to crimson and rename it the Daily Hammer and Sickle."

"I know that college editors have been called 'reds,' and it's foolish," Winchell said. "Even administrative officers have sometimes encouraged such action. I'm pretty sure some of those fellows were put on the pay-roll to do just those things.

"But it would be pretty bad if everything people said about you were true. 'Walter Winchell said this' and 'Winchell said that,' is something I hear every once in awhile. Well, Winchell did NOT say it!

"If I had, I wouldn't have survived as long as I have. Why, do you know how long I've been at this game? Even since 1924. And for four years before that on a vaudeville paper."

No solution to the censor problem is seen by Winchell.

"Censorship is an ever-present reality," he said. "I meet it, too, although not as much as most people. You can't print anything the publishers don't want you to, and in your case the papers are published by the colleges.

"You might possibly print a paper off campus and try to circulate it among the students."

Such a plan, however, would be difficult and probably impractical, he believes.

"I sympathize with the college journalist," Winchell concluded, "and I want you to know I'm for you 100 per cent!"

Chi Phi Spring Party Calls Girls to the "Hill"

It seems as though half the school went away this week-end, but then who wouldn't go when there are such interesting things to do? To the Ring Dance at V. P. I. went Doris Brandis, Katherine Moomaw, Mary Joyner Cox, Katherine Brosius, Estelle Smith, Sara Keesee, Gay Stieffen, Pattie Bounds, Lelia Hill, Frances Lee Russow and Frances Pope.

Other girls going to dances were Phil Schlobalm at West Point and Irma Carpenter at University of Virginia.

The Chi Phi party at Hampden-Sydney must have been good, because S. T. C. was well represented by Chic Dortch, Eugenia Jolly, Kathleen McCann, Nan Seward, Mary Bowles, Lula Windham, Kitty Fitzgerald, Ruth Montgomery, Virginia Bean, Mary Hubard, and Carter Belle Munt. How do they do it?

Dorothy Henderson, Gerry Hatcher, Dot Hatcher, Martha Hamlet and Elizabeth Shipplett went to the Apple Blossom Festival. Susan Lane went visiting in Washington; Frances Maxey, Richmond; Jane Saunders and Louise Anthony in Danville, and Frances Lyons in Lynchburg.

There were many girls, though, who wanted to be at home on Mothers' Day. They were Dot and Doris Adkins, Danville; Louise and Dudley Allen, Hebron; Rebecca Bland, LaCrosse; Army and Betty Butterworth, DeWitt; Helen Briggs, Whaleyville; Hazel Wood Burbank, Hampton; Marguerite Costello, Richmond; Ruth Emma Chambers, Blackstone; Margaret H. Critcher, Roxboro, N. C.; Bonnie Lane, Roanoke; Charlotte Morton, Drakes Branch; Marjorie Nimmo, Suffolk; Virginia Polley, Hollins; Louise Eubank, Chase City; Marion Hardy, Dillwyn, and Elizabeth Kent, Cumberland. May Terrell entertained at her home in Beaver Dam. Anna Shiflett, Virginia Lee Pettis, Marie Eason, and Anne Scott.

Shipplett Leads Princesses; Potter Has Leading Part

Elizabeth Shipplett led the thirty-two princesses down an aisle formed by Massanetten cadets at the coronation of the Apple Blossom Queen Friday, May 6. She carried a golden apple, symbol of the festival. By her side marched the high school princess, with the key to the city. Miss Gretchen Thomson of New Orleans, beautiful young blond with perfect features was crowned Queen. The pageant portrayed the development of festivals from the Stone Age to the present. Lucy Potter former S. T. C. student took one of the leading parts as Goddess of Dawn.

Liz seems to have enjoyed herself thoroughly. The princess were escorted around the city in a Greyhound bus, siren blowing and two handsome cops leading the way. Everywhere the group was siezed by movie and camera men and they crunched pretty pink apples into the microphone.

She: "I simply adore that funny step. Where did you pick it up?"

He: "Funny step nothing! I'm losing my garter." —Log

Freshmen Entertain Juniors

The Junior Class will be entertained at a party in the "Rec" tonight at 9:45 by their sister class, the Freshmen. Invitations were given to the Juniors in the dining hall at lunch yesterday.

Yearly Banquet Held By Honor Fraternity

The Pi Gamma Mu annual banquet was held Tuesday night, May 4, in the tea room. After the banquet informal speeches were given. Guests at this affair were Mr. and Mrs. Holton, Dr. and Mrs. Walmsley, Miss Tucker and Miss Moran.

Band Leader

Tommy Dorsey, who will lead the band playing for Hampden-Sydney finals.

Dorsey Will Play At H-S. C. Finals

Bowles Is Sponsor of the Closing Dances

Tommy Dorsey, America's ace trombonist, and his orchestra will play for the final dances of the Hampden-Sydney German Club. This nationally famous orchestra with its distinctive swing style will be here on Tuesday and Wednesday, June 8 and 9. This was announced by Bill Hopstetter, president of the German Club.

Mary Bowles, escorted by Bill Hopstetter will be one of the sponsors of the dance.

Featured with Dorsey and his orchestra are his three vocalists the charming Edith Wright, a blues singer; Jack Leonard, baritone; and Allen Storr, tenor.

The Comity Club will be elaborately decorated with the colors of Hampden-Sydney, Garnet and Gray.

A large number of alumni and friends are expected to attend. However, tickets will not be sold after the floor has been filled to its capacity. For information about the new ticket plan students are requested to see the officers of the German Club.

Home Ec Department Gives Fashion Show

The girls of the Home Economics department of the Training school and the college gave a fashion show Monday night in the auditorium.

Miss Tupper welcomed the guests and explained that the object of the fashion show was to demonstrate how the girls can make attractive clothes and yet keep within their budget. She pointed out that a recent survey was made of high school girls in the state and it was found that they spend on the average thirty dollars a year for dresses. Therefore, it is most essential that they know how to make the very best use of their money.

Pajamas, silk and cotton dresses, sport and street dresses, and chintz and cotton evening dresses were modeled.

BONERS

The boner pulled by a University of Minnesota freshman who wanted to know "what building the campus is in" was bad, but the one made by an adult visitor to the University of Cincinnati was worse.

A professor took the trouble to conduct the visitor and his party all over the campus and finally to the football stadium. "This," exclaimed the faculty member "is our stadium!"

Impressed the visitor studied the grounds for an instant and turned to the professor: "This is all very nice, but I hear you have a very fine curriculum here. Would you take us through that next?"

Miss Pearl Hardy Receives Praises

S. T. C. Girl Directs Winchester Play Pageant

Mrs. A. H. Eubank, outgoing president of the Blackstone High school paid a tribute to Miss Pearl Hardy, an alumna of this school.

Miss Hardy has served as a teacher of the grammar school first grade for thirty-one years, and will retire at the close of the session. Mrs. Eubank cited particularly her efforts on behalf of welfare work through the P. T. A.

Virginia Boyd Barr directed the pageant, "When Beauty Comes," which was given at the Winchester festival.

One thousand high school students participated in this pageant.

Miss Evelyn Gordon Doyne, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John T. Doyne of Farmville, and Alfred Price, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Price, of Rice, were married Saturday morning at Johns Memorial Episcopal church, by the rector, the Reverend A. Campbell Tucker.

Mr. and Mrs. Price will make their home at Rice.

The bride is an alumna of Farmville S. T. C. and was a student nurse at Johnston Willis hospital, Richmond. Mr. Price attended Hampden-Sydney College, and Maryville College, Tennessee.

Mrs. C. E. Morris of Orange announces the engagement of her daughter, Dorothy Lee, to Mr. Winfrey London Butler 2of Culpeper. The marriage will take place in the early summer.

Annual Staff Has Banquet In Tea Room

The Virginian Staff held a banquet in the tea room Tuesday night. Place cards were in the form of dolls with pictures of the staff members for faces. Everyone was given a gift. Ruth Montgomery was presented with a box in the form of a 1937 annual for her "secrets".

Guests included Mr. and Mrs. McCorkle, Mr. French, Miss Foster, and Miss Bedford.

Charm Chides

We grant you the fact that this modern world is a hurried one, and that we have very little time to spend on minor details. Nevertheless, there are some little rites which would be much improved by exerting an extra five minutes and a goodly quota of care and concentration. The majority of people smear on rouge and powder, dab on some lipstick and are off to a late start. Late because they are so far behind the standard we should have.

Every person whom you meet is almost sure to center his or her attention, first of all, on your face, unless, of course, they have heard it rumored that you are proud possessor of a wooden leg, or that you dye your hair. If you are conscious of the fact that you are looking a trifle droopy at the time, you may perk up and radiate for hours on end to absolutely no avail—if your lipstick is on crooked or is smeared.

The average girl who uses make-up at all, uses much too much. If you have a ugly mouth, there's no use trying to hide it, for the truth will out. Some day you'll go in swimming and it will all wash off! So, follow what nature originally gave you as far as possible. Try to make your cheeks and lips no rosier than nature originally intended. We weary of ever getting to the bottom of the layers and layers of paint attractively or unattractively displayed on some surfaces. And as for those thoughtless females who never use any make-up whatsoever except for special occasions, such as when tripping hither and yon over the week-end, consider your public among your humble schoolmates and repeat!

Spring Fetes Fill Social Calendar

Excerpts from a letter written by a May Day visitor:

To say that I thoroughly enjoyed every minute of my trip to Farmville and through beautiful Virginia is to express my feelings mildly. I was delighted with the college in its lovely cultural surroundings and in what I saw of its fine work. I am definitely of the opinion now that there isn't a finer school with more charming atmosphere anywhere in the country. I think a girl is most fortunate to be a student there and am quite convinced that graduation from there means both a good education and cultural advantages. Unless circumstances change here, my daughter may return with my fullest approbation for a full course toward graduation.

Please say to those in charge of the May Day festival that all of us from Illinois are fully agreed that no more charming and beautiful festival could have been held anywhere than that which we beheld in the Longwood dell on May Day.

Mu Omegas Change Room to Beach Club

Sea breezes and sunburn! Wednesday night the Mu Omega chapter room was transformed into a beach club. Colored stripes of paper covered all furniture and fish, beach balls and sea gulls took the place of wall paper.

The hostesses, the new girls, were dressed in variou beach costumes—bathing suits, shorts, and slacks—an open window provided a sea breeze and all that was missing was the ocean. Even that was remedied after several "cokes" were spilled on the floor.

Refreshments were sandwiches, "cokes", cankes, candy, pop corn, and all-day suckers. The guests soon felt the lulling effect of the atmosphere and departed, hoping to attend an honest-to-goodness beach party later in the summer.

Saturday night at Longwood this sorority held its annual spring banquet. A Shakespearean theme was used throughout the banquet and the color scheme was black and white, the sorority colors.

Miss Purdom entertained the members of the orchestra Tuesday afternoon with a tea at the Cactus Inn.

Alpha Gamma Kappa Picnic

The members of Alpha Kappa Gamma are planning a picnic at Longwood on Wednesday, May 12. Other than the active members, the following are invited: Misses Mix, Mary Clay Hiner, Winnie Hiner, Mary Nichols, Olive Iler, Minnie Rice, Jane Royall, and Mary Finch.

Entertain Pi Kappa Sigma

"Kat" Cox, Elizabeth Crawley, and Ruth Crumley entertained the members of Pi Kappa Sigma sorority at a party in the chapter room on Sunday, May 9.

Sigma Chi Picnic

The Sigma Chi fraternity of Hampden-Sydney College sponsored a picnic Friday afternoon, May 7, at the Longwood cabin. Those girls from S. T. C. who attended were: Virginia Allen, Vera Jacobs, Beckie Sandidge, Anne Kelly, Kathleen McCann, Madeliene and Bess McGlothlin, Martha Meade Hardaway, Catherine Maynard, Ruth Dunnington and Nan Throckmorton.

Cotillion Club Picnic

The members of the Cotillion Club will have a picnic at Longwood next Monday, May 17. Initiation of the goats of the fall and spring terms will be concluded at this time.

Gamma Thetas Entertained

The new members of Gamma Theta entertained the old girls yesterday afternoon with a picnic supper at Longwood.

Alpha Sigma Tau Supper

The pledges of Alpha Sigma Tau entertained the chapter at a late supper party on Wednesday, May 5, in the chapter room. Besides the actives and pledges, Miss Mary Nichols, alumna, was present.

Garden Club Sponsors Tour Of Prominent City Gardens

On Tuesday, April 27, the Longwood Garden Club sponsored a garden tour. The proceeds from this tour are to be used for the restoration of the garden at Longwood.

The tour began and tickets were sold at the garden of Dr. J. L. Jarman. Additional gardens open for the tour were those of Mrs. E. S. Shields, Mrs. J. L. Putney, the Misses London, Mrs. John Lancaster, Mrs. David C. Wilson (Hampden-Sydney) and Poplar Hill, home of Mrs. W. G. Dunnington, where refreshments were served.

Farmville Wins Over Winthrop In Debating And Oratory

Debaters End Year By Many Victories

The third annual Farmville - Winthrop meet which took place on Friday, May 14 was won by Farmville in both debates and oratory. Winthrop won second place in the oratorical contest.

In the afternoon dual debates were held on the national Pi Kappa Delta question, Resolved: That Congress Should be Empowered to Fix Minimum Wages and Maximum Hours for Industry. In the small auditorium Anthelia Robinette and Nora Jones, defending the affirmative for S. T. C. debated Mary Barnes and Mary Ellen Adams of Winthrop, who upheld the negative. Mr. O'Ferrall Thompson, of Farmville, was critic judge of this debate and gave his decision in favor of Farmville's affirmative team.

At the same time in the music room Helen Bryant and Anne Thalhman of Winthrop were debating the question affirmatively with Dudley Allen and Pattie Alston Bounds who debated for S. T. C. on the negative. Dr. D. M. Allan of Hampden-Sydney served as the

Peace Conference Is Held by Pi Gamma Mu

World Peace Conference was held by Pi Gamma Mu as its annual project in the large auditorium on Thursday, May 13.

Members acted as delegates from various countries. The countries and their representatives were: Great Britain, Chic Dortch; United States, Ruth Sears; France, Nora Jones; Japan, Dudley Allen; Italy, Marjorie Robertson; Russia, Ann Scales; Germany, Jean McConnaughey; China, Ann Galusha, and Pan-America, Bess McGlothlin.

United States opened the conference by welcoming all the other countries to the conference. Each representative presented its problems and reasons for rearming. In the end, Pan-America offered the Good Neighbor Policy of the United States and Pan-America as a solution to all the existing evils.

Members used these papers as year projects. Much interest was taken in them, and listeners seemed to enjoy the miniature conference.

Cotillion Club Goats Endure Untold Miseries At Mercy of Old Girls

A long tramp out to Longwood in boiling sun—frantic moments as the fire catches slowly on the last match—briar scratches—smoke in the eyes—too many hot dogs—mountains of potato salad —ice-cream cups that make one long for more—thirst—silly giggles—songs—onionitosis—darkness engulfs the goast as they are blind-folded — imitation whacks and hands stuck in stick dough—a long mysterious tramp through deep forest—a high jump into ice water curling around the ankles—oozy mud between the toes—feathery trickles running over arm and neck—another tramp up steps—silence—darkness— a weird light—a kiss on a cold damp forehead to a tune of distant chanting—Release — Congratulations New Members of the Cotillion Club!

Who Murdered Our Dog?

This morning, a ruthless driver, ran down Jip, Dr. Jarman's dog, and never stopped to pick him up or view the awfulness of his deed.

Never again will Jip frisk about this campus, follow his distinguished master down town or fight cats in the dining room. To us Jip was almost human. To his murderer the little dog was merely an obnoxious object that was in his way, preventing his reaching his destination by a mtaer of seconds. So he ran Jip down, and went his way.

S. T. C. Delegates To Attend Y. W. Conference

Nan Seward, Ruth Curtis Robeson, Carolyn Upshur and Frances Thomas, with Norvell Montague as alternate delegate, will attend a student conference of Young Women's Christian Associations and Young Men's Christian Associations at Blue Ridge, N. C., as representatives of the local Y. W. C. A. This conference will be held from June 8 through June 19.

The conference will include representatives from most of the colleges of the South. Its purpose is to form a forum for the discussion of the problems that face organization of this association on various campuses.

Blue Ridge is near Asheville, in a most mountainous region. Many activities that will add to the pleasure of the group will be planned. During the sojourn in the resort congeniality between the delegates will be advanced, and the promotion of the better type of college life will be the main aim of the convention.

Alpha Phi Sigma Issues Bids To Scholars

The Delta chapter of Alpha Phi Sigma, honorary fraternity for scholarship, has honored the following girls with membership: Eleanor Bell, Mary Brookfield, Hazel Wood Burbank, Ruth Causler, Juanita Carson, Marguerite Costello, Iva Cummings, Margaret Echford, Beulah Ettenger, Louella LaFon, Rosemary Howell, Evelyn Kail, Sara Keesee, Frances Lyons, Mary Walker Mitchell, Mary Louise Stoutamire, Rachel Trent, Jean Watts and Elizabeth Penn Wilkerson.

These girls have shown outstanding scholarship while in college. The formal initiation took place on Tuesday night, May 11, in the Honor Room.

Edna Bolick Is Chosen Officer of Monogram Club

Edna Bolick was chosen president of the Monogram Club Thursday night. Inez Chappell was selected vice-president; Mabel Burton, secretary, and Kathleen Bailey, treasurer.

At this meeting, four girls were initiated into membership in the club. Mary Elizabeth Badger, Sue Eastham, Ellen Gilliam, and Virginia Whitehead Smith became members.

Quarterly Review

The Spring issue of The Farmville Quarterly Review was distributed in the dining room at dinner Tuesday.

Students should start now preparing their articles for next fall's issue of the magazine.

Seniors are urged to subscribe now for next year's magazine.

Bruce Crowell Is Nominated From Floor

May Day Chairman Chosen In Chapel

Bruce Crowell, of Danville, was elected May Day Chairman for 1938 by popular vote in chapel today.

Bruce is a transfer from Stratford College in Danville. She is a member of the junior class. Since her arrival on this campus, she has distinguished herself in the Choir. She belongs to the A Cappella Choir, the Cotillion Club, and Sigma Sigma Sigma sorority. This year Bruce has been Mrs. Fitzpatrick's N. Y. A. assistant and has worked constantly on different phases of "Hansel and Gretel."

Bess McGlothlin, retiring chairman, conducted the voting. Ann Kelly's name was presented as a nominee for the position by the Committee. Bruce's name was nominated from the floor.

Bruce's duties will be to work with members of the May Day Committee, to keep practices and other phases of May Day work going smoothly. She will take charge of the election of a court and queen.

Dr. W. G. Keith Of Winthrop Installs Chapter

Strawberry Leaf Is Reorganized

A new chapter of the Strawberry Leaf was installed on the Farmville campus by Dr. W. G. Keith of Winthrop College on Friday night, May 14. The Strawberry Leaf was founded on the Winthrop College campus and is an organization to recognize ability in forensic activities and service in other fields of debate work.

Dudley Allen and Juanita Callis, the only charter members now in college, were in the installation service. Other charter members are: Agnes Bondurant, Louise Francis, Victoria Gillette, Virginia Hooke, Gertrude Levy, Margaret Pollard, Mildred Slayton, Dr. J. E. Walmsley and Mr. S. M. Holton.

Following the installation Dr. Walmsley announced the new members and the services for which each was awarded this honor. Florence Bress, Pattie Alston Bounds, Nora Jones, Anthelia Robinette, Ruth Sears, Rose Soniers and Janie Lee Young are the new members.

These girls were initiated after the reception given for the visiting debaters.

Dr. Walmsley Is Vice-Counsellor

Dr. J. E. Walmsley attended the regional convention of Pi Gamma Mu May 15 held at University of America, Washington, D. C. This region includes Maryland, District of Columbia, Virginia, and West Virginia.

Dr. Walmsley, vice-counselor, presided at the afternoon meeting. Dr. Lucie, counselor, presided at the banquet meeting. There were many outstanding people attending this meeting including Senator Copeland of New York. Mr. Coyner, Kathryn Jamison, and Doris Carper accompanied Dr. Walmsley to this meeting.

The regional convention will be held at Farmville in 1939.

Beorc Eh Thorn Bids Four Girls

Beorc Eh Thorn, English Honor Society, has elected to membership the following girls: Betty Sue Cummings, Jean McConnaughey, Catherine Pilcher and Katherine Roberts.

These girls chosen for membership have shown creative ability in writing and scholarship in English. The formal initiation took place on Tuesday night, May 18 in the honor room.

Delegates Attend Alpha Kappa Gamma Convention

Elizabeth Shipplett, Jane Royall and Miss Florence Stubbs attended the Alpha Kappa Gamma Convention in South Carolina last week-end.

Delegates from four Circles attended the convention. The circles were Farmville, Chapel Hill, N. C., University of South Carolina, Queen's Chicora, S. C. Altogether there were ten girls and two chaperones.

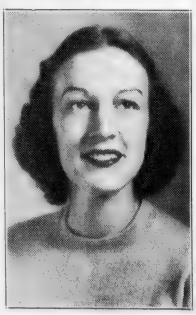
The convention was held at Dean Child's Cottage on Pawley's Island, near Myrtle Beach, S. C. The meetings were very informal.

On Saturday the girls went to Myrtle Beach and visited Brookgreen, the gardens of Anna Hyatt Huntington's estate. She gave the statute of Joan of Arc that stands in the colonnade at Farmville.

The main business of the convention was to plan for the National Convention of Alpha Kappa Gamma to be held here next October.

Dean Childs will speak at this time on Jane Adams, who is the national patron saint of the order, and there will be another outstanding speaker. There will be many members present, and alumni will return for the meeting.

Graduates of 1894 Keep Traditions of Youth Alive



The class of 1894 graduated from this school 43 years ago with only twenty-one members. In 1934 at the fiftieth anniversary celebration the class received the loving cup for having the most members of alumnae to return in proportion to the size of the class. After forty years of being in the world, these twenty-one girls still remembered college days of fun and kept faith.

Never once in all the years these girls have been out of school have they forgotten each other. They have kept alive their spirit of youth by close contact with each other.

Since their graduation, they have kept a continuous circular letter constantly in the mail. As each girl receives the letter, she removes her old letter and adds a new one. Newspaper clippings, especially of happenings in this school are included. Every Farmville May Queen's picture has had its place of honor in this letter.

A cradle roll of all children and grandchildren, dates of marriages and other interesting events in their lives are put in the letter. The members are keenly interested in all happenings of the school, in each other and in life as a whole. Their enthusiasm keeps them always young.

Head of Club

Susan Lane, first officer of the Cotillion Club next year.

Choral Club Elects Robertson, Bell, And Burke

Marjorie Robertson was elected president of the Choral Club on Manday, May 10. Gwen Bell was made vice-president and Elizabeth Burke, secretary of the Club.

Marjorie has served as treasurer of Student Government for the past year. She is Senior representative to Government for the next year. She is a member of the Dramatic Club, Pi Gamma Mu, Cotillion Club, and of Mu Omega Sorority.

Gwen is a member of Alpha Phi Sigma, Campus League; she is secretary of the College Choir and a member of Pi Kappa Sigma sorority.

Jennie Belle Gilliam Is Chairman of Student Standards

Jennie Belle Gilliam has recently been elected chairman of the Student Standards Committee. She has served on the committee for three years and as secretary this year. Jennie Belle is a member of Alpha Kappa Gamma, Kappa Delta Pi, Monogram Club, Dramatic Club and Cotillion Club. She was vice-president of home economics club, and treasurer of the Athletic Association in 1936-37.

The committee elected Mary Jackson as secretary. This will be her first year to observe. She has been hal president during the past year and served on the Freshman Commission.

Psychologist of Hampden-Sydney Tries Hypnotism

Charlottesville, Va. (ACP)—How he has helped students to improve their grades from 2 to 16 points by hypnotizing them was explained to the Virginia Academy of Science by Dr. D. M. Allan, psychologist at Hampden - Sydney College.

I did this, he said, by talking the student into a hypnotic state and then stating with emphasis:

"As a result of this trance your powers of concentration will be greatly increased, your mind will work better and you will not be nervous during examination. You will have great ambition to be successful in your studies and to improve your class records."

After submitting to the experiment, a number of failing, or near failing, individuals climbed from the "D" grade to the letter above. Others climbed from "B" to "A". Two students jumped the entire scale from failure to the honor group, an increase of 16 points in their average grades.

Susan Lane Is President of Cotillion Club; Munt to Lead

Davies Is Secretary; Bailey Is Elected

Susan Lane, a junior of Altavista, was selected a spresident of the Cotillion Club for the coming year at a meeting of the club last Wednesday night. Carter Belle Munt of Petersburg, also a junior, will be leader. Others chosen to head the club were Ducky Davies of Culpeper, secretary-treasurer and Annie Leigh Bailey, of Wakefield, business manager.

All of these girls have been very outstanding in school and social activities during their three years here. Susan Lane was Mardi Gras queen this year and has been in May Court for two years. She is a member of Alpha Sigma Alpha social sorority. Carter Belle Munt was also in Mardi Gras court and May Court this year. She is member of Sigma Sigma Sigma, social sorority.

The Cotillion Club sponsors two big dances during the year, one in the fall and one the spring. The membership is limited to two hundred girls.

Simkins Addresses Palmetto Forum In Washington

Dr. Francis B. Simkins addressed the Palmetto State Voters' Forum at Washington on May 14, using as his topic, "The Life and Services of the late B. R. Tillman". Benjamin R. Tillman was United States Senator from South Carolina, to whom the Palmetto State Voters' Forum is promoting the erection of a monument on the State House grounds at Columbia, S. C.

Dr. Simkins is well informed concerning the South and the affairs of the South, and his book, "The Women of the Confederacy" now on sale is rising to great popularity and demand.

"The Journal of Southern History" published at Baton Rouge, La., contains an article by Dr. Simkins entitled, "Ben Tillman's View of the Negro".

Faculty, Students Visit High School Graduates

Many from the faculty and student body visited in high schools of Roanoke and the surrounding district on last Friday interviewing high school seniors. Those making the trip were: Miss Mary Peck, Miss Grace Moran, Miss Willie London, Miss Lila London, Miss Leola Wheeler, Miss Pauline Camper, Mr. Samuel Graham, Dr. J. L. Jarman, Dr. J. P. Wynne, Miss Mary Nichols, Dorothy Wise, Frances Bland, Katherine Moomaw, Dorothy Eades, Nancy Gray, Marguerite Blackwell, Elizabeth Sieber, Elizabeth LeGrande, Eugenia Reeves, Mary Catherine Nininger, Margaret Carr and Eleanor Haag.

The Roanoke chapter of the Farmville State Teachers College Alumnae held its annual meeting Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Patrick Henry Hotel in Roanoke, Virginia. The program for the afternoon included a talk by Dr. Jarman, two solos, "Indian Love Call" and "Ah Sweet Mystery of Life" by Frances Steed and a talk by Miss Mary Nichols.

A CLASS IN JOURNALISM

This school at present lacks one course that every school with publications should promote. We have excellent courses in English, but no journalism courses are offered to help publications to be put into the best form possible.

In a recent inquiry it was found that on the staff of the Rotunda alone, twenty-five girls would be interested in a class of journalism. This proves that such a course would be welcome.

Our publications have to compete in a wide field with many publications from other schools. Most of those schools have journalism offered or teacher to advise editors, who have definite training, journalistically. If we wish to compare favorably with our competitors, it seems that we should have a chance to learn what is accepted as the best journalism.

We believe the publications would improve considerably and editors would find their jobs easier and more enjoyable if they and their staffs could be taught rules of journalism by an authorized teacher of that course.

SCALLIONS TO CARICATURISTS

Essentially, underneath his hardened exterior, man still loves nice things. He still likes things to be in the best possibe shape and in good order.

There is something about a marked wall, sidewalk or building that insults man's love of the proper order of things. This school, recently, has had her sidewalks, her white posts and her walls marred with words and hideous caricatures. Several groups seem to be attempting to outdo themselves in the effort to return to childhood habits of marking everything in sight.

Painted figures or red paint on the columns of this school is a sacrilege! Black bugs on our walks merely reflect on us as peope. We're supposed to be adults, and marking public property above the age of twelve seems to class people as morons.

We have a beautiful school, and its beauty is certainly not enhanced by caricatures. Such art-inclined societies should not be countenanced by us, as civilized people, if they see fit to reveal such complete lack of adherence to the rules for living in society.

SENIOR PERSONALITIES

Dorothy Wise, former president of the Y. W. C. A.

Dot's a girl that—well, it's just being trite to simply list a few adjectives in trying to describe so complex a personality. Beneath that gracious and poised manner there is a great store of fun and a most excellent sense of humor. To her friends—and there are oh, so many of them—she is not altogether the demure person that she sometimes seems to be. Far from it! She is always ready for playing and enjoys every minute of her very active life. Her sincerity and loyalty to her friends have been outstanding traits of her fine character which have endeared her to the student body.

Many and varied have been Dot's activities. Last year she was tapped by Alpha Kappa Gamma in recognition of her outstanding qualities of leadership. Dot served as hall president on the Houes Council. She was treasurer of the Y. W. C. A. last year and this year was the president of that organization. In that capacity she served as ex-officio member of the Student Council. Also, she is an honorary member of orchesis, belongs to the College Choir and Choral Club, and served on the Chapel Committee, Student Day Committee, and Student Standards Committee. Dot was in May Court this year—is a member of Cotillion Club and Pi Kappa Sigma Sorority.

Home is one's dwelling place.
Home is where we live in happiness.
Edgar A. Guest has said,
"It takes a heap o' living in a house to make a home." We are
"at home" there with our friends,
our parents, and our loved ones.
Yet home is more than a dwelling place. Home is the place in which there is a symphony of souls, a harmony of ideas, jolly laughter, sympathetic words, and a great understanding among its dwellers.

White Highways
By James Still

I.

I have gone out to the roads that go up and down
In smooth white lines, stoneless and hard;
I have seen distances shortened
between two points,
The hills pushed back and bridges thrust across
The shallow river's span.

II.

To the broad highways, and back again I have come
To the creekbed roads and narrow winding trails
Worn into ruts by hoofs and steady feet;
I have come back to the long way around,
The far between, the slow arrival.
Here is my pleasure most where I have lived and called my home.

III.

O do not wander far
From the rooftree and the hill-
gathered earth;
Go not upon these wayfares measured with a line
Drawn har dand white from birth to death.
O quiet and slow is peace, and curved with space
Brought back again to this warm homing place.

ROTUNDA REVERBERATIONS

First place of the week goes to our campus champion "date sitter." Not a measly one-hour "sitter" . . . never let it be said . . . this little "sitter's" minimum is FIVE hours. Why, whether you walk, sit or even run this marvelous bit of humanity is right with you . . . as close as the well known leech.

Vera Ebel is all smiles again . . . wonder if all those phone-calls she was getting from Tommy the other night had anything to do with the sudden change in her disposition? Keep up the good work, Vera. We think you've got the Randolph-Macon business a mile or so in the shade!!

Some of the High School seniors would like to know just why some of our college girls came to the dance the other night dressed so informally? Surely they haven't forgotten that they were once mere high school girls and that things like that made them see red. Perhaps that has been too long ago . . . or maybe they're just P. C.'s!!

For the best sports of the week . . . or many other weeks . . . we nominate Sue Owen and Gina Jarman . . They've graced the campus with their presence for a long time now . . . and not one grumble have we heard from them. Barrels of orchids to two little girls who can take it with their chins up . . . even when the punishment is a bit on the much too longish side.

A couple of neat definitions: Slumming: Visiting around in the minds of some of the people I know . . . Virtue is a state of mind bounded on the North, South, East and West by creeds and a few domestic necessities.

The last phase of Cotillion Club initiation is all over . . . sighs of relief are heard from the goats on every hand . . . Lloyd particularly carried out instruction to the letter??

"Lindy" . . . Shannon's, you know . . . is definitely dodging Will and Kathleen these days. Lip-stick is not one of the things he's fondest of!!

We hear that a certain Noble young gentleman at a neighboring institution wouldn't be seen with any S. T. C. girl by name . . . why they might be detrimental to his . . . Oh! too, too perfect reputation . . . in fact 'tis said that he never in all his life really dreamed such a group of girls existed . . . Fie! Fie! . . . How could such an utterly charming person bring so much unhappiness to seven hundred girls. Indeed if he could only see the number of fair maidens that are just . . . ah . . . crazy for him . . . he'd go hide that handsome (?) face of his for a couple of eternities!!!

Suggestion that a certain group of parvenu's adopt the following for their theme song: "He was a self-made man! And he worshipped his creator."

LIBRARIAN COLUMN

By KATHLEEN SAWYER

What is more intriguing on a lazy afternoon than a mystery novel? Our answer would be two mystery novels! Therefore, we are offering a selection for you to choose from.

Definitely a 1937 model from beginning to end is James D. Perry's "Murder Walks the Corridors." Incidentally, we wouldn't suggest this as a gift for anyone threatened with an operation, for the scene of this hair-raising tale is laid within hospital walls!

More in accord with our idea as to the proper setting for a murder is John Hunter's "Three Die At Midnight." This "thriller" is simply bubbling over with gangsters; and there is, of course, a "sweet young thing" involved in the mixup. Needless to add, the heroine has lips, "rich and red, soft as satin, full and warm."

In step with the times is "The Case of Nalverne Diamonds", by Leonard Gribble. This mystery is as English as the Coronation, and it has as its background castles, necklaces, lords, ladies—and what have you.

For the sport fiends, we recommend "Dead Is the Door-Nail." Paul Hazgard provides a hard-boiled sporting reporter to dig out the murderer of the world's champion tennis player. This book should be sampled for (in sports terminology) "it has speed and smoke on the ball."

For you phychology students, we suggest Lawrence Smith's "Girl Hunt." Lovely Ruth Baynton, the center of attraction, walks out on Cousin John, "a psycho-physiological case occasioned by severe traumatic disturbances resulting in a semi-neuryprological condition of the emotional center." Whether or not you understand all of that (we don't) we want to tell you that it doesn't keep the book from being decidedly eventful.

Don't forget to take one of these new "detectives" on the roof with you!

LOOKING 'EM OVER

By Mary Mahone

Our politicians seem to be getting more playfull all the time. Even the senate staff if not too scared to be the scene of a practical joke. Senator Ed Fletcher, who is famous in the California Senate for introducing bills for the exclusive benefit of San Diego, his own county, was the butt of a legislative joke last week in Sacramento.

To the Senate reading clerk went a bill which Senator Fletcher's colleagues had drawn up in the familiar Fletcher manner. Droned the clerk in his most serious monotone: "The sum of $6,635,00.03 is hereby appropriated from the unappropriated money of the general fund of this state for the purpose of dredging Pee Wee River in the county of San Diego, which river flows two and one-fourth inches of water during three days of each year, when and if it rains." This makes a rather funny story, but even more humorous is the fact that the Senate jokester seemed to be afraid the bill would pass. At their request the Finance Committee attached an official amendment reducing the amendment to three cents.

In New Orleans, George Kenan, a sixteen year old soft ball player, struck a ball and sadly watched it drop on the tender of a passing locomotive. The next day when the locomotive rumbled past the sand lot on its return trip the fireman tossed batter Kenan a new ball.

The coronation is over but stories keep drifting back. There was dancing in Westminster Abbey. It seems that the police officials got anxious at the last minute and marched a gang of heavy booted workmen into separate section of the grand stand and told them to dance and stamp to test the strength of the structures.

After all the stories told of the infallibility of blood hounds it is a pleasant change to hear a story in which the relentless hound doesn't bring his victim to justice. In Pine Bluff, Arkansas, police set a blood hound and a posse on the trail of three youths who had escaped from the Arkansas Boys' Industrial School. Posing as members of the posse the three passed through Jefferson Springs a few days later accompanied by the blood hound.

Schools for brides, which originated in New York several years ago, have gained great popularity in the East where they were introduced by the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. The students, from sixteen to eighteen years old are enrolled for a two years course. From nine o'clock in the morning to four o'clock in the afternoon they have classes in household management, dietetics, hygiene, western and eastern cooking, dressmaking, embroidery, and how to stop the baby from crying at three a. m. The hope-to-be brides also receive special instruction on the care of husbands and babies, on the art of being charming, on behavior, on the proper manner of serving a husband, on flower arrangement, and on music. An even more important function, however, is to give oriental girls the training they would have received a home under the ol dfamily system, but which they do not receive now.

Billy Payne, blue-eyed and energetic five year old has lived in silence all his life in the mountains near Knoxville, Tennessee. For years he heard no human voice. He had no playmates and made known his simple wants to his parents by pointing and other gestures. A few months ago Billy and his parents came to the Volunteers of America home in Knoxville. The authorities thought Billy, like his parents, was deaf and mute. 'It was by accident I learned he could hear," said Captain Thorn. "I blew my automobile horn and saw him jump."

Billy was placed in the home's kindergarten school. His kindergarten teacher said he has a vocabulary of one hundred words now and is learning rapidly.

Archery Team Is Selected From Try-Outs

Blankenship Shoots Highest Point Score

From those who have been trying out for archery all season, the eight girls getting the eight highest scores have been chosen for the archery team. They are Mary Virginia Blankenship, Anne Billups, Ruth Sears, and Sara Keesee. The highest score was shot by Mary Virginia Blankenship with a 130, while Anne Billups took the second highest with a score of 121. Both these girls will get Monogram credit for their work. Other girls who entered the tournament were: Dot Eades, Lula Windham, and Ivylyn Jordan.

The selection of a team does not bring a close to the archery session but opens it to more possibilities. The purpose of the team this year is to group a few girls who can shoot fairly high scores and who can give the student body an idea of the place of archery among them.

Louise Anthony is manager of archery for the rest of the year.

Mechanical Grader Is Used

Athens, Ga. (ACP)—Ho hum! Professors at the University of Georgia sit back and watch their mechanical test-paper grader do the marking.

This electric device is capable of correcting exams of the true-false or the multiple choice variety and, at the same time, record the grade on a meter, said F. S. Beers, examiner of the University system of Georgia.

It works on the principle that a soft pencil mark conducts electricity, stated Mr. Beers, who helped develop the robot-scorer. As each paper is inserted in the machine, electrode blades descending on the paper will determine which quations have been answered correctly.

Soon the nation's leading universities will have the new machanes, for 25 of them are now being built.

Archery:

The A. A. field is always full of enthusiasts. Girls are hurrying out to practice as much as possible, because they realize they will not have much more time to play this game of Dan Cupids. Dot Wise goes out early in the morning—she believes in "waking up with the sun"—or maybe the old saying, "the early bird gets the worm." Maxine Burks also keeps in practice, as well as her assistant Cassie Coleman. Maybe all these girls realize that with the summer months coming on—they need a little protection—One never knows—does one?

Tennis:

The tennis doubles tournament is still going strong. Girls trip out to the courts every day, playing off matches. Some come back defeated, but this does not bother them. The next day finds them back on the courts playing again. Incidentally, the courts are much better now, and the pleasure of playing tennis is just beginning to be realized. Orchids to these girls of the court—who are taking part in the tournament!

Disappearance In Three Acts Thrills and Chills The Brave

With such an eerie-sounding admonition as "Don't come to Sing tonight if you have a weak heart" to arouse curiority, everybody went auditorium - ward promptly.

Proud possessors who had once boasted of "heartitis", "beating" hearts, and other heart ailments to throw a damper on their roommates' ecstatic description of the "last operation" now slid steathily into their seats and hoped furtively that those roommates wouldn't remind them of the "once-boasted" heart troubles.

After Virginia Richie played and sang her delightful new composition, the lights went out, a death-like hush stole over the audience, and everyone prepared for "Disappearance in Three Acts" by grabbing the arm of the occupant of the next seat. The curtain rose upon the commencement exercises of the "Sing-Sing School for the Simple Minded" with the aptly-named occupants there of slinking in to receive their well-deserved diplomas, but, just as the intelligent (?) looking professor was about to perform her duty, the lights went out, a blood curdling scream rent the air, and pandemonium reigned (drip by drip as the interlocutor capably described it). When the lights came on again there stood one of the graduates, Miss Ada Sandwich minus her head (mirabile dictu!) A detective was hastily sent for, and, brilliantly displaying the ingenuity of his profession, stared dumbly at the unfortunate lass, then sat down to serve the mysterious case. Soon the villian appeared at he window waving aloft poor Miss Sandwich's head and the curtain rang down on his piercing scream which sent chills over the enthralled audience.

The next scene took place in a street car which clanged along tossing its occupants from side to side until it almost jerked them out of their seats when it stopped to admit a swarthy-looking man garbed in a black hat and a cloak which protruded on one side most mysteriously. He took a seat and the occupants resumed their tossing until they were rudely jerked forward again as the car was stopped—this time to allow a dizzy looking blond to enter. She attracted the attention of the darksome stranger who, having moved up to sit beside her, "fell" so hard for her that a bundle (Miss Sandwiche's head) rolled from under his cloak when he hit the floor. But he regained it and dashed madly away ending scene two.

Scene three opened in the unfortunate Miss Sandwich's home where her little brother was seen rapidly turning the pages of a book in the process called studying. He was startled by the appearance of his sister with a diploma in her hand and nothing in her head, since it was still missing. To his anxious inquiry as to the whereabouts of her hat rack, Miss Sandwich shrugged her shoulders unknowingly. But his question was soon answered.

Darkness covered the scene and pandemonium reigned again (this time in torrents) until the lights came on and (mirabilius dictu) there stood Miss Sandwich, the beheaded graduate who now came out a "head"!

Farmville Wins Over Winthrop

critic judge of this debate and gave a decision in favor of the negative team.

On Thursday evening at eight o'clock an oratoriacl contest between the two colleges was held in the small auditorium. Again S. T. C. was victorious when Juanita Callis rated first. Mary Barnes of Winthrop was second place. Helen Bryant spoke on 'Common Sense", "Casties in Spain" furnished a subject for the oration by Juanita Callis. 'At Peace With the World" by Mary Barnes followed. Lorana Moomaw used as her subject — "What Shall We Conserve."

Mr. Tucker Doyne, Mr. O'Ferrall Thompson, and Rev. R. O. Bryant, all of Farmville, served as judges of the oratorical contest.

After the decisions were given members of the Debate Club entertained the visiting debaters, the judges and faculty members at a reception in the Student Building lounge. Anthelia Robinette, former president of the Debate Club presented Dr. Walmsley with a gift in appreciation of his valuable services as debate coach and adviser throughout the year. In recognition of Anthelia Robinette's services in the Debate Club, Juanita Callis, the new president, presented her a gift.

The contest marks the end of the appearance in debating of Anthelia Robinette who is a senior this year. This is the first year that Anthelia has participated in intercollegiate debates but in that time she has done excellent work and attained proficiency in debate and oratory in Pi Kappa Delta.

Other members of the Debate Club have done outstanding work this year: Florence Bress, Pattie Bounds, Nora Jones, Ruth Sears, and Rose Somers have been recognized by Pi Kappa Delta, national forensic fraternity.

Dudley Allen, who has been debating for Farmville for three years, also won special distinction in Pi Kappa Delta and wears the diamond set key of that fraternity.

Winning both the debates and oratorical contests in the meet with Winthrop brought to a victorious close the work of the Debate Club for this year.

Freshmen Unveil Mystery Surrounding Junior Party

"Come to the Rec at ten—and bring a laundry bag." These were the somewhat unique summons which caused a large number of Juniors to scamper down to the Rec, Wednesday night, to be entertained at a party given by their sister class.

After a few minutes of dancing, during which none of the guests had as yet discovered what it was all about, the cloud of uncertainty was lifted by the announcement (of that very excellent Mistress of Ceremonies, Mary Page Huff) that a Scavenger Hunt was soon to get under way.

With shouts of glee, jovial Juniors and foolish Freshmen frisked up and down steps and rollicked down the halls, making extraordinary requests, and doing bits of still more extraordinary "shoplifting" as some of our fair Titian felt handfuls of hair snatched from their heads, or the little girl with the big hero at Yale discovered that her Eli sticker had been stripped from the mirror. Seniors entered their rooms—to discover with alarm that their bureau

Juniors Win Baseball Game From Freshmen

Red and Whites Battle to Finish

Bringing the baseball season to an end the juniors defeated the freshmen 10-9 on Monday, May 17, in a game full of excitement and suspense. Both red and white teams played hard and took the lead at intervals.

The juniors, winning the toss, chose to bat and succeeded in scoring six runs which placed them ahead until the third inning when Adams and Jeffries reached base and were brought in by Johnson's two-bagger over left field.

Gwaltney, Oaks and Copley scored before the last out. Owing to a lack of players, each team used only eight men.

Chappell and Evelyn Mann, the junior battery, led the upperclassmen in field work and batting. Mann connected five hits out of five times at bat; Chappell and Gilliam pounded Adams for four each.

With no competition from either green and white teams this game adds a few points toward the color cup for this year.

The line-ups were:

Johnson, c. ..... Mann
Adams, p. ..... Chappell
Oaks, 1b. ..... Gilliam (C)
Jeffries, 2b. ..... Phelps
Gwaltney, 3b. ..... Rucker
Copely, rf. ..... Murdom

How splendid we're looking these days with our shorter skirts, our brighter dresses and our frills. We also can boast of fresh coats of tan; new white oxfords and multi-colored anklets!

We seem to believe the Tennysonian adage about a man's fancy lightly turning amorously to us in the spring-time! From the looks of our swains on the campus, we have every right to claim we've proved the adage and also proved we're attractive.

If we want to be truly dainty, we must recognize our youth and further it. A delicate flower-odor in some of the newer perfumes or a new cluster of curls on a cocky young heat will do the trick! Sometimes wonders can be accomplished by a change of lipstick. Eight good hours of sleep, an occasional tennis game or an afternoon dip in the pool will add that lustre to skin and snap to eye necessary to finish us up as "spring chickens" with pu-lenty of assets! Let's put the accent on youth!

OUR MAGAZINE WILL BE WHAT?

It's just a little book—a miniature book—a magazine. Not just any magazine but our magazine! A dark blue cover whose snowy white letters tell us it is the Farmville Quarterly Review.

To you it may not mean so much—it's just another thing the school gave you. To someone else—someone who has worked long hours—someone who has seen a story spring from her pen and whose patience, whose eagerness and whose real love for literature has made her write and rewrite the story many times—shapping each sentence, each tiny word—making them fit and give expression to the story as an artist brush glides so skillfully, so carefully, over the canvas bringing to fullest life dead expressions—to her this magazine means everything. It means that now she will see her story printed. Now she will realize the thrill of having her story put where hundreds can read it.

These is nothing so encouraging to young journalist-lovers of literature as to have their works recognized and there is nothing so discouraging as to have their works rejected or ignored. While the stories and poems that are published in the Farmville Quarterly Review may not be works of genius they express unusual literary talent. These stories and poems represent the very best in literature the school has to offer.

It is a noteworthy honor to have a piece of yours published in the magazine as all who have tried to get your favorite in know.

If you do not think the magazine is as good as you would like to see it, why don't you try your hand at helping improve it? It is our magazine, you know. The staff only helps the faculty select the best of what we give. They put it together and give it to us. But you see we really write it.

The magazine is just a year old and it has made great progress during its short life, and it is up to us to make it have even greater progress in its second year. It is our chance—what are you going to do with it?

SENIOR PERSONALITIES

Zaida Thomas, maid of honor to the 1937 May Queen.

Zaida is as fine as she is pleasing to the eye and that's saying a lot. She has a gentle air of well-bred dignity that distinguishes her from other people. A high sense of loyalty makes Zaida a true friend, and her ready laugh is musical, making you labor to provoke it.

Our maid of honor in this year's May Day is strictly feminine. She is one of those lucky people who look immaculate with apparently little effort. A lovely smile greets you when you meet Zaida on the hall, making you happier for having seen her.

Quiet leadership is typified in Zaida. Alpha Kappa Gamma has recognized this quality as has the whole school in trusting her to do many tasks. When she has a piece of work to do she does it well in spite of her fragile appearance. She is editor of next year's handbook, served on the magazine staff her junior year, was vice-president of Beorc Eh Thorn her senior year, treasurer of Pi Gamma Mu, chairman of Student Standards Committee and a member of Kappa Delta Pi. She belongs to the Cotillion Club and Sigma Sigma Sigma sorority.

Being around Zaida is a pleasure because she finds being alive fun and she inspires her friends to feel just that way about life.

Letters to Editor

Dear Editor,

I read your article on journalism in the Rotunda last week and it interested me very much. I think it would be an excellent idea for this school.

I think that if we wish to compete with other publications, we should have a chance to study journalism and try to make our publication the very best. It is a course that many of us know very little about, and I feel sure it would help the editors and their staffs to make a much better publication.

I think we would find such a course interesting and beneficial to the entire student body and especially to the editors and staffs of the publications.

A Student

Dear Editor:

The staff of the Farmville Quarterly Review wishes to thank through this column all those persons who contributed material for the Spring issue of the Review, both those whose material was published and those whose was not. It is our hope that the students whose work was accepted will not cease contributing, having achieved success in this issue, but will continue writing. It is our hope, too, that those students whose work was not accepted will not become discouraged, but will try for the succeeding issue during the coming year.

We also wish at this time to express our appreciation of the untiring services of the members of the Faculty Committee in criticizing, editing and proof reading of copy, and their wise guidance in various matters pertaining to the publication of the Review.

The splendid cooperation of the Farmville Herald, publishers of the Review, greatly facilitated our work and to them we express our appreciation.

Norvell Montague,

ROTUNDA REVERBERATIONS

By Liz Carroll

'Tis nearly June, that wonderful month for brides. Looks like Annie Leigh Bailey or should we say Merryman stole a march or two on us . . . she just got too tired of waiting. We wish you thousands of tons of happiness, Annie Leigh!!

Speaking of that blissful state of wedlock . . . it's getting to be a habit around campus. Nancy Sellman has that far away look in her eyes . . . The reason? A dashing young Yankee from Roanoke College. Nellie Pierpont is another one who will bride it after she gets her degree in June. More power to you, girls! 'Tis a consumation devoutly to be wished . . . the life of an old maid school teacher is definitely something we can do without.

Still more romance! Lois Powell is sporting Virgil Mayes' Kappa Sig pin. She says it really doesn't mean anything . . . but the evidence is slightly pointed the other way.

Among the people we nominate to the depth of perdition are those girls who make a passtime of snaking every man that comes along. One of these bright sunny days several young ladies are going to wake up with a bitter dose of their own medicine. May the dose be a bitter one!!

Nature walks have become quite the vogue! Of course the beauties of nature are wonderful and all that . . . sometimes the after effects are a bit on the itchy side. Susan and Margaret seem to be enjoying this malady at present.

Once again we have a group of fair damsels reigning over the campus . . . a few of them are seniors, too . . . it does seem a bit unfair that they should be forced to spend the last week of their college life on campus just because they didn't attend chapel regularly. Could it be that chapel isn't very interesting, or what? Surely there must be something radically wrong somewhere . . . perhaps we just get too bored and too hungry at that point to inflict such punishment on ourselves.

What has happened to Chi? Several other organizations seem to have put them completely in the shade of late. Are they trying passive resistance . . . or are they trying? Come on Chi! Let's have a little action. Complaints are pouring in from all sides, aren't you going to do something about it?

Then there's the one about the little girl who became very sweet and demure the last few weeks of school. A date to finals? Well, keep on hoping. You still have several days grace. In that time you should be able to pull the wool over the said young gentleman's eyes . . . or maybe that snaking gag will work again!!

Ruth Montgomery had a terrible time the other night. Her date evidently wasn't in the best of health.

LIBRARIAN COLUMN

By Kathleen Sawyer

Did you see the Coronation? You did? Then the column this week isn't for you. You didn't? Well, you're just the person I'm writing to. There are so many splendid books about some phase of the recent ceremony that you just must read one if you weren't in London for the world's greatest event.

Coronation Commentary, by Geoffrey Dennis, justifies the position of the British king. The author says "We are a grown-up people. We have outgrown dictators and republics. We have had king-killing, once, long ago . . . The king is good enough for us. Leave him alone.

An exceedingly interesting chapter is given to a well-balanced study of the recent crisis. There is evidenced warm sympathy for Edward VIII, who, according to one suggestion of Mr. Dennis, was forced into abdication by a raffish group in London society. The conclusion, however, is that Edward "left his land with kingly dignity . . . We saw him go, with love, and pity, and cynical relief . . . The tribal Emblem in danger, the tribe did not desert it, but rallied around it more stoutly."

Another understanding interpretation of the kingship is W. G. Shear's The King. For a really excellent history of the place of Britain's rulers, one should read this book.

An intensely interesting volume is the English Coronation Ceremony. Written by E. F. Twining, it is illustrated with thirty plates in color and half-tone. The Times Literary Supplement says of it: "For its purpose, that of allowing the modern rite to be followed step by step, nothing better could be desired."

One of the foremost biographers of the day, Hector Bolitho, has written of the man who remains the English king in the hearts of many British subjects. King Edward VIII raises and answers a multiplicity of questions concerning the abdication. Did the English government force Edward to abdicate? What did the Cabinet think about his attitude toward the poor and their problems? What suddenly turned Edward's customary generous nature into a selfish one? What manner of man was he?

The truth about all this and much else is disclosed in Bolitho's Edward VIII.

Don't forget to put one of these books on your "must" list the next time you are shopping.

INTERCOLLEGIATE NEWS

By Elizabeth Burke

And then there was the Frosh who made a bright remark about Petree's bald pate, to which the witty professor replied, "I'd rather be bald on the outside than on the inside."

—Alabama (Exchange)

Don't eat foods that are supposed to be "good for you" if you can't stand their taste, says Dr. Manville of University of Oregon. If a so-called beneficial food is repellent to your taste, leave it alone or you may develop rheumatism, hay fever, or eczema.

Do profs read our lengthy examinations and term papers as painstakingly, as lovingly, as we write them? Most of us have merely wondered about it and let it go at that, but a coed at Marquette was smart enough to find out the answer. After writing five pages on a logical exam, she came to the logical conclusion that she probably dropped the prof along the way of page 2. So she came to a full stop and wrote: "I'll bet you haven't read this far and to prove it, I'm going to tell you about the swell week-end I had and I bet you won't know the difference."

And he didn't!

Insanity is on the increase. Already more beds are being occupied by mental cases in the United States than by patients hospitalized from all other combined." A black horizon is presented by Dr. Earl Crafts, Ohio State University.

"Double feature shows are the third stage of movie evaluation," says a writer in the Silver and Gold, student paper at the University of Colorado.

"First they had silent ones; the next group talked, and now the ones they show in double bills smell!"

If you want to get the best possible marks on final exams, don't study in long unbroken stretches.

This is the warning of Dr. Reeby L. Cunningham, University of California physicianf for women.

"Some vigorous activity like a brisk walk or a game of handball during recreation periods would refresh the student and send him back to his books with an entirely different attitude," she said.

The principal tiring effect of concentrated study is the weariness of the eye muscles. Any activity which focuses the eye for a period on more distant objects will relieve the fatigue.

LOOKING 'EM OVER

By Mary Mahone

With the number of divorces rapidly increasing in almost every state, South Carolina has ratified its ban on divorces for another year. It will continue to be one of the easier places in the United States to get married (no license delay) and the only place where it is impossible to obtain a divorce. The state's constitution of 1895 reads: "Divorces from the bonds of matrimony shall not be allowed in this state." According to the South Carolina law, a couple may gain a legal separation and live apart as they please so long as they do not attempt to remarry. Citizens of another state granted a divorce by that state may become citizens of South Carolina, and remarry, but a citizen of South Carolina who has married in South Carolina may not obtain a divorce in another state and return to South Carolina to remarry. It is all very puzzling. The majority of South Carolina citizens who have obtained divorces outside of the state and have remarried are not legally married.

Buffalo, New York, has recently established a city zoo. It is growing rapidly. The Lion's Club gave a lion. The Boy Scout "Cub Pack" sent a bear cub. The zoo at Toronto, Ontario sent two Candadian geese. The Buffalo Ad Club gave a Buffalo. Yet—the donor of the new skunk, the management said, would remain anonymous.

The motion pictures have often been blamed for their influence on the younger generation but credit should be given where credit is due and it was undoubtedly "G-man" films that first interested Robert Schaeffer, aged eight years, and Jack Hauser, 5, in forming a G-man squad. With toy guns and disguises supplied by their parents, they set up headquarters in a shack. Last week when agent Schaeffer strolled into his headquarters, he encountered a stranger who gave him a dollar and told him to keep his mouth shut. The embryo detective sneaked out to the street and signaled a policeman. "I've just captured a criminal," he exclaimed. In the shack the policeman arrested Owen Biskul, a convict who had just escaped from two Federal officers.

Speaking of precocious children, Donald Henry of Neenah, Wisconsin seems well on his way to a term in the big house. Several stitches were required to close a gash in his father's scalp where the eight months old Donald knocked his father out with a meat hammer. Remember the name; the papers will probably be full of Donald if he keeps on at this rate.

To illustrate the railway service and the effective fire service of the present day—In Kalamazoo, Michigan, Anne Wilson boarded an express train for Chicago. Almost an hour later she remembered that she had forgotten to turn off an electric curling iron at home. Hastily she scribbled a note and tossed it out of the window as the train stopped at Niles. The station agent picked it up and telegraphed to the Kalamazoo fire department which arrived just in time to put out the fire.

Many people have wondered what the inside of a sound truck looks like. One person went so far as to investigate, but he was so impressed by one item that he completely forgot everything else. The thing that caught his eye was a sign, next to the driver's seat reading: "Please do not swear in the presence of the amplifier."

City life is depressingly artificial for dogs decided Dr. A. Maurice Stuart so he built the dog bath club on East Fifty-Seventh Street convenient to the towering terraced apartments of the Sutton Place section. There, like the wealthy mistresses in their own exclusive clubs, a dog can get back into shape.

Charm Chides

Summer and vacation which is rapidly creeping up on us have countless good points. And yet, there are some bad points, too. Just because of pure laziness, we will lose contact with many of our classmates. One can write a fairly passable epistle in ten minutes, and a good one in half an hour. Why can't we take time off from the hustle and bustle of our summer social engagements to pen a line or two to the gals we chum with during nine months of the year?

It is always grand to get a lot of mail (letters, not male) in the summer. It gives you that pleasant feeling of superiority when the nosey mail-man hands them in. If you don't happen to be taking trips, it helps to hear about the trips of others, and vice versa.

Even if you don't have time to write to her long and lingeringly about what you are doing, at least she will be able to ask the leading questions when you do get back together again: "What on earth

Days Are Numbered Until Vacation Begins

For weeks it seems as though we've been hearing the same refrain: only thirty more school days; only twenty-five more days of school; fifteen, ten, and now, believe it or not, it's only eight! And counting Sundays. Commencement, and everything else, it still isn't even two weeks. And once more the refrain changes, and this time it's: home in two weeks! Two weeks and three days, and I'll be at the beach! Just think, in only two weeks—!

And now, the big theme is—where are you going this summer? To those of us who will spend the summer at home, there's the promise of old friends, old places, old ways of having fun, and all of the beloved memories, dear since childhood.

Then, for those who are headed for the mountains, there's the fun that only mountains and cool lakes can offer; horse-back riding, hikes, swimming, driving, boat races, camp fires, and picnics.

Or, perhaps you are going to one of the thousand sea-side resorts dotted liberally along the coast from Maine to Florida. What more could a heart desire than those precious hours of baking in the sun, quick excited dashes into the ocean, speed-boats and aquaplaning, clam bakes, beach picnics, long swims, fishing excursions, diving, dancing at the Galleon or the Pier, and the even roll of a boat, sailing in the path of the moon? What else, indeed, was summer made for? Nothing, except gaiety, health, fun, and the happy, light-hearted laughter of youth-on a vacation!

Songs for The Lovers
By Elaine Emans

I

Let us be true, Love, with the faithfulness
That twin water follows twin across the deep,
Unfathomable blue. Oh, let us keep
This lovely priceless pearl that we possess
Unblemished all our days. Love, let us press
Upward together when the way is steep
And rout the various enemies that creep
Stealthily to our world to gain access.

II

For then will Life, which is already dear,
Grow dearer and more lovely to the eye,
And then will peace and certitude and cheer
Come in and sup with us and not pass by.
And oh, for then by listening we may hear
Harp music floating downward through the sky!

Love Is a Little Thing
By Archibald Rutledge

I

"Love is a little thing", I heard it said;
"A childish dream! a tremulous rainbow hung
In vanishing beauty; a confection fed
To visionary women and the young.
But we are made for higher tasks; for those
That clamor for an iron conquering;
Let weaklings sip the dew upon the rose;
Life calls for heroes. Love's a little thing."

II

A little thing? Then naught at all are these:
Glory, with all her solemn flags unfurled;
God, and our dreams divine that toward Him roam;
The music of all the birds in all the trees;
The might of all the waters of the world
As one vast tidal wave deep-thundering home.

I Have Seen Glory Fade
By Archibald Rutledge

I

I have seen glory fade, and I have heard
A silence after trumpets. Fortune wanes,
And triumph falters. The resplendent sword
Of valor rusts. Of grandeur, what remains?
Fame's music sounds, and then the music ends;
Even sweet hope herself declines and dies.
Despite all courage, strength to weakness tends.
There's but one thing that every change defies.

II

From year to year its beauty and its power
Ascend amid defeats and fading prides.
With all else dying, it will come to flower;
With all else failing, nobly it abides;
Its virtue, 'gainst all enemies prevails:
If love be truly love, it never fails.

Seven Girls Complete Tests In Senior Life Saving

Mrs. Fitzpatrick To Award Badges For Completed Work

Marjorie Nimmo, Sara Keesee, Ellen Conyers, Dot Fisher, Catherine Underwood, Margaret Thomas, and Louise Walmsley have completed the various tests for the Senior Life Saving Badge. Mrs. Fitzpatrick has been coaching the class which is held every Friday afternoon.

Sara Button, Jeanne Clark and Catherine Newman expect to complete the tests soon. All these girls who have worked constantly for the past quarter will receive badges in June.

Testing has been given on the standard life saving requirements. To be qualified for the course one must be at least eighteen years old and must be able to swim eighteen lengths of the pool.

Exams in life saving have been given once annually since 1935. That year eleven girls were awarded badges, and last year eight girls passed the course.

Miss Rice has studied at Columbia, Chicago, and Harvard and has also studied under a Doctor of Philosophy from Sweden.

She is really a part of the growth of our school for she has witnessed its progress from one small building to the large, beautiful place it is today. She has seen hundreds of girls come and go—come to remain two or four years and then go out to take their places at the wheel of Life. In her kindly way she has led hundreds of girls in the pathway of knowledge, and they have left, made richer through contact with a noble character.

The emptiness within my heart
Becomes so real—
I feel they are as sacred things
These friendships grown
So much a part of me; and then,
The parting comes—
You say they call such sorrow sweet?
Perhaps it's so. But still
Beneath each smile—
Each laugh, that is so gay, there lies
A thought unspoken
A feeling—can mere words express
The awe that comes upon me when I know they'll have—
And still the sands of time shift on?
—But can things be the same?

Finals in Tennis Doubles Will Be Played Soon

Champions in tennis doubles will be determined this week when Ruth Dunnington and Dot Wright meet Ellen Conyers and Louise Walmsley for the final tournament set-up.

In the first doubles those winning were as follows: Walker and Noenren, Sears and Coleman, D. Eason and Russell, Jarman and Badger, Dunnington and Wright.

In the second doubles set Conyers and Walmsley, Sears and Coleman, Jarman and Badger, and Dunnington and Wright won out.

Tennis doubles are always played off during the Spring season. The singles bout takes place in the fall.

GOOD LUCK SENIORS!

VOL. XVI. FARMVILLE, VIRGINIA, TUESDAY, JUNE 8, 1937 No. 30

Class Day Exercises Take Place Monday

Auditorium, Longwood Are Scenes of Histories, Gifts

Class Day exercises were held by the senior class at Longwood Monday afternoon and by the graduating sophomores in the auditorium Monday morning.

The first feature on the senior program was the daisy chain formed by the seniors and "little sisters'. They sang as they made the numbers 1937 with the chain.

Mary Bowles, class president, then welcomed all visitors to the exercises. Victoria Gillette gave the history of her class and Lucille Moseley gave the class gifts that were appropriate to each girl. Mary Lib Slater was elected giftorian but was unable to take part because of illness.

Mary Bowles announced that a fountain for the court between White House Hall and Main Hall would be presented as a gift by the class.

Miss Mary Nichols, president of the Alumnae Association welcomed the seniors and sophomores as Farmville Alumnae.

At ten o'clock, the sophomores dressed in white formed a line outside the auditorium.

Following the singing of the class songs, Kitty Roberts, sitting on a pedestal and representing the stature of Joan of Arc in the auditorium gave the past and future of the class.

Kitty Waite, representing the "spirit of the class of 1939" in a white cap and gown, gave gifts to graduates.

Songs were sung to the classman, Miss Moran, and the exercises closed with the singing of "Onward Farmville".

Left to right, Louise Chandler, Anne Dugger.

Ann Dugger Gives Welcome Speech As Salutatorian

Ann Dugger delivered the salutatory address in the auditorium Tuesday morning at the Graduation exercises of Farmville State Teachers College.

She welcomed Governor Peery, the members of the faculty and the visitors to the college.

Ann spoke of the social value of college education in helping graduates to find their places in the world and to work happily and effectively with people.

The importance Dr. Jarman puts on the word "cooperation" was named as one of the factors in social education at this college. Participation in extra-curricular activities, the existence of a spirit of democracy, and emphasis on social courtesy, were mentioned as contributing factors.

The fact was brought out that Farmville State Teachers College gives careful direction to intellectual, physical and spiritual growth as well as social growth.

Ann was chosen by the faculty to deliver the salutatory address because of her high scholastic standing and her work in extra-curricular activities on the campus. She has served the Y. W. C. A. as a member of the Freshman Commission and as a member of the Town Girl's Committee. She has attained the Masters Degree in Alpha Phi Sigma, and belongs to the Dramatic Club, Cotillion Club, and Campus League. Ann is a reporter on the Rotunda staff, and Book Review editor of the Farmville Quarterly Review. She is a member of Sigma Sigma Sigma sorority.

Reynolds and Lewis Are Honor Students Of Training School

Dorothy Reynolds and Billie Lewis were honor graduates of the senior class of the training school in its graduation ceremony in the auditorium Friday night. They delivered the valedictory and salutatory addresses respectively.

Virginia Ansell, Virginia Bowman ,Evelyn Davis, Louise Scrugg and Frances Ward also received diplomas from Mr. S. M. Holton, Jr., principal of the training school.

Rev. R. O. Bryant delivered the main address to the graduates who were seated on a stage decorated with lilies and roses.

The high school glee club sang "God of Our Fathers", "Trees", "Julia's Garden", and "Ah, Sweet Mystery of Life" during the program. The audience remained standing as the graduates marched out.

Mary Bowles Will Be Member Of Class of 1938

Mary Bowles was elected by the class of '38 as its honorary class member. Announcement of the selection was made at Senior chapel exercises Saturday, May 29.

It has been a tradition at this school for some year for the Junior Class to choose one of the graduating class to be an honorary member of their class. During the coming year the Class of '38 will keep in close touch with Mary Bowles and will invite her to attend all its social functions and extra-curricular activities.

Juniors, Seniors Dance to Tune Of Virginia Band

The Junior - Senior Prom, sponsored by the Juniors as a part of the commencement program took place on Saturday night, June 5 in the gymnasium. Charley Gasque and his Royal Virginians furnished the music for the dance.

The Prom was the first of its kind to be held at S. T. C. It followed the Senior Reception for the graduates and their parents and was in progress from nine until twelve.

Seniors and their escorts were guests of the Junior Class and

Dr. Ben R. Lacy Speaks on Love In Senior Sermon

School Head Asks Girls to Value Love

Dr. Ben R. Lacy, president of the Union Theological Seminary, urged seniors to let love of God surpass all other loves in the Baccalaureate address Sunday night, May 6, in the auditorium.

Dr. Lacy stated that so often people lose the love of the great God in worshipping lesser and more worldly Gods. This great love of a Supreme Being should surpass all in making life the most idealistic.

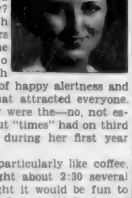
His main prayer for young people was that they should bestow their love on objects worthy of their love. To love wisely is to get the greatest happiness out of loving.

"No Value" was the title of a poem Dr. Lacy quoted. This poem concerns a box that contains the body of a young girl which was in a freight car. A sign on the box reads "no value". Curious, the poet opens it and sees inside a lovely young girl who died at eighteen before life had marred her innocence. The poet ponders on how the dead girl was raw material that could have been shaped into so much. Perhaps she would have married and raised children. Now she was merely of "no value".

The speaker closed with the words, "We must not be of no value".

Lantern Parade On School Campus Is Important Event

The annual Lantern Parade, which furnishes an important part of commencement program, took place on Monday night, June 7. It followed immediately after the presentation of "The Cradle Song", by members of the Dramatic Club.



The Seniors and their Little Sisters wearing white, marched from the Student Building Lounge across the campus to Library Hall and back. They carried lanterns, on one side of which were the letters S. T. C., on the other side the figures, 1937. As they marched

President of Senior Class Recalls Happiness Here

By Martha Meade Hardaway

"Fighting tears is my present motto," says Mary Bowles, president of the Senior Class. Mary B's perpetual grin belied this statement, although she said it with the uttermost sincerity. Can graduation be so wonderful after all if it can make Mary B anything but merry? Through all four years of college she seemed to carry with her an air of happy alertness and geniality that attracted everyone. Quite a few were the—no, not escapades—but "times" had on third floor Main during her first year at college.

"I don't particularly like coffee, but one night about 2:30 several of us thought it would be fun to make some. I made it! Yeah and afterwards when I was calmly slippering down the hall holding the coffee pot aloft, who should calmly stroll up but Miss Shelton (she was in the home office then). You can guess the rest!"

Mary said that she and several girls decided to "keep healthy" and sleep out on the roof every night. Peaceful slumbers for some time until they were aroused in the middle of the night and made to drag in mattresses, pillows and covers—to sleep the rest of the year where they belonged!

"All of this seems to be a review of things that happened in my Freshman year, but perhaps I remember that year best. The worst thing of all was Cotillion initiation. I spent my time that week leaving some classroom to wash black paint off my face. All of the "goats" were supposed to eat awful food, and I, like a dumb bunny, swallowed the stuff. Next, they gave us castor oil, but luckily for me, I was the only "goat" that didn't get sick. Guess I lived up to the name and ate any and everything."

The answer to the question of what the hardest thing she ever had to do while at S. T. C. was "Go on a ten mile hike." The reason was because she went with

Dr. Lacy Calls Bat Satan In Disguise As Animal Interrupts Sermon

Dr. Ben R. Lacy rallied to the occasion Sunday night when a bat interrupted his delivery of the Baccalaureate sermon.

The bat began circling the auditorium as Dr. Lacy was talking. Lights were cut off for a few minutes and to all appearances the uninvited guest had left.

Suddenly from behind the curtain came the creature again to

Governor Peery Delivers Address To Graduates

Left to right, Bess Mc Glothlin, Virginia Bean.

Virginia Bean Makes Challenge In Valedictory

"What education needs is a new teacher", said Virginia Bean, first-honor graduate of the Class of '37, at the final Commencement exercises June 8. The chief thoughts of the Valedictory were centered around the danger of formalism in education and the need of a well-prepared teacher to combat it.

Answering the question "Where shall we get the new teacher?" Virginia gave the responsibility to three groups; namely, the colleges and universities, the general public, and the teachers themselves. The colleges and universities must give students a broad education and the ability to use it constructively. The public must give opportunities for higher education and raise the qualifications for the teaching profession. It is for the teacher to prepare herself to take an active part in the new educational programs that are being carried on in the state as well as in the nation.

Virginia challenged the graduates to "make their own rules and set their own high standards with judgment and wisdom" and to acquire the essential broadness of vision and understanding with which to do so. She concluded with the charge, "Let us not be the last of the new. We shall be the first of the new."

In the Commencement exercises in 1935 Virginia was Salutatorian, as the first-honor graduate of the diploma class. She has taken part in varied activities in her four years, being a member of Kappa

Dr Jarman to Give Degrees and Diplomas

Governor George C. Peery of Virginia delivered the main address to ninety-seven graduates and seventy-six graduating sophomores in the auditorium Tuesday morning, June 8.

Ann Dugger of Farmville delivered the salutatory address and Virginia Bean of South Hill the valedictory. Bess McGlothlin of Farmville, second honor graduate, of the degree class, and Louise Chandler of Virgilina, second in the certificate class, were also on the stage.

In caps and gowns the seniors filed into the crowded auditorium, following the faculty also in academic dress. Mr. Strick played the stirring strains of the "Alma Mater," and white-clad graduating sophomores and senior "little sisters" entered carrying hoods.

Reverend R. O. Bryant, pastor of the Methodist church, delivered the invocation.

At a chord by Mr. Strick, the Seniors, Sophomores and "little sisters" all arose. At the second chord, the "little sisters", hooded their big sisters.

Dr. J. A. Jarman delivered diplomas and degrees to the graduates as they marched across the stage.

Dr. Jarman then declared the session 1936-'37 officially closed. The audience remained standing as the faculty, graduates and "little sisters" once more marched, this time in recessional, to the "Alma Mater."

Dramatic Club Gives Spring Play Again For Commencement

The Dramatic Club presented "The Cradle Song" by Sierra on Monday night, June 7, for the second time. It was under the direction of Miss Leola Wheeler, the club adviser.

This little Spanish play had scant action, its great charm lying in its tremendous intrinsic poetry and humor and pathos.

The cast was made up of: Sister Sagrario, Anne Scott; Sister Marcella, Sara Keesee; The Prioress, Elizabeth George Wilson; Sister Joanna of the Cross; Frances Hutcheson; The Mistress of Novices, Edith Kaylor; The Vicaress, Mary Joyner Cox; Sister Tornea, Macon Raine; Sister Inez, David Terry; Sister Maria Jesus, Frances Alvis; The Doctor, Betty Hardy; Teresa, Clara Nottingham; Antonio, Elizabeth Carroll; Monitors, Martha Meade Hardaway, and Josephine Quinn; The Poet, Nan Throckmorton.

Five Receive Bachelor of Arts Degrees Tuesday

Marguerite York, Dorothy Wise, Bonnie Lane, Sara Buchanan, and Louise Walmsley were the only five graduates who received Bachelor of Arts degrees.

The Bachelor of Arts degrees have only been offered to candidates since 1934. These girls had to double up on work to make up for having done a year's work on a Bachelor of Science degree.

Louise Walmsley received her Bachelor of Science degree last June. This year she has assisted in the Physical Education department while completing studies for her second degree.

AU REVOIR

Four years have come and gone for the seniors of '37. They have been four years well spent. Tears will show on the sad day of parting how they feel about going and how we feel about their going.

Next year we will feel a loss. Occasionally we will stop and ponder a moment, remembering some fun we have with one of them, some kindness of them. We may remember a few unpeasant things, but nevertheless we will remember.

As for them, they will be apart from us. Their hopes and desires will be as grown women—not as the care-free students we knew. Parting is sad, but it is meet and right. "The old order changeth, yielding place to new." The seniors of '38 will take their places; and then they, too, will pass on.

Life proceeds. It always has. We who have known the seniors of '37 will keep faith and carry on the banner they left behind hoisted so high. We accept the challenge.

And now, God-speed, seniors. We wish you all the success and happiness. Finally, a prayer 'Lord, God of Hosts, be with us yet, lest we forget, lest we forgit."

IN THE GOOD OLD SUMMER TIME

Vacation time is here, and we urge you to cast aside the shackles and be gay. Forget that English you flunked or that math you have to make up. Remember only that you are young and will have so little time to be free from care. Make use of that valuable time, and have a jolly good summer, all youse gals.

Senior President

MADELINE McGLOTHLIN

Madeline McGlothlin is now the president of the Senior Class of this college as the class of 1937 takes leave. Madeline is quite capable of stepping into this position.

A winning smile, a charming voice, and a clear mind are the weapons with which Madeline conquers hearts and holds them. She has had the class of '38 back of her for three years now, and seems well on her way toward guiding it to a senior year of much success and happiness.

She is poised and sure of herself. Her position on this campus as an outstanding person is unquestionable. Alpha Kappa Gamma recognized her leadership in the fall of her junior year. Active in classes as well as on the campus, she is seldom lacking when there's fun. Madeline is a well-rounded person and a worthy leader of the Seniors of '38!

Summer vacation is here, and with it leisure time galore—so what are you planning to do with all of those spare hours? Swimming, hiking, dancing? But even that won't take all of your time, so I am going to suggest that you sample a few of the fascinating new novels that everyone is discussing.

Boy In Blue has evoked so much comment that I want you to be certain to read it. Although Royce Brier has written about a divided nation, the story has interested all sections: North, South, East, and West. The novel tells of the Civil War as the men in the trenches knew it. Its hero is a man who is seeking death, yet learns to live, and Robert Thayne has become the year's most memorable character.

For a picture of ourselves, we may turn to Millen Brand. The fortunes of his characters are so akin to our own that we seem to be reading about our experiences. The Outward Room is especially charming because of its utter simplicity. It is decidedly unusual, because it is so orignal. Sinclair Lewis commends it with these words: "I don't know that I have ever seen a more exciting first novel."

Now, be honest. Who hasn't dreamed of someday having a handsome and successful husband? Well, suppose you did. What would you do if, married to a screen idol, you found that you were no longer interested in his fame and charm? All of you will be curious to discover Julia Gosselyn's solution to the problem. Somerset Maugham has written powerfully of the situation in Theatre.

Who of you is planning a trip to the seashore this season? Then you want to read Intimate Strangers. Katherine Pritchard has depicted with a vivid pen the happy carelessness of a beach holiday. Unfortunately, Miss Pritchard's characters are not as wholesome as her setting. They have little brains, less stability, merely a lust for living. However, the book ends with the promise of a happy future for all.

As a last reminder, let me urge you to be watching for the appearance of several especially good novels which are to be published during the summer.

ROTUNDA REVERBERATIONS

By Liz Carroll

Near draws the end! Once again we must bid adieu to girls we have grown to love. One glance at the tear stained faces after senior chapel revealed that even the most hard hearted found that parting was a bit on the sad side. We are losing a grand bunch of girls. It will seem strange next year with no Mary B. flitting here and there with a cheery smile for everyone . . . no Bonnie to take your troubles to . . . or Baker running around all excited over annuals. Good luck, seniors! We hope that the best of everything will come your way.

Flash! Will the girl who wrote to Jordan Steed please get in touch with him before leaving town. It seems that he is some fair maid's secret passion. 'Tis rumored that he's quite excited about it . . . so make yourself known and stop keeping the young man in suspense.

Most of the members of that illustrious organization, The Black Widows are leaving us this year. What will we do without the excitement they stir up. They certainly got a wonderful send-off the other night . . . a certain group of girls took it upon themselves to rid the school of such a spirited organization. One member of the raiding party even went so far as to say that she was paid by Chi to do her bit. Sounds a little screwy tho' . . . Chi has been here a long time and they've always managed to do their own work. Perhaps it was just an easy way of getting out of a tight place . . . well, what do you say, Frances?

A few of the lads we've become accustomed to see around are graduating from the near-by institution this year. Wonder what Carter Belle and GeGe will do without Fred and Bruce next year? Guess we'll all miss seeing them about . . . kinda' grown to be a habit. We wish all the lads the best of luck! As for the fair maids who are left behind . . . cheer up . . . a year isn't such a long time and maybe they'll come back to see you occasionally.

Nan Seward and Lib Wilson are going to do a bit of traveling this summer. Have a jolly time . . . and take in the night life of Paris. Remember enough of the things you do to tell us next fall.

To those of you who are coming back . . . have a gleeful summer . . . do a mean piece of playing . . . remember all the news you hear that can be printed . . . Au Revoir! See you next September.

LITERARY COLUMN

I.

The creeping ivy clings against gray towers,
The trees are old and wise and very tall,
A mellow clock chimes out the drifting hours,
As if to say, "Time slips, while learning flowers—"
So many feet have echoed through each hall,
So many years have gone beyond recall,
So many sun-swept days, so many shadows.

II.

Perhaps these gray stones, robed in ivy, feel
That students strolling past are but a dream.
Perhaps the boys and girls with youth agleam
Are phantom-like and just a bit unreal
To the tall trees that, standing closely by,
Draw strength and knowledge from the far-flung sky!

Remembrance of Things Past

By Shakespeare

I.

When to the sessions of sweet silent thought
I summon up remembrance of things past,
I sigh the lack of many a thing I sought,
And with the old woes new wail my dear time's waste;
Then can I drown an eye, unused to flow,
For precious friends hid in death's dateless night,
And weep afresh love's long-since-cancell'd woe,
And moan the expense of many a vanish'd sight.

II.

Then can I grieve at grievances foregone,
And heavily from woe to woe tell o'er
The sad account of fore-bemoaned moan,
Which I now pay as if not payed before.
—But if the while I think on thee, good friend,
All losses are restored, and sorrows end.

Time

By Shakespeare

I.

Life as the waves make towards the pebbled shore,
So do our minutes hasten to their end;
Each changing place with that which goes before,
In sequent toil all forwards do contend.
Nativity, once in the main of light,
Crawls to maturity, wherewith being crown'd
Crooked eclipses 'gainst his glory fight,
And Time that gave, doth now his gift confound.

II.

Time doth transfix the flourish set on youth,
And delves the parallels in beauty's brow;
Feeds on the rarities of nature's truth,
And nothing stands but for his scythe to mow—
And yet, to times in hope, my verse shall stand
Praising Thy worth, despite his cruel hand.

Despite Time

By William Shakespeare

I.

No, Time, thou shalt not boast that I do change:
Thy pyramids biult up with newer might,
To me are nothing novel, nothing strange;
They are but dressings of a former sight.
Our dates are grief, and therefore we admire
What thou dost foist upon us that is old,
And rather make them born to our desire
Than think that we before have heard told.

II.

Thy registers and thee I both defy,
Not wondering at the present nor the past;
For thy records and what we see do lie,
Made more or less by thy continual haste.
This I do vow, and this shall ever be,
I will be true, despite thy scythe and thee.

LOOKING 'EM OVER

By Mary Mahone

The sit down strike is no longer news, but the Mexican Catholics seem to be the first religious organization to strike. More than a hundred worshippers congregated in the ogale Cathedral in Nogale, a city in the Mexican state of Sonora. Breaking open the doors they occupied the cathedral and have refused to leave. The strike is a protest by which they hope to force the Mexican government to reopen the church, closed several years ago in a dispute between church and state. It is reported that similar disturbances have been taking place all through Sonora.

Fisherman's stories about the one that got away have become a standing joke. Now, it seems that golfers tell tales, too. Harvey Thompson, of Memphis, Tenn., tells the best golf story so far. He solemnly swears that when his putt stopped on the lip of the cup it fell in because a large fly lit on the ball.

Harvey Millstaire, a resident of Queens Borough, is a devotee of the cartoon strip "Radio Patrol" in the New York American. Because he works in a filling station, Millstaire was professionally interested in a sequel which showed a service station attendant foiling a bandit by drenching him with the fuel hose. A few hours later a hold-up man entered Millstaire's station, took the cash register's contents, and commanded the attendant to wait on a customer who happened to drive up. Remembering the "Radio Patrol" incident, Millstaire turned on the pump. The pump began to click; when the measuring bell had sounded once Millstaire suddenly wheeled around. The stream of gasoline, in good funny paper style, struck the bandit squarely between the eyes. When he got his eyes clear, he was in jail. All this just goes to prove that funny papers are worth while after all.

On May the eighteenth a tornado struck a barn and silo at Grenttinger, Iowa. After the twister had picked up the barn and the roof of the silo and scattered them over the landscape, Mable, Lady, Dick, Rovey, and Bud, five horses belonging to Farmer Hamlin Sandviy, were discovered standing, unharmed in their stalls.

"Pling" is the most precocious rat at the University of Minnesota. When Pling is hungry, which is often, he seizes a chain dangling from the top of his cage and pulls it, thus releasing a marble which falls to the floor of the cage. Then he picks up the marble and drops it in a slot on the floor of his cage. As the marble falls in the slot it starts an electric circuit which causeses a tiny piece of dog biscuit to drop into Pling's feeding tray. Once when the slot was covered Pling tugged at the chain and unable to spend, collected a large supply of marbles. When the slot was uncovered he squandered his savings. Pling, who is ten months old, learned all of this in two months from Professor Fred Spinne, psychology instructor at the University. The professor did this to show his students how much could be done with an animal if proper patience were taken.

A summer tip for the coeds: Gentlemen prefer bronze. That's the make-up tip for summer girls, straight from the cosmetic front where Jack Dawn, head cosmetician of M-G-M holds forth.

"Go bronze in a big way", is Dawn's advice. Just how to do it is purely a personal matter. Those who find that the sun's rays do nothing put "put them in the red," will have to rely solely upon cosmetics.

Dark powder, containing bronze flecks, is something new for summer, and Jean Harlow plans to use it in "Saratoga."

To the Seniors

Dear Seniors:

To you this final issue of the Rotunda is dedicated. We hope that it will serve as good "scrap book material" and as a reminder of the days when you were the most important ones on this campus—namely, graduates!

We hope for you every success all through life. We promise never to forget you and to keep always warm spots in our hearts for you.

Remember your Alma Mater and come back to us who will strive to fill the place you leave so vacant.

Sincerely,
Your Editor

Miss Grace Moran

Miss Moran Is Classman Of Sophomores

Miss Grace Moran has been classman of the sophomores who are graduating after the two years they have been in college.

The sophomores say they have found her an untiring worker and a true friend. Members of the class have said that they have loved her nice parties and her interest in every individual of the class.

She has kept her house open the two years to any member of the class at any time, and her car has been constantly in use to further any interest of the class. She has been free with time and money, and most of all with friendliness.

Miss Moran never forgot to visit members of her class in the infirmary or to encourage them. Her originality in practically putting productions across has been a help to the class. Sarah Hayes, president of the graduates, states that she did most of the work on all the productions.

The class bids farewell to Miss Moran at class day exercises when they sing final songs to her. At that time they will express their appreciation for her cooperation.

"Alma Mater" Stirs Hearts As Juniors Accept Torch

The stirring strains of "Alma Mater" rang out on the morning air as hundreds of voices were raised in heartfelt tribute to the black-robed Seniors who were marching down the aisle to that refrain for the last time. The words had a particular meaning to those who had marched to it for four long years, and were now, formally, saying farewell; and to the white clad Juniors who were to take up the torch and carry it on as Seniors of '38.

The inspiring words of the Scripture, read by their Vice-president, challenged the Seniors to noble living, and their hearts were bound together in the sweetly-sad words of "Blest Be the Tie That Binds".

To their classman, Miss Iler, the pilot at the wheel of the "Good Ship '37" for four years, they offered their appreciation in the words of their President and in song. On the wings of each song the memory of the year that it was written came floating back—the high hopes they had held, the proud presentation of the classman, the victories they had won. Then, in the fourth one they bade "adieu" to their understanding and faithful friend.

The announcement that Mary Bowles had been elected as Honorary Member of the Class of '38 was received with enthusiastic applause.

The saddest part of Chapel came when the Seniors turned to face the audience and bid farewell to the other classmen; the roomates of other years, friends who had shared their joys and sorrows, acquaintances, who, although they didn't know them so well, had formed an integral part of their college life—to all of these they bade a tearful farewell. Not only to these but to the rooms which had been home to them for thirty-six months of their lives, to the ivy-covered walls, to the campus—beautiful with the falling splendor of autumn leaves, the snows of winter, and the green richness of spring; and to the amusements that have played their part. Their songs told of the work and play, the sadness and happiness that lay behind. What lay before was expressed by the formation of the arch under which the Juniors passed, thereby becoming Seniors. The Seniors of '37 will go out to write their parts in the play of Life. The Seniors of '38 will take their places, and in one short year they too will pass on for that is one of the unchangeable laws of Life.

We will not forget the Seniors of '37 when they have left us for they have contributed something to the spirit of S. T. C. which will remain an everlasting memory.

Memories Loom to Mind Of Sunny Hours of 1936-,37

Time and Tide wait for no man! And once again another year has rolled by. The first at college for some; the last for many. But for all of us, the year 1936-'37 has been one lovely book of memories—happy and gay, sad and full of serious significance. As we look back through the months, we remember some events, so outstanding that they are inclined to overshadow their sister happenings of less importance, but, major or minor, we hold them equally dear, and class them all among those experiences which have gone so far to enrich our college days.

The first object to loom upon the horizon is the Circus, and will any of us ever forget it? The juniors put one over on the seniors with that very excellent singing, but the mountaineers pulled through with honorable mention.

Then came Hallowe'en, the Virginia Cavaliers, and Fall Cotillion! Everyone, as usual, looked too very, very, the music was smooth, and the holiday lent an air of festivity.

Shortly after that, we came to one of the grandest of plays, "Mary the Third," S. T. C. and Hampden-Sydney were at their best—and then, too, the plot was so attractive.

Thanksgiving, the Senior Dance, and exams, followed in rapid succession, and by Christmas, we decided that we deserved that well-earned rest and holiday.

Back again to the long, winter term, a perfectly grand Mardi Gras, and the Class Productions, without which, the Winter would have dragged horribly. Of course, Lyceums, and surprise programs were scattered along the way freely, to help pass the time, but even then, we weren't sorry when Founder's Day with its white dresses, excitement, and first signs of spring came.

Easter was lovely—just at the right time of year, and the Spring Play in all of its dignified simplicity, Spring Cotillion—one of the best—and a glorious May Day with parents, flowers, girls and springtime smiles, all came and went in a perfection excelling our highest hopes. The best is yet to come as Commencement is all that's needed to crown a perfect year.

Time marches on, but it can't crowd out the host of golden memories that follow in its wake.

Miss Bugg Entertains Choir

Miss Virgilia Bugg, registrar, entertained the College Choir at an informal banquet given in the tea-room Friday evening, May 28.

Those attending included Dr. J. L. Jarman, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred H. Strick, Mrs. Hallie K. Laing, Miss Irene Leake, and members of the choir.

Miss Bugg has acted as sponsor for this organization for several years, and has accompanied them on all of their trips. She has been chosen to act as sponsor again next year.

Cribbers and answer-exchangers in a class at the University of Washington thought they were getting a bargain when the professor left the room for an hour during a final test.

But the "prof" got the better of the deal. Asked why he was loafing outside the room, he answered, "I'm giving a final examination."

"Aren't you afraid the students will crib?" the questioner wanted to know.

"No, I turned in the final grades yesterday," laughed the professor.

Moseley, Sykes Find Treasures

A treasure hunt with a pot of gold was what the sophomores chose as entertainment for their sister class, the seniors, on Thursday night, May 27.

These girls present were divided into four groups under Mary Bowles, Virginia Baker, Lucille Moseley and Bess McGlothlin. The group headed by Lucille Moseley found the pot of gold. Inez Sykes won the individual prize.

After the treasure hunt, all those present returned to the "rec" and sang class songs while eating pop-sickles.

Miss Olive T. Iler

Miss Olive Iler Will Be Missed By Class of '37

Miss Olive T. Iler has been the classman of the senior class since their freshman year. The seniors all say that she is the one whom they hate most to leave, because she has won a permanent place in their hearts.

Mary Bowles, president of the senior class says that the class will remember always the happy times they've had—the lolly pop parties as freshmen, the weenie roast as sophomores, ice cream parties as juniors and picnic as seniors all planned for their pleasure by Miss Iler.

She has worked side by side with her class, always ready to help in everything they have undertaken. They say that she has never made them feel her superiority except in her good judgment. She has been a real person, always understanding.

When it came to having fun, her home and her car have been at their disposal and in everyway she has been an able guide.

At Senior Chapel the class officially bid her farewell with their songs. They are all hearty with their praise of Miss Iler as leader of their class.

Ruth Dunnington and Dot Wright won the tennis doubles with a score of 6-3, 6-4, over Ellen Conyers and Louise Walmsley.

Both Dot and Ruth have been outstanding in this sport and have entered the tournaments for the last two years. They have played up to semi-finals before, but were not able to carry on.

Dot is a member of the sophomore class and has taken active part in all class activities. She was a member of the varsity tenni steam last year. Ruth Dunnington, a senior, has been outstanding in class activities and especially outstanding in tennis. Both Dot and Ruth are town girls.

Louise Walmsley and Ellen Conyears were the losers of the tournament to Dot Wright and Ruth Dunnington in the final match.

Senior Banquet Centers Around Ship of 1937

Class Presents Gifts To Bowles, Iler

The Senior banquet took place at Longwood Friday, June 4 at six o'clock. The whole idea of the banquet centered around a ship.

Among the invited guests were Dr. Jarman, Miss Mary White Cox, Miss Olive T. Iler, classman of the class.

Placecards were green and white sail boats with S. T. C. '37 written on them. Programs were covered with green paper cut like pilot's wheels. Mints in cellophane with seniors in dark mortar boards rising from them were favors.

Mary Bowles, president of the class, acted as toastmaster. Miss Mary and Dr. Jarman were toasted as ever faithful lighthouses for the ship. The Alma Mater was the builder of the ship and Miss Iler a worthy captain with Mary Bowles as her dauntless first mate. Last, the future of the seaward bound vessel of '37 was toasted.

The class presented Miss Iler with two matching pieces of luggage and Mary Bowles with a wardrobe suitcase for their patience in guiding the ship to port.

"Last Will" of Departing Ones Is Stated In Person

We, the Senior Class of the State Teachers College, Farmville, Virginia, in our sane mind do hereby submit this, our last will and testament," said Mary Bowles, president of the senior class in Sing Saturday: Article I To the juniors we give all of our senior privileges in this nutshell, because they can all be placed here. Also our successors need this pill box ful of senior dignity; Article II—I, Dorothy Wise, request that Nan Seward carry the Y. W. C. A. spirit to Europe with this candle. A good luck from me, Bonnie Lane, to you, Libby Morris, will help next year.

For Mary Joyner Cox, I, Fletcher Walker, leave a sailboat hoping that sailing with Miss Wheeler at the helm will not be rough. To keep the fort next year for the Class of '37 Virginia Bean leaves a sailboat to Lizzie Shiplett, who is also bequeathed by Virginia Leonard a penny bank to keep track of all those pennies she can't count. Article III—Virginia Baker leaves a bag full of choicest and rarest snipes for Ruth Montgomery who may be aided by Charlotte Minton with a stick for this specific purpose to be given by Charlotte Rice.

Lucille Moseley and Elizabeth Smith leave Ruth Sears and Ruth Emma Chambers a monkey which hears no Chi, sees no Chi, and speaks no Chi. Kitty Fitzgerald wants Sara Keesee to have a pair of scissors with which to keep cutting up. Martha Hamlet hands down two safety pins, one each for Prince Smith and Chlotilde Jarman, so they can pin on angel wings when they arrive from Sears and Roebuck. These are to symbolize etherial qualities, or, better, to escape from hall presidents.

Article IV—I, Martha Gwaltney, made some splendid reducing resolutions which I wish Anna Maxey to have, hoping she will find them as beneficial as I did. Mary Lib Slater bequeaths her mountain music to Virginia Doughty to keep on roaring next year. If Wilis Shields Scott is present, will she please receive Claire Eastman's place in the Training School Library where she can jaddie with Mr. Holton. Article V—I, Marie Moore, leave Sue Pack a box of Pep so she can keep on trucking.

Chic Dortch prides herself on her ability to be satisfied in her senior year without a Hampden-Sydney man. This she leaves to Carter Belle Munt. Midge Davis leaves a Mickey Mouse to Janet Lemmon. Minnie Smith wants Jac Adams and Helen Byrd Harris, to have a pot of gold to help them not have as difficult a time as she did paying her tea room bills.

Juniors, Seniors Hold Prom

their escorts. Little Sisters, graduating Sophomores, members of the cast of "The Cradle Song", student council members and both old and new officers of the Sophomore Class were invited to attend the dance. The Juniors also had the faculty and administration as their guests.

Plans for the dance were successfuly handled by committees under the following chairmen: Katherine Walden, business, and Evelyn Montgomery, decorations.

This, the first Junior-Senior Prom, was a success and filled an important place in the commencement program this year. The Junior Class hopes that this precedent established by them, will be continued by succeeding classes.

"Nola" (Shannon's influence) and "Sophisticated Lady" are her favorite pieces. The last one isn't in keeping with the role she takes in the summer at camp "Mont Shenandoah"—all of the children call her "Mama Mary B."

"My pride and joy is my unequaled endurance record for college—an eight-thirty class every morning for four years. I've really loved Farmville and had the best times ever here, but the happiest I've ever been was when Senior Chapel was given smoothly with no breaks and when the Juniors made me an honorary member of their Senior class!"

Graduates, Guests Attend Annual Final Reception

Sorority News

The pledges of Pi Kappa Sigma entertained the members of the chapter at a picnic at Whittiker's Lake, May 25. The guests attending were Mr. and Mrs. Graham, Sara Graham, Dr. and Mrs. Whittiker, Jane Royall and Bock Copenhaven.

The Pi Kaps also entertained their seniors and graduating sophomores at a party in the chapter room Saturday evening, May 29th. Each senior was given a hope chest to start next year off.

Miss Stubbs, Gamma Theta adviser, gave that chapter a picnic at Whittiker's Lake Saturday, May 30. Swimming was a big object, and a truck was used to carry the group to and from the picnic grounds.

Friday night, May 29, the undergraduates of Sigma Sigma Sigma entertained the Sigma seniors with a party in the chapter room. Coco colas and nabs were served. Every senior member of the sorority was presented with a gift with a verse attaches. The party was given particularly for Nellie Pierpont who will be married June 12.

Alpha Sigma Alpha entertained its graduates in the chapter room at six o'clock, Sunday, May 31, with a buffet supper. Delicious cold plates were served.

It will be the duty of these officers to cooperate with the registrar in keeping the alumnae record of the school and keep in touch with the members of their classes. Through them members of the classes will be notified of Founders' Days, reunions and any business that concerns them as graduates of Farmville.

Why I never joined a sorority:

I wanted to think for myself and not to be led around by a bunch of sisters.

I never went in for Women's organizations at home.

I didn't want a lot of fraternity boys calling me at night.

I had never danced with a man in my life and I didn't want to start.

I hate the thought of dormitory life and having to crowd over a lot of sisters to get to bed.

I didn't like the idea of rooming with one girl the whole semester.

I don't look well in sleeveless, low cut gowns.

I'm a boy. —Exchange

Seward, Upshur, Roberts, Burke, Serve Punch

A reception for the graduates and their guests was held Saturday night at eight in the student building lounge.

In the receiving line were Dr. Jarman, Miss Mary, Mary Bowles, Miss Iler, Sarah Hayes, Miss Moran, Bonnie Lane, Dot Wise, Virginia Bean, and Ann Dugger.

Nan Seward, Carolyn Upshur, Katherine Roberts and Elizabeth Burke presided at the punch bowl. Girls serving were Nan Armistead, Gwen Bell, Betty Butterworth, Alma Butterwort, Delha Pope Chambliss, Elsie Dodd, Vera Ebel, Selma West, and Rose Marie Hunter.

The floor committee for the reception consisted of Elizabeth Morris, Dorothy Buckland, Esther Beebe, Josephine Quinn, Marjorie Robertson, Charlotte Minton, Marie Eason, Judith Gathright, Dudley Allen, and Ruth Phelps.

Miss Iler Gives Picnic at Longwood For 1937 Graduates

Miss Iler entertained the seniors with a picnic Saturday in her last gesture as classman. She served delicious salad plates, hamburgers and popsickles to the ninety-eight graduates on the lawn at Longwood at one o'clock.

After the picnic, which was served under the direction of Mrs. Hurt, head of Longwood tea room, seniors practiced class songs and elected their permanent officers. Practice of the daisy chain in the amphitheatre took place after the entertainment.

As Dr. Lacy finished his surmise, the bat disappeared and returned no more to disturb the crowd.

VOL. XVII. FARMVILLE, VIRGINIA, WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 29, 1937 No. 1

Large Enrollment Registers Here For 1937-'38 Term

Purchase of House Gives More Room

Approximately seven hundred and eighty students registered at State Teachers College, Farmville, Virginia, on September 21, 1937. This number, which is a capacity enrollment, is an increase over the past year.

Due to the purchase of the Richardson house, Farmville is able to accommodate the additional new girls, many of whom are transfers from other colleges. The other cottages in town are also filled with girls with an official chaperone in each one. Many two-girl rooms have three occupants There are few juniors in Cunningham Hall because of the large number of seniors who signed for rooms there.

Eighty-five counties of Virginia, twelve states, and two foreign countries are represented by students. States sending girls are North and South Carolina, West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Massachusetts, New York, New Jersey, Kentucky and Tennessee. Porto Rico and Japan are the foreign countries who have students here.

College Constructs Court, Pool And Chimney

On the court between Main Hall and the auditorium, the college is constructing a beauty spot. This is a brick court. In the center is a pool, which has not been filled yet, but is nearing completion.

The Senior Class of 1937 left as a parting gift money for a fountain. This is being placed in the center of the pool, which will be the home of lillies and other aquatic plants and animals in time.

The Diversion Club of the Summer School gave money for one of the benches which will be placed on this same court.

In addition to these improvements, the Sophomore Class built a second rock chimney at Longwood for picnics.

Morris Calls First Meetings of Students

Elizabeth Morris called the first student body meeting of the year on Tuesday night, September 21 and a second one September 22.

The president called the meeting to order and welcomed all the girls, old and new.

Elizabeth announced that Miss Taliaferro asked the girls to be quiet in the halls near the post office, to read her instructions posted on the bulletin board, and to be prompt in having their boxes assigned. Several reminders as to good conduct were given.

The heads of the Major Organizations were then presented. They were Nan Seward, president of the Y. W. C. A.; Ruth Phelps, president of the Athletic Association; Dudley Allen, president of the House Council; Ruth Montgomery, editor of the "Virginian"; and Mary Harrison Vaughan, editor of the "Rotunda".

Since it was the first night at school, Miss Mary gave everyone permission to go to the movies as a guard against homesickness.

Wednesday night Miss Mary was present to greet the student body.

Following Miss Mary's talk, Norvell Montague, editor of the Farmville Quarterly Review was presented, along with the class presidents,

President Jarman's Message To the New Students

Dr. J. L. Jarman

Just a word to freshmen and other new students to say we welcome you to college with its many opportunities. Most of you are now college life, and to make the transition from school to college from home to college require a little time for adjustment. It is rising how quickly the adjustments are made. That is because of you. Put your regular determination to your best with work first, start with the determination. Then plan opportunity to develop your special talents, for you have talents. Identify yourself with one of the extra-curricular activities in line with your particular gift or talent. Wholehearted participation in at least one of many student activities on the campus will give added zest to your regular work and will help to develop your personality. Remember that you are among friends. Everyone here —students, faculty, administration—is eager to help you find your place in our college life.

J. L. Jarman

Harris Elected Cotillion Club Officer

Elizabeth Harris, of South Boston, was elected business manager of the Cotillion Club Friday night to fill the place left vacant by the marriage of Annie Leigh Bailey to Mr. Hill Merryman, of Lynchburg.

Elizabeth has been treasurer of her class for four years she has been in school. She has presided over the Granddaughters' Club and was co-director of her class production her sophomore year. She is a member of Sigma Sigma Sigma sorority.

Dunbar and Daniel Will Take Pictures

Mr. Thomas Daniels of Dunbar and Daniels Studios in Raleigh, N. C. will be here Monday to remain a week taking pictures for the 1938 annual.

Freshmen, sophomores and juniors will make appointments for the first part of the week. Senior pictures will be taken last.

New French Teacher Likes Farmville But Finds Bridge Her Pet Aversion

"I like Farmville very much" states Miss Hitt, the new trim and attractive French teacher who is taking Miss Draper's place in the French department at S. T. C. Miss Draper is now studying in France. Miss Hitt is a former student of Farmville, but she received her degree at the University of South Carolina.

She taught French in Florida State College for Women before coming to Farmville. Her first teaching experience was obtained at a small high school in South Carolina. Here she taught numerous different subjects. French is the only subject that she teaches here.

A little more information is that her pet aversion is bridge, which she plays a little.

Pan Hellenic Presents Plans For Rushing

Changes Made In Methods

The Pan Hellenic Association met last spring and adopted new rules for sorority rushing. These rules, they believe, will eliminate so-called "dirty-rushing".

Rushing will start approximately six weeks after the opening of school in the fall, or as soon as the average for a tentative grade of "C" for the fall quarter can be obtained from the registrar's office. Here-to-fore rushing has started in January after the first quarter. Early rushing will do away with the visiting of old girls in the new girls homes during Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays.

During the fall quarter, before rushing, the following rules will be observed:

No new student in college will be allowed in the various sorority rooms.

A sorority girl may not discuss her sorority or any other sorority on campus with new girls.

Relations shall exist between sorority girls and new girls in a Y. W. spirit.

No sorority shall arrange any dates with boys for new girls.

There shall be no money spent on new girls, in college by sorority girls, relatives, friends, or alumnae in or out of Farmville.

No new student may visit in the home of any sorority girl or vice versa.

There shall be no riding in and about Farmville by new girls with sorority girls, alumnae friends or relatives of either party. An old girl may ride with a new girl with permission from school when they live in the same town and are going to their respective homes. Faculty members are not governed by this rule, but shall use their own discretion.

No new student may spend the night in school with a sorority girl or alumnae or vice versa.

No girl, old or new, may be rushed by a sorority unless she carries at least twelve hours of work, during the quarter.

Fire Destroys Apartment of School Instructors

Fire destroyed the Richardson home across from the Rotunda on June 23 and with it the apartment of Miss Olive T. Iler and Miss Grace Moran.

Following the fire, school authorities purchased the property and turned the house into a dormitory for S. T. C. students. Rooms were completed for occupancy the day before the girls returned.

It is believed the fire in the Richardson home started by a short circuit in the refrigeration plant. The fire lasted about fifty minutes and destroyed much of the furniture

At the time of the fire Miss Moran was teaching a class, and Miss Iler was in New York. Their absence from the scene of disaster caused them to lose belongings they probably wouldn't have lost.

Freshmen Are Spotted Easily By Veterans

The most entertaining sight in the world is to sit in the Rotunda on the first day of school and watch the freshmen pass. Naturally having been here before and being far superior to them in intelligence makes it easy for the veterans (like Sophomores) to spot a new girl whether her face is familiar or not. The first thing that gives her away is her upward look to the ceiling of the Rotunda. Then, too, while her head is tilted back in inspection, she bumps into about five people, all of whom are busily engaged in being copy-cats. That ritual accounted for, the favorite few peer anxiously back to see if "Mama" has at last pushed through the door. She has—but only after an Olympian struggle—and off they start to find daughter's room. The long wait makes them both fear the worst, but they feel reassured when they hear a passing girl say that "second floor Main isn't bad, it's so convenient." Matriculation came next—very few forgot!

Trailed by at least six eager little colored boys, they high-heel-tap it out to the car and grab an armful of pennants, pillows and lamps. When "Mama" has enumerated every "do" and "don't" she has ever heard of, the newcomers begin to show their different personalities. The neat type immediately begins to unpack; they can't live in a jumble forever. How different they are from some people who live in a mix-up all of their lives. Curiosity compels some girls to leave their rooms in a rush to see what's going on. They see a plenty while they wait for probably two hours to pay their tuition. After the next wait for a post office box, some girls begin to droop, some to giggle, and some are not homesick any more because they have found someone who knew a girl who lived in the same town with their aunt's married cousin.

By dinner time, even the most energetic are worn out. As a rule the dining room is the easiest to find (the aroma of hot rolls and coffee helps) but it seems that one freshman went to only one meal in two days because she couldn't keep the bells straight. Another thing that new girls worry about is whether they have the privilege of going to senior building. Yes, go. If you know anybody there they have probably been trying to find you for a week.

The "rat week" fear has already started, for on the very first day two freshmen were heard airing their views and fears (mostly fears) about "rat week". They thought that all freshmen were compelled to have their rooms in green. Not such a bad idea at that —thanks!

Montgomery Is S. T. C. Princess At South Boston

Ruth Montgomery

Students, Alumnae Take Part In Festival

Ruth Montgomery of Baskerville represented Farmville State Teachers College in the third annual tobacco festival in South Boston on September 3. She was a princess in the court of Senorita Rosario de Blanc of Cuba, Queen Tobacco.

Frances Maxie as Miss Clarksville, Eugenia Jolly as Miss Petersburg, Blair Goode as Miss Chase City, Jacqueline Adams as Miss Kenbridge; Prince Smith as Miss Lawrenceville; Ruth Boaz as Miss Patrick County were other Farmville girls who were in the court of the queen.

Polly Wall as Miss Mecklenburg, Virginia Goode as Miss Boydton and Zaida Thomas as Miss Wytheville were alumnae who were princesses.

Elizabeth Harris, Lois Powell and Mary Harrison Vaughan rode on floats in the spectacular float parade. The princesses rode on floats behind the queen's float. Bands from towns all over Virginia and North Carolina marched between the floats.

Elizabeth Harris accompanied Lillian Williams and Mr. and Mrs. John McRae all of South Boston to Richmond where they met the queen. From there this welcome committee with Miss de Blanc, daughter of the Cuban minister to Britain, and her party motored to Washington via the Skyline Drive. In the capital they were greeted and entertained by the Cuban embassy.

Instructors Tell Of Summer Trips And Studies

Mrs. Warren, assistant in the home department had the most interesting summer of the administration. She spent two months abroad touring France, Switzerland, Italy, Germany, Holland and England, each of which she considered fascinating in its own typical way. However, for natural scenery she stated that she liked Switzerland and Italy, and for art and general fascination she preferred Rome and Venice.

Miss Winnie Hiner toured Canada, South Carolina, and islands off the coast during the summer months, while Miss Mary Clay Hiner drove from the headwaters of the Potomac to Seneca Rocks, which are the largest rocks east of the Rocky Mountains. She also was in sight of the highest peak, Spruce Knob.

Touring the mountains of Virginia, Miss Jennings crossed the Skyline Drive and spent a short time observing in the mountains. Miss Tucker learned many facts about the types of mountain people and their life through her visit at the Methodist Conference at Lake Junaluska.

Before meeting at Natural Bridge, a reunion of classmates of the University of Virginia, Mr. Coyner drove through the Tazewell and Smithfield sections of Virginia.

Miss Nickols attended the University of Virginia for the first summer quarter and followed it by observing at Penn State. Miss Moran spent part of her vacation at Boston and Wellsley College.

Gathering material for his new book, "The Life of Ben Tilman", a prominent South Carolina politician, on which he has been working for several years, Dr. Simkins studied at the State Archives Building in Columbia, South Carolina.

Mr. Bell was a student at New

Miss Mary Resumes Duties After Illness

Miss Mary White Cox was troubled with a serious ear infection this summer and was confined to the infirmary from the middle of July until late August.

Students have stated that they are delighted that Miss Mary has recovered and that she may again take her place as head of the home.

During Miss Mary's illness, Mrs. Charles Turnbill helped in the home department.

June Graduates Find Places in World For Services

Graduates of 1937 have found various places in the world since they finished at this institution.

Lelia Boyland is working in the Laboratory Department of the Dupont Company in Wilmington, Del. Judith Jeffries is working in Richmond and Ruth Dunnington is taking a business course. Katherine Milby is studying for an M.S., Louise Walmsley is attending Peabody, and Marguerite York is also taking a business course.

Dorothy Price, Nellie Pierpont, Frances Channell, Margaret Long, Virginia Leonard and Emily Brumfield married almost as soon as they received their diplomas.

Those girls teaching in Crewe are: Virginia Baker, Katherine Irby, Bess McGlothlin and Nancy Wall.

Graduation didn't separate Chic Dortch, Mary Bowles and Virginia Bean. They are all teaching in Winchester. Dorothy Robertson and Helen Glass are also teaching there.

Virginia Acworth is teaching in Cheriton; Frances Adams, Dan River; Mary Alice Bobbs, Fife; Cassie Boswell, Green Bay; Maxine Burks, Amherst; Emily Channel, Isle of Wight; Ruth Crumley, Kenbridge; Martha Davis, Henrico; Midge Davis, Ettrick; Alice Elder, Rineo; Ann Galusha, Lawrenceville; Victoria Gillette, Windsor; Martha Gwaltney, Smithfield.

Mary Hale, Spring Valley; Martha Hamlet, Albermarle County; Lelia Hill, News Ferry; Evelyn Howell, Dinwiddie; Kathryn Hurt, Salem; Lois Jenkins, Middlebrook; Mrs. Margaret Jennings at home; Bernice Jones, Hanover County; Lloy Kelly and Zaida Thomas are in Danville; India Martin, Amelia;

A WELCOME

S. T. C., we are here! We arrived eager to find happiness whether we were freshmen not knowing what to expect or upperclassmen excited over arriving home. S. T. C. welcome us to her doors and this staff wants to echo the welcome that the "ivy-covered walls" extended.

If we give of ourselves with generous hearts, we can always expect S. T. C. to welcome us. Upperclassmen love this place and freshmen will learn to love it,too. We want each person to feel that she is a real part of this school, to develop the spirit that we have always upheld an dto carry on its traditions.

EVENING PRAYERS

Monday night when Elizabeth Morris conducted prayers, tears were shamelessly obvious on the cheeks of her audience. The sincerity and true faith of girls who conduct evening prayers are enough to make any girl in this school a better woman.

True womanhood is concerned with living fully in such a way that noother person is hindered in living by your way of living. This methods of living can be found in no better way during our college days here than by attending evening prayers with humble hearts open to accept and to believe.

Somehow the sight of a fine young woman conducting other young women in prayer is one of the most beautiful sights. A feeling of peace invades the heart after this sight and stays there, happily.

Literary Column

Bernice Copley

Autumn, to many of us, is the most beautiful time of the year. In spite of the falling leaves with their quickly changing colors, and the grass that is turning into a lusty brown, and the air that has a slight chill to it—yes, not withstanding all these—autumn has an enchanting loveliness. It challenges us to adjust ourselves to the changing season and to face the cold oncoming days with courage.

Unveil the Autumn

Marya Taturenska

While the summer's loosened sun
—enamoured hair
And bright abstracted green
Pallor, and starry sheen
Envelops us as the warm seasons fade
Into a cooler shade,
Then flows upon the lawn
The golden signal, the red leaf,
the autumn's messenger,
Glad Goddess winged with morning and cloud horn
Whose snowy feet the celestial meadows stir
Herald this day with russet, yellow, and brown
And in full season scatter the harvest down
While deepening thought on the colored heaven grows.

Dispelled is the wild legend of the rose
But light pours from the heaven, hopes fall from the sky.
Strange the migrating bird's departing cry
And softly, lightly, now less ardently
We face a world robbed of the sun's glare,
Now with the heart to see,
Not with the blinded brain
Nor with the limited eyes' impassioned stare
Too weak to pierce the growing mystery
Of time, and charge, and the fast withering tree.

Have You Noticed?

By Frances Hutcheson

I may be a little prejudiced, but it seems to me that a great part of our fair student body has been haunting the hall near the post-office. It's either a matter of gotta-get-a-letter, or gotta-get-a-book. The "letter" group is by far the least painful. Qou know the horrible truth and leave—broken-hearted, of course, but nevertheless you may go back to your room and be comfortably broken-hearted.

Pity the poor, wretched unfortunate gals who have just joined the line waiting to be allowed to buy a book! You join the line somewhere behind the laundry. After five minutes it seems advisable to strike up some sort of conversation with your next door neighbors. One had a bad cold and doesn't want to talk and the other jus never was any good at talking. She sees no point in it whatsoever and scorns your own feeble attempts. Completely defeated, you sulk for what feels like ages. Finally you can stand it no longer and you start craning your neck for somebody you know in the line. It's an uncanny thing, but there's never a familiar face in the line. Numerous acquaintances pass by. They're even kind enough to ask what you're doing. This is the most tactless thing she could possibly have said. It's obvious what you're doing! Why should she want to rub it in? Why should she feel called upon to make your fate more unbearable? By this time you are bitter about life and learning. The final blow arrives when you are at last the lucky one to be "waited on next." You desperately ask for the books you want. They all have to be ordered! The whole gruesome ordeal has been for naught. You return to your room with a few graying hairs, cursing your fate. You are tempted to salvage your wounded soul by buying a new pair of shoes and a chocolate sundae, regardless of the effect on your pocket-book and complexion.

Rotunda Reverberations

Girls! Girls! And more girls! New faces! Old Faces! Joyful screams of greeting! Tear stained faces bidding fond Mammas farewell! Doting parents requesting that "little Mattie" get the best room in school . . . one with a private bath and the nicest lighting fixtures. All of which means that another year in deah ole S. T. Among those who seem to have had the most exciting time during the summer are Lib Wilson and Nan Seward. From all we've heard (and you can't stay around them long and hear anything else) they seem to have painted the continent of Europe at least a pale shade of pink. Nan has added to her laurels one PRINCE and Lib (poor thing), can only lay claim to a mere Count. By the way, Nan, how did ye old Y. W. spirit survive it all?

No sooner had the Juniors set foot in the Rotunda than a dark cloud shaded the brightness of their homecoming . . . No Senior building for them! Instead they must remain with the lowly Freshmen and the mighty Sophomores! To them we extend our deepest sympathy.

And while we are in a sympathetic frame of mind . . . let's shed a tear or two for GeGe Doughty, Carter Belle Munt, and Sara Kesee. Now that their true loves are no longer at H.-S. C. their private worlds must seem up side down.

Library Column

Kathleen Sawyer

So you had a wonderful vacation? Well, we all did, and I'll bet everyone simply forgot books and schools and everything serious. But it's September again— time to return to work. Also—time to "catch up" on our neglected reading.

We might begin with Walter Lippmann's scathing attack on collectivism. Good Society presents a number of strong and unanswerable arguments against present trend of the state. It is impossible, he writes, to plan for so many with such varied tastes.

Back in Theodore Roosevelt's heydey, before the World War and the subsequent economic crisis, Mr. Lippmann wrote of the political situation. His comments were concerning a world which he considered reasonably stable. Since that time everything has been turned topsy-turvey, and Mr. Lippmann confesses that he, with the rest of us, has been often confused and doubtful. He has watched liberalism being pushed steadily in the background by various "isms" proposed as cures for the world's ills.

This new book is a plea to honestly liberal-minded people. Good Society urges that there be an effort to extend the scope of existent laws. The present state of affairs Mr. Lippmann describes as a "vicious dilemma."

Speaking of politics, Bernard Mayo has given us a splendid portrait of that master politician statesman, man of affairs and lawyer—Henry Clay. The volume is crowded with dominant figures colorful incidents and dramatic scenes, but from them all emerges the inimitable Clay, "the cock of Kentucky". Anyone who cares at all for history or for a study of personalities will be fascinated by this splendid biography, Henry Clay.

Of an entirely different character is one of the seasons most unique novels, Their Eyes Were Watching God. Zora Neale, a negro, has given us a clear, dispassionate picture of her race. You might be reading of the cook in your kitchen or the maid who cleans your room. This book does not seek the sympathy of the white man. It is merely a story of the ordinary colored person.

The experiences of Zora Neale herself are as interesting as those of her characters. Taken out of school at an early age, she helped care for her brother's children. Then she became a maid. Later she had the opportunity of completing her interrupted education. Now she is secretary to Fannie Hurst, and by her remarkable work is achieving an unusual reputation in the literary world.

The Perfect Man

There is a man who never drinks
nor smiles, nor chews, nor swears,
Who never gambles, never flirts,
who shuns all awful snares—
He's paralyzed.

Now I sit me down to study;
I pray the Lord I don't go nutty;
And when I have learned this junk
I pray the Lord that I don't flunk.

Just remember that the now great oak
Was once a nut like you.

Again school has opened, and again these dear old halls are filled with new faces and new voices which mingle with the faces and voices of old students. We wish to welcome the Freshman class and the other new students and hope they'll learn to love S. T. C. as much as those who have been here before. Old students will tell you that she makes a wonderful foster-mother, and that it takes a lot to make one forget her and her atmosphere and friendliness. We love her dearly—we hope you will, too!

* * * *

Of course happiness and friendliness don't come to you on a be-ribboned pillow—you must put yourself out just a little! You must learn to study and play—to concentrate and relax: it all goes into the making of a rounded personality—the best definition of that word we can think of is—a good worker; a good player; a good sport.

* * * *

We hope that everything around you will get under your skins (in the right sense of the phrase): that you will learn to love the ivy on the walls; that each tree and bush and blade of grass will be looked upon as wonderful; that the statute of Joan of Arc, our patron saint, will come to be our patron saint, too. We hope that the strains of the Alma Mater will cause a lump to come to your throat, and that the thought of those who have come and gone before you—who have made S. T. C. what it is today—will hold a place of endearment in your hearts.

* * * *

There are two particular personages in the school with whom we know you will become great friends, Dr. Jarman, our president—I believe that the "cute little Freshmen" of Miss Mary, one of our greatest friends. How can you help but love them?

* * * *

There are so many little things which upperclassmen hold near and dear! So many customs and traditions that mean nothing whatsoever to an outsider, but which are cherished by us. You see, those are the things that make our atmosphere—that make us love to come back year after year—and make us happy and contented there. You, too, will feel it!

* * * *

We know that your class will be a grand one, and that the Junior Class, your sister class, is already proud of you. We hope and sincerely wish you a most successful first year—success comes easily after one triumph—so that insures your entire four years. Again—welcome, and may success and good luck be yours!

* * * *

Old girls—your faces, figures, and antics are good to the eyes. The Seniors are very strangely dignified; the Juniors unaccountably "devil-may-care;" and it's so hard to tell, whom we all love and respect—and last year are honest-to-goodness Sophomores! We hope that this year will be unbelievably successful for each and every class.

The fall season has come with a bang! There's a tang in the air that somehow makes one step a wee bit more briskly; it sharpens the wits as well and makes the cheeks rosy and the eyes bright. It's wonderful, wonderful weather—the kind that makes football more interesting—the kind that makes one dig into books and haunt the library.

World Sports

By Mary Mahone

Now that the leaves are turning and there's a tang in the air, America's greatest sport, football, is again coming into its own. The uniforms of the Ohio State gridiron men cost eighty dollars apiece. The shoulder pads cost twelve dollars and are the most elaborately built because they protect the collar bones which break more easily than the other bones. The pants are made of slippery jockey satin and cost nine dollars a pair. The helmets cost eight dollars a pair and the shoes which have inch long cleats cost ten dollars a pair. An active player will generally wear out four pairs of shoes in a season.

There is always pathos as well as excitement in sports. In the Champagne Stakes at Belmont Park, New York, Hal Prince Headley's "Merrow" came in first after Mrs. Ethel Mor's "Sky Larking", even money favorite and generally rated the most promising two year old of the season, stumbled while leading the field, broke a leg and had to be destroyed.

Doodle bug racing is among the youngest of American sports. Doodle bugs (or midget cars) were first built in 1919 by a group of rich youngsters to race around the Los Angeles Junior College Stadium. However, midget racing had a long pull ahead of it. It didn't become a recognized American sport until 1932 when a field of eight raced twenty laps around the football field of Los Angeles Layola High School. Last week Dan Zeiter, well on his way to becoming the American doodle bug promoter, held a midget race on his ramshakle dirt track outside of Detroit. It is the largest and most important doodle bug race held so far. Zeiter makes every driver sign a waiver absolving him from damages before getting on the track. All promoters do this but Zeiter is less sympathetic than most. He holds that "anyone who gets into a racing car is a sucker." Most of the existing midget cars have a 75 inch wheel base in comparison to the 105 inch average of standard racing cars. They weigh from 100 to 1,000 pounds and have anywhere from fifteen to sixty-five horse power. They can do up to 120 miles per hour even though races rarely exceed seventy miles per hour. In spite of this, the impression speed is spectacular. Since doodle bugs may race indoors as well as out of doors they have a steady year round season. Top notch drivers average $125. Drivers are very susceptible to superstition. No driver will paint his car green nor allow a woman to sit in it. To see a customer eating peanuts is bad luck and lost shoes are considered a bad omen because the impact of a crash on a tightly wedged driver often knocks him out of his shoes. In spite of bad omens midget races are less dangerous than the full sized car races and seems to be taking quite a hold on the customers.

Athletic Association Will Entice Girls With Fun

Old shoes, hair tied in bright kerchiefs, gay songs and carefree laughter—that's the spirit of a Monogram Club hike on any Saturday afternoon, and that spirit wasn't lacking last Saturday when we tramped out to Longwood, munched those luscious buns which can be beat nowhere else, and drank coco-colas which are popular on all A. A. picnics. Then for the fun—everybody dropped down on the lawn in vagabond style and enjoyed the scintillating wit and stories of Virginia Whitehead Smith told as only she can tell them. Doesn't that entice you? Mother Nature makes this a perfect time for gypsying with her share of warm sunlight bathing the earth, faintly turning leaves, golden rods waving in the fields (hay-fever sufferers please don't take offense) and hazy air filled with the pungent smell of wood smoke. She does her part and the A. A. officers do theirs so why not come out and do yours? You'll find a sure cure for homesickness in these six five mile hikes and you'll get fifty points toward the Monogram Club in the bargain.

Attention to Freshmen. Don't forget the weenie-roast at Longwood this coming Saturday, which the A. A. is giving you. It's a grand climax to that enlightening orientation tour, which you're going to take so don't miss it.

If you are worried about that extra avoirdupois which attached itself to you this summer here is a timely prescription—come out for Hockey practices and do your daily dozens in swift moving action on the athletic field. If you don't, you'll be sorry when the team is organized and takes those grand trips that have been planned to play other colleges.

Teach Swimming And Work On B. S. Degree

Miss Ruth Leonard of Lynn, Mass. is the new swimming instructor. She is filling the position left vacant by Louise Walmsley, who is studying at George Peabody College.

Miss Leonard comes to Farmville as a well recommended physical instructor. She attended Posse School of Physical Education in Kendal Green, Mass. for three years. She was counselor at Camp Sommerset in Oakland, Maine and has done extensive work with Girl Scouts and Campfire Girls.

WATER CARNIVAL

DUCKS! Here's your chance to do your quacking. The big water carnival will be Oct. 14, only two weeks from Thursday. Seniors, Juniors, Sophomores are trying hard to break forth. Don't hold them back! Everybody knows what Freshmen can do and they don't have to be urged. Just don't disappoint us! The date, again, is October 14.

The Revolutionary Pen That Won't Run Dry
In a New and Superlative Model—the Speedline

It's not how much a person has in his pocket that determines whether or not he selects the new 1938 Parker Speedline Vacumatic—it's how much he has above his shoulders!

Some other pens cost as much as this revolutionary invention, yet no one having the "low down" on pens wants to pay these prices without getting these new-day advantages. For example:

A new all-time high in ink capacity, hence a Pen that never starts anything it cannot finish. A Pen that shows the ENTIRE ink supply—shows when to refill—hence one that never runs dry in classes or exams.

An utterly exclusive Style—laminated Pearl and Jet—now with slender Speedline shape—the most restful ever conceived.

And not merely modern in Style, but wholly modern in mechanism, too. Its SACLESS and patented Diaphragm Filler radically departs from all earlier types, regardless of whether they have a rubber ink sac or not.

Be sure to see and try this pedigreed Beauty today at any good pen counter. The Parker Pen Co., Janesville, Wisconsin.

Y. W. C. A. Gives Annual Reception For New Girls

Isabel Williamson Presents Skit

The Big Sister-Little Sister Reception, given by the Y. W. C. A. was held Friday night in the Rec.

In the receiving line were Dr. Jarman, Dr. Jeffers, Dr. Bell, Mr. and Mrs. McCorkle, Miss Nichols, Miss Lila London, Miss Willie London, Miss Mix, Miss Haynes, Miss Penny, Elizabeth Morris, Nan Seward and Carter Belle Munt.

Punch and cake were served, after which the Big Sisters introduced their Little Sisters.

A three act play was presented followed by tap dancing, singing and the Big Apple. Isabel Williamson was in charge of entertainment. The skit presented depicted a mock story of the life of Cinderella. Anne Scott and Sara Keesee sang between acts. Margaret Britton, Army Butterworth and Ann Dugger sang and tapped to "School Days."

Society

In spite of the fact that we have been to our Alma Mater only one week, many of our fair damsels felt the need of home and loved ones once more.

Among those going home for the week-end were Lois Griffin, Martha Harding, Elizabeth Legrande, Clara Pinkard and Frances Barnes.

Susie Jeffress and Anne Bruce spent the week-end in Rice.

Virginia Reed Turnes, Frances Hudgins, Virginia Kie, Elsie Dodd, Grace Allen Pittard and Mabel Burton went to Richmond.

The Hampden-Sydney — University of Virginia football game attracted many to Charlottesville. These included Jennie Belle Gilliam, Esther Atkinson, Virginia Doughty, Katharine Payne, Lib Harris and Carter Belle Munt.

Marian Raine, Bruce Crowell, Dot and Doris Adkins motored to Danville.

Pauline Scott visited friends in Greensboro, N. C.

Kathleen McCann, Virginia Doughty, Frances Steed, Livian Powell, Mary Anne Willis, Janie Lee Young and Estelle Smith went to Lynchburg.

Sunday found many of our old girls back on the campus with friends. Polly Wall, Kat Irby and Bess McGlothlin came from Crewe. Virginia Baker came from Blackstone. Others included Maude Rives, Hebe Wilkins, Margaret Williams, Doris Brandis and Mildred Brown.

The "Problem Club" reunited at table seven for dinner in the tea-room Saturday night. Those present were "Jinny" Carroll, "Lina" Willis, Prince Smith, "Cleo" Jarman, "Jinna" Jarman, "Susie" Owen and Nan Cuthbert Seward.

Seward And Wilson Arrive Clutching Duck From Paree

By Ann Dugger

"Everything has been 'ducky'", exclaimed Nan Seward and Elizabeth Wilson as they stepped off the Ile de France, clutching a huge wooly duck bought on their two months tour of Europe. Even after weeks of everyday life, they talk as excitedly of England, Holland, Switzerland, Italy, Germany, France, and "fifteen minutes worth of Austria" as they did the day they slipped the duck past the customs officials.

Something interesting happened to Nan and Lib in each country that they visited. In Italy they were in a gondola wreck. They explored the ruins of the Colloseum at night with a cigarette lighter. They were impressed by the new Mussolini Stadium, which contains fifty smaller stadiums—one for each athletic event—and a swimming pool that could hold all the buildings of our college. In Monte Carlo Nan couldn't find the money changer to enable her to play roulette, so she wandered out in the lobby and lost fifty cents in the slot machine. Of course they went mountain climbing in the Alps, and wrote home, "When those people built the Alps they really meant business." They spent a day in the Caledonian market in London where one "can buy anything from alarm clocks to inner tubes". They liked Germany best of all, because it is "clean, beautiful, and the people are so friendly." The scenery in the Mediterranean was the most beautiful that they saw—white cliffs, sapphire blue sea, and real "Red sails in the sunset."

Being feminine, Nan and Lib talked of the clothes seen on their trip. Most of the people dress as Americans do, but the peasants wear long dresses, dark aprons and shawls. The two girls noticed that Europeans have unusually large feet, and many wear stockings that are between flesh-colored and orange.

Being S. T. C. students, they talked of the food. They learned to eat crayfish in France, and spaghetti, "even if it is three feet long" in Italy. They did their best to down snails. Coca colas were scarce, and cost fifty cents when they were lucky enough to find them at all. They thought the sidewalk cafes of Paris great fun.

As for men, Nan fell for a prince, Yugoslavian, but Lib dropped to a count.

On the voyage home Nan was seasick, and Lib kept her company by being "homesick for Europe". From their conversation one can bet that of the million Americans reported to have been in Europe last summer, the two girls from Farmville had as much fun as anybody.

Tri Sigs Enjoy Picnic

The Tri Sigmas held a picnic supper at Longwood Friday night. Mrs. Hurt served the meal around the rock chimneys to about thirty girls and Miss Camper.

Following supper, the group sang songs and then hiked back to school.

Dodd Represents Pi Kappa Sigma At Convention

Moseley Also Goes To Colorado

Elsie Dodd was the Alpha Epsilon official delegate to the Pi Kappa Sigma national convention which was held in Colorado Springs, Colorado, July the fourteenth. Lucille Moseley from the class of '37 was another representative from this chapter.

Headquarters were at the Broadmoor Hotels situated at the foot of the Cheyenne Mountain. The convention opened with a reception and bridge party.

At sunset on the following evening an elaborate steak fry attracted the delegates to the top of the Cheyenne Mountain where they were entertained by the hotel orchestra.

All day Friday was play day and trips were made by the girls to points of interest around Colorado Springs.

At the banquet on Saturday Alpha Epsilon chapter won the efficiency award.

Pi Kappa Delta Debate Subject Is Announced by Forensic Coach

Season Will Open With Winthrop Trip

'Resolved: That the National Labor Relations Board should be empowered to enforce arbitration of all industrial disputes" has been chosen as the National Pi Kappa Delta question for the season of 1937-38", announced Dr. J. E. Walmsley, Farmville coach of forensic activities. This is the question that will be the basis for all the inter-collegiate debates this year.

The first big trip that the Debate Club will sponsor this year will be to the Dixie Invitational Tournament, which will be held at Winthrop College in Rock Hill, South Carolina from December 2 through the 4th. Any collegiate institution with any form of public speaking activities is invited to attend this tournament, and colleges from Maine to Florida will be represented.

Wednesday, October 13th at 4:30 P. M., has been set as a tentative time when all girls interested in debating, oratory, public speaking, extemporaneous speaking or impromptu speaking may try out for the Debate Club in the small auditorium. The subject for the try-outs is the same as that for all debates of this session—the Pi Kappa Delta question.

Alvis Is Elected Vice-President

The sophomore class elected Frances Alvis of Lynchburg from many nominees for class vice-president on Tuesday, Sept. 28. This office was left vacant by Martha Seitz, who transferred from S .T. C. to Randolph-Macon.

Frances came to S. T. C. with an outstanding high school record behind her. Here her abilities have been recognized by the students. She is sports editor of the Rotunda, an active Dramatic Club member, an assistant on the Campus League, and a member of the Alpha Sigma Alpha Sorority and the Cotillion Club.

Spring Honor Roll Is Announced By School Registrar

The following girls made the Honor Roll for the Spring quarter, 1937, and are back in school this session. The girls' names do not appear here if they made the Honor Roll, but did not return to college.

Doris Adkins, Dorothy Adkins, Mary Dudley Allen, Caroline E. Alsop, Frances Alvis, Martha Bailey, Ruby Bane, Lois Barbee, Annie Bass, Evelyn Christine Beale, Sara Melba Beale, Elizabeth Beryman, Margaret L. Farmville Girls Will Attend ACP Convention

Famous Newsmen Are Speakers

Ruth Montgomery, editor of the "Virginian", Mary Harrison Vaughn, editor of the "Rotunda", and Elizabeth Roberts, business manager of the "Rotunda" will leave Farmville on Tuesday, October 12, to attend the Associated Collegiate Press Convention. The meeting will be held at the Medinah Club, Chicago, October 14, 15, 16.

They will arrive in Chicago on Wednesday and register for the meetings which will begin on Thursday morning. Henry Goddard Leach, Editor of the "Forum" magazine, and Howard Vincent O'Brien, famed editorial columnist of the Chicago Daily News, are the main convocation speakers for the convention. The program has been arranged so that it will be of an especial interest to the editors of college publications.

A most interesting Friday evening program has been arranged for the delegates. Dusty Miller, famed publisher of the Wilmington, Ohio, News Journal, returns with his witty philosophy to enliven the after-dinner spot on the banquet program. Following his speech will be a giant floor show from the famous Tallyho Room of the Medinah Club. And concluding the event program will be a three-hour dance program by Al Diem and his broadcasting orchestra.

Rose Marie Hunter Is Elected Vice-Head Of Fraternity

Rose-Marie Hunter of King George was elected recently to succeed Doris Carper as vice-president of Pi Gamma Mu.

Rose-Marie was a member of the Virginian staff her Sophomore year. She is a member of the Cotillion Club and Mu Omega sorority.

She is the daughter of Mr. Thomas Hunter whose column the "Cavalier" appears daily in the Richmond Times-Dispatch.

Sophomore Class Places Robeson On Student Government

"It's something I've always wanted to do," stated Ruth Curtis Robeson of Newport News when she was elected by the sophomore class on Tuesday, September 28, to take the place on Student Government of Judith Gathright, who didn't return to S. T. C. but entered business school.

A large number of nominees were placed on the floor, therefore the class had to vote several times before reaching a conclusion.

Ruth Curtis was an active member of many of her high school group. She was president of the student body in her senior year, and is very familiar with the work which will confront her this year.

House Council Elects Baskerville

Lucy Baskerville was elected vice president of the House Council at the regular meeting on Monday night. Lucy served on the council last year and is serving again this year as a hall president. She is also a member of the Cotillion Club.

At the meeting on Monday night the Council discussed regulations to be enforced this year. A special drive is being made for a quiet study hour.

Peace Group Pick Walmsley

Dr. James E. Walmsley, Professor of History and Social Science at this college attended the Institute of International Relations held at the University of Michigan for five weeks this summer.

Dr. Walmsley was one of forty-three people selected from the United States and Europe by the Carnegie Peace Foundation.

Two of the five speakers who were selected because of their outstanding position in International Law were Dr. J. Brown Scott, president of the Institute, and Professor Wilson of Harvard. Dr. J. Brown Scott was solicitor of the Department of State under President Woodrow Wilson, and he was also a member of the Peace Delegation to Paris. Professor Wilson is the present advisor to the Department of State on international law.

The lectures dealt with the origin and history of international law and with the present problems of neutrality.

According to Dr. Walmsley, meeting outstanding men in international law was the most important happening. He also gave two reasons why he was glad to be home. First, he wanted some good old Southern cooking and second, he wanted to hear people say something besides "beg pardon" when he spoke.

Clara Nottingham Heads Orchesis

Clara Nottingham, junior, will act as president of Orchesis for the coming year.

The Orchesis is composed of those students who have shown unusual ability and interest in natural dancing. This group of students is also known as the Artist Dance Group.

Gwen Bell was elected president of the Orchesis last spring. She did not erturn to school this fall. As vice-president elect, Clara Nottingham has taken over the duties of president for the year.

The Orchesis functions in many varied activities during the school year. Among these are their annual recital and May Day. Each year the club endeavors to secure some renowned artist to teach the natural dancing class and to give a concert in the Lyceum series. Last year Charles Weidman was here.

Clara has been an active member of her class. She is on the Rotunda staff and is a member of Gamma Theta sorority.

Fraternity Holds National Meeting In Farmville

Alpha Kappa Gamma Has Plans

Alpha Kappa Gamma, national honor fraternity for leadership, will have as its main speaker Miss Ruth Blakesdale, of the Social Security Board of Washington, at the convention held here from October the fifteenth through the seventeenth.

Besides the national officers, representatives from the University of South Carolina, Queen-Chicora College and the University of North Carolina are expected along with present members and alumnae of the local Joan Circle. The visitors will be guests at Longwood throughout their visit on the campus.

The convention opens with a business meeting in the honor room on Friday afternoon and extends through that night. On Saturday morning there will be a general discussion on a primary topic: "Vocational Opportunities for Women in the South", while the afternoon will be taken up with committee meetings and several hours of recreation.

The national convention culminates in a banquet at Longwood on Saturday night with Miss Blakesdale as the guest speaker.

The local circle is planning for Madeline McGlothlin to present a paper on the main topic. Elizabeth Shipplett, president of Joan Circle will preside at the meeting.

Miss Jane Royal, national president, will be present to welcome guests and to keep meetings running smoothly.

Freshmen Nominate Purdom, Atkinson Pierpont and Lewis

Billie Lewis, Esther Atkinson, Nancy Pierpont and Ruth Lee Purdom were nominated for class president at the first meeting of the Freshman class Tuesday night.

Ruth Lee Purdom from George Washington High School in Danville was on the Student Council, president of the dramatic club and alumna editor of her school paper.

At Salem High School Nancy Pierpont was an officer of her class through high school and treasurer of Girl Reserves.

Billy Lewis from Charlottesville attended Farmville College High and was salutatorian of her class.

Esther Atkinson came to S. T. C. from Peace Junior College, where she was very active in all her class activities.

These nominees will be voted on by the class of 1941 Wednesday night in the auditorium. Vera Ebel, junior class president, will conduct freshman class meetings until the president is elected.

Freshmen Must Prepare To Please Lordly Sophs

Beware of October 11, 12, 13, all ye lowly Freshmen. The number thirteen is symbolic of your unlucky fate on these three days. Be careful of every little beat of your heart for Sophomores are ready and waiting for any timid, anxious souls, or horsey, bold ones for that matter, too. Just be prepared to sweep clean, make beds, and become servants to your masters (for three days) in every funny, silly way possible.

Here are the rules so abide by them if you don't want to be called up in "Big Rat Court."

General Rules: 1. Meet in front of the Rotunda every day at 5:45 p. m. 2. "Sign off" to sophomores when asked to do so. 3. Wear no make up, no fingernail polish, no jewelry, no belts, hair straight. 4. Wear black stockings and tennis shoes. 5. Wear around neck, both in front and back, rat traps hung on a string. Fasten in each trap a large placard with name printed plainly on it. 6. Wear hankerchief pinned on dress and carry comb.

Monday

1. Roll call setting up exercises Monday morning on athletic field at 6:30 a. m. Dress in gym suits.
2. Wear one plait straight up in middle of head.
3. Wear class colors—green and white.

Tuesday

1. Wear rain coats. (No belt)
2. Wear bathing cap
3. Wear rubber gloves

Mr. Coyner Accepts Sponsorship Of Junior Class

M. Boyd Coyner

Psychology Teacher Has Served College Faithfully

Mr. M. B. Coyner, Professor of Education, was elected classman of the Junior Class at the regular meeting of the class last Tuesday night. This is the first time in some years that a man has been elected a class man at Farmville.

Mr. Coyner is well qualified for this position. He has been chairman of Founders Day Committee for two years. He is faculty adviser of Pi Gamma Mu, of the Farmville Quarterly Review and of the Y. W. C. A.

In 1911 Mr. Coyner came to Farmville after receiving a Master of Arts degree from the University of Virgina. Since then he has studied two sessions at Columbia University under Professors Thorndike, Woodworth, Poffenberger and others. In 1922-1923 he taught at Washington and Lee University, supplying for the head of the department of psychology who was on leave of absence. In April of 1918 he volunteered for service in the war, and was assigned to duty in Camp Greenleaf, Georgia where he aided in giving the well known "Army Alpha" intelligence tests to recruits.

Among the faculty names found in "Leaders in Education", edited by Cattell, is that of M. B. Coyner. He is a member of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, the Virginia Academy of Science, the American Association of University Professors, the National Education Association and the Virginia Education Association. He is on the University of Virginia Extension Faculty and has taught classes in Petersburg and Lynchburg. His main studies in his field have been in the psychology of memory and intelligence, and he has made a number of original experiments on problems in these fields.

In 1922 Mr. Coyner married Miss Ruth Harding of Emporia, Virginia who is an alumna of this college. They have one son nine years old.

Mr. Coyner's chief hobby is golf, but he says his usual score does not indicate his interest in the game. Locally he is a member of the Lions Club and has been president of the club.

Allen Will Install Council Thursday

Dudley Allen, president of the House Council, will install the new House Council on Thursday night in the large auditorium. Rev. A. H. Hollingsworth will lead the devotionals.

Martha Meade Hardaway has charge of the installation. Virginia Agee will be installed as secretary and Lucy Baskerville as vice-president of the Council. Besides those hall presidents appointed last spring the following girls, who were recently appointed, will be installed: David Terry, Elizabeth Waterson, Frances Pope, Carrie Mahood, Mary Emma Thompson and LeNoir Hubbard.

Each member of the Student Body is expected to attend the installation and devotional service.

Mrs. Nunn Visits Russia In Summer And Relates Story

"A book would not hold all the things I saw in Russia—no words can express the beauty of it. The best way and the only way to see it is to go there," Mrs. Nunn, supervisor of the laundry said. That is just what she and her daughter did this past summer.

There all the women work. They build the roads, sweep the streets and work in fields. Their children are kept in nurseries during the day. The men make up the army. It is considered a great honor there to be in the army. There are two regiments of women in the Russian Army.

Saying a word against the Russian government is almost like signing one's own death warrant. Since the Revolution the land of the people—everything belongs to the government.

Russians sound, when they talk like frightened chicken hens Mrs. Nunn said.

The clothes are of the poorest type. Most of them are made in the homes. The women wear dresses made of material very similar

READ YOUR ROTUNDA

Each Rotunda that comes out requires hours of careful proofing by the editorial board, concentration on the part of the writer and possibly two or three trips to a person for obtaining information. The editor has to measure and space each article into the dummy copy, and the printer's job is to put this dummy into print.

Putting out a paper is no quick job. A picture has to be sent off the preceding Friday if it is to appear in Wednesday's paper. All this requires work and steps on the part of someone.

We, the staff, ask you to consider our job which must be done between classes, before you judge us for minor errors. We ask, too, that you read the paper for it's actual news value and not for merely its attractive columns that possibly interest you more.

We are glad to serve you. We like our jobs, but we do ask your forbearance and your cooperation.

OUR MAGAZINE

A call to pens is sounded to all students old and new as the magazine staff goes to work. You've written something once upon a time, that you think is mighty fine — of course you have. Now's your chance to publish it. Now's your chance to show it to hundreds of others. Maybe, though, you haven't written it — maybe you've just thought and thought about it and said to yourself, "I'll write that down some day." Today is the day to do it. Get to work right now and write that inspiration down. It doesn't have to be done up so terribly fancy — just write it down so others can see and feel it as you do. No one expects you to be a genius—but then you can try—they're made not born, you know.

Your inspiration, your poems, your short stories, your sketches—the books you have read can belong to us too, if you'll only pass them along.

Drop your contributions in the magazine box in the hall soon so they can be published in November. So hurry up and join the "share—the works—literary club"—we're dying to see what you can do.

Literary Column

Charles Madge, whose name has been prominent in the group of younger writers since 1933, has published his first book of verse, "The Disappearing Castle." Readers have been led to expect a finished performance on a level with that of MacNiece or Auden, and when they find that it is not there, Madge may be hurriedly dismissed as unimportant as another bad guess, and never bothered with again.

There are no poems in "The Disappearing Castle" which are completely satisfying but that does not make an excuse for final judgments. What there is, and this is something very good and likely to be overlooked, is a continual growth, and an unwillingness to let a once-mastered method overrule the possibilities in further experimentation. Such lines as these belonging in his first collection have the force and immediacy of all good poetry:

Where are the dancing girls? They are not here.
Not here? Then back into the night again.
The night of images that disappear
And reappear to mock the tired brain.
We have no home. Our bourgeois home is wrecked.
We seek instead the shadowy consolation
Of glimmering alcohol and still expect
The unexpected of our own creation.

For we create-proud tyrants of a moment—
Bright visions, born between despair and fear,
And, in possessing them, survive
our torment.
Where are the dancing girls? They are not here.

The Librarian

This week let's veer from our usual course and do something slightly different. Customarily, I tell you what books seem to be most popular and what the general plot of each concerns. But there hasn't been a great deal said about the authors, on what they have to say outside of fiction.

Today, I read a particularly forceful article by one of our noted writers, and it struck me that all of us should know how he dealt with his subject, for he wrote of The Younger Generation. In this busy time of settling down, getting to work, and adapting ourselves to college life again, I'm afraid quite a number of you missed the article, so I'm attempting here to quote what I considered his very best comments.

"Nowadays we have all become a little more sophisticated. Even the coming of such a revolutionary thing as the radio does not stir us as our father would have been stirred by a like invention.

"There has been a gain and a loss.

"The younger generation has got to face new problems as workmen and the old dreams are fading. Men have to work with more complex, huge and in a sense more terrible, dangerous and fascinating tools."

". . . The change that has gone on in America in the last 15 or 20 years is something tremendous. You have to keep hopping nowadays to keep up with the procession.

"Life persists love, hunger, hate, envy, goodness, all the qualities that made man human and real go on and on.

"My notion is that we modern have been hurried too much. Rush, hurry, has been too much the cry of our times. We need to get the stars back, the skies, the trees, the ground underfoot.

". . . We have gone too fast, are still going too fast.

"It is up to the younger generation to begin getting back the workman sense. It is the most precious possession men ever had.

"It is the one thing men cannot afford to entirely lose out of their lives, and it is up to the younger generation to see that it is not lost."

Rotunda Reverberations

Liz Carroll

Another week flown by and nothing has happened . . . that is nothing that could be written about without involving anybody in a libel suit. Several fair maids seem to have had a roaring good time at Pan Hellenic Dances. Of course the majority of the Freshman class were among those present . . . being the first dance of the season the lads all had their eyes open for new talent.

Freshmen continue to commit the usual or rather the unusual boners that each new class has committed since time immemorial . . . The prize should go to the lil' girl who has been mailing all her letters in the trash can on White House Hall . . . Honorable mention should be given to the one who when asked if she had seen Stella Dallas replied, "No, who is she? A Freshman?"

According to Ginny Agee young love is the best love of all. For the past two years various and sundry young men have occupied first place in her affections . . . now she has returned to the love of her extreme youth and Charlie reigns supreme . . . There are rumors of an engagement!

Mary Page Huff insists that Mr. Bell has changed his style of hair dress this year. "For", says she, "last year he wore it north and south and this year it's east and west."

Among those who should be nominated to oblivion are that group of girls who spend a good portion of every Friday, Saturday and Sunday night draped over first and second floor Rotunda watching other girls dates come in. Clad in pajamas and bath robes large groups of them huddle together commenting on and giggling over every semblance of a male that enters. It is certainly embarrassing to the girls who are fortunate enough to lure a man to this manless Eden . . . and it's hard to believe that even the most conceited man enjoys being ogled from above by seas of undistinguishable faces.

Plans for Rat Week surge ahead under the very able leadership of Virginia Polly and Mary Page Huff. The Sophomore class has spent both time and energy thinking of ways to make the "Rats" feel more at home and of means of reminding them of the lofty position they hold . . . Tis hoped that their efforts will be duly appreciated!

Have You Noticed?

The powers always seem to feel called upon to send a rain on Sundays. It's almost uncanny how few Sundays out of the year are beautiful, clear days. For the poor unfortunate girls who do not happen to be off to the races every week-end the weather harmonizes with their mood and is, therefore, not the worst possible fate. The other half of the student body is so busy playing at home or in some cozy college town that they know not that the rain falleth. Hence, we need not waste our tears upon them.

Somebody very aptly said, "Comfort me with apples, for I am sick of love." The same thing may easily be applied to rain. We feel sorry for ourselves almost to the point of tears and then proceed to get a good book and an apple and crawl in bed to spend a quiet but very enjoyable afternoon. After the hurry and scurry of a long, full week, everybody needs a little peaceful solitude—time to get your disposition and nerves in shape for another week.

A good natured girl always has more friends and more general happiness than the ones who are so changeable as the above mentioned weather. From observation, it seems that the secret of these girls' success lies in their ability to laugh at themselves and to joke away annoying trivialities. They must break down sometime but they probably choose a rainy Sunday afternoon when everybody is away for the week-end and there's nobody to see. Anyhow, it gives you something to think about and a star to which you may hitch your wagon.

Funny Blunders

To give Freshmen an idea of how to give clear-cut, accurate definitions, we reprint a selection from H. Cecil Hunt's "Howlers" collected from examination papers in English schools.

A blizzard is the inside of a fowl.

Dust is mud with the juice squeezed out.

In the United States people are put to death by elocution.

A miracle is something that someone does that cannot be done.

Gravity is that which if there were none we should all fly away.

Christians are only allowed one wife. This is called monotony.

All brutes are imperfect animals. Man alone is a perfect beast.

When you breathe you inspire. When you do not breath you expire.

A red Indian's wife is called his squaw and his children squawkers.

Taxes are things what people won't pay. They are used to keep the roads nice.

Watchword on the French Revolution: Liberty, Equality, and Infirmity.

A monologue is a conversation between two people, such as husband and wife.

A pedestrian is one of those people motorists run over.

The function of the stomach is to hold the petticoat up.

Immortality is running away with another man's wife.

The feminine of bachelor is lady-in-waiting.

Shakespeare was a very polite man. He often said "Go to" but he never finished the sentence.

An optimist is a man who looks at your eyes, a pessimist looks after your feet.

Copied from the "Alabamian"

Our neighbor, who is a horticulturist, tells us that our garden should have sex appeal. He suggests lady slipper, bachelor button, bridal wreath, poppy—and the inevitable baby's breath.

"An ant is ten times stronger than an elephant. A load twenty times its own weight can be carried by an ant while an elephant can barely drag twice its weight."

Good logic, but don't try any of that kind in geometry class!"

"Worry endangers a student's health more than study. Overstudy and overwork have rarely endangered the health of students." These are the facts stressed by Dr. Josephine L. Rathbone to the Directors of Physical Education for college women.

Dr. Rathbone's advice is: "Take it easy and you'll last longer." Which wasn't meant to give failing students an excuse for laying down on their work.

Homesickness comes from disappointment in self. Disappointment in self, from finding that one is not what he thought he was. Instead of becoming disappointed, one can merely step down his opinion of himself to fit himself as he really is!

This war stricken world of ours is enough to turn one's stomach and eat one's heart out at one and the same time.

The conflict between China and Japan is outrageous — not only because Japan bombs the exquisite cities of China and destroys millions of dollars worth of valuable property, but also because Japan, the high-and-mighty-little-country of the East, shows no discretion, pity, or sympathy in its dastardly warfare. In spite of the protests uttered by the two leading nations of the world, the United States and Great Britain, Japan continues her assault on the innocent non-combatants of China. The bloodshed of thousands of women and children, however is not likely to cause Japan any loss of sleep—and the toll of the death bell is certainly not going to give her any tinge of conscience. The United States and England stand on the shores shaking their fists and shouting, "You can't do it—we won't allow it"—and Japan? — Japan opens her mouth in a bloody grin and replies, "Oh yeah?—try and stop me!" And while Japan rejects a bid to Geneva to a conference of the League of Nations, China politely accepts.

During all this turmoil that is rocking China to its very foundations—let us turn to Mussolini and Hitler. They have become very friendly and political negotiations have been flying to and fro; fast and furiously.

A week ago, the two dictators met in Munich, Germany, and Il Duce was received and treated royally by Hitler. After a great exhibition of parades, etc., which included practically the entire male population of Germany, Mussolini exclaimed, "It was wonderful. It couldn't have been better in Italy."

Why is Hitler so pleased with Mussolini's approval? Why are they so chummy?

* * * *

Here in our own country the main topic of conversation—oral or otherwise—is Senator Hugo L. Black, who was named not long ago by the President to fill the vacancy left on the Supreme Court bench by Justice Van DeVanter.

While Justice Black was vacationing in Europe, that he had once belonged to the Ku Klux Klan came to light. It seems that the Klan has quite a few damning beliefs—racial and religious prejudices being two of many. Upon his return from abroad, he was immediately besieged by reporters and became a general target for nasty cracks thrown at random. (The sort only newspaper reporters can throw.)

In a radio speech to the entire American population, Black, in a short and to-the-point address, told everyone all about it. He had belonged to the Klan, but that was before he was active in politics. He resigned, then became Senator and was recently appointed to the bench. He has not been affiliated with the Klan since and did not even keep his membership card.

As for his record since—well—as he said in his speech—it speaks for itself. His activity in Alabama politics speaks for itself; his conduct aboard ship to and from Europe is most commendable.

Why should a man's past record be held against him? He has definitely shown that it is no longer a part of him—that he has cast it from him; it is evident that he himself would like to forget it. Yet at every turn it is flaunted in his face, and cracks are made and insults thrown.

Golf and Riding Are Added to Diversions

S. T. C. rides forth! What could be more striking than a beautiful Farmville maiden astride a gallant horse? O. K. girls, here's your chance to make use of that new riding habit that you've been wanting to step forth in. A certain number of girls must enroll in order for those prancing steeds to remain, so fall in or off, and learn to ride. When you get a little sore, your roommate will gladly sympathize.

"Fore". That will soon be the cry heard out Longwood. Our long awaited dream of having a golf course is here, and girls will soon be pulling those clubs out of the corner now and getting in that graceful swing and stride of golf. It's fine exercise, if you like walking, and it's really a wonderful way to learn to control your temper.

Basketball is going to bring forth keen competition this year, and those freshmen are starting in early. Practices are already well under way, and advanced basketball will soon begin. Come on, everyone and put your class on top.

Which will it be—red and white or green and white? Fight for your colors you sport fans! Hockey is one of the best ways to do it.

Water Carnival Is Sponsored By H2O Club

Margaret Britton Is In Charge

October 14 at 8 o'clock has been selected by the H2O Club as the date for their annual water carnival. Every year the members of the club sponsor the carnival.

Margaret Britton, as vice-president of the club, is acting chairman of the event. Her class chairmen who are in charge of the class stunts are: Isabel Plummer, senior chairman; Jinny Carroll, junior; Sara Keesee, sophomore and Marjorie Nimmo, freshman chairman.

The various class events including plain and fancy diving and the different styles of swimming will be judged by form and ability. Spectacular swimming and diving are not points to be judged.

The members of the H2O Club whose purpose is "to create and foster an interest in swimming" are: Norvell Montague, Margaret Britton, Marjorie Nimmo, Frances Hudgins, Jenny Carroll, Sidney Yonce, Sara Keesee, Isabel Plummer and Ellen Conyers.

Freshman: Tell me, have any big men ever been born in this city?

Upper Classsman: No, only babies.

World Sports

By Mary Mahone

About the toughest job in the world is trying to keep posted on the football rules. Difficult as this may seem, the rules committee has a hard job. Each year they make a few new rulings and sit back with a sigh in the belief that at last the rules are completely fool proof. Every year some enterprising coach finds a loophole and pulls some trick that throws the rules committee on their respective ears again. The tall tales of football and the development of the football rules are parallel. The original hidden ball trick, the beginning of a long line that drove the rules committee frantic was conceived by the late John Heisman, then a young coach making history, at Auburn. In the game with Vanderbilt. One of the Auburn backs slipped it up the jersey of a teammate who quietly made a touchdown untouched and unnoticed.

Pop Warner to the Front

A short time after this Pop Warner and his Indians came out with a new one. All the Indian backs had half a football sewed on their jerseys. By bending over and folding their arms, each back gave the appearance of having the ball. Many a tackler brought down an Indian, but lo, he did not have the ball. As often as not the real ball carrier had gone off by himself to score a touchdown. This is the type of thing that set the rules committee to rearranging the rules.

The rules committee tried to untangle the rulings concerning passes out of bounds. The rule was rewritten to read that a forward pass going out of bounds either directly or after it had been touched by an eligible player of either side should go to the opponent. The committee though there was no loophole in that. It was a drastic penalty, the loss of the ball to the opponent, so the committee thought. Heis the Georgia Tech coach spotted the advantage and pointed it out to his team. In the Tech-Sewanee game it was Tech's ball on Sewanee's 30 yard line. Tech's fullback dropped back and pagged a forward pass out of bounds on Sewanee's 2 yard line. The Sewanee's had the ball on their own 2 yard line and as their kick-out was poor, Tech again had the ball and scored. It was a sheepish rules committee that went to work on that one.

Quattes Takes a Wife

Added to our list of athletes who made good is Thomas J. Quattes, former Notre Dame football player, one time Massachussetts State Policeman and body guard of President Roosevelt. Last week Mr. Quattes was married to Arline Eade of Mass.

The most notable parents in baseball are Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Paul DiMaggia of Taylor Street, San Francisco. Three of their sons, all centerfielders are making good in professional baseball. Their boy, Joe, one of the best outfielders alive, was starring with the New York Yankees when they won the American League pennant. Joe was leading the League in home-runs. Brother Vincent, 25, up for his first big-league season knocked out twelve home-runs. Dominich, 19, played his first year of big-time ball this year with the San Francisco Seals in the Pacific League. Mike is a crab-fisherman like his father and Tom, Joe's oldest brother ,runs the "Joe DiMaggio" Sea Food Grill which was a present from Joe.

Britain's Cup Race

The twenty-seven entrants in Britain's Annual King's Cup Race were required to make a low turn over Scarborough Castle to be identified. Several were observed to bump in a bad air current over the cliff. Wing Commander E. G. Hilton, an experienced flier of forty-two who once raced to Capetown, made the turn at one hundred and twenty miles per hour and then hit an air bump. As the plane went out of control he was thrown clear to be picked up later at the foot of the cliff. His pilotless plane crashed on Castle Hill, decapitating owner Sherren. And so two more pilots have gone to Valhalla.

Vaden Announces Hockey Plans As Manager

Upperclassmen Are Urged To Report

Harriette Vaden, manager, announced recently that for the first time Farmville will have an intercollegiate hockey team this year. She has written to William and Mary Extension and Westhampton of Richmond, but to date has heard from neither.

Eighty-nine beginners reported for practice last week and show signs of being valuable players for their respective teams. Only twenty-two came out for advanced.

Russia has few store so the people save their money.

The Russians are clean and friendly—the guides intellectual—each speaking four or five different languages. Everyone in Russia studies. Education is compulsory for children under fifteen years. Two foreign languages are required, one of which must be English.

Russia is growing. New buildings and roads are being constructed. Moscow is erecting a building that will be larger and taller than the Empire State building.

Amid all the progress of Russia many old and famous castles stand. The art exhibits are unusual. The floors are made of different kinds of woods with designs resembling wheels and diamonds.

When you buy a train ticket in Russia it does not include your seat. That costs you extra. The berths have only half curtains and four sleep in each compartment. Often men and women are placed in the same compartment. Russia has few conventions and pay little attention to morals.

Since the Revolution there is no accepted God. The churches have been converted into places for lectures against God. Skeletons have been unearthed and placed in the churches as postive proof of what happens to you after you die. They believe there is no soul or no heaven.

Mrs. Nunn and her daughter sold about twenty-five dollars worth of American things for what would have been a hundred and fifty in American money.

When asked if at any time she had any fear of being captured by officials Mrs. Nunn said, "No, I didn't go to make trouble— I went to see Russia."

Roy Frye Plays Music For Pan-Hels At H.-S. C.

Many Girls Attend Annual Dances Over Week-end

Roy Frye and his Virginians of Harrisonburg, Virginia furnished music for the Pan-Hellenic fall dances of Hampden-Sydney Friday night. Saturday night Ray Dennis with his special attention to the "Big Apple" proved popular to the dancers.

The Comity Club which has recently been papered and painted was attractively decorated in red and gray. The stage was also adorned with these colors and the official seal of the Pan Hellenic Council.

Those girls from S. T. C. who attended and their escorts were: Lucy Baskerville, B. T. Boyle; Anne Billups, Bobby Scott; Nancy Bland, Brooks Smith; Theressa Brinkley, Bill Spencer; Margaret Britton, Jimmie Christian; Army Butterworth, Jack Lewis; Betty Butterworth, John Battle; Ann Camp, Nat Rogers.

Ruth Corney, Vincent Regg; Irma Carpenter, Tom Reed; Mary Cox, Fred Beck; Bruce Crowell, Martin Donaldson; Va. Doughty, Rives Brown; Eleanor Dodson, Edwin Bouldin; Sudie Dunton, John Fuochie; Marie Eason, Ned Douglas; Frances Elliett, Bred Canfield; Jeannette Ferguson, T. Burton; Edith Fitch, James Price.

Society

By S. Frances Steed

The clouds gathered, the rain poured; there were week-end dances at Hampden-Sydney; school work to be done; but still Saturday found many of our girls aboard buses, trains and cars, homeward bound.

Among these were Ella Ware, Nancy Woodward, Sarah Drinkard, Virginia Allen, Myrtle Borum, Inez Chappell, Lois Vassar, Billie Lewis, Caroline Faris, Elsie Dodd, Beverly Baptist, Margaret Eckford Pattie Jeffries and Lenoir Hubbard.

Those who went to Roanoke were Geraldine and Dot Hatcher, Marguerite Blackwell, Nancy Gray and Elizabeth Glasgow.

As usual, Richmond attracted a number of girls including Anne Scott, Kitty Brooks, Mable Burton, Miriam Ficklin, Juanita Callis, Dottie Eades and Dot Henderson.

Ruth Curtis Robeson visited her "Aunt Molly" Dozier in Newport News. Others visiting in Newport News were Mary Wilson Clarke, Margaret Pritchard, Catherine C. Philips, Grace Allen Pittard and Jo Quinn.

Carter Belle Munt and Julia Lyons went to Petersburg.

Alumnae and visitors in the college for the week-end were Ann Galusha, Elizabeth Vassar, Ruth Crumley, Louise Thompson, Byrd Boisseau, India Martin and Cornelle Jeffress and Helen Byrd Harris.

Martha Harding, Frances Collie and Ruth Phelps spent Saturday night in Lynchburg.

"Brother Rat" (just ask any Lexington girl what that is!) seemed to be a drawing card in Lynchburg on Monday afternoon. Those attending the play were Frances Hutcheson, Jennie Belle Gilliam, Isabel Plummer, Frances Hudgins, Mary Hubard, Frances Dickinson, Eleanore Faison, Bobbie Latour, Will Scott, Mary Joyner Cox, Eugenia Jolly.

Costs of a Farmville Date Range from Miser to Millions

I saw by the newspapers it costs $3.25 for a boy to have an average date in the city of Richmond. This put the bee of inquiry in my bonnet, and I immediately began to wonder how much it costs for a boy to date a fair Farmville damsel. After due consideration I find that he may range from a miser to a millionaire and still be in good favor with our best daters.

It all depends on what the couple decides to do. Starting at the bottom of the ladder, he may sit in the rec, take her to church or for an afternoon walk, and all he will have to put out is chatter. He may meet her in Shannon's and they can make a nickle Coca Cola or a dime milkshake gracefully last for hours—the "gracefully" come with practice. If he takes her to a show he will probably come out lacking sixty cents—counting a dime for drinks—or eighty cents if he takes advantage of the Saturday night privilege. This about hits the top of the ladder in the usual round (don't blame me if there is an exodus from the city to small town. This is just my calculation.)

The unusual and higher date figures come in when there is a dance at one of the neighboring institutions, or when the hometown boy friend arrives and treats the "one and only" to a dinner. These figures are so varying that it is impossible to get a definite stopping place. It all depends on whether the girl is a gold digger or not.

Receptions Given By Farmville Churches

Four of the churches of Farmville had receptions for the new and old students of their denominations on Thursday evening. The Episcopalians were entertained in the "Rec" by games and refreshments while the Presbyterians enjoyed a special musical program. The Methodist and Baptist churches entertained in a similar manner. All of the receptions were well represented by Hampden-Sydney as well as Farmville students.

Norma Johnson, Harry Noftsinger; Betty Fahr, Joe Geyer; Nan Seward, O. B. Watson; Vera Ebel, Frank McCall; Betty Harwood, Bob Scott; Frances Carroll, Malcolm Campbell; Esther Atkinson, Charles Heinemann; Alla Berkeley, Morris Flint; Mable Burton, Jimmy Price; Elizabeth Butler, Joe Lawson; Nora Jones, Courtney Sheffield.

Sing, Sing, Sing, Sing, Everybody Goes to Sing!

And once again, another year of Saturday night "Sings" was ushered in by a new Sing committee, full of fun and "rarin' to go".

Saturday night's entertainment took the form of a skit depicting the typical Freshman. (But don't take it too hard, Freshie, some day you'll be a Sophomore, too!)

Elsie Dodd in a most naive hairstyle showed the Freshmen themselves as others see them, and reminded the Seniors of the days when they, too, were young.

Liz Carroll, indignant at being called a Sophomore, since she "had been to school before," became a snooty transfer from a snooty school, while Frances Steed as an up-and-coming Prima Donna, sang everything from high opera to "Maytime".

Mary Page Huff and Prince Smith, as a couple of hicks from "Hickville"—fake hand and all—Jane Hardy as "Olga from the Volga" and a dazzling cast of others from fond, doting mamas to scared, little Freshmen, all went to provide a peck of fun such as only "Sing" can provide!

Honor Fraternity Taps Three Students in Chapel

Fraternity Bids Upshur, Agee, and Munt

"A leader is one whose mind and heart are suffused with a purpose and whose actions tend to bring the dream of that purpose into the reality of accomplishment" stated Elizabeth Shipplett, President of Alpha Kappa Gamma, at the service in chapel, Friday, October 8, at which time Virginia Agee, Carter Belle Munt, and Carolyn Upshur were tapped, in recognition of their leadership in various phases of the college life.

The service was opened by Dr. Jarman, who read the twelfth chapter of Romans, reminding the students that love and many other duties are required of them. Following a prayer by Dr. Jarman, Elizabeth Shipplett told of the founding of Alpha Kappa Gamma, its principles and ideals. A strong character is the first essenital quality for membership into Alpha Kappa Gamma. "A student to be eligible must have caught the spirit of our institutions. The value of her services must be unquestionable in that she has made the college a better place for having been a member of its student body." "Such leader," she said, addressing the entire assembly, "have been found among you."

Carolyn Upshur, the vice-president of the Student Body has served for three years on the service committee of the Y. W. C. A. and i snow chairman of the World Fellowship Committee. Last year she was secretary of A. C. E. and is now the president. Carolyn was chairman of the Freshman Commission as a Freshman. She is also vice-president of the Granddaughters' club. She is a member of Alpha Sigma Alpha.

Virginia Agee has been outstanding in Dramatics since she entered S. T. C. She has had the lead in the play again this year for the third time. She has served

Y. W. Representative Tells of Georgia Trip

"Farmville Teachers College is not the only place at which girls have to go to bed at ten-thirty. Here many can get permission to stay up late but while attending the Young Women's Christian Association Conference everyone has to be in bed at ten-thirty sharp." These are the words of Caroline Upshur who returned Monday evening from the Conference which was held in Atlanta, Georgia, October 9 and 10. Despite the strict regulation on retiring, Caroline reports an enjoyable and instructive time.

This annual leadership conference of the Young Women's Christian Association of Colleges in the southern area, marked the first year of our representation at the meeting. The two other Virginia schools sending delegates were Randolph-Macon Women's College and Hampton Institute.

The entire time of the conference was taken up with committee reports, discussions, and lectures. Luther Tucker, outstanding worker in the new Christian movement, spoke on the timely subject "The Far Eastern Situation." Miss Jimmie Woodward of Randolph-Macon recounted her recent experiences in Europe with the Oxford Conference.

Caroline expressed some surprise at the large number of Negroes who made up a goodly part of the conference personnel. They held outstanding and active places, one of the two executive secretaries being a young Negress.

Cox Outlines Dramatic Club Plans for Year

Department Heads Select Assistants

Mary Joyner Cox, president of the Dramatic Club anticipates a successful year for the club. Changes in the constitution and departments have been made and students have begun serving their apprenticeships as the heads of the major departments choose their assistants.

The major departments and their heads are as follows: Lighting, Jane Lee Young, assistants, Martha Meade Hardaway and Jean Taylor; Acting, Alpha Lee Garnett; Costuming, Mary Wilson Clark, assistants, Margaret Pritchard and Ada Sanford; Make up, Mabel Burton, assistants, Myra Smith and Anthelia Robinette; Staging, Virginia Jarman, assistant, Lorano Moomaw; Business, Virginia Whitehead Smith, assistant, Frances Lee Russon. Publicity, headed by Marguerite Blackwell, is a sub-department of business.

The minor departments are Music, Elizabeth Seiber, and Properties, Musse Hoyer, assistant, Kitty Brooks.

Some changes in the constitution have been made and Juanita Callis is the newly elected Parliamentarian.

Girls who were initiated into the Dramatic Club at the last meeting include: Jane Powell, Ora Wilson, Vivian Womack, Elizabeth Tindall, Jean Wyatte, Jeannette Ferguson, Sis Sturgis, Myra Smith, Ann Billups, Harriette Vaden, Virginia Price, Margaret Black.

Horseback Riding Offered at S. T. C.

With brisk weather coming on there are a large group of students taking to the bridle path. This is the first year that S. T. C. has had a class in riding, and about twenty-five girls have enrolled.

The horses are owned by Mr. Herbert Pullam from Appomattox, but the riding is being supervised and taught by the riding master, Mr. Jimmy Longan.

There are nine horses in all, among these are five gaiter horses, three gaiter horses, and jumpers. The riding ring is just back of the old Burger home, about two blocks from Mr. Graham's home. All riding at the present will be done in the ring under close supervision and instruction. Later the students will enjoy rid-

Students Elect Personalites

Outstanding girls—many of them—are to be found among the student body at S. T. C. Every year "The Virginian" holds an election so that the students may select the eight girls who are most representative of the spirit of S. T. C. and the student body. These girls are pictured in the feature section of the annual. Their identity is not known until the "Virginian" is published early in May.

The fourteen girls who have been selected by a picked committee and from whom the students are to select eight are: Mary Harrison Vaughan, Caroline Upshur, Carter Belle Munt, Kitty Roberts, Dudley Allen, Libby Morris, Nan Seward, Madeline McGlothlin, Ruth Montgomery, Norvell Montague, Libby Roberts, Virginia Agee, Ruth Phelps, and Jennie Belle Gilliam.

Choir Announces Pretentious Year

The College Choir will this yeal attempt the most pretentious program in the history of its work on this campus.

Early in December the A Capella group has been invited to broadcast. On December 19th the annual Carol Service will be held. There will be a departure from the original plan, however. The first half of the program will be the well known English Carol Service, and the second part will be in the nature of a Sacred Recital. The visiting artist will be the Concertmeister of the Richmond Symphony and the Choral Club, The Choir and A Capella will sing. Miss Juanita Callis (Department of Speech) will give the address.

Broadcast by the College Choir and recitals in various churches follow, culminating in the grand concert April 29th, when the College Choir working in conjunction with the Farmville Woman's Club will present Alma Milstead, National Broadcasting artist; Wilson Angel, National Atwater Kent winner (baritone) and a well known violinist. The numbers to be sung by the Choir and A Capella will have orchestral accompaniment.

Following are the officers of the Choir: President, Frances Bryan; Vice-president, Frances Steed; Secretary, Annette Roberts; Treasurer, Elizabeth Burke; Librarian, Carolyn Gwathney.

The Executive Committee is composed of: Frances Bryan, Virginia Agee, Juanita Callis, Elizabeth Seiber, Annette Roberts, Frances Steed, Elizabeth Burke, and Katherine Ryburn.

Jarman Attends Convention In New York

Notables Speak At Forum

Dr. Jarman, our president, attended the seventh annual New York Herald Tribune Forum held in New York last week.

This forum has been held annually for the past seven years for the purpose of discussing world problems. The speakers were authorities in their fields. Three thousand organizations were represented and one hundred fifty-four schools.

The topics were "A Generation Finding Itself," which was discussed by Mrs. Roosevelt, "Statue of a Free Press" by representatives from Germany, Italy, and America, "The Road Forward" by J. Edgar Hoover, "Proposed Changes in Government" by General Hugh Johnston, "and "State of War. President Roosevelt closed the forum with a speech broadcast from Cleveland.

Dr. Jarman said that although the forum was very interesting, he enjoyed many other things among which were the play "Virginia" given in the Center Theater, inspection of the "Queen Mary" and seeing an honest to goodness wild west rodeo.

S. T. C. Circus Will Be October 30 In Gymnasium

"October the thirtieth is the date set for the annual school circus," announces Isabel Plummer, general chairman of the circus, last week.

Isabel has a committee composed of the other chairmen. These are: Madeline McGlothlin, business manager; Libby Morris, advertising; Jennie Belle Gilliam, animal; Ruth Montgomery and Libby Roberts, stunts; Ruth Phelps, floor plan; Dudley Allen, booths; Nan Seward and Norvell Montague, decorations; and Mary Harrison Vaughan, queen and court. Each class will also have a chairman who will have charge of the class stunt. These girls will work with other committee chairmen.

Alpha Kappa Gamma, national honor fraternity for leadership is sponsoring the circus.

The Seniors, Juniors, Sophomores and Freshmen vie with each other in trying to win the prize that is given for the most original stunt.

Each class also has different booths with freaks, food, etc.

Campus League Head

Martha Meade Hardaway, of Burkeville.

Student Body Elects Hardaway League Chairman

"I don't know what I thought. I was so surprised that I guess I couldn't think at all," said Martha Meade Hardaway, when asked what she thought of her new office as Campus League chairman when she first heard of it.

Martha Meade was chosen for this office by popular vote of the upper classmen last week.

She is secretary of the sophomore class, a member of the House Council, the Dramatic Club and is on the Membership Committee of the Y. W. C. A. Martha Meade was valedictorian of her class in high school, and is consequently a member of Alpha Phi Sigma. She is on the writing staff of the Rotunda, and is a member of Mu Omega sorority and the Cotillion Club.

The office of Campus League Chairman automatically places Martha Meade on the Student Council. The need for a new chairman arose when Esther Beebe failed to return to school this session.

Fraternity Holds Convention

The annual convention of Alpha Kappa Gamma, national honorary fraternity for leadership among women, will be held at Farmville, Virginia, October 15 and 16. The Joan Circle of the State Teachers College, will be hostess to the representatives from the University of S. C. Queen-Chicora College, and University of N. C.

Miss Ruth O'Blakeslee, an outstanding member of the Social Security Board in Washington, D. C., will be the banquet speaker at Longwood Saturday evening.

Among the out of town guests who have been invited are: Miss Lula Andrews, Miss Ellen Glasgow and Miss Adele Clark, of Richmond; Mrs. Anna H. Huntington, New York City; and Mrs Mildred Dickinson Davis of Hampden-Sydney, Virginia.

Miss O'Blakeslee is a graduate of Goucher College and attended John Hopkins University School of Political Science. She has worked with the American Red Cross and New York Charity Organization Society, becoming Secretary of the Yorkville District. In the summer of 1930, Miss O'Blakeslee was sent to England to study social conditions. For several years she was with the Maryland Relief Administration and in 1934 became Regional Social Worker with the Federal Emergency Relief Administration. Since 1936 she has been chief of the Division of Policies and Procedures of the Bureau of Public Assistance of

Freshman Class Chooses Leaders From Many Nominees

Atkinson, Lewis, Fahr Are Officers

Ruth Lea Purdum of Danville was elected president of the class of '41 at a call meeting of the class Wednesday night, October 6. Other nominees for president were Esther Atkinson, Nancy Pierpont, and Billie Lewis.

Ruth Lea comes to Farmville with an outstanding record from George Washington High School of Danville. She was president of the Dramatic Club, a member of the Student Council for four years, a member of the Debate Club, a member of the basketball team and alumni editor of the Chatter Box, the weekly newspaper.

"Hello, everybody," said Ruth when she was asked to make a speech upon being elected class president. "I appreciate your votes. This is the finest freshman class that has ever been to Farmville. It is our task to prove this, and we are going to do it."

Esther Atkinson of Hampden-Sydney was elected vice-president. She ran against Frances Ellett.

Billie Lewis of Charlottesville defeated Norma Johnson for secretary. Betty Fahr of Richmond was elected treasurer. Martha Welcher ran against her.

The two student government representatives are Caralle Nelson of South Boston and Nancy Pierpont of Salem. They defeated Marian Worsham and Helen Seward.

New Members Announced By Pi Gamma Mu

Pi Gamma Mu wishes to announce the following new members: Florence Bress, Dot Buckland, Pattie Bounds, Katherine Galusha, Nellwyn Latimer, Madeline McGlothlin, Virginia Whitehead Smith, Ruth Read and Carolyn Alsop.

These girls were taken into the national honor fraternity for social science because they have shown special interest in this field. In addition to a high standard of general scholarship, each member must carry on an original piece of work in one of the social sciences while a member of the society.

House Council Holds Formal Installation Services

Dudley Allen, president of the House Council, formally installed the council on Thursday night, October 7, in the large auditorium. Rev. A. H. Hollingsworth, of the Presbyterian church, led the devotional.

Dudley explained the duties of the House Council briefly and stated, "The House Council works for the well being of the group through the individual." She asked for the cooperation and support of the Student Body in carrying on this week.

Lucy Baskerville was installed as vice-president and Virginia Agee as secretary of the Council. The following hall presidents were then installed: Mary Emma Thompson, Frances Lyons, Jean Watts, Mary Mahone, Elizabeth Penn Wilkinson, Sudie Yager, Geraldine Hatcher, Laura Morris, Marian Harden, Bernice Copley, LeNoir Hubbard, Martha Meade Hardaway, Marjorie Nimmo, Frances Pope, Nannie Page Trent, Helen Gallihan, Kitty Carleton, David Terry, Elizabeth Watterson, and Carrie Mahood.

Puerto Ricans Find Virginians Friendly

"The faculty and the girls of S. T. C.—they are very friendly. Maybe that is because they are Virginians, but—all Americans are nice. They are so nice to the Puerto Ricans." America Selasse and her roommate Romonita Ramirez both thinking that America and Farmville are just "the thing."

Have you by any chance noticed about the campus, two pairs of warm, brown eyes, complexions that many of us strive for by the months of sunbaking—and never quite attain—and two flashing smiles which are strangely suggestive of the tropics? Well, in case you've wondered, they're our Poerto Rican maids, America Selosse and her compatriot roommate, Ramonita Ramirez.

America (pronounced Am-ayric-a, if you don't mind) who is nineteen (and incidentally, makes a grimace at the very thought of becoming twenty in April) has twelve brothers and sisters, and is a sophomore transfer from Radford, while Ramonita, who is now twenty and has two brothers and one sister, is making her first acquaintance with the U. S. It is America's supreme desire to teach English and French in Puerto Rican schools, and her main reason for leaving Radford was because there were so many Puerto Ricans there, (ten to be exact) that she decided to go to a school where she could better improve her English. Ramonita wants to teach English and Biology, and so she too decided that an American school would be just the thing to help her brush up on her accent

Puerto Rican schools are similar to ours in that they have eight grades called the "grammar", and four years of high school. Their principle subjects are English, Spanish, History, Geography, Social Science, Biology, and French. However, the majority of teaching is done in the English language, though Spanish is spoken in the homes and everywhere else.

America giggled in remembering her French teacher, English speaking, who translated everything he said into Spanish. She, however, stated that when she taught, she was not going to "put up with all that trouble of translating." She still has to keep herself from slipping out with a little Spanish in her French classes at college where she occasionally forgets which is being spoken.

Ramonita arrived from Puerto Rico by plane, while America went to New York, alone by boat. Of her four days in New York, America said, "Oh, there are so many beautiful places there. I went to the museum, the Radio City, Coney Island, everywhere—Coney Island? Oh, I like it so very much."

She spent three days in Baltimore where her brother is under treatment at Johns Hopkins.

However, both agreed that they were more subject to homesickness

ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION

Maybe you've watched some fair damsel poised with bow and arrow in hand and then sighed with envy as, with perfect timing and precision, the slender arrow left the taut strings and sailed straight into the bull's eye. You, too, can become a Cupid even though it may mean a sore arm for a little while. It's worth hours and hours of practice just to experience that breath-taking moment between the time the arrow leaves the bow and the time it hits. If you do hit the bull's eye, you'll probably gaze in open-mouthed wonder at your work of rat—an arrow surrounded by rows and rows of black and red lines instead of rows and rows of red and black lines surrounded by an arrow.

Don't you feel the itch for a basketball in your hands? We thought so, and practices are going to begin soon, when all you new girls will be given a chance to show your skill and you old girls will be given the challenge to keep up your old records. And speaking of records, our record for the past two years is one to be proud of and lived up to—State Championship tea for the last two years is an honor not to be taken lightly or given up without a fight. Let's give fifteen rahs for S. T. C. and fifteen rahs for the guiding hand behind all this glory—Miss Iler! She has worked faithfully to bring us out on top, she's our sympathetic friend, and best of all, she's a good sport. She and the A. A. needs your cooperation, so come out for athletics and give them your support and put the right spirit behind old blue and white.

HOW SHALL WE ACT?

Americans are often called a tactful people. We wonder, after hearing the varied criticisms in regard to the late King Edward-Wallis Simpson romance.

The now Duke and Duchess of Windsor are planning a tour of the United States to study housing conditions. To keep up our reputation as a mind-your-own-business race, it is the least we can do to let them pass their time here as ordinary tourists. They are here on a helpful mission, not to be regarded as foreign curiosities.

The Librarian

Fall! All just the days to sit before an open fireplace, sip hot chocolate, and read a good book. So what type book would you like? Certainly not some scholarly dissertation—the outside is still too inviting to spending precious moments looking up the meaning of this or that word. Perhaps a mystery story would be better. No? Then may I suggest one of the best novelties of recent poems: Sandy Simon Lewis, a Virginian poet of national fame, has given us some of her most beautiful work in a new collection "Spider Architect." Isn't that title intriguing? And you'll be delighted with the attractive silver jacket which the book bedecks.

In her poetry, Mrs. Leitch touches all of life. Her appeal is so great because she strikes the universal note. She writes of the pleasure—the disappointment of certain moments—and with equal skill she pens the beautiful lines of "The Bridge." The character of her verse, its strength and understanding, may be perceived in one of her shorter poems.

If Words Were Changed

How poor is speech—a thing shaped of our wind—blown breath
For that enfoldment—growth—enlarging,
We have no word but death!

Breaking of light that is a luminous flame
Upon both foe and friend;
The great beginning that no man can name—
That—that we call the end.

If but our petty store
Of words were changed to bars
Of music, then the word for death would soar
And shatter on the stars!

But if you are to read her poetry, you want to know something about Mrs. Leitch, herself, and her life has been a series of adventures. For two years she went to sea on a tramp steamer, sailing up and down the coast of South America, touching points at which regular vessels didn't stop. After her marriage to Captain John Leitch, in command of the boat on which she traveled, the poet continued to follow the sea. That she still loves it is shown in her prize lines:

Always my heart has found the sea
Though banished to a distant plain
The wind has brought the sound to me
Of surf, and salt has been the rain,
From woods and mountains near and far
Still I have seen the breakers comb,
Always for me the Evening Star
Has risen, though inland, on the foam.
Now there is no more sea, nor ought,
Save endless, aching prarie reaches,
Beyond the hope, beyond the thought
Of water broken on the beaches.

Dear Editor:

The very thought of being a "Rat" is bad enough but when about seven people rush up to your table while you are eating and all begin to shout at you things to do, it just isn't fair.

It is a rule of the school that a sophomore can not make a Rat do anything while they are in the dining room. Just because you remind the proud sophomores of this rule, they gather up more of their classmates and conspire against the "Rat", but Sophomores I salute you.

"Oh Sophomores, with your sacrosant, salience; and sententious sensibleness, you have shamed our saponaceous, selfish superiority until we bow before you in lamentable, lowly, yet loquacious lubricity in order to acquire your blithesome, benignant, bounteous brainy, beautiful benevolence, we pray the punctilious palative, producible, privilege of serving you."

Tell me not in cares-free numbers,
Freshman life is but a dream!
For the rat will flunk that slumbers
Or at least they do
Exams are harder than they seem.

EAT WEEK! Freshmen shorn of their beauty dash madly around at the beck and call of Sophomores! The majority of the Freshmen prove to be very good sports. Certain upper classmen grasp the opportunity to make the Rats their sworn slaves and allies and proceed to protect a chosen few from the cruel attacks imposed by their own classmates. The usual dissension results and the real spirit of the thing is lost in this grand melee of favoritism.

Mary Harrison Vaughan, Libby Roberts and Ruth Montgomery at last depart for Chicago! For weks they have been walking around in a daze thinking of it . . . in fact they have been all packed and ready to shove off for the past ten days. Here's hoping they have as gleeful a time as the girls had last year in Louisville!

According to one of the young pupils at the training school the Park is a very good place to pick up easy money on week-ends. It seems that a certain cadet gave him a quarter to make himself scarce. Perhaps the fact that the dark haired miss with him is teaching in the training school this quarter had something to do with it. The lad really should have held out for a higher price!

Current rumor has it that Hudgins is having her time beat. 'Tis said that Otie Miller is escorting another girl to Homecomings this week-end. Well! Wonder if Dodson could verify the rumor.

We certainly have one polite freshman in our midst. When she stopped by the book room the other day to buy some stamps and Miss Taliaferro held out her hand for the money, the sweet young thing shook hands with her. It must have been jolly to note the expressions on their faces.

Among our other oddities we have a freshman in a much worse predicament than the man without a country ever dreamed of. Why, she "ain't from no place, ain't got no name and ain't gonna do nothin' any sophomore tells her to." In addition, "she paid as much money to come to this here place as any d— sophomore."

Theme songs: Girls in general, "I Want an Invitation to a Dance" . . . Kathleen McCann, "No Soap, No Rub, No Lather" . . . Isabel Williamson, "I Got A Feeling I'm Falling" . . . Marjorie Woolfolk, "Smoke Gets In Your Eyes" . . . Prince Smith, Sue Owen, Jenny Carroll and Chlotilde Jarman "Highways Are Happy Ways" . . . Rose-Marie Hunter, "There's a Small Hotel" . . . Mary Harvey and Gigi Doughty, "Sonny Boy".

Have You Noticed?

Stop me if I'm wrong, but I have a vague feeling that some horrible pestilence has swooped down and blighted the beauty of our newest school chums. There was a day when they were pretty attractive looking. Some of them were even a little on the "super-super" side, but now—. You Sophomores have a lot to answer for. Wherever we gaze, some droopy looking creature is lurking waiting for a chance to offend your sense of the beautiful.

The freshmen should thank their lucky stars that "Ratting" doesn't come over a week-end. There would be a monstrous number of crimson faces when people started dropping in to see you. They would surely be seeing you at your worst, too. And besides it was so nice getting an early start on this lovely new week. You can't be blamed for groaning a little at having to rise and shine at 6:30 Monday morning. That was pretty gruesome!

Now that it's all over and you have a very vivid idea of how awful you can look, won't you make a colossal effort to look your best for awhile? At least long enough for us to get this unpleasant taste out of our mouths. Curl your hair as much as you please and don't fail to use some make-up. The perkier you look, the more relieved everybody will feel. When Wednesday afternoon rolled around we had all lost the last ray of hope and resigned ourselves to the fact that we were doomed to live with three hundred sad-looking creatures for the next eight months. Allah be praised that it was only three days. And you did look awfully funny part of the time.

After the Football Game

The football game was over,
And at the parlor grate
A maid and a long haired youth
Were lingering rather late.
They talked of punts and drop kicks
But found it rather tame
'Til Cupid put his nose guard on
And butted in the game.
Quoth he, "'Tis mighty funny
I can't arrange a match."
So he lined the couple up
And led them to the scratch.
The youth was growing nervous
Beneath his new found bliss,
And he rather thought the scrimmage
Ought to end up in a kiss.
He charged upon the center;
He tackled left and right;
And the way they held that chair for downs
Was simply out of sight.
He tried an osculation—
Just an amateur affair
But lost it on a fumble
And instead it struck the air.
Then as he landed on her ear
He heard the maiden say,
"You're penalized for holding, Jim,
Likewise for offside play."
With set teeth he tried another
This time succeeded fine
For he scored an easy touchdown
On the crimson two-yard line.
Then as they sat there by the grate,
Communing soul to soul,
The parlor door swung open,
And father kicked the goal.

—From the notebook of
Dr. L. R. Littleton
Copied from "The White Topper"

"Why are you crying?"
"Father called mother a waddling goose."
"Well?"
"Mother called father a stupid ass."
"But why are you crying?"
"Well, what am I?"

Sunset is a rear view of a sunrise.

"Are you positive that the defendant was drunk?" asked the judge.
"No doubt," growled the officer.
"Why are you so certain?"
"Well," replied the officer, "I saw him put a penny in the patrol box on Fourth street, then looked up at the clock on the Presbyterian Church and shouted: 'Gawd, I've lost fourteen pounds'."

When a man works like a horse it's because everybody rides him.

A star fell out of heaven
Right into my arms
Gee, but the thing was hot!

He: "May I have this dance?"
She: "Certainly, if you can find a partner."

Here's the greatest gambler of all times—Lady Godiva. She put everything she had on a horse.

"Modern marriage is like a cafeteria. A man grabs what looks nice to him and pays for it later."

Bells ring, classes start,
Lessons begin, my heart!
Such work isn't lawful,
Oh my, don't it awful!

Compliments are like perfume, to be inhaled, not swallowed.

GLEANINGS

In our column last week we wondered just what was up the respective sleeves of Mussolini and Hitler. It is beginning to dawn on other nations—or rather, the dawn is beginning to take a bit of shape. The "dawn" came about when Italy rejected an Anglo-French bid to a three-power conference to discuss the issue of Italian volunteers fighting in Spain.

Italy replied in a note which was couched in firm by courteous language. It was delivered in Rome to French and British officials. The content of the note was, mainly, that Italy would continue to refuse bids to international conferences unless Germany also received and accepted bids.

It is feared now by French and British officials that together Italy and Germany are seeking a Fascist Europe through control of Spain. This, in itself creates a very grave situation, because the flow of armaments and men into Spain from Italy is heavy.

Not only is Italy's position in Spain the cause for world eye-brows to be raised, but it seems that Chinese officials need definite proof as to just where Italy stands in the Chinese-Japanese conflict. The Italian press has been siding with Japan, and Mussolini sees nothing wrong in Japan's invasion of China: nothing wrong—in spite of the fact that Japan has only broken two or three "unimportant" understandings with the strongest and most important nations of the world and she has only invaded a nation on whom she has no claims—incidentally, she has not, as yet, even so much as declared war in China: perhaps this is merely a practice skirmish!

Japan is definitely up a large tree than she had anticipated! Even though her population has tripled itself since four or five years ago, China has her there, for China's man-supply is inexhaustible. The Chinese officials are not alarmed with the report of fifty-seven thousand deaths. Not only are there one million Chinese in unifom already, but there are unaccountable millions more ready to take up arms at a moment's notice.

Back in the days when our grandmothers wore long, heavy skirts, and back in the days when our mothers wore pompadours and sailor hats, baseball was the king of sports. To many of us, football is supreme—to those who have known nothing of forward passes, tackles, and touchdowns, terms such as outfield, infield, and homers come to thier tongues quite easily.

The World Series, the greatest of baseball classics, is over—and for the second consecutive time, the New York Yankees won the cup. This is also the second consecutive time that the World Series has been an all-New York World series, because last year and this, the cup stood between two New York clubs—the Yankees and the Giants.

"Lefty" Gomez was distinctly the hero. His beautiful pitching and wonderful batting took the Giants by surprise in spite of Gomez's reputation.

Not only does this mark the Yanks' second straight conquest, but it gives them the distinction of having won the series for the sixth time since the World War. And that my friends—is not to be sniffed at!

The student body extends its deepest sympathy to Mr. M. Boyd Coyner in his recent bereavement.

Hockey Team Will Meet Wm. & Mary Extension Nov. 13

Game There to Mark First Intercollegiate Try

November 13, when S. T. C. plays William and Mary Extension of Richmond there, marks the first game of intercollegiate hockey that S .T. C. has ever participated in. Further plans have not been announced.

Harriette Vaden, manager, also announced that unless there are at least fourteen players from each class out for the required amount of practice, there can be no class games this year. As it stands now, there are ample freshmen and twenty sophomores out, but not nearly enough participants to make up junior and senior teams. Upperclassmen are urged to come out since some of the ones already signed up are dropping from the list.

If there are enough for green and white and red and white teams, these teams probably will play determining points for the color cup.

Y.W.C.A. Holds First Open Cabinet Meeting

The Y. W. C. A. held an open meeting on October 6, 1937. Following the roll call, the devotionals were led by Isabel Williamson. The heads of the different committees gave their reports.

Frances Thomas, Norvell Montague, and Ruth Curtis Robeson gave reports on sports, spiritual and atmosphere of the conference at Blue Ridge. The conference was held last June and was a conference of the Y. W. C. A. and the Y. M. C. A. from all the southern states.

The meeting was well attended and they were served punch and cake.

Juniors Entertain Sister Class at Party In "Rec"

The "green and white" spirit was really tops on last Thursday night when the Juniors entertained the Freshmen at a party in the "Rec."

The classes were entertained by Mary Jackson, Sidney Yonce, and F. Bryan who sang "Love's Serenade," after which Army Butterworth, Margaret Britton and Anne Dugger tap danced. As a conclusion the two classes joined in doing a spirited "Big Apple."

World Sports

An old Scottish custom, fit only for men of brawn, is "toss the caber". In the old days a tree trunk was used. Now under the degenerating influence of modern civilization, a tapering pole is used. Deep in the highlands west of Aberdeen, Scotland, was held, last week, the Braema Gathering of the clans. George VI, who wears the Balmoral tartan in Scotland, was patron. The aim of the "bonnie laddies" was to balance the pole by the tapering end and run some twenty yards with it, then heave it into the air so that it lands on the bag end and topples away from the thrower. It was only natural that the prizes should be cash.

American sport takes queer forms. Last week at Chicago's Jubilee Form Week Festival a hog-and-husband calling contest was held. Although syllables differ, the United States' form methods of summoning hungry mouths to trough and table are essentially the same: a deep breath, an upraised diaphram, and a horn-like note that carries above the murmer of trees and rustling grain. In the midwest its "sooeee", in Mississippi, "awoo Pig, Pig, Pig," and Louisiana the Bayou belle, a slow "eh la bas". Husbands, usually answer to their own names, but wives use the same fundamental method on man and pig.

In 1869, when Princeton and Rutgers played a football game, there were fifty men on the field, twenty-five on each side. By 1877 the size of a football team had whittled to fifteen men. Five years later Walter Camp succeeded in his campaign to reduce teams to eleven men. That the possibilities for experiment are still far from exhausted was demonstrated last week by some seven hundred United State sschools, most of them small and obscure, which began the biggest season, to date for six-man football. "Six-man" was invented three years ago by Stephen Epler, a twenty-five year old Nebraska high school coach who didn't have enough potential footballers to form a team. He devised a set of rules and after a season of experimental games had his rule book published. Official "six-man" is regulation football played with six men on a side. A team consists of a center, two ends, a quarter back, half back, and full back. The player receiving the ball may not cross the line of scrimmage with it, but must pass it to someone else. After that, "six man" is hard to distinguish from eleven man. The chief differences are that the field is eighty by forty yards instead of one hundred yards by one hundred and sixty feet, and quarters are ten minutes instead of fifteen, the kick is made from the thirty yard line and a field goal counts four points. A predominately passing game, "six-man" is not only faster but safer. This year, with "six man" being played in seventeen states, plans are being made to select an all American team.

America's bathing beauty contests have always caused discussion, but we take a backseat now. France has developed the latest. Trust those fifty-million egotistical Freshmen to put woman in her place. At the Paris exposition one of the chief publicity stunts was a contest for the most beautiful athlete in Europe. It was backed by two Paris newspapers and the French Federation Physical Culture. Some 4,000 young men from ten European countries entered the contest and were reduced to sixty-one for the final elimination in Paris. Many of the contestants rubbed themselves with sun tan oil to make their bodies glisten, others used ochre and iodine solution to achieve an Indian red skin, others painted themselves with a purple pomegranite solution. (We should be thankful that men don't use make up in everyday life if they are going to let their color schemes run riot). The Freshmen notably overlooked the blond Nordic entries and selected two Frenchmen and one Italian for the first three places.

Robert Morse, of New York City, who graduated from Princeton in 1928, has studied art in Paris and is a portrait painter in New York. His essays on French painters are noteworthy. He has also reviewed books for "The Nation."

A Flower Piece

(On a garden containing an ornamental bronze bat.)

Sometimes Flora in mossy hat dissolves her lifted marble palms in sky and birdsong. Sometimes a bat (since Flora, living, walks the paths) to any wicked heart strikes qualms.

Guardian of the garden, he defends with brazen beak the mystery.
All riddle of the leaf and stem untwining,
the ivy vine upon the wall reclining,
All gossip of the marigold, the wraths
of foolish rose among the roses living,
Hyacinth dead too young, who should have known
Chrysanthemum, alas, alone—two lovers by a summer parted—the foxglove and the dapper lily giving news to one another by the bees, the mignonette that only whispers "please",
the tragic fuschia brokenhearted,
the honeysuckle like a perfumed lout sprawled on the lawn with shirt-tail out.

But Nemesis is armed with shears sharp to snig the smooth or thorny stalk, so suddenly the smiling and the tears lie a cut flower on the garden walk.
Yet when Flora with her basket comes not even greenest birds would willingly say "No", but stretch their tender necks for Flora's thumbs
And gentle fingertips to break, and show with vanity their full-dress uniform, of seven roses all the seven abandon roots in hope of heaven.
Thus reason they: "How soon the worm and autumn are our lot! This lady is both wise and good—let her take now what soon the winter would."

A Hint to the Wise is Sufficient

While all of us are practising poses for the group pictures that will be taken for The Virginian this week, there are just a few "do's and don't's" that will help keep up S. T. C.'s reputation for good looks—ahem. As a starting point, don't wear heavy coats. We don't want to get the reputation of being polar bears. Those white shoes might have looked good on the cover of the college issue of Life, but they certainly do draw undesirable attention to our feet in group pictures. Thin sweaters are taboo. Plaids and checks make the picture look as if someone has been playing "tit-tat-toe" or checkers on it.

You are probably wondering what there is left to wear. This can be answered in one sentence—sport clothes, solid material, dark colors prefered.

Puerto Ricans

on Sundays than at any other time since it is then that all the families gather at home or go down to the beach or on picnics.

In describing their native land, they disclosed the fact that the temperature rarely fell below 75 degrees. Ramonita can't wait to see snow, and America is just as eager to show it to her since, last year, she herself took a whole day off from her studies just to play in it.

Ramonita decided that Puerto Rico differed from this part of the country very little, at this time of the year, except that her country has "so many, many hills," and America added, "I like the flowers better than anything. In Puerto Rico we have the flowers all the year. The palm trees—they are so romantic." And here her eyes sparkled as she formed a large circle wih her arms, adding "We have big moons." And her smile itself described her native land with its tropical foliage, exotic birds, and the moons of Puerto Rico that are "oh, so big."

S. T .C. Archers Are Modern Dianas

If you have ever happened out on the athletic field sometime on a Friday afternoon, you have probably witnessed a spectacle most extraordinary, but, don't let those awkward elbows, cocked heads and stiff arms puzzle you—it's just beginner's practice in Archery. But from all reports, especially from those latest adicts, Dot Fisher and Helen Green, it's so much fun that the aches and bruises seem to fade into the background.

If you'd like to see how it's really done, just have a look at advanced practice from five to six on Wednesdays. If the manager, Louise Anthony and her assistant, Ann Billups become a little discouraged on Fridays, Wednesdays should restore their good humor for it is then that our modern Dianes are at their best.

Jamison Will Soon Return to Farmville

Good news for all S. T. C. students is that Mrs. Bessie C. Jamison, school dietitian, is now convalescing at her home in Salem. It is hoped that she will soon return to the duties she has performed here for a number of years.

During Mrs. Jamison's absence, Mrs. Annie Shelton is dietitian, and Mrs. Charles D. Turnbull is taking Mrs. Shelton's place in the dining room.

Anne Diggs Peple, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gustave Peple, became the bride of Mr. Howard Gills, Jr., Saturday evening, October 9, at 8:00. The services were performed at St. Thomas Episcopal Church in Ginter Park by the rector of the church, Rev. F. C. Pedrick.

The church was decorated with baskets of white flowers, chrysanthemums and lilies, and palms and ferns covered the chancel.

Miss Peple wore a gown of white velvet fashioned on princess lines with a lace yoke and a full skirt from which was formed a long train. She carried a white prayer book from which lillies of the valley were showered.

After the wedding a reception for the immediate families and the bridal party followed at the home of the bride's parents.

Anne attended State Teachers College, Farmville, in 1934-'35. She was president of the Freshman class of '38. Anne was a member of Gamma Theta sorority and the Cotillion Club.

The inviting chimes of wedding bells have lured many of our alumnae to the altar in the past few months.

A wedding of wide interest was that of Miss Dorothy Price of Brookneal to W. Woodrow Wilkerson of Prospect on Sept. 1 at noon in the Second Baptist Church of Richmond. The Episcopal ceremony was used and the bride carried her mother's prayer book.

She graduated from S. T. C. in June, receiving her B. S. degree with honors.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilkerson are now living in Dillwyn where Mr. Wilkerson is principal of the high school.

Bessie Scott Strick of Farmville, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Strick, was married June 12 to Paul James Cartwright of Richmond. Mr. Cartwright is a graduate of the Julliard School of Music and at present is a member of the Virginia Symphony Orchestra.

The wedding of Annie Elizabeth Booker, of Andersonville, Buckingham County, to William Clarke Vaughn of Charlotte County took place at Emporia on August 16. The bride taught several years in Buckingham after her graduation from S. T. C.

Another event of wide interest on the Alumnae social calendar was the sweet and simple wedding on Tuesday, Oct. 4, at the home of Dr. and Mrs. W. A. Brumfield of their daughter Emily Lyle Brumfield to Mr. Locklin S. Bell, son of Dr. and Mrs. G. F. Bell, of Montreat, N. C.

Mr. and Mrs. Bell, after a short wedding tour, will be at home in Philadelphia.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Jennings of Cartersville, announce the marriage of their daughter, Mrs. Lucille Rogers, to S. W. Parker of Cartersville on Sept. 11.

Miss Helen Kyle Wingo was married to Thomas Baxter Lilly, of Wilmington, N. C. on Oct. 2 in Crewe, Virginia.

She received her B. S. degree from S. T. C. this summer. She was prominent in both social and academic work while a student here.

The wedding of Miss Alice Frances Rowell to George Franklin Whitley, Jr., of New York City took place on Oct. 9, 1937 at the Baptist Church in Smithfield.

The bride received an M. A. degree from Gallaudet College, Washington, D. C. after graduating with a B. S. from S. T. C. She was a member of the Gallaudet College for two years. Alice was a member of Alpha Sigma Tau social sorority and Kappa Delta Pi, national honorary fraternity.

Miss Mary Elizabeth Alexander, of Staunton, was married to Mr. Albert Mason Rockwell of Wethersfield, Conn., Sept. 25.

The bride attended Mary Baldwin Seminary and graduated from S. T. C. Since her graduation she has taught at Beverley Manor school in Staunton.

Rats Shrivel Before Sophs

Smiling faces turned suddenly sour. Laughter turned to nervous giggles and in some cases tears—honest to goodness tears—as that big black figure swooped down and hovered over the youngest of us—the "rats." To sing was a sin unless commanded to do so. The biggest of them shriveled until they could have crawled, and some gladly, beneath the huge feet of the mighty sophomores.

"Oh, what'll they do to us? but I can't do it—I don't know how? I wish I were i nthe infirmary." "They won't hurt you—they can't hurt you". "I know but—oh my gosh!" And all the comforting that the kind Juniors and Seniors could give didn't help a bit—those freshmen were scared!

Of course they were ridiculous looking—you would have been, too—what with raincoats, black stockings rat caps—what with no make-up and hair straight—why those two things just make the lady!

Creeping up the halls stiller even than that mouse in the Christmas poem they'd pause a minute at every corner to peer around for a Sophomore who might be happening along that way. Bad enough to meet them when they had to—no sense in bumping into them.

Clean rooms — yes, all Sophomores had them. Freshmen cleaned, freshmen dusted, freshmen trucked, freshmen skipped — freshmen were helpless creatures of environment in the hands of the sophomores. The freshmen shined in "Shannon's" and one poor little girl said—"I wouldn't have minded it so much if all of Hampden-Sydney hadn't been in there!"

Now it's most over—In a little while it will be over and "rats" will become freshmen. They've been swell sports about it all and now as the terror passes and with the realization and the relief that its almost over and they aren't dead—freshmen are saying in their hearts—it was fun! Yes, it was—as long as you stay here—as long as you live—you'll remember it. We have!

Chaperones Elected By Senior Class

Norvell Montague, Mary Harrison Vaughan, Jennie B. Gilliam, Madeline McGlothlin, Ruth Montgomery, Virginia Agee, Libby Morris, Caroline Upshur, Nan Seward, and Marjorie Robertson have been elected from the senior class by their classmates to serve as chaperones for the year of 1937-'38.

These girls, chosen because of their efficiency, will assist the Home Department by going with other students to the doctors and dentists' offices and to the games at Hampden-Sydney.

Dearest Dad.

You should have been here this last week-end to see the girls leaving! I've never heard such a racket—I think there were two hundred and forty-six girls going in one direction or another. There were suit-cases piled up, bus tickets flying, and gay laughter everywhere.

As usual, a number trucked off to Richmond. You know, there was the William and Mary—V. P. I. game there, and "Brother Rat" was on at the Lyric. Some of those going to Richmond were Alla Berkely, Margaret Carr, Connie Cole, Ruth Emma Chambers, Elsie Dodd, Vera Ebel, Eleanor Dodson, Jennie Belle Gilliam, Rose Marie Hunter, Jane Hardy, Nellwyn Latimer, Mary Katherine Minninger, Virginia Lee Pettis, Marian Raine, Kitty Roberts, Elizabeth Rawlings, Georgie Stringfellow, Phillipa Schlobahm, Jean Stephenson, Virginia Winston Smith, Gay Stieffen, Harriette Maxey, Grace Allen Pittard, Mary Mahone, Kaki Peery, Mary Wilson Clarke, Elizabeth Wilkinson, Susan Lane, Annie Watson Holden, Marjorie Wicks, Dibbs Tyree, Mary Jackson and Mable Burton.

Several girls went to Lynchburg. These were Eloise Bawling, Roberta Wheeler, Elsie Greene, Martha Harding, Judith Marshall, Virginia Allen, and Dot Buckland.

Cornelia Story went to Boykins. Deane Saunders visited in Bedford. Virginia Vose spent Sunday in Prospect.

Election of officers.

3:00 P. M.—H.-S. vs. Swarthmore game.

7:00 P. M.—Banquet at Longwood.

The national officers expected are: Jane Royall, presiding officer, and Miss Florence Stubbs, Farmville; Frances Cardwell and Ladenia Gaines, Columbia, S. C., and Mrs. Daris Jackson Parker, Chapel Hill, N. C.

Among the honorary and associate members of the local circle are: Dr. J. L. Jarman, Miss Mary White Cox, Miss Grace Mix, Miss Mary Clay Hiner, Miss Winnie Hiner, Miss Minnie Rice, Miss Olive Iler and Miss Mary Nichols.

The guests will be entertained at Longwood

Sorority News

Gamma Thetas Give Picnic at Longwood

The Gamma Theta sorority held a fall picnic in the cabin at Longwood on Monday night. Besides the members of the active chapter, Miss Stubbs, faculty advisor, and Helen Cover, an alumna were present. After supper, the group gathered before the fire and sang songs.

Miss Moran Entertains Alpha Sigma Alpha

Miss Moran entertained the Alpha Sigma Alpha sorority after the weekly meeting at the cabin at Longwood. Everybody joined in a "Big Apple" after picnic supper was served.

Others and their destinations were: Susie Jeffress, Rice; Lois Vassar, Appomattox; Katherine Watkins, Amelia; Evelyn Woltz, Nathalie; Leah Marsh, Miskimon; Montine Womack, Roxboro; Carter Belle Munt, Nan Seward, Margaret Britton and Helen Seward, Petersburg; Isabel Parr, Amherst; Virginia Thompson, Dumbarton; Caroline Faris and Billie Lewis, Charlottesville; Esther Atkinson, Hampden-Sydney; Jenny Carroll, Prince Smith, Sue Owen, Chlotilde Jarman, Lawrenceville; Katherine Gray, Norfolk.

Jane Baldwin, Cathrine Cassell, Elizabeth Sieber and Ann Billups visited friends in Roanoke.

Kitty Jamison, Edith Hammock and Doris Chestnut attended the Duke—Tennessee game in Durham on Saturday.

Nancy Gray was quite contented to spend the week-end here at school. She had "Pie" from Roanoke.

Well, Dad, this is all the news so 'bye 'til next week.

Your little daughter,
Frances

P. S. I almost forgot to tell you that Pattie Bounds and I spent the week-end with Louise Anthony in Danville.

Agee and Johnston Will Play Leads In Anderson's "Mary of Scotland"

S. T. C. and H.-S. C. Present Play November 19

Virginia Agee as Mary Stuart and Jim Johnston as Lord Bothwell will play the leads in "Mary of Scotland" to be presented jointly by the Dramatic Club of S. T. C. and the Jongleurs of H.-S. C. on November 19.

In "Mary the Third" which these two clubs put on last year, Jim Johnston and Virginia Agee also had the leads. Each of them has had much experience in acting. Virginia played the part of Catherine, the shrew, in "Taming of the Shrew" which was given by the Dramatic Club her sophomore year.

The play, "Mary of Scotland", is by Maxwell Anderson. With Helen Hayes and Philip Merrivale as the stars, the play had a most successful run on Broadway.

Last year Frederic March and Katherine Hepburn were starred in a movie version of the same play.

The rest of the cast will be announced at a future date. Practices are being held daily, but changes may be made yet in the cast.

Siberian Singers Return to S. T. C. For First Lyceum

The Siberian Singers under the direction of Nicholas Vasilieff, a distinguished young musician and outstanding vocalist, will be the first lyceum number Monday night in the large auditorium.

This male chorus has entertained this school several times before. On Founders' Day last year, their singing was an important event.

The program planned will feature Russian religious music, Siberian legend, folk song, and finally gay gypsy melodies. Usually the program lasts about an hour and a half.

It is expected that the singers will entertain the student body the morning after the program in chapel as they usually do.

Alpha Phi Sigma Promotes 10 Members

Ten members of Alpha Phi Sigma received promotions to higher degrees of membership on October 13.

Eight girls were promoted to the highest degree, Masters' Degree. They were: Frances Lyons, Margaret Eckford, Louella La Fon, Rosemary Howell, Martha McCorkle, Sudie Yager, Jane Powell and Marion Harden. Those promoted to the Apprentice Degree were, Thelma Houpe and Virginia Yager.

Freshmen Sign Council Honor Code

The formal signing of the Honor Code by the freshman class took place Tuesday night, Oct. 19, in the student council room.

Seated at the table were the members of the student council in caps and gowns. The freshman dressed in white, entered, read the Honor Code placed before her and signed the code. Each girl was given a copy of the code that she may keep always before her the things for which all S. T. C. girls are supposed to stand.

Virginian Wins First Class Honor Rating

The 1937 Virginian, year book of S. T. C., was given first class or excellent rating by the Associated Collegiate Press, according to recent word received by the editor, Ruth Montgomery.

Only nine year books in the United States received first class rating. There is only one rating, namely, All American, which surpasses what the Virginian received.

Virginia Baker, now a member of the Blackstone High School faculty was editor of this edition of the annual.

This is the first time the Virginian has received this rating. Last year it was rated as good or second class.

When Ruth Montgomery put the Virginian on display in Chicago at the A. C. P. convention, it received many favorable comments by delegates and by annual experts. A delegate from Johns Hopkins University declared the Virginian had the best group pictures of any annnual he'd ever seen.

Class of '41 Elects Twelve to Y. W. Commission

The freshman commission of the Y. W. C. A. as voted on by the class of '41 will include Frances Ellett, Martha Welcher, Helen McIlwaine, Mary Petticrew, Bess Thomas, Ethel Carr, Patricia Whitlock, Mildred Perdue, Norma Pamplin, Jean Terral, Alice Lee Barham and Norma Johnston.

Assisted by the freshman counsellor, Ruth Curtis Robeson, this group will be worked into various phases of activities in the Y. W. C. A. They will sponsor a bazaar around Christmas time and will be in charge of morning watch on Sundays.

Fall Cotillion Takes Place on Nov

Fall cotillion will be held this year on November 6, in the gymnasium with music by the Royal Virginians.

The Royal Virginians are from the University of Virginia and this musical outfit now starts its eighteenth season. Last year this orchestra played for Fall Cotillion here under the leadership of Charlie Gasque. This year the orchestra has combined with that of Hartwell Clarke, an alumnus, and has met with remarkable success.

Gamma Psi will furnish decorations for Fall Cotillion. The theme of decoration has not been announced.

Farmville Girls Crash Cnicago in Southern Way

By ANN DUGGER

"It was perfect." Mary Harrison Vaughan, editor of The Rotunda, and Ruth Montgomery, editor of The Virginian have been chorusing for two days. In spite of bad colds and headaches the press convention held at Chicago last week was a huge success for the Farmville representatives. Just a look at Libby Roberts' beaming countenance is enough to testify to this fact.

To ask them what they did brings forth a jumble of words and gestures. (Have you noticed Mary Harrison's expressive eyebrows?) When pinned down to some evidence of coherence, the trip, meetings and tour seem to be the big points of the week.

The train ride was eventful from the minute they left the station in town followed by bouquets and boxes, until the time they reached Chicago. At four o'clock A. M. a "most obnoxious person" began to carry on a loud conversation, among other things saying that he could tell a Virginian anywhere he saw one. Mary Harrison and Ruth decided to give him a taste of his own medicine, and in spite of killing glances of everyone else in the car, discussed fully the merits of Farmville or anything else that came into their heads. They stopped in the station at Cincinnati, which was "so big that it made their ears pop."

As soon as they registered at the exclusive Medinah Club, which is next door to the Tribune building and across the street from the Wrigley building—instead of beginning at once to look the town over, they went to sleep. The next morning they attended a round table discussion. The meetings and round table discussions became their regular morning program.

Upton Close, foreign correspondent; Kenneth E. Olson, Director of School of Journalism at Northwestern University; Howard Vincent O'Brien, Editorial Columnist of Chicago Daily News and Dusty Miller, publisher of Wilmington News Journal, were leaders at the discussions. However Mary Harrison, Ruth and Libby believe they learned more by talking to other delegates than by attending meetings. The delegates represented nearly every place in the United States from Notre Dame to Alabama.

The tours, both educational and otherwise, took up a large part of the girls' time. They visited The Tribune offices and saw a show "From Trees to Tribune". They saw Life published. Ruth and Libby almost got arrested for taking a few sheets of last weeks issue of Life. They went through the University of Chicago and saw all the beautiful sights of Chicago itself. All three "put on the dog" and heard Kay Kayser at the Black Hawk Restaurant and Fred Waring at The Palace Theatre. They rah-ed it up with the best of them at the Northwestern-Purdue football game. They drank orangeades at the Club Alabam where Mary Harrison says "backstage doings" usually go one. They stayed an hour in a cafeteria "waiting to get waited on."

"No one understood a word we said," wailed the editor of The Rotunda. "Come in Georgia" was the salutation of one of the delegates. Ruth says that people thought they were morons just because they didn't know how to set up North. One boy asked her, "Do you write incorrect English, too?" The Farmville girls laid the Southern accent on thick and told a native Chicagoan "You-all . . . go—so—fact—up — here — we — just — cain't — keep — up — with — you-all."

After all the conversation, including Northern compliments on the two publications, it is easy to understand why they chime in "It was perfect."

Lutherans Sponsor Regular Broadcasts On Sunday Evenings

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 20—(Special) A new series of 26 Lutheran Hour broadcasts, featuring the noted theologian, Dr. Walter A. Maier, Ph.D., will begin next Sunday (October 24), over a coast-to-coast network of the Mutual Broadcasting System.

With 46 stations participating, the network will be the largest to carry the broadcasts since the Lutheran Hour originated in 1931. With 28 stations on the network last fall, more than 90,000 letters were received from the listening audience, and the present expansion is the result, according to the Lutheran Laymen's League, of the enthusiastic reception of the programs.

The only network program of the Mutual Broadcasting System to originate in St. Louis, and one of the largest religious broadcasts on the air, the Lutheran Hour will be heard each Sunday afternoon at 4:30 Eastern Standard Time. The programs will emanate from Station KFUO, on the campus of Concordia Seminary, chief theological seminary of the Lutheran Synod of Missouri, Ohio and other States.

Eastern stations on the network are WNAC, Boston; WEAN, Providence; WINS, New York City; WFIL, Philadelphia; WBAL, Baltimore; WRVA, Richmond; WCAE, Pittsburgh; WKBW, Buffalo; WHK, Cleveland. WHKC, Columbus, and WSAI, Cincinnati.

Broadcast under the auspices of the Lutheran Laymen's League. With the cooperation of the Lutheran International Walther League, the programs again will feature choral music by the Lutheran Hour Chorus, a selected group from the student body of Concordia Seminary, and the St. Louis A Cappella Choir, nationally known mixed chorus of 50 voices.

Students Will Vote For Circus Queen From Four Nominees

Gay Stieffen, Vera Ebel, Mary Page Huff, and Caralie Nelson are the senior, junior, sophomore and freshman nominees respectively for the 1937 circus queen.

These girls will be voted on by the student body on Monday. Each vote will cost a penny and a person isn't required to vote for the nominee of her class.

The identity of the queen will remain a secret until Saturday the 30th, when she will be unveiled before the circus audience.

Sophomores Present Blue and White Caps To Humble Rats

The members of the sophomore class presented the freshmen with their blue and white rat caps in the gymnasium, Tuesday, October 19, at seven o'clock.

The sophomores, each with a fershman, entered the gymnasium and marched out on the floor. As the freshmen knelt before the sophomores they were crowned with the rat caps. To the singing of different school songs, the letter "S" was formed on the floor.

Following the singing of "Green and White" and "Red and White" and several yells, the freshmen left, wearing their rat caps. These caps will be worn until Christmas, unless the Freshmen beat the Sophomores in hockey. In that case, rat caps will be discarded at Thanksgiving.

Miss Jane Royall Is Reelected Presiding Officer

Miss Jane Royall, who has been re-elected National head of Alpha Kappa Gamma.

Thirty-two Girls Receive Bids To Cotillion

Thirty-two upper classmen will receive bids from the Cotillion Club at dinner tonight.

All who accept bids will receive the yellow and green ribbons of the club to be worn a week.

At the fall dance, new members will wear these ribbons. They will be unable to invite guests to the first dance, but they will be full-fledged members of the club by the spring dances.

Carr and Seward Represent Freshmen On Committee

Ethel Carr and Helen Seward were selected by the freshman class to represent them on the student standards committee.

Jennie Belle Gilliam, chairman of this committee, will help the newly-elected members to learn their duties. The student standards committee is composed of two representatives from each class and all the major officers automatically become members.

The purpose of the committee is to discuss and bring about changes in school that cause better working together of students and faculty. Faculty members are appointed by Dr. Jarman.

Alpha Kappa Gamma Elects National Officers

Miss Jane Royall, secretary to head of the home department, was re-elected National President of Alpha Kappa Gamma at the convention held at the State Teachers College, Farmville, Virginia on October 15 and 16 and Miss Florence Stubbs, also of Farmville, was re-elected executive secretary of the national organization and presented a diamond insignia for her service to Alpha Kappa Gamma.

Miss Ladema Gaines of Columbia, South Carolina presented the pin of Alpha Kappa Gamma to Miss Stubbs in reward for her invaluable service to the fraternity ever since its founding.

Other national officers elected were: vice-president, Ellen Deppe, the University of North Carolina; Nancy McIvor, Queens Chicora, recording secretary and historian and Nancy Schellert, University of N. C. editor of the Torch Bearer. The following were elected to the policy committee: Dean Arvey Childs, Ladena Gaines, both of the University of South Carolina and Frances Smith, of Queens Chicora.

Saturday morning was devoted to a discussion of vocational opportunities for women in the south. Fields open to women were discussed as to training, experience and potentialities, including business, homemaking, art, law, science, teaching and sociology. Conclusions drawn were that a college education was the foundation of success in each field and that no field was overcrowded for the well trained women.

Delegates attending the convention were: Ladinia Ganies, May Mover, Frances McLeod, Frances Smith, Dorothy Platt and Betsy Yeadon from the University of South Carolina; Evelyn Barber, Nell Booker and Nancy Schollert, from the University of North Carolina; and Elizabeth Calder, Mary Currie, Helen Jordon, Josephine Hackney and Nancy McIver of Queens Chicora.

Alumnae of the Joan Circle returning for the convention were: Kate Trent, Margaret Finch, Mary Ellington, Frances Sole Lyle, Elizabeth Bowers, Frances Edwards, Frances Crawford, Martha Gunter, "Tac" Waters, Florence and Lelia Sanford, Virginia Baker, Helen Smith, Margaret Pollard, Amanda Gray and Mary Burgess Fraser.

Among the honorary and associate members present were: Dr. J. L. Jarman, Mrs. Mildred Dickinson Davis, of Hampden-Sydney, Miss Minnie V. Rice, Miss Grace Mix, Misses Mary Clay and Winnie Hiner, Miss Olive Iler and Miss Elizabeth Hutt.

Smith Announces Gamma Psi Plans

Gamma Psi, the art fraternity, is faced with a busy year states Virginia Whitehead Smith, the president.

Quarterly projects have been decided upon. The fraternity at present is working on the fall project—a mural for the training school. Posters and decorations for the Cotillion Club, Alpha Kappa Gamma, and the circus are being made.

Posters and advertisements for other school organizations will be made by Gamma Psi at a small price.

Duty Is Not Ugly But the Giver of Joy If We Accept

Duty we say is an ugly word. We shy from it every time if possible. We refuse to admit that duty dominates us. Those of us who clamor loudest over the hated term, have the most contempt for ones who shirk to fulfill it.

Often we accomplish duty, feel the pleasure of doing it and yet refuse to admit we enjoy not shirking. Maybe we are too cowardly to say such an ugly word. We undobtedly believe in duty, yet we seldom admit it.

Let's face facts. Certain duties are ours to be done. Let's do our duty proudly and have peaceful minds because we have done so. It's our duty —there's no denying it— to make other people happy, to complain as little as possible and to give of ourselves. We often claim we have little to give and get out of giving by that excuse. That is not so. If we give of our laughter, our love, our courage, then we are generous and capable of receiving.

If we give freely and shirk not our duties, then when we take stock of ourselves we can say that our talents have been increased and life has been of some value. Then duty is not an ugly word and the soul is not at odds with anyone.

War Ends In Nothing But Sorrow

The Japanese actually seem surprised that Americans fail to consider their atrocities in China legitimate behavior. Their leaders express grave disappointment in our president because of his recent speech against nations who take what they want at the expense of any country.

It is the sincere hope of most Americans that such views will remain the true policies of all Americans but that such views will never again cause us to become involved in warfare. Lets never again become so filled with unreasonable propaganda that we cannot see war in its true light, its utter uselessness. Lets never forget that there is no excuse for any war, that no war has every really settled anything, and that the sacrifice for war is always too great.

Undset Novel Is Convincing

Sigrid Undset has again given us a powerful story about her native land. This time, however, she has forsaken the midieval and has written with understanding of the difficulties of modern marriage. The Faithful Wife presents the problems of marriage without bringing in the usual "sob-stuff" element. The scenes are depicted with clarity and the emotional side of the story is handled with candor and sympathy.

The novel, which is almost plotless, tells of the rather uneventful life which Nathalie and Sigurd have enjoyed for sixteen years. Both have jobs and are apparently contented with their lot. Then suddenly Nathalie learns of an intrigue between her husband and a young, wistful-eyed girl. How the wife adjusts herself to the situation, the heart-break she endures in trying to forget her husband, is the theme of the book.

The Faithful Wife is concerned with the courage of a woman (the average woman) who has lost her husband. It is written simply and convincingly. It lifts the divorce question from the level of the ordinary. It is so realistic, truthful, and unaffected that it strikes the reader with considerably more force than its elaborate rivals. In this book, Miss Undset has given us some of her best work.

Pulitzer Prize Williner Oliver La Farge has also presented one of the year's most outstanding novels The Enemy Gods. The conflict in the soul of a Navajo boy, cnofronted with the choice of the white man's world or the savage's freedom is the plot of La Farge's new book.

The struggle continues as the Indian goes to manhood. He tries desperately to reconcile the two worlds. Failing, he finds happiness with his people and the girl who was meant to be his companion.

The two books, The Faithful Wife and The Enemy Gods, the one written by a Nobel prize winner and the other by a Pulitzer, are novels no on ecan afford to miss.

Big Apple Calls For Experts

The fever of trucking has made itself obnoxious again, just when it looked as though it would go out of style and we were glad that we had never spent a lot of time and effort in learning the fine art. Now, it is obvious that we'll have to learn after all. This Big Apple craze is responsible for it. One really can't join the Big Apple with any degree of pleasure or self assurance without having a fairly decent makeshift trucking step.

The girls on "Junior Hall" (second floor annex) are diligently trying to "Learn to Truck in Seven Hectic Days." Each night there is a huge session in the hall. Everybody appears in different degrees of undress and in varying stages of hair-setting. There are usually several combs or brushes being whirled around for emphasis.

The instructresses rush around giving helpful hints—often a little too frank, but helpful nevertheless. Every now and then, these enthusiastic guides become so enthralled with their own perfection that they forget about everybody else and begin some very unorthodox looking movements. Speaking of "swing" they really have it.

The beginner is the most pitiful of all. She doesn't know very clearly what she is working toward, much less how to attain it. She struggles along with some sort of shuffle and is completely discouraged about life.

The stage in which the pupil has learned the idea, and is trying to put on the finishing touches, is much the funniest. She is so completely serious that she is almost desperate. No need to try to start a conversation. The only way she'll use her tongue is to stick it out the corner of her mouth to aid in concentration.

Doesn't it seem foolish for girls to put out so much actual effort to be able to do something just because everybody else can do it?

Rotunda Reverberations

Liz Carroll

From all reports last week-end was quite a gay one for most of our fair lassies. V. P. I., W. & L. and Richmond were all just too . . . too! Even the lil' hamlet of Farmville assumed an air of gayety!! A football game . . . dances . . . H.-S. Alumni . . . and a whole bus load of Swathmorians who were most enthusiastic about the good ole Southern hospitality! One of the visiting Yankees was seen taking a certain S. T. C. blond for the well known ride . . . only this proved to be a bicycle ride down the main street . . . Here and there, one might have glimpsed a disillusioned individual drowning their sorrow.

Wonder of wonders! The love bug has at last gotten Prince Smith. After returning from W. & L., she has decided that the life of a college girl is not what it's cracked up to be . . . she would enter the blessed bonds of matrimony or at least change schools at Sonny's earliest convenience.

At the very special request of Mary Harvey this column wishes to announce that she and Jack Pedigo were honor roll students during the summer school session of S. T. C.

One hundred S. T. C. girls stood on the corner the other afternoon and gazed in ecstatic admiration as one lone Hampden-Sydney male crossed the street. Oh's and Ah's and other exclamations. Amid this chorus of sighs, Virgil May entered Shannon's.

Will Scott's mother is quite perturbed about her these days. Will has been acting so strangely of late that Mrs. Scott is convinced that she has gone off the deadend about some male. Out with it, Will! Who is he? And why is your face all broken out?

Then there is the freshman who wasn't at all excited about going to the dances last week-end. According to her theory, there is but one fraternity on the H.-S. campus, and as her date was not of this select group she was rather dubious about the outcome. Of course it isn't very flattering to either the boy or his fraternity . . . however, if she would state her objections to the lad he, no doubt, would remedy the situation! In fact, he'd probably tell her that if somebody hadn't asked him to take her to the dance, he would never have bored himself to that extent in the first place.

Another of our freshmen has quite a philanthropic attitude. Just as soon as she finds time she's going to join all the sororities on campus and the honor societies. She thinks every girl ought to have the social life that these afford and then she doesn't want to slight anybody!

Mary Harrison Vaughan may have had a huge time in Chicago, but she certainly lost ground while she was gone. Lun took Chlolide Jarman to the dances and even sent her gardenias . . . Horace asked another girl to go with him . . . and when she tripped off to V. P. I. . . . well . . . he proceeded to forget them both!

When Hope Fades Away and We're Alone—

There comes a time when all hope fades away; all joy of living vanishes like the day; and we are left utterly alone.

No Wisdom to Repeat
By Lloyd Frankenberg

And these my hands that have so often wrung
Small comfort from each other, shall be fixed
Five painted in the firmament of earth
For moles to stumble on and to turn back
Seeking less stony fields to ease their blindness.

And these my eyes that have been starred with tears
So that the stars of heaven swam therein
And the sun a great gold drop of glimmering fire,
These eyes that have searched
long into the dark
And found an equal sightlessness in light,
They shall be blinder than two moons to peer
The reaches of the underworld and strain
To catch some glimpse of heaven through the earth.

These ears that have had ears alone for hearing
Voices that told them nothing, always voices
Asking, no voice replying; they shall be Forever empty and the tongue shall hold
No wisdom to repeat.

Counsel With a Wounded Heart
By Louise C. Nay

What if the gold was cheapened with alloy?
You found it precious for awhile, its giving
Seemed lordly in your sight, it brought you joy
And glorified the simple rite of living.
What if illusion was a ponderer
Who rendered you impervious to reason?
For such oblivion do not censure her
Or brand her artifice with a name like treason.

O wounded heart, be grateful that you had
A single coin to spend, a single hour
When earth and heaven combined to make you mad.
A god, no miracle beyond your power!
By reckoning your treasure, you will find Fate has been generous and wisdom blind.

Look around you though. It's being done!

Borrowed Humor

"What d'yur mean when you say your girl is tempermental?"
"She's 75 percent temper and 5 percent mental."

Detour—the roughest distance between two points.

Red: "I couldn't sleep a bit last night because the window shade was up."
Elbert: "Why didn't you pull it down?"
Red: "Do you think I can reach across the street?"

One Fresh: "Con you read French?"
Second Fresh: "No, but I can guess from the pictures."

"What do you want for your birthday?"
"Something for my neck."
"My gosh, have you started charging for that?"

English Prof: "Are you very familiar with John Milton?"
Co-ed: "No, Sir, and I'll have you know that I am not familiar with anyone."

"Sir, I want your daughter for my wife."
"And I, Sir, will not trade."

And now you can insure yourself against flunking a course! At Emory University in Georgia two students have started an agency that will insure passing a course—or even making an "A" in it.

Premiums for the scholastic policy are camputed on the basis of your average, the grades made previously under the teacher in question by the applicant, and the number of flunks and "A's" given yearly by that teacher.

On jewelry and fountain pens, premiums must run for at least two months before any adjustment will be paid.

Terms of installment payment are offered by the firm so that a student may pay a small amount down, the rest later, and may drop the policy if he feels that he's going to pass the course and thereby lose the premium.

Courses may be insured for anything up to $100, the premium varying with the amount of the policy. The firm will insure on any grade down to F.

Names of clients are kept confidential so that teachers may not know what students are insuring themselves and for what grades.

After two long years of war, the Committee for Industrial Organization and the American Federation of Labor will meet before long and attempt a truce.

The revel C. I. O., under the "dictatorship" of John L. Lewis, has been trying for over a week to come to terms with the A. F. of L., whose president is William Green. It is doubtful that the parley will be successful, because both Green and Lewis are as stubborn as the proverbial donkey—and their ideas differ entirely.

If only an agreement could come about! So much hatred and hatefulness would be blated. Government officials could sit back and not have to worry their gray matter over the strikes and demonstrations that have been a disaster to the history of the United States. Moreover, employers of organized labor also would be spared of the strikes bound to result from the war between two huge groups of employees. The working men in each group would lose less time on the job and also stand to benefit by a united labor front against employers.

As we have stated before, it is doubtful that the parley will be a success. If these negotiations should fail, the country is destined to have the most bitter labor war in its history. Both the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. agree on that point with especial emphasis. But, on the other hand, should the conference be a success, the A. F. of L. could present a united force of nearly 7,000,000 workers in its fight for higher wages, shorter hours, and better working conditions.

* * * *

That brings up a subject in our mind that is not only a sore spot to us, but grips the hearts of others in rather an icy grasp. If this convention of two powerful labor organizations should be a success, it is certain that John L. Lewis would become the dominant figure of the Federation—not that he isn't dominant enough already! And you ask, "So what?"

No. 1—There have been rumors that the C. I. O., under the leadership of the before mentioned Mr. Lewis, has an idea of becoming a political party—"the party of the laboring man"—or some such.

No. 2—If this should come about, John L. Lewis would, without a doubt, become that party's candidate for the Presidency of the United States. Does it sound foolish? It isn't—in one sense—Mr. Lewis could get more votes than Roosevelt and any other candidate added together and multiplied by two. Those votes would be cast by miners, mill-workers, etc.

No. 3—Mr. Lewis in the White House would be the last straw! He would, set up a dictatorship to be envied by the great Mussolini and the notorious Hitler.

This would put the common laborer "tops" in the eyes of the officials of the country. It would be able to be compared to the "Reign of Terror" in France after the French Revolution and to the Reconstruction period of the South after our Civil War. Doesn't that sound pleasant?

* * * *

Have you ever imagined yourself with a $500 bill? Wouldn't that be wonderful? But the national government, talks in terms of millions and billions as we do of one and two dollars.

In a statement recently issued from Washington we find that the last time the national budget budgeted was in 1931; prior to that we had eleven years of surpluses; the greatest deficit in the national budget was in the war—yea rof 1918-19.

Miss Blakeslee Makes Address On Responsibility

Alpha Kappa Gamma Speaker

Miss Ruth O. Blakeslee was guest speaker at the Alpha Kappa Gamma banquet at Longwood on Saturday evening. Miss Blakeslee gave an inspirational address on individual responsibility bringing in interesting information about the work of the Social Security Board.

Miss Blakeslee is a member of the Social Security Board in Washington. She is a graduate of Goucher College, attended John Hopkins University School of Political Science, and in 1930 was sent to England to study social conditions there. Miss Blakeslee is now chief of the division of policies and procedures of the Bureau of Public Assistance of the Security Board.

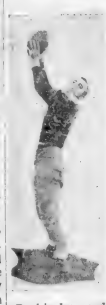
Tigers Conquer Swathmore College Homecoming Day

A snarling, fighting Tiger eleven out-ran, out-kicked and out-passed the stubborn Swathmore Quakers last Saturday at Farmville Athletic Field and went on to win by a decisive 25-0 margin. After three straight defeats the Tiger team showed that it has the right to be called one of the greatest from Hampden-Sydney in the last eight years, since it revealed to the Homecoming crowd of 2500 that it could "dish it out as well as take it."

The Tigers not only outfought the visiting eleven but they made their own breaks and then took advantage of them. It was a great victory scored by a great team.

Co-capain Richardson kicked off to Swarhmore to begin the battle and a swarm of tacklers downed the receiver on the Swarthmore 30-yard marker. An exchange of punts found the Tigers gaining the advantage as Richardson easily outkicked his rival. Richardson took the ball off tackle on his own forty early in the quarter and plowed twelve yards to the visitors' 48, where Walden went around end to the 30. There an intercepted pass gave Swarthmore the ball, but only momentarily as they fumbled and the Tigers recovered on the Quaker 30.

Craft, end



Richardson, Kincaid Score

Then it was almost all Richardson as Hampden-Sydney ripped the Swarthmore line for two successive first downs and the initial touchdown. Richardson's try for extra point was bad. Hampden-Sydney kicked off again and after an exchange of punts the Tigers worked a smooth pass play from their own 40 yard line in which Kincaid took a perfect 20-yard pass from Henry Flannagan and raced 40 yards for the second score. It was the prettiest play of the game. Richardson's try for extra point was barely to the left. There was no more scoring in the first half and play ended with the Tigers in possession of the pigskin on Swarthmore's 42-yard marker.

There was no scoring in the third period as Coach Bernier sent many substitutes into the fray but the Tigers continued to dominate the contest as most of the play was confined to Swarthmore territory.

Howard, Johnson Tally

Early in the fourth quarter Ed Null entered the game and displayed what a fresh man can do against a tired eleven as he circled the ends time and again. A. T. Howard plunged over for the touchdown after Null had made two first downs in a row on end sweeps. Some beautiful blocking from the team as a whole helped Null accomplish his task. William's trusty toe converted the extra point. Richardson having been take out due to an injury early in the third quarter after having played a remarkable game.

Buchinsky, end

Hampden-Sydney kicked off once more to Swarthmore and after receiving the ball on their own twenty the quarterback elected to try a flat pass, but alert Maynard Johnson, who played a stellar game at guard for the Tigers, gathered in the ball on the 15 and sprinted for the final touchdown. Williams' try for extra point hit the left upright and fell back into the field. Later in this period Swarthmore blocked a Tiger punt but Williams scooped up the free ball and made a twenty yard gain out of the play. Null had a scintillating 45-yard ru nfrom near his own goal line, and when the play was called back

Freshmen Begin Basketball Practices Tuesdays Wednesdays

Freshman Basketball practices are held at five o'clock on Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons.

Since a number of Freshmen have come out for Basketball the try-outs will be divided into squads which will compete with each other. From these contesting groups the best players will be chosen to compose the regular Freshman team.

Juniors Take First Honor in Water Carnival Thursday

The Juniors took first honor in the anual swimming carnival with a stunt called "Junior Olympics," while the Sophomore placed second with a modern version of "The Swimming of the Hellispont." The carnival was held in the pool last Thursday night, October 13.

The H20 club sponsers this evnet each year to promote interest in swimming, diving, and life saving work.

The Juniors excelled because they had a good deal more water work, while the other classes did most of their stunts on land.

The freshmen gave "The Big Apple" and the Seniors presented a skit called a "Day at the Beach."

World Sports

The days of true sport are gone Civilization has made man soft. In other words them days is gone forever when a boxing match and a duel to the death differed only in the weapons used. Did you know that Simon Byrne, an old time Irish Heavyweight killed Sandy McKay in a forty-seven round fight in 1830? Three years later Simon, himself was killed in a fifty round fight. They could really take punishment in those days.

Many of us have taken up bowling and most of us are proud if we can make the ball go straight down the alley. And Varijap can knock down two pins on adjoining alleys with one shot. He can make a ball stop half way down the alley and return to him. He can bowl strikes with his feet.

Entered in the President's Cup Motor Boat race on the Potomac was Jack Rutherford's Juno. Juno was built in New Jersey for China's "suicide fleet" and sold to Rutherford. Juno won the first heat and was leading in the second when suddenly she lurched, flopped over as Notre Dame shot ahead and sank as the pilot and mechanic were saved. Notre Dame won.

On September the thirteenth a one hundred mile an hour gale swept up on the yacht Endeavor I, a day out of Newport, Rhode Island being towed home to Glasport, England by the motor yacht Viva II. The hurricane all but buried the trim boat under great green waves. Captain Ned Heard was washed overboard and pulled back. The towline snapped and Endeavor vanished in the storm. On the trip to the United States last May to act as companion to American's cup Challenger, Endeavor II. Endeavor I had slipped her tow line, but had sailed calmly into port. This time, however, no word of her came for ten days. Lloyds' of London all but gave her up for lost. On September the twenty-third, Lloyd's famed bell rang to announce she had been sighted. Shortly afterwards the report was denied. Four days later the bell rang to announce once more that the Endeavor had been found. That was the first time the bell ever sounded twice for any boat. On October first a huge blue hulled sloop ended its nineteen day journey and glided into the harbor of Glasport as sirens screened happily and the crew thankfully furled the sails.

This week's new wrinkle in sport is wrestling. Wrestling, you say, but that is not news. But there is news. The Romans had it, the Greeks had it. Why Adam and the snake probably wrestled on Saturday night—which is all very true, but would you think of wrestling as a nice gentle sport for young ladies? Well, whether you do or don't, Bridget Donovan, an Irish girl from Boston, does, and she is coming down to Richmond to meet Clara Mortenson next Friday and keep up the reputation of the fighting Irish. If they can do it why shouldn't we? Meet me in the gym, girls, and remember, no holts barred.

Because the boys at St. John's College, Annapolis, Md., have been eating too fast, Miss Georgia Smith, college dietitian, is arranging to have a radio installed in the dining hall to slow the pace with waltz music.

Food-bolting students now face the prospects of military marches for breakfast, leisurely fox-trots for lunch and languid waltzes for dinner.

Convention Closes With Banquet At Longwood

Shiplett Is Head Of Toasts

Alpha Kappa Gamma concluded its tenth annual convention with a banquet at Longwood on Saturday evening. The gold and blue colors of the organization were artistically carried out in the table decorations.

Elizabeth Shiplett, president of the local chapter, presided as toast mistress. The toast themes were centered around the shield of Alpha Kappa Gamma. Dr. J. L. Jarman made the address of welcome. The following toasts were given: To the guests by Dudley Allen, to the spirit of Jane Adams, National Patron Saint by Elizabeth Morris, and to Alpha Kappa Gamma by Margaret Finch, an alumna of the Joan Circle.

Miss Florence Stubbs introduced Miss Ruth O. Blakeslee, who was guest speaker.

At the conclusion of the banquet Miss Ladema Gaines presented Miss Stubbs a diamond set insignia—a gift from the circles in appreciation for her twelve years of interest and service.

Miss Mary Gives Informal Reception To School Guests

Miss Mary White Cox entertained the delegates of the Alpha Kappa Gamma convention at an informal reception in the Student Building Lounge at nine thirty on Friday night.

Besides the active members of the Joan Circle, the presidents of the other honor organizations on campus were invited. These girls were: Marjorie Roberston, Nora Jones and Virginia Whitehead Smith.

Among the honorary and associate members of the local circle present were: Dr. J. L. Jarman, Miss Grace Mix, Miss Mary Clay Hiner, Miss Winnie Hiner and Miss Olive Iler.

Twelve O'clock Classes Linger As Appetites Demand Lunch

Oh! what tempting tasty, torture! What terrible tantalizing tension about twelve o'clock when one has a class in a room right across from the dining room. The forecast of the lunch menu is brought in on little wifts of breeze that make their way from the kitchen directly to sensitive noses.

Gazes are turned toward the windows, then down at a dozen or more watches. Each one is confronted with the same horrified expression—only quarter past. Why my watch must have stopped. I know we have been in here for an half an hour. Then follows a united winding of watches and a silent but united resolve to be patient and conquer by self-will that gnawing sensation in the middle.

Renewal of interest in the lesson is shown as intent faces are lifted to catch a sentence or two of the lecture and then bent over the intense scraping of pens and pencils on notes.

The sun shines in the windows filling the room with a drowsy warmth. Someone in the back of the room yawns, and then another. In a few minutes a dozen or more hands are lifted in protest against the gaping openings in a dozen or more faces. To prevent cat napping another window is raised in the room. The delectable aroma of hot rolls is borne in on a fresh gust of wind, and heads of girls are again turned toward the window. A ripple of squirming and whispering fills the room. "I'm about starved. I can't wait until dinner."

It takes the strongest willed to keep the mind on the subject when it is occupied with visions of food!

The bell rings, note books are snapped shut, pencils are grabbed in haste, and a mad scramble is made to get somewhere where the aromas of food can not be detected—for it is twenty more minutes before lunch time!

Granddaughters Club Entertained

New members of the Granddaughters Club were entertained Friday in the rec at ten o'clock by old members of the club.

Games were played and followed naturally by the inevitable "Big Apple." Music was furnished by Geraldine Hatcher at the piano.

Following the entertainment, an ice course was served by the hostesses.

and penalized 35 yards for clipping he simply took the ball again and made 32 yards around right end on a fake punt play. Penalties hurt Hampden-Sydney in the final few minutes as the Tiger substitutes were over-anxious and played too roughly.

Swarthmore had 9 first downs; 12 punts for an average of 30 yards; 35 yards assessed them for penalties; completed passes—3, incomplete passes—8 and intercepted passes—4.

Hampden-Sydney had 13 first downs; 7 punts for an average of 37 1-2 yards; 65 yards assessed them for penalties; completed passes—4, in completed passes—4 and intercepted passes—2.

Richardson, Hyde, Null, Johnson and Kincaid stood out for the Tigers and the Lions showed Mawhinney and Eberle to advantage. Buchinsky and Craft alternated between end and tackle for the Tigers, the combination being very effective both offensively and defensively.

Delegates Attend Regional Sorority Meetings

Margar Bailey, Frances Bryan, Musse Hoyer, Annette Roberts, Gay Steiffen and Miss Mary Nichols, faculty member and alumnae representative, attended the regional convention of the Tau Sigma Tau sorority at Concord State Teachers College in Athens, West Virginia, October 16 and 17, as representatives of the Zeta Tau chapter of Alpha Sigma Tau. Mrs. Ellen Mason of Norfolk, Virginia, attended the meeting as the representative of the Norfolk-Portsmouth Alumnae chapter.

Mrs. Meade McNeill, district president, presided at the conferences which were held on Saturday morning at which time Mrs. Carrie Staehle, national president, spoke.

The Omicron chapter served luncheon at twelve o'clock and at two o'clock a round-table discussion was held at which time pertinent questions were discussed. After discussions the Beckley W. Va., alumnae chapter entertained the guests at a tea. Mrs. Harvey Rice, dean of women at Concord college, sang two selections and Miss Elizabeth Bastian offered two violin selections.

Miss Mary Nichols and Mrs. Carrie Staehle gave short program talks at the banquet which was held at the West Virginian Hotel in Bluefield on Saturday at 7:30 o'clock. The color scheme of yellow and green was carried out in flowers and programs. The banquet tables were arranged in the shape of an anchor and the sorority seal was on the placecards. The banquet program was concluded with musical offerings by Annette Roberts and Frances Bryan.

A party was held in the social room of the hotel for the representatives and other guests.

After a farewell breakfast given at the College Inn, group conferences were held at the home of Dr. Donzil Lilly in Athens on Sunday morning. These conferences were followed by a general assembly at which time all business was concluded and the convention adjourned.

Dr. Beale Represents College at T. K. A. Meeting Tuesday

Last Tuesday Dr. Beale, member of the Faculty Advisory Committee of Tau Kappa Alpha, represented Hampden-Sydney at a meeting held at the Montecello Hotel, Charlottesville, Va., to arrange debate topics for the chapters of Tau Kappa Alpha within the colleges of Virginia. Other schools represented were Bridgewater College and Randolph-Macon Woman's College.

Since the topics discussed at the meeting have not been reported to the local chapter of Tau Kappa Alpha, the topics for intercollegiate debate this year are as yet unknown. When they have been decided upon some report will be made, and further action will be taken by the local organization.

Richmond, Lexington And Blacksburg Hold Dances

University of Richmond homecoming, opening dances and a game with V. M. I. sent girls scurrying to Richmond.

The school gym was elaborately decorated for the dances in red white and blue with music by Jimmie Fuller and Earl Mellen. Girls from S. T. C. enjoying these festivities were Frances Dickinson, Ora Wilson, Theresa Brinkley, Alla Berkley, Martha Smith, Boonie Stevenson, Shirley Ann Stephens, Doris Atkins, Vera Ebel, Elsie Dodd and Dorothy Adkins.

Joe Haymes and Reggie Childs furnished music for V. P. I. opening dances. The new German Club ballroom was opened and quite elaborately decorated for this occasion. Farmville girls attending the dances were: Sara Keesee, Frances Lee Russow, Mildred Stone, Anne Billups, Louise Painter, Ella Ware, Lucy Staples, Irma Carpenter, Pauline Scott, Evelyn Byrd Hutchinson, Frances Maxey, Doris Trimmer, Louella LaFon, Jacqueline Johnson, and Anne Hurtt Ross.

Margaret Tharp, Mary Ames, Prince Smith, and Frances Hudgins returned Sunday after a glorious week-end in Lexington attending the opening dances of Washington and Lee.

Greek Organizations Find Cheap Supplies By Buying Together

Columbus, Ohio—(ACP—Cooperative purchase of supplies by fraternities and sororities at Ohio State University saved them 16 per cent on $90,000 worth of provisions during the last year.

This year 33 fraternities and eight sororities have joined forces uniting their purchasing power. There are now only five fraternities and 12 sororities not included in the group, the majority of these being relatively small.

Interest in improving the financial conditions of the various fraternities has led to the establishment of a uniform accounting system in the office of the auditor of fraternity accounts.

Forty-six of the 58 fraternities now have "A" credit ratings, with the others rapidly reducing their financial obligations. When the auditing division was established on its present basis four years ago, fraternities owed creditors approximately $65,000. This has now been reduced to $15,000.

He was only a life saver but he surely took her breath away.

Dr. J. L. Jarman Visits Roanoke For Meeting

President Receives Interesting Invitations

Dr. J. L. Jarman attended the Cooperative Association of Education meeting on the 21, 22 and 23 of October, at the Patrick Henry Hotel in Roanoke, Va.

In addition to leaders of Virginia, present were Dr. William McKinley Robinson from Western State Teachers College, Kalamazoo, Michigan.

Dr. Robinson was the representative from the National Congress of Parents and Teachers. Mrs. G. L. Tallman of the National Safety Educational Project was also present. The topic of the occasion was "The Child and His School". A banquet was given the night of the 22.

Dr. Jarman has invitations to various places of interest. The Portsmouth Alumna chapter has invited him to a banquet November 5 at the Portsmouth Country Club. He will be guest of honor at the Culpeper Alumna meeting to be given Nov. 11th. On Nov. 13, Dr. Jarman will attend the meeting of the Potomac chapter of alumnae at Alexandria.

The Virginia Association of Education will hold its meeting in Richmond on Nov. 25. There Dr. Jarman will address the school supervisors on "What School Supervision is Meaning in Virginia School Programs."

Movie Scout May Be In Audience At Fall Play

Ivan Kahn, of the Twentieth Century Fox studio, recently wired wired to Dr. Eggleston, president of Hampden-Sydney College that he wished to learn the date of the next Jongleur production as he might send a movie scout to view it.

The next Jongleur production is "Mary of Scotland" which they put on jointly with S. T. C. on November 19. It is probable that the scout will see this performance with the idea of obtaining new talent for Twentieth Century Fox.

Virginia Agee and Jim Johnston play the leads in this play. Other characters have not been announced.

This is an unusual chance for dramatic clubs in comparatively small southern colleges. It is possible that some member of the Jongleurs or Dramatic Club may get a chance at a movie career.

Miss Leola Wheeler, director, is considered one of the best dramatic coaches in the south. Plays she produces usually rank high from every angle—staging, lighting, costuming, make-up, and acting are carefully considered. Under her guidance, it is possible that there is some star in the making now at work on "Mary of Scotland."

H. S. T. C. Finds Dates Vary Geratly

A recent investigation carried on by a columnist at Harrisonburg State Teachers College found that the cost of a date with their most eligible girls ranged anywhere from a dime to five or more dollars, depending on the circumstances.

An investigation on the same subject in Richmond, Va., disclosed the average cost of a date was $3.25.

Cousin Tommy, who recently celebrated his golden wedding anniversary.

Cousin Tommy Celebrates Golden Wedding Anniversary

Cousin Tommy, veteran S. T. C. policeman, celebrates his golden anniversary today.

Sunday, October 24, with his children, his brothers, all his sisters except one and all his grandchildren except two, Cousin Tommy was host to his friends at his home on First avenue in honor of his anniversary. Five children were present and fifteen grandchildren.

Fifty years ago, Mr. Atkinson, known to students as Cousin Tommy, was married to Miss Burdie May Bondurant at the state fair in Richmond. This was the first wedding to take place at a Virginia State fair.

Cousin Tommy says he has enjoyed his fifty years of married life but that he does not want to live fifty more. For several years he has been in poor health. Last year he spent several weeks in a Charlottesville hospital.

For twenty-seven years he has spent his nights being the guardian of S. T. C. students. He keeps doors locked, sends mail from the campus, mails letters and is a kindly friend of all the girls.

Mrs. Blanton, night matron, who has worked with Cousin Tommy for eighteen years says "Mr. Atkinson has a very kind heart. Nothing is ever too much trouble for him to do for the girls."

In the fall of 1936, he risked his life to keep a man from climbing a fire escape outside of White House Hall. This heroism put him in bed for weeks. For seventy-six years, Cousin Tommy has lived. He has given a third of his life so far to this institution.

Beorc Eh Thorn Chooses Members

Beorc Eh Thorn, the English honor fraternity, wishes to announce the following new members: Ruby Bane, Anita Carrington, Doris Chesnut, Marion Harden, Martha McCarkle, Mary Walker Mitchell, Lorena Moomaw, Frances Phillips, Mary Wanda Porterfield, Jane Powell, Josephine Quinn, Helen Reiff, Dorothy Rudder, Margaret Sheffey, Ora Wilson and Sudie Yager.

Beorc Eh Thorn was founded at Farmville, in October 1935. The three Old English rune letters whic his adopted for its name, symbolize the quest of literature and the inspiration and discipline which it affords. The society seeks to encourage cerative writing and the study of literature. It gives active support to the publication of the college magazine and sponsors visits of distinguished writers to the College.

President Installs Class of 1938 At Annual Service

Rev. R. O. Bryant Has Devotionals

Senior Installation was held in the main auditorium Tuesday night, October 26, at seven o'clock. This service has become an annual occurrence, holding its place among the Senior traditions.

Marching to the tune of "Onward Farmville", the Seniors and their little sisters took their places, after which the Reverend R. O. Bryant conducted devotionals. The processional then crossed the stage, each Senior kneeling in front of Dr. Jarman, who placed the cap on her head. This act is the official recognition.

The remarks of President Jarman to the class of '38 centered around the ideals and work which result in the production of a "Master Teacher". He closed with a request to every Senior: "Be the Best of Whatever You Are."

At the conclusion of these words the Seniors turned and marched out to the Alma Mater for the first time in cap and gown.

Northwestern Teaches Mute To Walk, Talk, Hear

Chicago, Ill.—(ACP)—By means of a newly invented three finger multitactor, Northwestern University's department of psychology will attempt to teach an eight-year-old deaf and blind girl to walk, talk and hear.

The child has been specially selected by Dr. Robert H. Gault, professor of psychology, because every human faculty which the multitactor is presumed to bring into being lies dormant in her person.

She cannot walk because, unlike the majority of children born deaf and blind, she has failed to grasp the idea of self-motion from the pressure of the hands of others.

The multitactor transmits tones to the fingers through three fingers—the sense of touch taking the place of the sense of sound.

Daily charts of the child's progress will be kept at the department of psychology. She will never be able to see, but her teachers believe they will give her a voice as she grasps the ability to translate touch into sound and so bring her mind to the task of directing movements of her body.

Baptist Student Union Holds State Meeting In Farmville

The Baptist Student Union Convention of Virginia will be in session at the Farmville Baptist Church from October 29-31. Approximately two hundred delegates representing the colleges and universities of Virginia are planning to attend this state-wide meeting.

An informal banquet at the church will open the session at 6:00 on Friday. Following the banquet, Mr. P. E. Crandall and Dr. S. L. Stealey who will conduct the music and the devotionals, respectively, throughout the convention will lead the students in song and devotions.

The Farmville B. S. U. Council will present a play, "The Perfect Plan," on Saturday morning; and Miss Ivylyn Jordan of S. T. C. will represent her school in a panel discussion on officers' duties later in the morning. Saturday night will feature a "Talent Parade" presenting talent from all the campuses, a Master's Minority presentation by Averett College, and a social for the delegates given by the B. S. U. of S. T. C.

Sunday's activities will begin with a sun-rise service at Longwood at 6:30. Miss Rice of the local church will teach the girls' class of Sunday School students at 10:00. Sunday afternoon students will present previews of Special Services for the current year.

The A Cappella Choir of S. T. C. will render special music for the convention.

Alumnae Sponsor Fashion Show Wednesday Night

The Farmville Alumnae will sponsor a fashion show in the large auditorium Wednesday, October 27, at 7:30 P. M. with S. T. C. girls modeling clothes selected from the Dorothy May stock by Miss Yarm, manager.

Susan Lane, Jennie Belle Gilliam, Mary Harvey, Eugenia Jolly, Charlotte Minton, Elizabeth Butler, Elsie Dodd, Lula Windham, Jane Baldwin, Billie Lewis and Norma Johnson have been selected as models. Frankie Bryan will furnish piano music for the models to parade across the stage.

Miss Jane Royall, senior classman, will announce each model as she appears on the stage. Choosing of models was under her supervision.

Miss Yarm has chosen clothes for sports, street, dinner and evening wear to be displayed. These clothes were selected especially for the Dorothy May store from exclusive dress shops. Models were chosen to suit these clothes.

Barkers Yell; Animals Roar

To the tune of barker's yells and the noise of animals, the animal circus will open Saturday in the gym at 7:30.

Will Scott as ringmaster will extend her well-installed lungs and reel off announcements that bring on four stunts planned by the four classes respectively in competition for the much sought-after prize.

The Seniors will present an act that is so far a deep secret. All Gay Steiffen, chairman, will let out is the title which is Add 'em for Apples"—which sounds odd to put it mildly.

The Junior class has a stunt which involves a bride's trousseau—it seems. There's a surprise ending—with no man from what the reporter could discover. Anyhow, all fashion are on parade here.

The well-known sophomore tormenters will present "Paris in the Spring", an old legend completely twentieth centurized. There are whispers on the hall of Helen of Troy and such sirens. Of course Helen has been generally believed a product of Troy but—one never knows at an S. T. C. circus.

The baby class plans a jam session—whatever that is! Anyhow, Cab Calloway, tapping feet, gay songs, screen celebrities and bright lights are in order!

Jennie Belle Gilliam has become animal conscious, all for the love of the circus! Animals and more animals! Little ones, big ones, ferocious ones and tame ones! They will all be there marching, marching around the ring, roaming and entertaining.

Between acts clowns will tumble and never break a bone! They will make sides split and cause the roof to rise!

At last her majesty the Queen will come forth in all her regal beauty. Who she is and how she will be presented is the watchword. Nobody knows except Mary Joyner Cox and Mary Harrison Vaughan, and they're clams these days! Mystery doth prevail!

When the stunts are over, the prize awarded and the class fights quieted, the venders, barkers and gamblers will begin to lure with their wares. Irresistible fun—popcorn, peanuts, lemonade, grab bags, fortune telling, and dancing in the senior booth! Freaks to horrify, food to tempt, and dancing to entice! Then, with all this excitement, visitors can see S. T. C. at her best—in all her pep, vim and vigor!

O. D. K. Has 10 Active Members; Five New Men Initiated Thurs.

The Lambda Circle of Omicron Delta Kappa, National Honor Fraternity held initiation exercises for its new member in the Sigma Chi House last Tuesday night. The men initiated were: John Franklin Kincaid, Jr., William Watkins Walton, John Calhoun Richardson, and Flournoy Shepperson, Jr.

The initiation of these four new members brought the total membership of the Hampden-Sydney circle of O. D. K. to ten active members and five faculty members.

St. John's Students Dine to Music

Because the boys at St. John's College, Annapolis, Md., have been eating too fast, Miss Georgia Smith, college dietitian, is arranging to have a radio installed in the dining hall to slow the pace with waltz music.

Food-bolting students now face the prospects of military marches for breakfast, leisurely fox-trots for lunch and languid waltzes for dinner.

Raymond French Is Classman By Popular Vote Of Freshman Class

Chemist Is Alumnus Of Virginia Tech

Mr. Raymond H. French, assistant professor of chemistry, physics, and general science, was elected classman of the class of '41 at a call meeting last Wednesday night. This is the second time this year a man has been elected a class advisor.

Mr. French is considered a most popular faculty members. He is from Callio in Northern Neck, Va. He received his education from V. P. I. where he was student assistant in the freshman laboratory his senior year and while he was doing his post graduate work. In 1924 he completed his science major from V. P. I. having received a B. S. and M. S. degree.

His first position was chemist for F. F. Royster Co. in Baltimore, Maryland. He was head of the science department in the high school at Columbia, S. C. and he worked a year at John Hopkins before coming to Farmville. Mr. French spent one year at the University of South Carolina studying.

Mr. French states that the greatest honor he has had since he has been at Farmville is the sponsorship of the class of '41. He was once faculty advisor of the Y. W. C. A. He is a member of Academy of Science, American Chemical Society, and Association of University Professors.

Perhaps the most interesting phase of Mr. "Charley" French, as V. P. I. named him, and his connections here is the way in which he spends his past-times. He terms it "catching rides for girls." His hobbies are fishing and hunting. It is said that he bought a yacht to go fishing in. His favorite fish are blue fish.

Seven Seniors Gain Recognition In Who's Who In Colleges

From a list of students sent in by Dean Walker the following seven men have been chosen to represent Hampden-Sydney College in the 1937-1938 edition of "Who's Who Among Students in American Colleges and Universities"; Bob Harper, Bob Kincaid, Jack Pedigo, Flournoy "Shep" Shepperson, Al Smith, W. W. Walton, and Herbert Webb.

The idea of creating one national basis of recognition for students, devoid of politics, initiation fees, and dues was conceived over four years ago—thus "Who's Who Among Students" in American Colleges and Universities" came about.

Its purposes are: (1) An incentive for students to get the most out of their college careers; (2) A means of compensation to students for what they have already done; (3) A recommendation to the business and social world; (4) A standard of measurement for membership comparable to such agencies as Phi Beta Kappa and Rhodes Scholarship Award.

The men were chosen for their prominence on the campus and outstanding work in curricular and extra-curricular activities.

Bob Harper is the editor of the "Tiger" president T. K. A., forensic fraternity; president of the Valley Club; member of Omicron Delto Kappa, and Chi Beta Phi, scientific fraternity.

Bob Kincaid is president of the student body; president of the monogram club; captain of bas-

Ten Years of Joint Plays Are Given by H.-S.-S.T.C.

Ten years ago a committee of Hampden-Sydney boys journeyed into town to see Miss Wheeler, the "moving spirit" of the Farmville Dramatic Club. They had conceived the brilliant idea of joining with the girls' college in the production of the fall play. After deep consultation with Dr. Jarman, and after much debate pro and con, the request was granted. Finally, on November the twenty-second, "Peg O' My Heart" was presented, having for the hero a real live male, and for the Irish heroine, the diminutive Mable Fitzpatrick.

The venture was a success, and since that time Farmville and Hampden-Sydney have cooperated in putting on the annual fall play. In the spring, however, the neighboring college has to use its own material for the cast, and S. T. C. has to use its own ingenuousness in lowering its voice and padding its shoulders for the boy's parts.

The first plays that were given were light comedies. Following "Peg O' My Heart" came such plays as "Mr. Pim Passes By", "Enter Madame", "Admirable Critchton', "A Night in August" (Remember Frances Britton in that?), and "Mary the Third", starring the heroine of this year's hit-to-be, "Mary of Scotland". Now the most anticipated event at present is Jim Johnston of the Hampden-Sydney Jongleurs and Virginia Agee becoming rivals of Katherine Hepburn and Frederick March in one of the most ambitious productions the two clubs have tried yet.

Virginian Staff Express Thanks For Cooperation

The staff of the Virginian has requested that the student body should be thanked for its generous cooperation during the taking of group pictures last week. Splendid spirit was revealed in putting aside all else for the pictures, in dressing as requested and in appearing on time for appointments.

Few things are perfect. The staff acknowledges mistakes in some cases, but it found the girls most patient and completely willing to bear with it.

If the student body of this school had less school spirit, the pleasure of going to school would be greatly lessened. We stand for the enthusiasm and buoyancy of youth. Always we crash through with few slackers. Often we fail to see this asset of ourselves, so we condemn ourselves. Think, fellow students. Is it not very seldom that support and cooperation are requested when they are not given—and gladly given? If we have any pride in ourselves as a student body it should be for this characteristic.

College Choir Spends Money For Our Pleasure

When a group of girls is willing to pay around $600 for gowns to belong to an organization, there must be real worth in that organization.

Such is the case with the college choir. The 55 members spent over $10 each for robes so that they might appear in true choir style. Since they have put not only their money but their time and effort into making the choir a worthwhile undertaking they deserve the congratulations and also support of every student on this campus.

Few organizations can contribute more than one which gives the world music. Mr. Strick is an accomplished musician and his effort has been rewarded by a most satisfactory outcome. The choir is indeed a big credit to his teaching, and this is a request to the school to make the work of this group easier by hearty support. Then we will be gaining much.

Ernst Hemingway Shows New Self

With the publication of To Have and Have Not, Ernest Hemingway has given us his first novel since Farewell to Arms. In his new book there is evidence of Mr. Hemingway's superior style, but, unfortunately, we are forced to admit depth is obviously lacking. The author's reputation would have remained greater had his latest production never made its appearance. However, the book is good reading and it is interesting to compare it with the famous Farewell to Arms.

It is not surprising that To Have and Have Not deals with boating and fishing, for these have been Mr. Hemingway's favorite sports for the past seven years. The hero of the story, Harry Morgan, is a real he-man, who is engaged (legitimately) in piloting boats for tourist fishermen. On the side, he does rum-running so that his wife and two daughters may have the luxuries he wants to give them. As is to be expected, his lawless enterprise gradually supersedes his other occupation and Morgan becomes a Key West desperado. He lives boldly and dangerously, ultimately meeting the fate which he so richly deserves.

Mr. Hemingway's portrayal of his character is superb, but that is the most that may be said for his new book. Otherwise, it is empty. Hemingway's contempt for the rich and his assumption that Morgan is the helpless victim of social conditions shows how wrong is his philosophy. Nevertheless, the novel is exciting and for those who want violence, bloodshed, and action, To Have and Have Not is recommended.

Entirely different in character is Doctors On Horseback. James Thomas Flexner, son of a distinguished American physician, has written on the subject for which his background has best prepared him. Although himself a newspaper man and a layman, Flexner has penned a biography which makes it appear that he is well acquainted with American medicine.

Among his seven doctors on horseback are some which will always be famous, others which were distinguished in their own day only. Subjects of the sketches are John Morgan, Benjamin Rush, Ephraim McDowell, Daniel Drake, Crawford Long, Charles Jackson, and William Morton. In writing of his characters, Flexner remembers that the doctor is, after all, just a man.

There are few flaws in the author's biography. He has not been quite accurate in one or two instances, and sometimes has overemphasized the weaknesses of the early doctor. But, on the whole, the book is splendid and not one of the 350 pages is dull reading.

Man Is Immortal When His Memory Does Not Die

There is that philosophy that the immortality of the soul is the living of man's deeds and his life as a whole in the hearts of the people on this earth. I like to believe that our influence is immortal because it will live in the minds made better by our presence.

O. May I Join the Choir Invisible!
By George Eliot

O, may I join the choir invisible
Of those immortal dead who live again
In minds made better by their presence: live
In pulses stirred to generosity,
In deeds of daring rectitude, in scorn
Of miserable aims that end with self,
In thoughts sublime that pierce the night like stars,
And with their mild persistence urge men's minds
To vaster issues.
So to live in heaven:
To make undying music in the world,
Breathing a beauteous order, that controls
With growing sway the growing life of man.
So we inherit that sweet purity
For which we struggled, failed and agonized
With widening retrospect that

Rotunda Reverberations

Romance may have its time and place, but judging from the experience of a certain sophomore lassie and one of the local lads the "Rec" is definitely not the place! Imagine the chagrin of said couple when . . . after a very romantic interval . . . they turned and discovered that a member of the Home Department had been watching them for some ten or fifteen minutes!! Was your face red, Micou, or was it Red?

Speaking of red faces . . . How about the fair maid who made a trip all the way home to ask an old flame to Cotillion only to find that he had eloped the night before she got there. Too bad, Jenny! Let's hope that your heart and pride weren't dealt too severe a blow!

Even government girls see a bit o fpleasure now and then. Martha Meade Hardaway certainly had that peculiar gleam in her eye when she returned from Virginia last week-end!

There is an old adage that says that people who live in glass houses shouldn't throw stones. 'Tis a neat bit of advice but not one very closely adhered to by the majority of girls at S. T. C. Just the other day a group of girls were overheard denouncing in no uncertain terms another group for a jolly escapade. The irony of the thing was that less than a week before the girls who were criticizing so ardently had done exactly the same thing. Perhaps they didn't remember their own little episode or maybe in their parvenuish minds they felt themselves above the criticism of the rabble. In either case they may disprove the adage above but they certainly prove another beyond the shadow of a reasonable doubt . . . "You can't make a silk purse out of a sow's ear."

Seniors have donned their dignity in full force since installation Tuesday night. Having at last been officially recognized they gaze with disdane from the loftiness of their position upon the lowly underclasmen. Come Saturday they'll probably all be present to march down the aisle at chapel time to the strains of Alma Mater.

Nan Armstead left school last week-end with a rather large order on hand . . . She was to have twelve times as much glee for several unfortunates that had to remain in school. Upon her return she reported that she had fulfilled her commission! Good going, Nan!!

The Circus is just around the corner! Of course the old girls know what fun it is . . . but the new girls just can't afford to miss it. Why, the place takes on so much atmosphere that you entirely forget you're in school. Then you'll have to go to find out who was elected Circus Queen.

Did You Know That-

Farmville is the center of education for women in America; for in 1834 a girls' school was opened here. There have been 103 years of continuous education for women in Farmville.

Senator N. M. Grigg, the negro senator in the Virginia House from Prince Edward County, took an active part in securing the present location for the first state teachers' college in Virginia.

Hampden-Sydney College was located six months before the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

Farmville was once the head of navigation on the Appomattox River. Farmville is at the east and west trade route on the river. The river traffic ran from Farmville to City Point.

Prince Edward County was the home of General Joseph E. Johnston at "Longwood" and Miss Judith Randolph, sister of John Randolph, at "Bizarre".

Patrick Henry made one of his most famous political speeches at Worsham. Hampden-Sydney College declared a holiday for this event.

The last encounter between Lee and Grant during the War Between the States took place a few miles east of Farmville at Sailor's Creek. A battle park has recently been completed there.

Borrowed Humor

Pants are made for men and not for women. Women were made for men and not for pants. When a man pants for a woman and a woman pants for a man that makes a pair of pants. Pants are like molasses—they are thinner in hot weather and thicker in cold weather. There has been much discussion as to whether pants is singular or plural. Seems to us that when you wear pants it is plural, and when you don't wear them it is singular.

W-L Becomes Alarmed

A little boy who is just a wee bit too alarmistic about the rumor of invasion of ladies to the "Lexington Monastery", pours out his utter masculine soul to the apparent dangers of it all.

Dear Tim:

Here's a letter of warning prompted by some unwelcome information that Betty Coed is on the march for us. Her venturous lines of pretty-figured, bright-eyed clear-faced, well dressed, and keen-minded American girls have carried the day at Perdue, at Yale, and at many other traditional "gentleman only" schools. And now her spies and scouts are conning the potential opposition at Washington and Lee, masculine stronghold of the South, if we can believe some feminine friends.

Shall this long revered men's university, founded by Washington and reanimated by Lee, also surrender to the feminine charms; or shall it remain strictly "hemen's" territory?

Being a W-L man, I hope passionately and earnestly for the latter, because I am prewarned as to the effect of rotund figures and trim ankles upon those tenets and traditions which are so highly valued at Lexington. First, the honor system would drop into disuse; for, indeed, what pertaining to veracity or honor could exist in the presence of woman's tremulously voiced white-lies? How many hearts would be pilfered where nothing is stolen now? How many specious pledges would be made, what perjury committed, in the hope of feminine affection?

Then, too, the tradition of speaking to fellow-students would quickly be subverted into speaking about fellow-students in the catty feminine gossip circles. Or if the coeds were truly "ladies in the finest sense of the word," they would think a gentleman fresh to salute them with "Hi, ladies" unless he had first been introduced. A spirit of snobbery would replace fraternal democracy, and the tradition of speaking would gradually be buried.

In regard to "uniform" dress, the inherent feminine desire for ostentation would soon color the staid conservatism of W-L students a brilliant hue; and the facade of Washington College would more closely resemble Paris or Biarritz than a place of refined education.

Despite these premonitions, I recognize that young ladies are possessors of pulchritude and other highly desirable qualities appreciated by virile manhood; I am forced to admit there would be some convenience in rubbing elbows with Mary and Jean; but which of these quantities might

GLEANINGS

By
Virginia L. Agee

* * * *

The world affair that has been causing so much disturbance among the nations and the population of the nations, is the Chinese - Japanese war. It is not likely that this conflict will directly hurt anyone and yet there is stirring and gnashing of teeth, not been heard since the like of which has before the great World War.

Let's go into the subject a bit further and examine this war and the causes, etc.

Japan is a small kingdom—a most cultured and progressive one—but small nevertheless. During the past five years her population has greatly increased, and it is a question as to where this increase is to go—since Japan is so small. A wealthy nation, a slever nation, a cultured nation.

China, the oldest civilization in the world, is vast in its territories. Its population exceeds that of any other nation of the world. It too, is cultured—but not as suavely as is Japan; her people, speaking of the mass, are illiterate, poor, void of any comforts and seemingly, any desire for them.

There has been conflict between China and Japan before. It appears that Japan has always cast a coveting eye towards the beautiful spaces in China. The conflict in 1932 was perhaps the most recent. A treaty that provided for a demilitarized zone about Shanghai was agree upon by the two nations.

It leads to this. Japan felt the pressing need for expansion of her territory, and China—rich in natural resources—was the first place hit. Japan was not formal in her declaration of war on China—nothing except sudden attack, sudden bombing of priceless cities, and sudden death to countless scores of humans. Japan should be more careful of things like that; it will defile her reputation for perfection of manners! That, in itself is inexcusable in Japan's conduct—then, to continue the policy of raining death on non-combatants. This was the main reason for the great indignation of the other nations of the world. But—we must remember—Japan declares that her policy is mainly to aid China—to help her advance to a higher level of existence.

Another thing—China may appreciate the kind efforts of Japan, but such resistance! If that was one of Japan's reasons for invading, why is she pressing her suit when China shows so definitely that she doesn't want any help—that she's perfectly contented and at ease with the world as it it—(perhaps t'would be beter to say, as it was).

Japan is taking a beating to be unequaled. Her military tactics may be more advanced and by far more clever, but that will aid her none against mass. China has her there. Millions and millions of men pouring into service as countless numbers are mowed down by guns and plans. Japan's population could be wiped out completely, and China could lose twice that number—yet, China would never know the difference. Japan will probably get the raw end of the deal, and—in our estimation—it will serve her right.

* * * *

Baron Sadoa Araki of Japan has given another reason for the Chinese-Japanese conflict, and that reason is Communism. He maintains that China, Japan, England, and the United States are running grave danger of being overcome by communistic beliefs, and that the only thing to do is to strike at the source—which, of course, is Russia.

The baron compared the communistic system to an octopus reaching its arms out to the four corners of the world and taking a grasping, strangling hold on its civilizations.

War is be the sloution—seemingly—the cruelest, the most expensive! War!!

New Projects Make Swimming Important Sport

Pool Will Open Saturday Night

Many new projects have been started in connection with swimming this year, and with the cooperation of the student body will be carried forward.

Beginners classes, without credit, will start this week on Wednesday and Friday afternoons from 4:30 to 5:00 o'clock. Advanced work including diving will be given on Monday and Thursday afternoons from 4:30 to 5:00. The pol is open every afternoon except Saturday.

The pool will be open on Saturday nights from 7:30 to 8:30 beginning in about a week. This is merely a trial, and unless the H20 Club receives the cooperation of the student body it shall be withdrawn.

The H20 Club, the honorary swimming organization at S. T. C., has decided to place swimming on the athletic point system. That is, coming out for swimming gives a student points towards her letter. Those wishing to be given points in swimming must first be voted on and receive the sanction of the H20 Club.

Practices will begin right away for the meet which will be held next quarter. In addition to diving, relays, and speed, form swimming will be stressed. In this way the beginners will have a chance. From the material secured for the meet the H20 Club expects to form an honorary varsity team.

Pro Football Moves Into Big Money

An up and coming "big business" in sports is the National Professional Football League, with its many branches and imitators. When one considers that players were paid for their services in games as far back as 40 years ago the opening statement seems ambiguous, but only recently has professionalized sport taken any sort of decisive griup upon the mind and pocketbook of the world, and now it is looming as a rival to baseball as our great National pastime.

The first professional league that was formed was the one founded by Joseph Francis Carr in 1921 and he named it the National League of Professional Football. This franchise was worth only $50 at that time and it has since grown into an organization which involves 10 games, worth around $2,000,000. Two new teams, the Cleveland Rams and Washington Redskins, have affiliated with the league this year, making for keener competition and a more general interest.

In 1936 more than 1,200,000 persons turned ou to see the 54 games played by the 8 team in the National League, a 20 per cent increase over the total for 1935. This year the total will grow as much again if the fine attendance at the first few games is any indication. Public interest is held because the professionals are nick of the nation's grid greats and they have a more open style of play with more scoring and fewer penalties and restrictions.

The average pay check for each player per game is $125 and in case he is injured his team foots his hospital bill. There is a standing fund of $50,000 which is used for any unfortunate player who is permanently injured. The average span of playing life in the professional leagues is 4 years although many men have been known to stick to it longer than that . . . page "Red" Grange, the Galloping Ghost, who played almost 10 years before he gave it up and stands now as th egreatest of them all.

The winners of the National League for 1936 were the Green Bay Packers with a fine record of 10 games won, 1 tied and 1 lost. This year, however, the undefeated Chicoga Bears are leading, with the Detroit Lions and the New York Giants in close pursuit. It is still anybody's race, with the Green Bay Packers still in there fightinng and making a great comeback after a poor start.

Locally we have the Richmond Arrows and the Richcond Rebels due to a split in the ranks of the Arrows of last year, and these teams are in league with Wash-

Ping Pong Mystery Solved

Flash, Great Ping Pong Mystery solved. Hiding place of prominent features in game revealed. Well, what do you know? And all the time it was right under our noses in our own home office. Absolutely.

That's right, girls, and all you have to do is inquire at the home office for the table tennis balls—but be sure to promise safe return and then just maybe you won't have fun.

"Now listen my children and you shall hear
The rumor that's ringing on every ear—

What is it? Well, somebody told me that table tennis was not table tennis any longer but included the entire left half of the "rec". That's all right—rolling balls must be chased and besides who's looking?

Any dreary afternoon when faces are long and spirits are low just grab a partner, a Ping Pong ball—and beat up a little game. It's a guarantee for blues and if that rumor is correct exercise plays no small part. Who said S. T. C. girls were—well pleasingly plump-er?

Founders Day Features Game With H. S. T. C.

Farmville will compete with Harrisonburg in basketball on Founders Day, March 5, in the gymnasium here.

Two other games planned for the season are with William and Mary and with Blackstone. The William and Mary game will be played on home territory, and the Blackstone one will be played there. The dates for these games have not been announced yet.

With a championship record from last year, the team anticipates as successful a season as the one last year. For the season of 1936, out of the five games played both in and out of the state the team remained undefeated. In 1935 the squad was the undefeated team of Virginia.

Miss Olive Iler is the coach of the basketball teams. She has not completed plans for the year yet, but an unusual schedule is being arranged and will be announced at a future date.

World Sports

Football season always brings forth many amazing and amusing anecdotes. This seems to be one of the best. Pacific Coast fans have been worrying Universities with threats of law suits for injuries suffered in goal-post riots. To protect itself Stanford sent two representatives, a boxer and a shot-putter, down on the field after the game to act as witnesses. Both were knocked out.

John Hopkins, in Baltimore, is rapidly earning a reputation as the university which most underemphasizes football. Students can see games for nothing, if they remember to apply for guest cards. One guest card entitles a student and all his friends to seats.

Yale, still unbeaten, has a novel conditioning program that may account for its success. Every day before practice they stage informal relay and potato races, the winner receiving a box of chocolate mints.

Knowledge for Ladies

For girls who go to football games to look at something besides the new winter hats, there is a booklet which would undoubtedly help them to appear intelligent. It is called "How to Watch a Football Game" and was written by Harry Shorter, New York University back. It takes the reader through an imaginary game, pointing why's and wherefores of strategy and technique.

Back in the early days of football, Alabama Polytechnic Institute was playing Georgia Tech. Alabama Poly punted, and the ball went almost straight up in the air, breaking all altitude records. While the twenty-two men stood in a mass waiting for it to descend, a small boy on the side lines added to the confusion by tossing his own football into the air. There was a mad scramble for both balls. A Tech man finally got one, a Poly man the other, but the Tech man had the real ball.

There doesn't seem to be anything but football played at the present judging by the radio, newspapers and magazines. The government seems to approve, too. In Stillwater, Minnesota, 415 inmates of the state prison, including men who had never heard a radio before, filed into their auditorium to hear a broadcast supplemented by a wall chart, of a game in which Minnesota's Golden Gophers galloped through Michigan 36 to 6. Uncle Sam's point seems to be to teach gun men that they can be tough men without being dishonest.

Further evidence of law and order's interest in football was given in Santa Barbara, California last week when Judge Fred T. Harsh, belying his name, sentenced Santa Barbara State's halfback, Howard Yaeger, for speeding. Glancing sharply at the young man, Judge Harsh ruled: "I'm fining you ten dollars or two touchdowns against Redlands." Next night Halfback Yaeger worked off his fine by plowing twelve yards for a touchdown in the first quarter and by pulling down a twenty-one yard pass behind the goal line in the second quarter. Final score: Santa Barbara, thirty-one; Redlands, nothing.

Shoeless Man Plays Game

Mississippi State has a quarter back on its freshman team that is either an individualist or a nonconformist. Hampton Potts is an anti-shoe ballplayer. He has played high school football for four years and is now playing for Mississippi State without shoes. We wouldn't venture to say what he's trying to prove, but there has been plagerism somewhere. Potts says he proved his point to his high school coach when he kicked off his shoes in a game and scored a winning touchdown. The same idea was used in a football picture last fall. We don't know who had the idea first, but Potts says he can punt, kick-off, and run better without shoes, and what's more he seems to be doing it.

With the hunting season well on its way, hunting dogs again come into their own. The favorite show dog of the United States, and an excellent hunter, is the little cocker spaniel. Elias Cornell Vail is considered one of the best field dog trainers in the United States. When the Spaniels in his kennels at Poughkeepsie, N. Y. are three months old, they learn their names. At twelve months their real schooling begins. First they learn how to walk on a leash. Later they are unleashed, and at the command "to heel", trot dutifully beside their trainer. At two years they know how to sit at the command "tup". Natural fetchers, cockers are used as retrievers. They are at their best from two to seven years of age. When ten, they are considered as old as a man of seventy. High time Elcova, most prized hunting spaniel in the United States is four years old. He has won five field stakes, more than any other dog of his breed

Emily Hoskins Is Assistant In Hockey

First Game Is November 18

Emily Hoskins, a freshman from Lynchburg, is the assistant hockey manager, selected to aid Harriette Vaden, manager.

Emily attended school at Hannah Moore Academy in Reisterstown, Maryland, where she played hockey for two years and earned her school letter in that sport. Because of an ankle injury she has been slowed in her practices.

For the varsity squad, which will be announced next week, two hockey games have been scheduled. On Friday, November 12, S. T. C. will meet the William and Mary Division on the Richmond field, and on Thursday, November 18, her opponent will be Westhampton at Richmond, who played Farmville the last time in 1932 here on the athletic field. That the team will not enter the hockey tournament this year at Harrisonburg, was announced recently.

With class games drawing near, Harriette Vaden and those out for hockey are still urging girls to come out in order that they may get in their seven practices making them eligible for the class games. No date for these games has been set, but there are about two weeks in which newcomers may practice.

Rainy Sundays Get S. T. C.

A cold gray world overhung with dripping clouds greets us as we, prepared for a glorious sunny day, bounce out of bed. Disgust is registered on hundreds of faces and these characteristic exclamations of disappointment abound. "It can't be raining again! Oh, what shall I do? I've planned to wear my new black velvet dress and suede shoes. Now, I'll have to wear that old brown hat; and I don't have an umbrella and I left my galoshes when I went home last week-end. Oh, roomie, you aren't going to church this morning ple-e-ase let me wear yours. But where in the world can I get an umbrella? Why does it have to run every Sunday—and especially today because Bob's going to be at church, and I did so much want to wear my new outfit! Such is life!"

After knocking on every door on the hall and waking the late sleepers, an umbrella is obtained; and after grumbling over the too-largeness of the roommies' galoshes and the unruly state of recently washed hair, all is ready and church is finally attended. Disappointment is again registered when a swift glance around discloses that "Bob" isn't there—probably on account of the rain.

The swish of raincoats and the slosh-slosh of galoshes resound down the halls. Most faces are long and mouths unsmiling and eyes have that dreaming of homeward look. Laughter and chater in the dining room isn't quite as gay as usual.

After dinner there's a pervading quietness over all. Some grab a good book and roll into a warm blanket; others roll into the blanket without the book—just to sleep, still others of a more industrious nature write letters; while lastly and also leastly some study.

A few of the bravest Romeos who have defied the weather may be seen standing or sitting in the Rotunda waiting for the luckier lasses.

Though the world may look its blackest and life the least worth living on a rainy day, remember that that is when your sunshine is needed more, so cheer someone else by smiling.

Miss Grace Moran Entertains at Tea For Visitors

Miss Grace Moran, head of the Geography department, invited friends, the faculty and the home department to her apartment in Mr. S. L. Graham's home, to meet her sister and her husband, Dr. and Mrs. E. A. Guilemin of Boston, Masschusetts and their daughter, Miss Mary Grace Guillemin.

Dr. Guillemin is a professor at Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He is in Virginia for his health. The Guillemin's will remain here around three weeks. They are touring different sections of Virginia during their stay with Miss Moran.

Miss Moran, assisted by Miss Olive Iler, served tea and sweets to her guests.

Agee Is Guest Of History Class At Luncheon

The class of Current History 350, taught by Miss Mary Peck, met at a luncheon in the tea-room on Thursday, Oct. 21. Virginia Agee, columnist of the Rotunda was the guest of the day. Current topics were discussed during the meal.

The members of the class are Kathleen Sawyer, Jacqueline Beal, Lillian Anderson, Frances Irving, Charlotte Minton, Virginia Whitehead Smith, Janie Lee Young, Edith Fitch, Lettie Bagwell, and Clara Nottingham.

bred despair.
Rebellious flesh that would not be subdued,
A vicious parent shaming still its child.
Poor anxious penitence, is quick dissolved;
Its discords quenched by meeting harmonies,
Die in the large and charitable air.
And all our rarer, better, truer self,
That sobbed religiously in yearning song,
That watched to ease the burden of the world,
Laboriously tracing what must be,
And what may get be better,—saw within
A worthier image for the sanctuary,
And shaped it forth before the multitude,
Divinely human, raising worship so
To higher reverence more mixed with love,
That better self shall live till human Time
Shall fold its eyelids, and the human sky
Be sathered like a scroll within the tomb,
Unread forever.
That is life to come,
Which martyred men have made more glorious
For us, who strive to follow.
May I reach
That purest heaven,—be to other souls
The cup of strength in some great agony,
Enkindle generous ardor, feed pure love,
Beget the smiles that save no cruelty,
Be the sweet presence of a good diffused,
And in diffusion ever more intense!
So shall I join the choir invisible,
Whose music is the gladness of the world.

Memories of Past Students Remain to Haunt School

Dusk brings a soft mist hovering over the campus. In the dim light the memories of other girls who have walked these same paths in other autumns, glow with reality. Mary Bowles, in sport clothes and little oxfords, grins a greeting to everyone as she hurries across the street to meet Miss Iler.

Virginia Baker, a black notebook clasped under one arm, takes a shortcut across the campus to a group of people gathered around a camera. Virginia Leonard runs out of the Rotunda with a letter for Cousin Tommy to mail.

Margaret Farrar, in fur coat and high heels, climbs into a snappy roadster headed for Richmond. Bonny Lane and Billy Wilkerson find a bench and are joined by Anne Johnson and Nancy Pobst.

A giggle is heard and Em Easley, amid a crowd of girls, goes into the dining room. The Sanford twins turn the corner and walk toward the publication office. Eyes gaze as Lucy Potter, tall and stately, passes by with a box of water colors in her hand.

Little Ginny Hall runs down the hill, probably to keep a date in Shannon's. Crenshaw Jones folds a natural dancing costume under her arm as she whistles to herself. Kitty Fitz waves gaily to Berry as he speeds by. Agnes Crockett and Hazel Smith are deep in discussion as they saunter toward the Rotunda. Soon, we too, shall be memories mixed in with the Alma Mater.

Dr. Allan Releases Statistics on Fraternities

(From Hampden-Sydney Tiger)

Both fraternity and non-fraternity men are praised by statistics recently assembled by Dr. Allen, with the honors about equally divided. About 75 per cent of the student body are now either fraternity men or pledges. Intellectual pursuits they rank even with or just a little below the 25 percent non-fraternity men, while they excel them in extra curricular activity.

Dr. Allan

The average I. Q. for fraternity men is just equal to that of the whole student body, though they contain both the highest and the lowest. During the past ten years, two-thirds of the first, second, and third honor graduates have been members of fraternities, but this is a little below what should be their proportionate number.

According to the personality tests, a non-frat man tends to be more of an introvert, the fraternity man an extrovert. This is born out by the fact that frat men enter twice as many activities and average almost three times as many tcivity points as non-fraternity men.

Where the non-fraternity mep excel is in cultural and literary activities. Moreover, a far larger quota of the spiritual or religious leaders of the campus belongs to the independents.

On the other side of the picture we find that fraternity men elected to O. D. K. outnumber non-fraternity men by 6 to 1. Even considering the smaller percentage of non-fraternity men, there are 3 to 1 odds against them getting in the honorary leadership fraternity.

Of the 78 graduates and alumni in Who's Who in America, 52 fraternity men are found, or two-thirds of the total. Since this represents a period in which there was a lower percentage of fraternity men, the proportion of representation is just about equal. Fraternity membership seems neither to help nor hinder the chance of gaining this coted honor.

An interesting, but unexplained point was brought to light when it was fuond that Episcopalians are the surest fraternity men of any denomination, while the non-fraternity men are usually Presbyterians. More to be expected was the fact that city and town men are more likely to join a fraternity than those from the country.

In conclusion we find that the honors have been about equally divided. In practically every field at Hampden-Sydney the work of fraternity and non-fraternity men is proportionately equal. Each has an equal chance to excel, both in and out of college. It all depends on the individual.

not be as fully appreciated at some nearby school for young ladies for a shaker of teasing and a bit of diplomacy in dismissing the chaperon?

Truly, then, no especial advantages could accrue from coeducation at Washington and Lee. And should this opprobrium be visited upon the studious, virtuous and contient gentlemen of her student body, the lustral atmosphere of campus would be stained, and her ideals would tarnish before the pestilence of Machiavellian womanhood.

VOL. XVII. FARMVILLE, VIRGINIA, WEDNESDAY, NOV. 3, 1937 No. 6

Lord Bothwell and Mary of Scotland Relive Tragedy In Dramatic Play

Miss Wheeler Announces Entire Character List

The tragic story of Mary Stuart and the Earl of Bothwell come to life as Virginia Agee and Jim Johnston take the leads in "Mary of Scotland" to be presnted on November 19 by the Dramatic Club of S. T. C. and the Jongleurs of H.-S. C.

Virginia is known to the audiences for her outstanding work in the leads of "Mary the Third" and "The Taming of the Shrew", the former in which she also played opposite Jim Johnston. Clara Nottingham, gradually working her way into the limelight in "Mary the Third", "The Taming of the Shrew" and "The Cradle Song" is Mary Beaton and the other Marys, Mary Seton, Mary Livingstone, and Mary Fleming are portrayed by Emily Hoskins, Jean Scott and Kathryn Reed, respectively.

"The good Queen Bess", Elizabeth Tudor, whose nick-name does not suit her in this play, is ably handled by Elizabeth Carroll, who gave splendid performances in "A Kiss for Cinderella", "The Cradle Song", and "The Taming of the Shrew".

Also remembered from the fall play of last year are Bill Waldrep, now taking the part of Lord Ruthven. Marshall Suther as Maitland of Guthington, and Tom Mason as James Stuart, Earl of Moray. During the summer Tom played at the Barter Theatre, in the summer resort theatre of Abingdon, where he met with favorable criticism.

Others in the cast chosen by Miss Leola Wheeler, director of "Mary of Scotland" and who are not familiar are: First Guard, Ned Douglas; Second Guard, Hunter Peak; John Knox, Harry Byrd; Cheteland, Matthew Lacy; Lord Burghley, Alex Allison; Lord Dernley, Bob Engle; David Rizzio, Lawrence Wood; Lord Huntley, Joe Parker.

Lord Morton is Fred Reed; Lord Throgmorton, Bill Gibson; Lord Douglas, John Husted; Young Ruthven, Jack McClellan, and Duc de Chatelherault will be Fred Reed.

The play, "Mary of Scotland," was written by Maxwell Anderson and has run many successful seasons starring Helen Hayes and Philip Merrivale. On the screen, Katherine Hepburn and Frederic March took the immortal leads.

Helen MacIlwain Head of Y. W. C. A. FreshmanCommission

The recently elected officers for the Freshman Commission are: Helen MacIlwain, president; Norma Pamplin, secretary; and Frances Ellett, treasurer.

Helen is from Petersburg, Norma from Clifton Forge, and Frances is from Roanoke. All three of these girls were prominent in their respective high schools.

The Freshman Commission is a part of the Y. W. C. A., and one of its main purposes is to prepare girls for future offices in the Y. W. C. A. Some of the duties of the girls on the Commission are: the hanging of the greens at Christmas, being in charge of prayers, and delivering Christmas and Thanksgiving baskets to some of the poor colored families who live near.

Alumnae Give Fashion Show

A fashion show, under the auspices of the Farmville Alumnae Association, was presented by the Dorothy May Shop, last Wednesday evening in the large auditorium.

Miss Jane Royall described the frocks after introducing Miss Yarm, the new manager of the Dorothy May, who announced that the Shop was displaying not only the dresses and coats, but hats and accessories as well.

The show was divided into parts—sport and street clothes, and those suitable for dinner and evening, while the modeling was done by S. T. C. girls.

The models and the styles they displayed in the first half were Norma Johnson modeling a golf outfit consisting of a rust knitted cashmere suit set off by a multi-colored Balivian tucker, and a red and gray tennis dress with a Gone With the Wind cap in corresponding red; Billie Lewis, in a navy jacket with plaid skirt and scarf for football; Eugenia Jolly wearing a spectator's coat of large bright plaid; Elizabeth Butler displaying a short-sleeved brown, all-round dress for Fall with a new-style, square, hand-bag to match, and a beige wool coat which strikes up a new color for fall and winter, this year; Elsie Dodd in a green street outfit with black accessories, and a green fitted coat with the new, rolled collar.

Jennie Belle Gilliam wearing a rust suit with a yellow sweater to complete the autumn color scheme, and a black, fitted suit for town wear, while Charlotte Minton modeled a dark green "dressier" frock which could be worn for street wear or afternoon tea, and a three piece beige suit with a brown velveteen blouse, and Lula Windham showed the new lengths in fur coats in a finger-tip

Elizabeth Morris Is Chairman For Education Week

The Committee on Education Week consisting of Elizabeth Morris, chmn., E. Roberts, Nan Seward, Madeline McGlothlin, Vera Ebel, and Lois Vassar with the help of Dr. Wynne, Miss Camper and Miss Cogbill are providing an interesting program for Education Week.

Some of the more important features of the occasion will be announced by Dr. Wynne and Elizabeth Morris in chapel, Friday, November 5.

Sermons on some phase of World Peace will be delivered by the pastors of the Baptist and Methodist and Presbyterian churches in Farmville, on Sunday, November 7.

On Tuesday, November 9, Elizabeth Morris will talk on the personal qualities of a teacher, in chapel.

There will be a discussion of the Virginia Education Association three point program by the Parent Teachers Association at the Farmville elementary school at the training school building Tuesday afternoon at 3:30. Special invitation will be issued parents of children to visit the Farmville elementary school during the week.

A play dealing with the normal school, commemorating the Horace Mann Centennial will be given by Kappa Delta Pi in chapel Wednesday, November 10.

Dr. Simpkins will deliver a talk on eduestion and the Supreme Court in chapel Thursday, November 11.

Elizabeth Roberts will talk on the intellectual qualities of a good teacher and Madeline McGlothlin on choosing electives in chapel Friday, November 12.

The concluding program will be a musical program under the direction of Miss Purdom in chapel Saturday morning.

Royal Virginians Play for Cotillion On Saturday

Student Lounge Is Scene of Reception

The Cotillion Club will hold the first dance of the year in the gymnasium on Saturday night. Dancing will start at eight-thirty and last until twelve with one intermission.

The Student Building Lounge will be decorated with fall leaves and flowers. Here the receiving line will greet the guests. Those who will receive are: Dr. J. L. Jarman, president of the college, Miss Mary White Cox, Head of the Home, T. A. McCorkle, faculty adviser of the Cotillion Club, and Susan Lane, Elizabeth Harris, Ducky Davies and Carter Belle Munt, all officers of the club.

The music of the Royal Virginians will start promptly at eight-thirty. This orchestra comes from the University of Virginia under the direction of Hartwell Clarke.

During the intermission refreshments will be served in the Student Building Lounge. Mrs. Warren, Mrs. Tabb, and Mrs. Laing will assist at the punch bowl. The various sorority rooms will be open to members and guests.

A floor committee composed of the following girls will act to preserve order: Jacqueline Johnson, Madeline McGlothlin, Miriam Ficklin, Eleanor Dodson, Elizabeth Harris and Essie Millner.

Every member of the Cotillion Club has two girl bids and one boy bid to this dance. The membership of the club is limited to two hundred girls. Freshmen however have not yet been invited to the club. Thirty-one upperclassmen were recently bid to membership.

This is one of the biggest occasions of the fall, and many alumni are expected back. Every year a large number of old girls come back for Fall Cotillion.

Annual Senior Dance Will Be December 4

The annual Senior dance will be held Saturday, December 4 in the gymnasium of the State Teachers College.

The committee headed by Frances Maxey hopes to sign an orchestra soon.

The Seniors each year give a dance instead of the production. Any person may get tickets to the dance.

Madame Fleeaway Presents Ferocious Circus Animals

The barker was barking in his eloquent fashion: "Hear ye! Hear ye! You are about to witness one of the most stupendous—one of the most colossal events in the history of all circusses! Our very own Madame Fleeaway—with only a cage over her head as protection—will tame, before your very eyes, the most ferocious, the most vicious animals on this earth. Ladies and gentlemen—I present to you—Madame Fleeaway—the awful animal trainer (or should I say the trainer of awful animals?)".

From the distance, the soothing slightly nasal tones of Madame's voice reached the ears of the waiting audience. "Yew git in thar!" Onto the stage came Fleeaway—walking, beside the most feared, the most looked-up-to animal of the animal kingdom. Why, what was that, Madame? Oh, he'll even answer questions? "My deah Giraff, does Drene shampoo make Mr. Bell's hair grow east and west?" Before our very eyes, we saw that animal nod assent!

Oh, the Madame says she fears no animal. She will approach any animal from the front, eh? Watch where you're walking Madame. I've heard that some giraffs kick!

Then, wild cats became as quiet and "me-owed" as softly as a baby; the three little pigs—who we all know are as wild as March hares—were pacified and danced "ring-around the rosy" under the magic hand, our animal-trainer. The pink elephant that would usually romp and stamp, behaved like a little gentleman! All moved smoothly (baring a few timely uproars from the audience) until in stalked an unsightly skunk (Hopie Dick, they say) and the beautifully tamed animal, scampered away. We didn't blame them!

Poor Madame Fleeaway! We sympathized with you. After your noble taming, everything went up in smoke!

The barker roared again, as Madame Fleeaway stumbled off in disgust, "That—ladies and gentlemen—was our very own—Madame Fleeaway."

Gay Steiffen Is Crowned Queen Of 1937 Circus; Seniors Take Honors

Class of '38 Wins Circus Prize Third Time

Senior stunt "Add 'em for Apples" won the prize among class stunts at the annual fall Circus.

The stunt sketched the stages of popular dances which have preceded the present time, the climax being presented as the Big Apple dance, which seems the most popular dance of this year.

Honorable mention was taken by the Junior class with its parade of popular fashions. Song hits and dance specialties were high spots in the act with Army Butterworth taking a lead as an imitator of current song and dance favorites.

A take-off on the Greek story of Troy provided the idea for the Sophomore act. Clowns and comic gypsies, instead of ancient dignitaries, stormed the gymnasium walls with jokes and songs. The famous Helen was swapped for a group of highly-bedecked maids.

Cab Calloway himself inspired the Freshmen to swing high and low as they featured torch and blues singers, tap dancers, and ball room dancing. The orchestra, dressed in yellow and green, was composed of black-faced members.

This triumph marked the third in a series for the class of '38. The plantation scene with much of negro singing and dancing proved a prize-winner their sophomore year. As juniors, a chorus of beautiful girls decorated as musical notes provided a harmonious background for pantomine.

Art Fraternity Gives Bids to Four Girls

Gamma Psi has honored the following girls with election to membership: Chlotilde Jarman, Virginia Jarman, Sue Owens and Mary Louise Stoutamire.

These girls have shown outstanding ability and interest in the field of art. Following a formal initiation on Tuesday night, a reception was given in honor of the new members.

Circus Spirit

The circus committee wishes to compliment the student body on its very excellent cooperation during the planning, practice and production of the circus.

The whole student body came through beautifully. Individuals were forgotten in considering the whole group. The spirit of S. T. C. was exemplified in its very best light to the price of all concerned.

The committee who labored to bring about a good production, who built boothes, who cleaned and helped take properties to the ring all deserve praise. Those who came and spent their money also deserve the thanks of Alpha Kappa Gamma.

Virginia Baptists Hold Meeting In Farmville

The Baptist Student Union Convention of Virginia was in session at the Farmville Baptist Church, October 29-31. One hundred and sixty delegates representing fifteen colleges and universities of the state were in attendance. The keynote of the convention was "Today and Tomorrow with Christ".

Dr. J. L. Jarman gave the welcome address at the banquet on Friday night in the Sunday School Room of the Baptist Church. Hazelwood Burbank presided over the occasion as toastmistress. Following the banquet the opening session was held in the auditorium of the Baptist Church. Mr. Ranson Duke, State B. S. U. president presided.

Mr. Ben Lawton of Washington and Lee was elected president of the Union for 1938-39. Hazelwood Burbank of S. T. C. was elected second vice-president; thereby assuming the duties of promoting Christian recreation through the B. S. U.'s of the state.

The wonderfully inspiring addresses of Dr. J. O. Williams and Dr. Broadus A. Jones stirred the Union to new resolves for the coming year. Two memorable addresses were "Choosing and Following Christ" by Dr. Williams and "Marks of A Maximum Christian" by Dr. Jones.

An early Sunday morning Session was held at Longwood at seven o'clock. Mr. Ranson Duke presided. "The Master's Sons Finding Afresh the Source of Spiritual Power," was the subject for discussion.

Mr. William Hall Preston of Nashville delighted the delegates with his vocal selections. He also showed technicolor pictures of last year's Southern Baptist Assembly at Ridgecrest, North Carolina.

Sunday School classes were held at the Baptist Church.

The Convention ended after a Sunday afternoon Session. The highlight of the afternoon was an address, "Serving Today and Tomorrow with Christ" by Dr. J. O. Williams.

Delegates from the following Colleges attended the Convention: Averett, Fork Union, William and Mary, Harrisonburg, Washington and Lee, University of Virginia, V. M. I., Hargrave Military Academy, Virginia Intermont, V. P. I., Oak Hill Academy, University of Richmond, Eats Radford, and Hampden-Sydney.

Will Scott Places Witch's Hat On Queen

Gay Stieffen, of Newport News, as senior nominee was crowned queen of the annual circus Saturday night, October 30, in the college gymnasium, before a large crowd from throughout the state. She was elected over the other class nominees, Vera Ebel, junior; Mary Page Huff, sophomore; and Caralie Nelson, freshman.

The identification of the queen was kept a secret until the presentation. The theme of the coronation was centered around Hallowe'en. The queen represented a witch. Her court consisted of the other class nominees.

Gay, clothed in black witch's clothes was crowned with a witch's hat by Will Scott as ring master. Lights were cut off and illumination was furnished by a searchlight behind a large orange paper moon.

The queen was silhouetted against the moon. A chrysanthemum in the broom which she was riding furnished a corsage.

Members of the court were masked and attired in short orange ballet dresses. They carried lighted jack-o-lanterns, made of pumpkins.

Six ghosts preceded the queen and court and marched around a fire to the funeral dirge. The two leading ghosts carried a black cat jack-o-lantern and the other four carried black and orange candles. While the queen was being crowned, the ghosts remained standing on either side of the moon.

The circus is one of the biggest events of the first quarter. It is sponsored by Alpha Kappa Gamma, the leadership fraternity. Isabel Plummer had charge of the circus.

Crowell Announces Her Committees For '38 May Day

Bruce Crowell, general chairman for the 1938 May Day, has announced the following committee chairmen to aid her in the selection of the May Day theme and in the make-up of the program: Kathleen Sawyer, theme chairman, Clara Nottingham, chairman of dance composition, Will Scott, chairman of costumes, Elizabeth LeGrande, music chairman, LeNoir Hubbard, property chairman, and Norvell Montague, chairman of setting.

Mrs. Louise R. Fitzpatrick is faculty advisor for the May Day committee in the plans for the presentation of this year's May Day.

Circus Preview Is Presented In Chapel Wednesday

A preview of the Circus was presented in chapel last Wednesday morning. Each class was represented by someone who was in their stunt. The freshman had a part of their orchestra perform. Virginia Lee Pettis, who was a clown in the sophomore stunt, sang "I Can't Give You Anything But Love." A one girl fashion revue was given by Army Butterworth, and several seniors did the "Big Apple."

This little skit was followed by a pep talk, in which Madeline McGlothlin urged everyone to attend the circus.

Get Into Action Lassies and Put Best Foot Forward

All of you lassies had best begin a preparation or two for Ye Goode Olde Fall Cotillion Club Dance. 'Tis do well to put your best foot forward. After a long harrowing week, we'll all be glad to shun care and play for a while. Drag out your gayest gown and do "things" to your hair and nails. Put a smile on your face and come and trip it!

The freshmen have a huge thrill in store for them. Most of them have never been to a co-ed dance and have qualms about brazenly breaking on boys. It will take you a few minutes to catch on but after you do—you'll love it! Just think of being able to dance with whom you want to. Of course there's always the question of "Dance with my date, Freshman?"—"Why, I'd love it!" (In a negative way.)

Old girls are free to do as they please. Their chief worry is in finding someone who isn't getting too much of a rush, so that they may really do some dancing. There 'ain't no such creature," though! Seems funny to try to get stuck, doesn't it?

A few girls seem to have their worries and are growing old before their time. That's what they get for asking more than one boy. Of course, you thought the boy from home couldn't come! That just goes to prove that "You—never—can—tell." It's ill fortune if you can't make a deal with somebody to help you out. It's in situations like this that you get to know your few friends.

Saturday night is creeping up on us. 'Twill be here 'fore you know it. Get on your glad rags and come on down to the gym and swing it, gallie, swing it!

Lewis Novel Is Mysterious

Sinclair Lewis is as secretive over his new novel and play as he has been over previous productions.

What type novel has he written? Is it another "Main Street"? Will it do justice to the reputation of its author? And where is the scene of his play laid? What are the characters like? Lewis has only this to say, "It's a little early to talk about the book. It will be out in the spring. I don't care to discuss it now, because if I did some people might say I was looking for advance publicity."

All of which makes us even more eager to discover what the Nobel Prize winner for literature has just given us. Don't forget to be on the look-out both for the book and the play.

Oliver Carlson has proceeded to slander Arthur Brisbane almost as much as he has the latter's friend and employer, W. R. Hearts. Mr. Carlson has depicted his subject as an inaccurate writer, an incurable sensualist, and an ambitious and greedy man. "Brisbane, A Candid Biography", is perhaps even more interesting than "Lord of San Simeon". Both will be avoided by Mr. Hearst, for they predict death for the kind of writing which the famous publisher fosters and his equally famous editor penned.

Completely different and refreshing is Irene Baird's "John", a book of simplicity and beauty. John, companionable and trustworthy, is a philosopher extraordinary. He chooses obscurity rather than distinction. He holds always to the higher course. He exerts considerable influence over the lives of the people with whom he decided to live. The book is most unusual and it is one which will be dear to the hearts of its readers.

For other interesting books, pick up "Summer Moonshine" by one of the public's favorites, P. G. Wodehouse. Or try "Enchanter's Night Shade" by Ann Bridge or "The Art of Living" by Norman Peale. And, last but not least, for this promises to be good—"Why Men Like Us" by Louise Paine Benjamin.

Preparation For Opportunities

The experience of many older men and women will testify to the merit of the statement that "Opportunities Come Suddenly."

"I have found the world to be, as Emerson says all doors, all opportunities. Life itself is crowded with unexpected occasions and choices. It is impossible to plan for them accurately in advance. The greatest opportunities come suddenly, out of a clear sky.

When I was young, I worrried about the long future, so clouded with uncertainty, but I found in that that it was futile. So I would say now to youth: go forward with the work in hand, the plain duties and obligations immediately ahead, seek accurate knowledge, strive for the widest possible outlook on life, fear no evil, establish habits of fairness and mercy, seek to understand others through sympathy rather than hatred, waste no time over mistakes that cannot be remedied, and march onward with firm confidence that one so equipped in spirit and mind cannot fail to find gateways to labor and reward worth while and to enduring satisfaction. Such, at least, is my confession of findings in this world of almost baffling mysteries and choices."

(Dr. Chrales A. Beard, in a special statement to college men and women at the University of Chattanooga, Tenn.)

The Greyhound of Loyola College (Md.) helps us along with this verse of lament:

The moon was white,
The road was dark—
A perfect place
To stop and park.
I gave a sigh.
I gave a moan.
I cursed the fates.
I was alone!

He: "Are you fond of nuts?"
She: "Is this a proposal?"

Rotunda Reverberations

Liz Carroll

Gaiety! Bright lights! Laughter! Much glee! And the annual Circus is again a thing of the past. Even the faculty contributed their bit of talent. From all appearances Mr. Bell and Dr. Simkins were quite the gayest and most collegiate things there.

We hear that the Problem Club is in quite a dither this week. According to the members of this illustrious organization they have lots and lots of work and worrying to do. Just keep on "Hopng" girls!

Among the people we nominate to oblivion are those boistrous individuals from Podunk or some such place that created such a disturbance at the Circus . . . and to the darkest corner of hades those people who can't do their own dirty work and must hire someone else to do it for them.

One of our more amorous couples was so completely engrossed in romantic pastimes Sunday night that they were not even aware of the fact that the windows of the car in which they were sitting had been entirely soaped until after they had gotten out. For them the ghosts and goblins that prowl on Hallowe'en had absolutely no meaning.

Appropos of nothing . . and in order to fill up space . . . we quote this bit of Verse (?) . . .

"Cigarette"
"Our passion glowed
In the night
Like a cigarette
And then you let the Red coal fade.
Tomorrow night
Some other mutt
Unknowingly
Will smoke the butt."

This week-end brings fall Cotillion . . . you can always tell the signs! The Hampden-Sydney aspirants begin showering attentions on all prospects at least two weeks in advance. Then, too, young Don Juans from near by schools remember to write the letters they have been neglecting for so long . . . and even do our fair maids the honor of dropping by for a few minutes between buses and on their way through town. A certain percent of girls . . . as usual . . . get themselves involved in all kinds of difficulties by asking at least four young hopefuls to the dance and having all of them accept at the last minute. Then they have to spend a good three days scouring the school trying to find some girl who is dope enough to take one or two of them off her hands. Such is life in S. T. C.!

As for life at H.-S. C., well it's come to a pretty pass when a responsible (supposedly) member of the worthy Tiger staff gets so upset over a mere girl that he puts the paper cuts on the wrong train and delays the publication more than 12 hours!

Autumn Days Inspire Poets to Speak

Autumn days are with us yet. We have evidence of them in the trees. They are almost bare now. The leaves have nearly all fallen, and those that are not, are quickly fading into brown. The winds are colder and more bitter. They rise with greater vigor and blow with more velocity. And yet, it is not the speed of the wind that is noticeable, but the fact that it fills you with increased vitality through its intensity. Autumn's beauty drives you to think as Carmen does in—

A Vagabond Song

There's something in the autumn that is native to my blood—
Touch of manner, hint of mood;
And my heart is like a rhyme,
With the yellow and the purple and the crimson keeping time.

The scarlet of the maples can shake me like a cry
Of bugles going by.
And my lonely spirit thrills
To see the frosty asters like smoke upon the hills.

There is something in October sets the gypsy blood astir;
We must rise and follow her,
When from every hill of flame
She calls and calls each vagabond by name.

To Autumn
John Keats

Season of mists and mellow fruitfulness,
Closebosom-friend of the maturing sun;
Conspiring with him how to load and bless
With fruit the vines that round the thatch-ever run;
To bend with apples the moss'd cottage-trees,
And fill all fruit with ripeness to the core;
To swell the gourd and plump the hazel shells
With a sweet kernel; to set budding more,
And still more, later flowers for the bees,
Until they think warm days will never cease,
For summer has o'er-brimmed their clammy cells.

Who hath not seen thee oft and thy store?
Sometimes whoever seeks abroad may find
Thee sitting careless on a granary floor,
Thy hair soft-lipped by the winnowing wind;
Or on a half-reap'd furrow sound asleep,
Drows'd with the fume of poppies, while thy hook
Spares the next swath and all its twined flowers:
And sometimes like a gleaner thou dost keep

Steady thy laden head across a brook;
Or by a cider-press, with patient look,
Thou watchest the last oozing hours by hours.

Where are the songs of Spring? Ay, where are they?
Think not of them, thou hast thy music too,—
While barred clouds blow the soft-dying day,
And touch the stubble—plains with rosy hue;
Then in a wailful choir the small gnats mourn.
Among the river shallows, borne aloft
Or sinking as the light wind lives or dies;
And full-grown lambs loud bleat from hilly bourn;
Hedge-crickets sing; and now with treble soft
The red-breast whistles from a garden-croft;
And gathering swallows twitter in the skies.

Borrowed Humor

Crowd: "Hey! Sit down in front."

Assistant Manager: "Quit your kidding. I don't bend that way."

He: "Tell me, have you ever been kissed?
She: "Only once."
He: "Who kissed you?"
She: "The Marine Corps."

A girl may sing,
A girl must dance,
A girl may play croquet.
But she can't strike a match
On the seat of her pants
She just ain't built that way.

Then there's the Scot who fired the gun in the back room and told the kids Santa Claus was dead.

She has quite a large repertoire don't you think?
Yes, and that dress she has on doesn't help it any.

Hearts were made to break,
Hands were made to squeeze
Eyes were made to laugh and dance
And make men do as you please
Ears were made to burn,
Feet were made to show
Girls were made to flirt with men
But men with girls—oh! no.
Eyelids were made to droop,
And cheeks were made to blush
Hair was made to friz and curl,
And lips were made—oh hush.

Lady in restaurant: "Why don't you shoo your flies?"
Chef: "Well, you see it's hot today, so I though I would just let them run around barefoot.
—Puppet.

GLEANINGS

By
Virginia L. Agee

* * * *

We have been filling this column so far this year with the affairs of this great, jumbled world of ours: its worries, its disasters, its unrest and uneasiness. We have discussed politics, war, labor, and John L. Lewis freely. Sometimes we have wondered if there are other things going on besides bloodshed, distrust, and hard feelings. Shall we turn from these situations just this week and think of more pleasant things—things nearer our hearts?

The Dionne Babies: its been a long time since they were born: remember how every heart went out to that little Canadian farm when the first reports of quintuplets came out? They've grown so, by this time, they are four years old and almost ready for school. They capture the hearts of everyone—young and old—with their baby chatter; their dark hair and eyes; their extreme mischievousness! We must not forget them—they are a definite triumph for medical science.

Hallowe'en: when one reaches college age—and even high school age, the spirit of Hallowe'en slowly drops and leaves us little by little. Already—as young as we are—we can say, "Back when I was ten or twelve—". We were definitely a scourge to the neighborhood; we were even more definitely exiled by the matrons who could not understand the hearts of children—their love for fun—even if it did mean destruction along certain lines.

How our spirits soared sky-high when we donned horrible costumes and masks that ran close competition with the face of a gargoyle—how we delighted in hiding behind bushes to jump out and scare innocent passers-by, and, perhaps a smaller playmate or two. How we giggled when we stuck pins in doorbells, then scampered away as fast as our fat legs could allow, and soaping windows (always careful of course, to steer away from our own homes)—removing summer porch furniture and hiding it in the shrubbery, hanging a gate or two up in trees (that was hard work, by the way). It was fun!

And the parties! Glowering, grinning jack-o-lanterns in dark corners, wicked witches riding their broom-sticks — owls with illuminated eyes and most forbidding countenances—ghosts and goblins: they made icy, delicious chills run up our backbones! Bobbing for apples and getting sopping wet—trying to nibble at apples suspended by strings and nearly breaking our necks—stuffing with pumkin pie until we almost popped. Hallowe'en—all saint's eve—it was next best to Christmas and Santa Claus!

We have grown older in age and actions—that is true! But our spirits—let's keep them youthful and understanding the pranks of youth. Even this bit of reminiscing brings back the excitement and fun of past days. If we tried to do these things now, our elders would look down their noses (figuratively speaking), sniff, and remark, "You'd think she would know better—and she in college!" It's tough on those who can't and never will be able to outgrow such love for nonsense, isn't it? Imagine what the above persons would say when we are forty and still up to pranks! In spite of all that, our motto is—Grow old in age—never grow old in spirit.—and that, we think, speaks for itself.

American bluebloods are quite perturbed about the approaching visit of the Duke and Duchess of Windsor. From all appearances, they are afraid of being somewhat slighted by the former Prince of Wales and his American bride—they raise their lorgnettes and sniff!

Pitt Ceases Special Grants To Players

Traditions of Game Reawakened

Pittsburgh, Pa. —(ACP)— The University of Pittsburgh is "putting its house in order". It has announced that it will cease giving special grants" to football players.

James Hagan, director of athletics, said that future Pitt athletics "should be conducted in accord with the best traditions of intercollegiate practice", and that the university has set up an agency to "secure employment for students with athletic ability on the same basis such help is given to other students . . ."

After 1940, when present commitments expire, Pitt will reduce the schedule of its Panthers to

Horsewomen Enjoy Fatigue

"Their legs are too long—". That's what one equestrianne said about horses. She doesn't know our horses. Our horses' legs aren't too long; they aren't too short; they're just right. That isn't the only good characteristic of those here, either. Judging from the interest that has been aroused, this is true. All those girls receiving instruction in horse-back riding are really enjoying to the nth degree the opportunity offered them —no mention of those who rest their weary bones on Sunday afternoon by riding a full sixty minutes or more.

Who is the animal trainer of our circus to say that his animals are better trained than our HORSES? At any rate, we can ride horse-back without a single kick. I wouldn't be afraid to bet my Sunday jodphurs that those circus animals would divide—the front lose the hinder portion—if the trainer were to sit on their backs. Our horses are real—no kid-ding! They're eagerly awaiting the introduction of new riders and rearing to go—Ride 'em girls!

Athletics Are Often Subsidized Now

Washington, D. C. — Hidden away in a voluminous report of the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools is a new note on an old subject of perennial interest to colleges: subsidizing of college athletes.

A special committee of the association investigated the problem of recruiting proselyting and subsidzing college athletes. The report says that these practices are "more prevalent today than ever before."

Women Golf Stars Show Benefits Of Expert Help

Golf instruction as earnest as the coaching given varsity football teams, has developed a standard of women's golf now close to men's par.

A number of the foremost women golf players are daughters of golf professionals. Among these are Marion Miley, daughter of Fred Miley, Cincinnati professional; Mrs. Marion Turpie, daughter of George Turpie of New Orleans, and Miss Barbara Ranson, daughter of Ralph Ranson, Stockton, Calif., municipal professional. The Women's National Champion, Mrs. Estelle Lawson Page, who was medalist at Canoe Brook in 1936 and at Memphis in 1937 is the wife of a member of the Physical Education department at the University of North Carolina and he gave Mrs. Page the general idea of what timing, power and such, mean to an athlete in any sport.

Mrs. Ella Mae Williams Cutler of Chicago, who did not enter the women's national, is another professional's daughter who is a first class player.

Babe Didrickson, professional golfer and thus unable to play in the national amateur, studied for six weeks this summer with Tommy Armour in Chicago in order to perfect her game and properly apply her tremendous power. Her improvement is remarkable and she will continue to study with Armour at every opportunity.

Mrs. W. D. Goss of New Jersey and Miss Betsy McLeod of Buffalo were among the competitors at the women's national who had their home club prefssionals, W. L. Minor and Frank Murchie, on hand to help them out in case the swing got out of the groove. There were others.

mapped out in order that this year's queen, her maid of honor and the court may be selected early enough to be pictured in the annual this year. This is an occurrence that has never happened before. It is expected that the election will be held early in December.

The theme for May Day will be announced at an early date.

Football, all important this time of year, is still full of surprises. One little known fact in relation to the kick off was uncovered week before last when American University played William and Mary. It concerned the eligibility of the kicking team to recover the kick off. Since every man on the kicking team, with the exception of the man holding the ball, is back of the ball at the kick off, ten men are eligible to receive it.

Welch Is Exception

Few coaches are daring enough to teach their players to recover except in cases where the opposition fumbles. An exception is Gus Welch, the American University coach. Welch, always looking to the spectacular, surprising and colorful, instructed his team to try it on the opening kick off. They lined up in orthodox fashion with a kicker poised and a man holding the ball in the center of the field on the forty yard line. At the signal the ball, instead of being kicked, was passed to another American University player standing off to the side. This man in turn attempted to drop kick. The rule specifies that the ball may be put into play by a place kick or a drop kick. The ruse, of course, was to draw William and Mary off to one side so the drop kicker could boot the ball into the clear where an American University player could recover. The stage was set perfectly for a neatly executed trick play. There was only one hitch. The drop kicker became excited, got off a poor kick and the ball went off a straight line into the air and William and Mary recovered. Officials who worked the game said American, had the drop kick been good, could have recovered legally.

Wampo Is Mascot

Speaking of William and Mary, have you met Wampo? The name sounds like a new nerve tonic, but it most certainly is not. It is the name of the William and Mary Indians' new mascot, and Wampo is quite proud of his new and honored position. Wampo is a pinto pony, one of those the cowboys of the great west ride. He originated in Arizona, but how he found his way to William and Mary is a matter of doubt. Anyway, he has been adopted by the Indians and the William and Mary students. His name was selected in a contest conducted by the Top Hat, the school's student publication. The winner, Miss Beverly Boone, chose the name Wampo because the first three letters stand for William and Mary and the last two are first two letters of pony. Wampo's caretakers are a couple of male students, Tim Hanson and Jimmy Keillor. Whenever the Indians score, these two lads, attired in full redskin regalia, mount Wampo and dash down the side lines emitting war whoops. It is a most popular question as to whether or not Wampo really brings luck or whether the war whoops frighten the opponents into losing. At any rate ever since Wampo's arrival William and Mary has had a winning streak.

Intersectional Football

Early in October, thirty-seven Ohio State University students accompanied by coaches and trainers, left Columbus, Ohio for Los Angeles to play an intersectional football game against the University of Southern California. On October the ninth the team lost to U. S. C. by one point, thirteen to twelve. Next day it started back 2,500 miles to Columbus. All told it spent eight days and $11,000 for two hours of football. The intersectional game, the most spectacular manifestation of modern football is generally played for publicity. Such games satisfy some intersectional curiosity but in collegiate rivalry they make roughly as much sense as would a war between such disparate countries as Poland and Paraguay. The longest football trek this season will be made by Stanford and St. Mary's who will cross the United States to meet Columbia and Fordham. Later Stanford will sail to Honolulu to play the University of Hawaii.

Petersburg Shines

Last Saturday might well have been termed Petersburg Day in the Richmond Stadium when Duke met and defeated Washington and Lee. Among the most outstanding players in the game were four Petersburg boys who were teammates in high school. On Duke's team were Eric Tipton and Harwood Smith. Will Rogers and Dick Boisseau represented Washington and Lee. Smith, called Silver was an outstanding player from the first, but has worked his way into top place at Duke. He was beseiged by autograph hunters after Saturday's game.

Petersburg was well represented at the game and the home town bunch probably had a hard time trying to decide which team to root for. Those four old teammates must have had a queer feeling as they faced each other in the line.

Hockey Team Plays W. & M. In Richmond

Class Teams Need Practices

The Farmville-William and Mary hockey game will be played at 3:30 November 12 in Richmond, and the contest with Westhampton will start at 4:20 on Thursday, November 18, in Richmond.

Girls wanting to play in the inter-class games are to begin their required seven practices immediately. In order that girls who began practices late may arrange these practices, there will be double practice time for several days.

As yet the date for class games has not been set.

The varsity hockey team is being chosen now by Miss Olive Iler, coach and Harriette Vaden, manager. The team will be announced just before the trip to play William and Mary.

Richmond Is Convention Scene For Educators

Legislation Sought To Come Before Assembly

A highlight of the annual convention of the Virginia Education Association's convention in Richmond Nov. 24-26 will be discussion of the legislative program to be presented to the 1938 general assembly. The association and the State Board of Education have approved a three-point legislative program, including: (1) a minimum school term of nine months with a minimum average salary for teachers of not less than $720 per school year; (2) an actuarially sound retirement law for the teachers; and (3) textbooks furnished at the expense of the state to all pupils attending the public schools of the state.

Among speakers at the convention will be: Governor-elect James H. Price; former Governor E. Lee Trinkle of Roanoke, chairman of the state education board; Douglas Malloch of Chicago, poet and commentator; Dr. A. J. Stoddard, superintendent of Denver, Colo., schools; Dean D. W. Daniel of Clemson College; Dr. L. Thomas Hopkins of Columbia University, and Dr. Sidney B. Hall, state superintendent of public instruction.

Sarah Button Greets Guests Who Attend Alpha Phi Sigma Tea

Alpha Phi Sigma, honorary society for scholarship, held a tea last Thursday afternoon from four to six o'clock in the Student Building Lounge.

First and second honor graduates of their respective high schools have recently been bid to the novice degree of Alpha Phi Sigma. These girls were guests at the tea and were escorted by old members.

Sarah Button, president of the society, greeted the guests. A number of faculty members were also present. Ruth Curtis Robeson entertained with music at the piano.

Tea, cakes, mints and nuts were served.

De-Ho-Ec Club Entertains At Longwood

The Home Economics club entertained the Freshmen Home Economics Majors with a picnic at Longwood, Friday, October the twenty-ninth.

Everyone went trucking through the woods to get sticks with which to cook the hot dogs.

Delicious hot dogs, pickles, and coco colas were served. Mr. French the Freshman classman, and Miss Jeter, an instructor in Home Economics, were present.

Tired but happy and well-fed, everyone returned to S. T. C. as dark began descending.

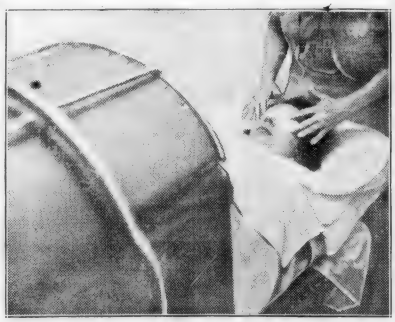
length gray squirrel over a royal blue afternoon dress.

"Different" dresses for "different" occasions were a three-piece brown suit, handy for automobile trips, a shopping dress in green with black astrakkan fur on the collar, and buttons and quilting down the front, set off by the newest of high crown hats, a black crepe afternoon dress with a zipper down the back, and brilliants on the shoulders, a silk suit with paisley jacket and black skirt, hat, and shoes, and a black afternoon frock with a full strip of silver lame in front.

In the display of evening and dinner clothes, Jane Baldwin modeled a cock-tail gown of black, featuring pockets of small, gold metals, elbow length sleeves and the new slit hem, a dull green, velvet dinner dress with bolero jacket and corded sleeves, set off by gold accessories, and a wine velvet gown with gold lame girdle, and a floor-length cloak of the same material.

Mary Harvey featured a blue and silver gown, outstanding because of its very simplicity and grace, with a corresponding wrap of blue velvet, and a black velvet cape with stand-up collar, and a white satin dress with gardenias for the hair and shoulder.



Susan Lane wore a simple, black velvet gown with a huge bow in back, while Charlotte Minton displayed an old rose taffeta with a raised hem in front disclosing a petticoat with several inches of beruffled taffeta.

Eugenia Jolly appeared in a white dinner dress with a bolero jacket trimmed in gold sequins, and a black satin with a brilliant girdle, suggestive of Mexican or Spanish.

The climax of the evening came in the form of a bridal gown of white satin, modeled by Jane Baldwin. Its outstanding features were a shirred lace cap and yoke with a tiny rolled collar, a chin-length tulle veil, tiny buttons from back of neck to waist, a satin train and long tulle veil.

Miss Royall named the features in this year's fashions as different shades of suede in bags and accessories for everyday wear, and flowers, veils, brilliants and sequins for evening.

Tired eyes are soothed during relaxation treatments in metropolitan beauty salons. The beauty-conscious woman can take advantage of the same preparations and methods in her own home.

Look Out for Your Eyes; They Will Lookout for You

By Helena Rubinstein

Lovely eyes have always been woman's most devastating feature. And this season clear sparkling eyes are more than ever important to complement the glamour and glitter of the 20th Century Fashions.

It is around the eyes that lines of fatigue are first apparent. The skin in this area is incredibly soft and fine. Here there are fewer oil glands, a lesser supply of nourishing oils. The skin here too, is constantly active and loses its elasticity earlier; unless given tender care, lines begin to gather.

The clever woman today includes four simple corrective and preventive rules for care of the eyes in her daily good looks program: Cleansing, lubrication, exercise and rest.

First, a new eye bath, attractively bottled has its own sanitary white eyecup fitted snugly over the top of the bottle. It rinses out the day's dust, soothes eyes which have been exposed to wind and sun and helps prevent that unpleasant bloodshot look. Used at night, in the morning, during the day if needed, it is tonic in effect and definitely beneficial.

Second, a rich, special eye-cream or eye tissue oil around the eyes left on all night and a little re-applied in the morning for protection.

Third, a few simple exercises practised faithfully every day to help strengthen and beautify the eyes. This is important because eyes are composed of nerves and muscles just as are other parts of the body. Exercise them daily and note how eagerly they respond. But remember, rest periods are important too.

When tired eyes are cleansed and soothed with a good eye bath, when the overworked nerves and muscles are rested and cared for, the sensitive skin around them nourished and protected by fine oils, they will no longer cause you to squint and frown,—the fragile skin underneath will not crease into tired lines but will remain smooth and firm—the eyes themselves will appear clearer, brighter, larger, youthified as by magic.

If you want to know about the new eye bath and care of the eyes, or would like a copy of the special exercises, write me in care of this paper.

Co-Eds Tear Mere Men To Shreds in Many Ways

When coeds at the University of Washington are through renovating the manners of the masculine contingency on the campus, there won't be a man who will dare to keep a girl taking on the telephone more than five minutes when she should be studying.

The coeds are being subtle about the thing though. "It Is Done", new 1937 edition of the campus etiquette book, is going to be a part of every man's library if coed sales-girls have anything to say about it.

Among the un-Emily Postian things Joe College will have called to his attention is the habit of monopolizing the sorority's only davenport, breaking blind dates and letting frail coeds open heavy campus doors all by themselves.

The latest in campus organizations is an exclusive little club of Women's College, University of Rochester. Twelve girls are members of the "My Love and I Are Far Apart Club" and pine for boy-friends at some distant place—Harvard, Princeton or just "back home."

Members wear yellow ribbons around their necks to identify their affiliations. At meetings the girls discuss "heart problems" and find sympathetic listeners when they talk about their boy-friends.

Pet peeves of coeds at Duquesne University:

"My pet peeve as far as boys are concerned are those who flash a quarter and expect your eyes to glitter."

"The one thing that makes me see red is the boy who is suffering from over-expansion of the head."

"Imagine the fellow who goes off into a spiel such as 'Your eyes are like starss, your lips like rubies, your teeth like pearls.' Oh, joy! Oh bliss! And all the while the girl is thinking, 'Oh, nuts!'"

"The boy who does all the formulating of our plans."

eight games. These schedules will include none but major teams because, according to Hagan, "a football game is no longer a football game when teams as powerful as ours can run roughshod over teams of schools which under normal conditions do not attract an abundance of football material."

"If it (cessation of special grants) means weakening our teams, then they will have to be weaker and there will be no criticism of our coaches as a result of defeats that may come our way," Hagan said.

It has been understood that Pitt intends to bring its schedule into eastern territory almost exclusively.

Included in the rules of the new policy is one that no coach will be permitted to initiate a contract with any athlete or attend any game with the idea of "scouting for athletes."

Circus Fails In Attempt To Prevent Usual Outings

Richmond Proves Interesting To Many

Neither clowns, merry - go - rounds, pop-corn, dancing, fortune tellers, nor even the world renowned Bell-Simkins side-show could convince many that the circus was THE main attraction for the week-end. Nearly 200 girls sought amusement elsewhere.

Frances Dickinson attended the dances at the University of Richmond. Prince Smith and Marjorie Wicks also went to Richmond. They attended the Duke-W. & L. football game. Others going to Richmond were Sara Shields, Mary Sullenberger, Anna Belle Wescott, Nancy Woodward, Sudie Dunton, Ernestine Meacham, Margaret Black, Bobbie M. Owen, Alice Nelson and Anne Ellis.

Jac Johnson and Frances Maxey just had a "marvelous" time at the V. P. I. dances.

Ruth Winstead and Lula Windham ansnwered the call to Annapolis.

Perrye Smith visited Nan Armistead at her home in South Hill.

Carter Belle Munt, Fred Williams! Robert Wheeler, Tizzie Rawlings, Emily Hoskins and Bill Stone went to Lynchburg.

Marguerite Costello spent the week-end with Martha Seitz at R. M. W. C.

Pat Whitlock, Nancye Pierpont, Sydney Yonce, Dot and Geraldine Hatcher went to Salem.

Evelyn Krenning and Alice Moyer visited in the home of Martha Grainger.

Others and their destinations were Jo Quinn, Charlotte Doggett, Hilton Village; Harriette Vaden, Williamsburg; Katherine Moomaw, Luella LaFon, Roanoke; Isabel Parr, Katherine Harrison, Katherine Gray, Sadie Haskins, Gloucester; Virginia Vose, Eleanor Dodson, Norfolk.

Those girls going home were Ruth Curtis Robeson, Janelle Shelor, Frances Pulley, Marguerite Snell, Patsy Fletcher, Virginia Allen, Jean Terrell, Lois Bryant, and Beverly Baptist.

What is the strange attraction in a Blackstone dentist's office which sends Virginia Read Turner running home to the dentist every week-end.

"Lib" Harris hasn't had mumps as a result of her week-end visit to Culpeper—yet. Georgie Stringfellow, Virginia Kite, and Helen Jeffries went to Culpeper, also.

Alumni visiting here for the week-end included Dot Eubank, Alma Garlick, Bonnie Powell, Martha Gwathney, Elizabeth Vassar, Virginia Leonard Campbell, Martha Gwyn Davis, Mrs. Hazel Clarke, Mrs. Emily Guy Smith, Mrs. Nellie Pierpont Goodwin, Mrs. Annie Leigh Bailey Merryman, Cassie Coleman and Evelyn Howell.

Sigma Is Inspected

Miss Ida Belle Dowdell, National Inspector for the Sigma Sigma Sigma Sorority visited here this week-end, and was honored by the local chapter at a tea on Sunday afternoon, October 31.

Model meetings were planned for her approval by Jennie Belle Gilliam, president. This chapter is inspected every third year by a national inspector.

Kathleen Sawyer Announces Theme For May Day

Elizabethan Times Will Be Used

Kathleen Sawyer, theme chairman, has announced that the May Day for 1938 will be characteristic of the May Day festival in Englannd during the sixteenth century. This is in accordance with the school custom of presenting an old English program every four years.

Queen Elizabeth, with all the pomp and splendor of the Tudors, will reign again, in the dell at Longwood. Having journey to the village green, the beloved sovereign will participate in the celebration of her people. All, from the highest to the lowest, will pay homage to the queen.

Noble will join with peasant in the merry-making. Robin Hood, bold hero of the English folk, will bring forth his band. Little John, Friar Tuck, and the entire outlaw group, will bow and swing to the rhythm of their woodland tunes.

Demure milk-maids, their pails shining, will step to rustic airs. Morris dancers, bedecked with multi-colored scarves, will romp about like mad-men. A jester will caper about, tumbling and mimicking, acting the fool that he is. There will be contests—a Cudgel bout, a tug-of-war, a battle of hobby-horses, archery. There will be folk dances, a sword dance, and that oldest dance of May Day: the May Pole dance.

The entire program will be in keeping with the spirit of the period which it represents. Authentic tunes will be used in the accompaniment to the dances.

The costumes will follow the lines fashionable at this time. The lords and ladies will be attired in the rich, heavy fabrics of the day. Queen Elizabeth, of course, will be resplendent in her court wardrobe.

In every respect, May Day promises to be unusually elaborate and spectacular.

In every respect, May Day promises to be unusually elaborate and spectacular.

The queen will naturally be the most outstanding person of the celebration. Mention is made, therefore, that the student selected for the honor should be representative of the standards for which the college stands; cooperative and dependable; stately and graceful; and a member of the senior class.

Election of the queen and her court (comprised of her ladies-in-waiting) will be held before Thanksgiving. The lords will be chosen by the May Day committee.

Negro Education Is Radio Program Plan

To focus nation-wide attention on major problems affecting the education of Negroes, the Office of Education, Department of the Interior, will sponsor the eighth annual radio program on education of Negroes, Wednesday, November 10, it was announced today by Dr. John W. Studebaker, Commissioner of Education.

A contribution of American Education Week, the program to be broadcast over a coast-to-coast network of the National Broadcasting Company, from 2 to 2:30 p. m., Eastern Standard Time, will include an address by Dr. J. C. Wright, Assistant Commissioner for Vocational Education of the Office of Education, music by students of Howard University, a talk by President M. F. Whittaker, of the Conference of Presidents of Negro Land Grant Colleges, and remarks by Dr. Ambrose Caliver, Office of Education, specialist in the education of Negroes, who will act as master of ceremonies.

New Method of Teacher-Training Instituted at S. T. C.

The new plan of teacher-training, having the student observe a graduate teacher, has as its aim to bring about a more consolidated form of this town's schools and to accomplish more nearly the reason of the school's being.

Mr. Holton, professor of Education, has said, "The principal result of this form of teacher-training should be to give the town of Farmville and the State Teachers' College a much improved school situation that will provide a full realization of the aims of education."

There is only a minor difference in the final analysis of this plan as far as the student teaching is concerned. It is considered the logical step in teacher-training of this section of the country.

Cotillion Club Holds Dance

The annual fall dance sponsored by the Cotillion Club was held last Saturday night in the gymnasium. Approximately one thousand dancers were on the floor.

Guests were greeted in the Student Building Lounge by a receiving line composed of Miss Mary White Cox, Head of the Home; Dr. J. L. Jarman, President of the College; Mr. T. A. McCorkle, faculty adviser of the Club, and the officers of the Club: Susan Lane, president; Carter Belle Munt, leader; Lib Harris, business manager; Ducky Davies, secretary-treasurer.

Hartwell Clarke and his Royal Virginians from the University of Virginia furnished the music for dancing from nine until twelve. Many alumnae and out of town guests were present.

The Student Building Lounge was decorated with fall leaves and flowers. During intermission, punch was served in the Lounge. The various sorority chapter rooms were open to members and guests.

Decorations in the gymnasium were furnished by Gamma Psi, honorary art society. They carried out a fall color scheme. Large colored leaves covered the walls of the gym.

Beorc Eh Thorn Sponsors Creative Writing Contest

Beorc Eh Thorn, English honor society announces that it is going to give three prizes for literary work this year. One prize is for the best essay, one for the best short story, and one for the best poem. These articles are to appear in the Farmville Quarterly Review during the year.

It is the wish of the honor society to encourage better writing from the students. The work from the students to achieve the honor of appearing in the Quarterly Review must be of the best quality.

Tryouts Present Plays at Meeting Of Dramatic Club

Two apprentice plays were given at the Dramatic Club meeting, Wednesday, November 3.

The first play, "The Flattering Word" was coached by Alpha Lee Garnett. The cast was: Dr. Wrigley, Helen Seymore; Mrs. Wrigley, Beatrice Bland; Lena, Bill Stone; Mrs. Zooker, Marion Worsham; Mr. Tish, Jamie Lee Peake.

The cast of "Joint Owners in Spain" was as follows: Mrs. Mitchell, Agnes Pickral; Miss Dyer, Hope Dickinson; Miss Blair, Margaret Tucker; Mrs. Fullerton, Marjorie Holt. This play was coached by Elizabeth George Wilson.

Busy Noises Surround Play

Places! Lights! Curtains! and once again the Fall Play is in full swing. Now that the time is drawing near, eagerness and speculation as to the outcome are riding high. For weeks, Miss Wheeler and the cast have been working several hours each day, while the various committees have been contributing more than their share of time.

We've all been wondering about that suspicious looking bench in White House kitchen—someone even ventured that it "looked like Mary of Scotland", and it seems as though the curtains in the auditorium have been drawn for weeks. In classroom and on campus, we catch glimpses "behind the scenes" as a carpenter peers around the door during chapel, a member of the property committee makes a frantic plea for big rings—you know, Big rings—like those worn by Mary and Katherine and Elizabeth and all of those great ladies, or one of the cast is so sorry she forgot to bring her assignment to class—it's really in her room—but she just had something else on her mind, and a member of the Dramatic Club wails, "But Miss Wheeler, the men are plastering and we can't possibly use . . ."

. . . And so it goes, and probably will continue to go until the night of the nineteenth when a hush will fall in the audience as the lights dim and the curtain parts to reveal the glory of the old

Good Will Toward Men

"And on earth peace and good will toward men", sang the angels on the night Christ was born. Christ lived in the world of men, was killed by men and left an undying message to men "to do unto others as you would have them do unto you" and cautioned them that "they should love one another."

With Christ's death a new doctrine became the cherished possession of thinking men. During the Dark Ages men forgot. During the Crusades they misinterpreted. Time and again they have ignored his gift, have been ungrateful to One who would save mankind. There have been "wars and rumors of wars" since His death. Men have died and been forgotten. Civilizations have been up because of belligerent feelings, and crumpled because belligerents always fall in the end. Propaganda has been spread, causing nations to enter wars for absurd feelings of conscience. Towns have been destroyed. Fierce weapons of destruction have been invented. And always tears have been shed.

Now, at last, the world is ready for peace. We fought the last war to make the world safe for democracy. We made it no safer. We build navies and armies but only because the other fellow does so. We fear war. Men are too clever now. We wonder if the next war might end all.

Nineteen years ago on November 11, Wilson dreamed of ending war with the armistice. His dream fell through. Once more men have forgotten. Greedy nations are grasping eagerly for unguarded lands of weaker nations. And yet nations are ready for peace. Now as in no other time in history, we can look ahead and hope for a time when the doctrine of love will overcome hatred, when the clasp of friendship will replace the bayonet's thrust.

When this time comes, the doctrine of Christ will be a living faith, and money spent for arms can be spent spreading knowledge and happiness. Utopia? Perhaps, but as long as men believe and strive, there is hope.

George Brinton Beal Lectures and Shows Movie on Circus

George Brinton Beal will show a movie and give a lecture about the inside life of a circus Tuesday at the second lyceum of the session.

Under Mr. Beal's skillful guidance you are taken on a personally conducted tour of the biggest show on earth. From dawn to dusk through a never ending day of continuous thrills and tremendous toil, you will see the circus as circus folks see and live it.

County Schools Observe National Education Week

In observation of National Education Week, the schools of Prince Edward County are presenting programs and arranging work around an educational theme this week. Armistice Day will also be observed. Parents are invited to visit the schools during class hours this week.

The Parent-Teachers Association of the Farmville Elementary School secured Dr. Thomas Eason of the State Department of Education as their guest speaker Tuesday afternoon. He spoke on modern trends in education.

Darlington Heights has perhaps the most extensive program for the week. Their program began Sunday with the sermon "Can We Educate for Peace" by Reverend R. P. Welch, pastor of Spring Creek Baptist Church. Each afternoon at 2:15 o'clock the high school auditorium will be the scene of other programs. Among the speakers are W. S. Weaver, chairman of the Prince Edward County School Board; W. C. Sweitzer, principal of Hamilton High school; E. M. Terry, former principal of Darlington Heights High School and W. C. Fitzpatrick, mayor of Farmville.

The series of programs will close with a pageant, "Education Through Two Centuries in Prince Edward". The pageant was written by the principal of Darlington Heights High School. It consists of nine scenes from the education history of Prince Edward County.

Mrs. R. Sidney Cox, Mary Joyner's mother, is hostess to all the delegates as president of the Virginia division of the organization.

The pages will be entertained with a ball on Wednesday night. They will wear white and be in charge of delivering messages and generally assisting the committees.

Fall Rush Season Closes With the Signing of Bids

Eighty-Seven Girls Receive Ribbons

The seven educational sororities of the Pan-Hellenic Association held rushing last week. The following girls accepted bids on Friday night to the four national and three local sororities on campus:

Honorary Fraternity Holds Initiation

Alpha Phi Sigma held an initiation meeting in the little gym Oct. 27. The following girls were initiated into the apprentice degree:

Robert Wheeler, Anne Brodner, Dell Warren, Rachel Kibler, Marie Allen, Sarah Sibold, Nancy Goode Bland, Nancy Saville, Martha Crawley, Victoria Tanner, Marjorie Holt, Caralie Nelson, Eunice Westbrook, Martha Anne Saunders, Carolyn Ford, Evelyn Thorington, Mary Millie McCoy.

The ones innitiated into the novice degree are:

Jane Rosenberger, Hope Dickinson, Elva Kibler, Bertha Vick, Elizabeth Garrett, Elizabeth Von Gimmingen, Daphne Wilkerson, Emma Hutchinson, Sara Joyner, Susie Pearl Crocker, Anne Benton, Charlotte Davis, Mary Cecil Bynum, Virginia Howell, Coralee Gilliam and Margaret Shank.

Alpha Phi Sigma is the national honorary fraternity for scholarship; it is the only honorary society in the college to which the freshmen are eligible upon matriculation. Salutatorians and valedictorians of high schools are automatically elizible for membership; students in college who make a high scholastic record are also eligible for membership.

S. T. C. Observes Education Week With Programs In Chapel

Preachers Use Peace as Sermon Texts

Education Week is observed throughout the nation beginning November 7 through November 13. It is observed especially in this school under the guidance of Dr. Wynne and Elizabeth Morris as chairman of the committee.

In chapel Friday morning Elizabeth Morris and Dr. Wynne announced the program to be carried out during the week at S. T. C.

"The observation of Education Week began immediately after the World War," said Dr. Wynne. Not only the schools but churches thruoghout the nation are observing National Education Week.

Rev. Edgar Allen Potts of the Methodist church and Rev. A. C. Tucker of the Episcopal church cooperated in the observance of Education by using Peace and Education as the theme for their sermons on Sunday.

Elizabeth Morris, chairman of Education Week opened the week's program on Tuesday morning in chapel. She spoke on "The Personal Qualities of a Teacher." One of the significant and encouraging signs of the times in America today is that the teacher is coming into his own.

She pointed out there was never a success in teaching accounted for by scholarship or training alone, nor a failure accounted for on other grounds. The personal qualities of a teacher are of utmost importance. Elizabeth divided her talk into the following parts: Intellectual and and physical aspects and the philosophy of life in education.

She further stated, "Fairness is the main personality quality for teaching in the Intermediate and Junior High school.

Tuesday afternoon a discussion of the Virginia Education Association three point program was carried on by the Parent Teacher's Association at the Farmville Elementary School building. Dr. Eason, director of higher education in Virginia spoke to the visitors. Special invitation was issued to the patents of children to visit the Farmville Elementary School during the week.

"Let the Next Generation Be My Client" a playlet depicting the Horace Mann Centennial was given in chapel Wednesday morning. The characters were as follows: Horace Mann, Dean Saunders; Chairman, Jean McConnaughey, Superintendent of Schools, Ruth Phelps; Mrs. Brown, Kitty Jamison; Mary Judson, Vera Ebel; Mr. Dedrick, "Scottie" McAllister; Mr. and Mrs. Peters, Caroline Upshur and Nan Seward; Sammy, Florence Lee; Jimmy, Grace Allen Pittard.

Dr. Simkins will deliver a talk on education and the Supreme Court in chapel Thursday.

Elizabeth Roberts will talk on the intellectual qualities of a good teacher and Madeline McGlothlin on choosing electives in chapel Friday.

The conclusion of the program will be a musical program under the direction of Miss Preston and Mr. Strick in chapel Saturday morning.

MAY QUEEN?

Look our seniors over, and choose a real beauty for the 1938 May Queen.

What Thought Does Your Name Bring To Mind?

What's in a name? The noble Shakespeare has said "A rose by any other name would smell as sweet".

A rose might smell as sweet if it were called skunk cabbage, but if it were called such an ugly name, would not skunk cabbage soon become a lovely name, because of association? And so it is with us. Because of the association the mention of our names bring we are either broken or made.

If the mention of our names makes people think of pleasant things, people like to bring up our names, but it is sadly true that they enjoy bringing them up for unpleasant reasons just as thoroughly. It is, therefore, essential that we guard our names as precious heritages, that we avoid any suggestion of disagreeable association where our names are concerned.

We cannot, it is sad but true—exist according to the guidance of our consciences. We claim we can. We assert our freedom, and say we can do anything that looks improper so long as we ourselves know we are above reproach. That is not the case; never has been; and never will be. People judge us from what we appear to be rather than what we are. Because of this we have to watch and see what we let them believe of us. Happiness comes from our being able to live peaceably with people. Can we live happily if the mention of our names by people brings up unpleasant thoughts and associations?

Sylvia Bates Surpasses Herself

The Long Way Home far surpasses anything which Sylvia Bates has previously given us. A story of a long line of valiant women, its theme parallels that of Ellen Glasgow's Vein of Iron. In some respects, Miss Bates' novel is definitely superior to Miss Glasgow's.

Ellen Bowen Swain, heroine of the book, inherited her courage from generations of strong men and women, who knew hardship, braved disappointment, and yet lived a full and worthy life. So, with an equal degree of fortitude, Ellen meets the trials which come to her. Separatcd from the man she loved by his marriage to her sister, and, later, by his death, he seeks happiness in the quiet and content of her ancestral home, buried in the heart of New England. There love again comes into her life, but she is so unprepared for it, that she is blind to what has happened. Only after the greater part of her life has passed does Ellen find happiness. How this comes about is the climax of the book, so it isn't fair to reveal it here. Read for yourself The Long Way Home.

Harry Kroll's I Was a Share-Cropper is an autobiographical account of privation as known only by the underprivileged tiller of the soil. The book relates the constan twandering from one place to another of the share-cropper. "Maw"—mother of the author— is a "huge mountain of energy" and she is as ambitious for her children as she is energetic. Darius, the father, was a man who lacked opportunity, but never ceased striving to overcome the obstacles which he had to encounter. Harry and Soddy, the two sons, were discontented with their lot, and at least one of them did something about it. Mr. Kroll worked long and hard for an education—for an education he was determined to have. Not until after he was married, did he go to college. There he helped pay his expenses with his pen.

Mr. Kroll has told his story vividly, but simply, and with no attempt at melodrama. It is one of the finest books on the subject with which it is concerned. It is a novel that just should be read!

What, When and Wherefore Of Normal Life Revealed By Perusal of 1903 Paper

Back in 1903 when S. T. C. was a Female Normal, there was no college paper. You can imagine the excitement among the girls here when the owners and editors of the Farmville Herald allowed them to edit one issue of their paper! We came across a copy of one of those papers of 1903, and it's a scream.

A huge picture of S. F. N. S. "as it is and as it should be" covered half of the front page. There was no Annex and no Student Building. The idea of a Senior Building with suites of rooms, was unheard of. Can't you just picture the surprise of an alumna of '03 coming back for the first time and seeing the Alma Mater as it is now? According to statistics in the 1903 Herald, there had been only 400 to graduate from the school. Now, the number of graduates equals that in two years!

Another interesting article in the paper was a column, written by one of the girls, on "A Day in the School Life of a S. F. N. S. Girl". When there was mention of a study hour, the author insinuated that some of the girls used those hours for play rather than work! They, too, had "bull sessions", it seems, that lasted far into the night—sometimes until 11 o'clock! Strange as it may seem "A Day at the Normal in 1903" was not greatly different from "a day at S. T. C.", now.

Our survey of the "Normal Edition" wouldn't be complete without reference to the joke column. One of the jokes was on the border of being risque, and we can well picture a faint color rising to their cheeks as they read that joke titled "What, no petticoat?"

The editors of the 1903 college edition, who were pictured in the paper in their charming wide skirts and white middies, were and still are, justly proud of their paper, I'm sure. It's a masterpiece with a "capital M"—You'd simply love it!

Rotunda Reverberations

(With apologies to Gertrude Stein)

Last week-end was a beautiful week-end. It must have been a beautiful week-end because everybody at S. T. C. was having lots and lots of fun and there were lots and lots of people here and everybody could not have lots and lots of fun and there could not be lots and lots of people unless the week-end was beautiful. There was a dance; there must have been a dance because everybody came to S. T. C. for the dance and everybody went to the dance and I went too and everybody dashed madly about and talked about the dance and they all came for the dance, and it was very gay so there must have been a dance or everybody would not have dashed madly about, and it would not have been very gay. Hampden-Sydney boys came to the dance, not as many of them as usual, but they came to the dance. They always manage to come to the dances so they must like to dance or they must like to get to the dances; anyway there were a few of them here and there were some very cute boys at the dance but I do not think many of them were from Hampden-Sydney or they would not have been so very cute because they do not have very many cute boys at Hampden-Sydney so how could they come to the dance. A lot of old girls came back for the dance; at least they must have come back for the dance because they all went to the dance Mary Lib Slater came back for it at least she must have come for it because she was there and she was having lots and lots of fun but then she always had lots and lots of fun and she always laughed and everybody always laughed with her because she had such a contagious laugh. Martha Hamlet came for the dance too because she went to the dance and everybody was glad to see her and Virginia Baker and Sue Mallory and Mary Virginia Walker came for the dance too because they were all at the dance and everybody was glad to see them again because they were graduated last year and now they are old maid school teachers but before they were graduated they came to S. T. C. and so they came to the dance. Bruce Franz came to the dance too or maybe he came to see GeGe Doughty and Fred Williams came to the dance or maybe he came to see Carter Belle anyway they were at the dance and everybody was glad to see them. Dot Tillet and Margaret Hannah Critcher came for the dance too and they started to have a black widow reunion but how could they have one when they were the only two black widows who came back so they did not have a reunion. Lots of people said that Chi was going to have a reunion but they did not have one because they always hang up signs and if you do not believe they hang up signs you can ask Sue Owen and Jenna Jarman and they can tell you that they sometimes hang up signs over Shannons and they could not have had a reunion because they always hang up signs and they did not hang up signs. And there are several boys that go to Hampden-Sydney that want to join the S. T. C. student body and they want to be rushed by sororities and they should be rushed by sororities because they have done so much worthwhile work and they can not do this unless they join the student body and they should because they work harder than the girls at school work and they always or nearly always accomplish what they set themselves to do and this is an admirable trait in anybody and they have worked harder than anybody. And girls will listen to boys and do what they tell them to and they would become quite leaders or maybe they would just become leaders people will often say that girls are very loyal to each other but they are not loyal to each other because loyalty is not an inherent trait in girls and they are not even loyal to themselves because how can they be loyal to themselves when they are disloyal to everyone else and butter will melt in any pot and girls are out for all they can do you for and they do

Horace Mann Had Courage

What a debt every student owes to Horace Mann the founder of free public education, the man who had the courage to give up a well-paying profession and enter a new, untried field.

That was a history-making scene in the law office of Horace Mann that day in 1837 when he refused to take the bank's case in court that the cashier offered him, replying instead, that he was going to leave the law profession as well as his position as president of the newly organized Boar dof Education. No wonder Mr. Dietrick looked at him in astonishment and said it was a ridiculous plan. The idea of giving up two well-established, well-paid position to become secretary of some new fang-dangled notion that was just in its infancy! Bah! It was pure foolishness. But Mann, convinced that he could render a greater service by promoting free public schools, came back with the retort that his plan was not ridiculous, but it was inevitable!

His conviction was further strengthened by the pictured condition of the typical rural family.

Mrs. Peters spoke for all of the poor families of the country when she said that she could not afford to pay for the support of delapidated school-building when her children were not properly taught and disciplined. Her appeal to Mann that he try to get a law passed t ohelp them could not have been made at a more opportune time than in this hour of his resolve. He was then more determined than ever to get better teachers and more comfortable buildings.

Sammy's desire to go to school after Horace Mann told him that drawing would be taught in school shows the interest that each successive generation has taken in the broadening of the curriculum; how each year it is expanded to fit more adequately the needs and natural talents of the students.

Mann spoke heroic words when he said, "I have abandoned jurisprudence and betaken myself to the larger sphere of mind and morals," and time has proven the truth of Mrs. Peters' reply, "It's a great day for the whole nation."

Mr. Dietrick's retort that his bank would never be Mann's client again brought forth from Mann a declaration that has rung through the years and will ring on as long as the system of free, public education shall stand as a memorial to Horace Mann—"Let the next generation be my client."

Cotillion Tidbit

Heard in the halls before the dance: Hey, wait a minute, I just got a letter and he's coming . . . I can't decide what to wear . . . Frances has already asked him so that takes him off the list . . . Come on spend the night in our room and we'll talk . . . He doesn't know a soul so you will have to break right away . . . What the heck am I going to do! Bill is coming—and so is Jack . . . And he wanted to know what color dress I am going to wear so maybe . . . They will get here Saturday morning and what will we do with them until . . .

Saturday night finally arrives. Gosh, doesn't the gym look gorgeous . . . Come on over and meet my date . . . There is Minnie. She has cut her hair! . . . Yea, you can see the uniform shining right through there . . . But I just danced with him . . . I have met him but he probably won't remember . . . The music sounds good to me . . . How's teaching? . . . You are crazy. I just got stuck with him once . . . Where is Mr. Bell dancing? . . . Mary's veil is cute . . . It looks like old times with you circulating around . . . He is not good-looking but . . . My favorite song. . .

After the ball is over: The shortest dance ever . . . Thank heaven he seemed to have a good time anyhow . . . She'll be going to the W. & L. dances now . . . There is Charlie, and I didn't dance with him once . . . Sarah's flowers were lovely . . . I thought he was the cutest one . . . I'll be scared to put my foot near Hampden-Sydney after this . . .

GLEANINGS

This week is one which we, as college students, should make the most of. We should think deeply on its meaning, because it is National Education Week. The President of the United States has proclaimed it so, and universities, colleges—schools of all types—celebrate its meaning.

Webster defines education: the training of the mental and moral powers, either by a system of study and discipline, or by the experiences of life; the knowledge, training, or ability gained in either of these ways.

Now, we have the meaning of education and the problem of Education Week before us; let us proceed!

* * * *

Education, in itself, is a wonderful thing to have—not only for our own personal benefit, but for the progress of the nation as a whole. It is useless to go into the subject of what an education means to the individual: surely those who are in the process realize its face value—if they did not, they would not be in school. As to education benefiting the nation—statistics show that more progress has been made since education has become so universal that at any other time, and that we benefit by it.

Going deeper into the latter subject, let us take, for instance, the great science, medicine, etc. Those men who have contributed so much to the world and to the welfare of the world did it only through study and concentration and training. Then, too, the practice, research, and experimenting based upon their former education—that education based upon the knowledge already contributed to the world by former scholars, men of research, etc.

* * * *

It is most difficult to sit down and write things like this, because the subject is so wide-spread, so deep, it covers so much territory, that we find ourself overwhelmed at this vastness and depth of a word we think of often and use very frequently, and yet stap only once in a while to dig deep into its meaning. Education to the individual is so very important to us in this complex, fast developing, far-reaching world of ours. It is necessary to our stomachs and also to our mentality.

We need an education for a job in order to get money to satisfy our stomachs: we need an education to meet people—to be on an equal basis with those many people who are educated and who move around in an educated world.

We, as teacher, need education for the welfare of the future world, for with us rests the basic education of future notables—of fture America! We should make the most of education, not only to satisfy our own present needs, but in order to make the oncoming generation on a par level.

* * * *

Education! At one time it was considered most unnecessary, a luxury, today it is a necessity, a demand. Make the most of your education, put it to task, enjoy it! Remember: Greatness comes with knowing—knowing comes through learning.

Greatness is not enetirely necessary to one's frame of mind, but knowing is. Think about it, if only during this week—Education Week: let your mind travel over your future life, of days before you were born. Think of the oncoming generations and perhaps you, too, will realize how necessary education is not only to you, personally, but to the world in general!

Nineteen Players Are Chosen By Miss Iler For Hockey

Team Will Travel To Richmond Friday

The varsity hockey squad, who will travel to Richmond on Friday, November 12 to meet William and Mary Division and again on Thursday, November 18 to meet Westhampton, was announced by Miss Olive Iler, coach, Tuesday.

Those making the squad were Kathleen Bailey, Edna Bolick, Louise Bryan, Inez Chappell, Ellen Conyers, Dot Fischer, Ellen Gilliam, Jennie Belle Gilliam, Emily Hoskins, Hilda Hubbard, Chlotilde Jarman, Bernice Mann, Estelle Mann, Evelyn Mann, Helen McIlwaine, Kathryn Moomaw, Marjorie Nimmo, Ruth Sears and Harriette Vaden.

Last year Farmville had no varsity squad because the East-West Hockey Tournament was played here.

Color Rush Lifts Spirits

Every year it happens. It's as inevitable as rat caps on freshmen. It's as exciting as the first snow and it's soon. What is it? Why color rush, to be sure. Here's a tip—who are the "runners" in you rclass? Remember—"ready runner races rapidly" and that dash is right. The victor represents the class whose colors will hang apparent to every eye, adorning the illustrious columns of S. T. C.'s Rotunda—and practically every other building on campus. What class could ask better for its colors?

This is also the big day where hockey is concerned. The final gam saere played—seniors against juniors, sophomores against freshmen. Freshmen, if you win that game, it's farewell to rat caps. If not—but let's be optimists.

All right, classes, let's get some color in that spirit. We're scheduled Monday, the fifteenth, color rush and hockey game; the ties in the games will be played off the following Wednesday.

A. A. Considers Swimming Sport In Point System

The Athletic Association is considering an amendement to its constitution to include swimming in the athletic point system.

The amendment, if passed, will read as follows: Swimming shall be included in the schedule of sports. Points will be given to the individual and toward the color cup. A manager of swimming shall be appointed by the council of the Athletic Association with the approval of the adviser.

The following shall be the system of points:

1. Indivíual

a. Class squad attendance at 50 per cent of the practices for any one quarter. b. First class team 50; c. Second class team 40; d. Chaimpionship team 100; e. Runner-up team 75; f. Tie for championship 87 1-2.

3. Varsity: a. Squad (attendance at practice) 25; b. team, 50; c. Substitutes who have participated in meets 35

2. Color cup: Points toward cup shall be awarded in accordance with Article XI, Section 2.

Thirty-Four Swim Saturday Night Despite Dance

In spite of the dance, thirty-four students enjoyed the privilege of recreational swimming from 7:30 to 9:30 on last Saturday evening. "A much larger group is expected next Saturday night", states Miss Leonard, the swimming instructor. Suits will not be lent to anyone except visitors. Tank suits may be bought at the suit room.

The H20 Club and A. A. have approved the point system for swimming. In order to receive points toward her letter a girl must:

(a) attend fifty per cent of the practices for one quarter.

(b) show general interest in swimming activties—for example, water carnival, swimming meets, and class teams.

A varsity team will be chosen in the near future. Girls interested in varsity swimming should sign up now.

Beginners classes meet on Wednesday and Friday from 4:30 to 5 o'clock. Advanced classes with diving are scheduled for Monday and Thursday from 4:30 to 5 o'clock.

not care and pretty soon you do not care too. A week from Friday they are going to have a play here and it should be a good play and everybody should enjoy it. It is called Mary of Scotland and it should be good because in the movies it was good and Jimmie Johnson and Ginny Agee take the leading roles and they are very good and Jimmie Johnson will be surprised at himself when he dons his kilts and lots of other people will be surprised too and the other boys will be very surprising in their costumes and the characters are very talented at least they think they are talented and the play should be very good because they all think it will be good and there will probably be a scout from Hollywood here and he will probably give them all contracts and you can say I knew them when and they will all be good and make wonderful movie stars and you will be sorry if you do not see the play so come on out and see it!!

court in all its majesty as, once again, the actors step forth to

World Sports

On his way to a Los Angeles exhibition match against Ellsworth Vines, amateur tennis champion, Donald Budge had a narrow escape. Ten miles outside of Bakesfield, California he fell asleep at the wheel of his car. The car bumped off the road, careened across a five foot ditch, turned over three times and came to rest on the Southern Pacific Railroad tracks. Budge climbed out of the wreck with a few cuts on his face and bruises on his ribs.

In 1932 Bat Battalins abdicated his title as world's featherweight champion. Since that time there has been no undisputed holder of the title. Last week Promoter Mike Jacobs matched the two ranking featherweight contenders in an effort to produce an acknowledged champion. Peter Sarron, a twenty-nine year old Alabamian of Syrian descent was matched against Negro Henry Armstrong, twenty-four. Armstrong has a record of knockouts that has already convinced fans that he is a miniature Joe Louis. In the first five rounds Sarron and Armstrong swung hard and fast without much technique of boxing. Then Sarron's legs began to give away. In the sixth round as Sarron folded his arms over his hairy chest, Armstrong struck harder and near the end of the round let loose a long looping right to the jaw and Sarron for the first time in his twelve year career hit the canvas to stay. The most notable fact about the chaimpion, Armstrong, is the fact that he belongs to Blackface singer, Al Jolson, whose great heart is a Broadway legend, bought his contract last year for $6,000 from a gun-toting promoter named Wirt. One Shot Ross, turned him over to be managed by his friend, Eddie Meade.

Champion Armstrong is not the only Hollywood venture into sports. Middleweight Champion Freddy Steele is partly owned by Bing Crosby, who also supports a girls baseball team (the big sissie).

Sweetbriar Hockey Team Wins Match

Harrisonburg—Sweetbriar defeated Harrisonburg State Teachers College 4 to 0 Saturday in the only competitive game at opening of the annual Virginia Field Hockey Association Tournament here.

Sweetbriar scored three goals during the first few minutes of play.

One hundred and fifty-one visiting players and coaches from 11 colleges in Virginia and North Carolina are here for the tournament, but none of the other games will be considered competitive. The purpose of the tournament, officials explained, is to arouse interest in the sport and not to compete for intercollegiate honors.

Schools represented are Duke, Salem, Meredith, Westhampton, Fredericksburg Teachers, William and Mary, Williamsburg, and William and Mary Extension, Richmond; Randolph - Macon, Woman's College, Hollins, Sweetbriar, and Harrisonburg.

and is the principal stockholder in the Del Mar race track near San Diego. P.oducers Hal Roach and Jack Warner are the number one and two stockholders in the Santa Anita race track. Jimmy Durante, Jack Benny, Spencer Tracy, Barbara Stanwyck and Mrs. Zeppo Marx all own horses. Clark Gable used to own one named Beverly Hills but the less said about that the better. Ralph Bellamy and Charles Farrell own the Racquet Club at Palm Springs. Minor promoters include Johnny Weismuller who owns the paddle board concession at Catalina Island and Erroll Flynn who has the six day bicycle races.

One person out of every fifty in the United States last week bundled up too heavily, paid for a ticket, sat on a hard bench to watch twenty-two ardent young men in jerseys and leather helmets push an elliptical ball back and forth within a one hundred and twenty yard space. That's football. One game was won on its first scrimmage. Before hundreds of the 37,000 spectators had been seated Nebraka's Jack Dodd scored a "shovel" pass 65 yards against a powerful Indiana team for the games only score. Maybe that will teach the fans to come on time.

As habitual as opium dreams, visions of a fifth trip to the Rose Bowl began plaguing Alabama last week as Kentucky was defeated by a half a dozen touchdowns.

If Alabama's dreams come true, it is likely to face California on New Year's day. This seemed certain last week after California had won its seventh-in-a-row, 27-14 from U. C. L. A.

One touchdown was scored without the runner crossing the goal line. South Carolina's Jack Lyon was running free for a touch down when a Citadel rooter stepped onto the field and tackled him. Since Lyon had been clear, the referee demanded South Carolina's six points. The score: South Carolina, 21, Citadel 6.

Another football oddity has come to light. American University, a co-educational college in Washington, D. C., is training a girl to kick points after the touch down. Coach Gus Welch, famous for outlandish ideas denies this is a publicity stunt. It looks as if the women are taking over man's last masculine sport.

Color Teams Clash in Rush To Hang Banners

Class Games Will Take Place

Red and White and Green and White will clash again as the annual color rush goes into full force on Monday, November 15.

Promptly at 2 o'clock the race will begin. Colors of the winning class will be hung outside the buildings and points toward the color cup, awarded every year to the sister classes who obtain the most points, will be given. Freshmen and sophomores will compete at Student Building and Rotunda, and juniors and seniors at Senior Building.

The freshman class has elected Helen McIlwaine and Aseita Altomare to run, the sophomores, Chotilde Jarman and Essie Millner, and the seniors, Inez Chappell. Unable to decide between Army Butterworth and Louise Painter, the juniors will have a race to decide who will run.

The hockey games between the freshmen and sophomores and the juniors and seniors will be called immediately after color rush. The freshman-sophomore combat holds special interest since it determines whether the freshmen wear rat caps until Christmas or take them off at Thanksgiving.

Cheer leaders are Isabel Plummer, and Will Scott, seniors; Nancy Gray and Frances Irving, juniors; Essie Millner and Mary Page Huff, sophomores; and the newly elected Theresa Brinkley, Jane Jackson, and Carrilie Nelson.

GOLF TALK

Some sunny morning when there's a snappy breeze stirring take on your golf equipment and sling a sleezy game. Rolling green links await your restless balls, your energetic clubs, and your laughter. Don't let 'em down. Nature's your closest friend you know and she did paint those links an awfully enticing green. (I hope you don't stage the tree-tad act when you get on them!)

That's all, girls, but golf's an awful lot of fun.

Tables Turn And Girls Come Rather Than Go

Cotillion Varies Week-end

The tables turned this week-end bringing more girls into our midst than the trains, buses, etc. took away. It was the first time this year that anything like that has happened.

Carolyn Ford and Anne Camp visited friends in Blackstone Sunday.

Beverly Baptist, Dot Buckland, Ruth Bryant, Clara Pinkard, Mary Jackson, and Anne Scott, went to Richmond.

Kitty Roberts and Sis Sturgis motored to Lynchburg Sunday.

Willie T. Burge, Frances Perkins and Beulah Ettinger spent the week-end in Lawrenceville.

"Mimi" Perdue and Porter Shepherd attended the Alpha Tau Omega house party at Washington and Lee University.

Those going home were Mildred and Katherine Habel, Barbara King, Nancy Seward, Lois Vassar, Selma West, Margaret Via, David Terry, Frances Barnes, Alice Burroughs, Charlotte Davis, Erna Dickinson, Jane Fowler, Ruth Curtis Robeson, Helen Greene, and Kathrine Gray.

Girls Shriek Over Alumnae

The new girls may have been a bit mystified over the shrieks of greeting and the ensuing huddles, which were a common occurrence over the week-end. Have no fear—we are not all "tetched in the haid". It's just our own little way of showing the old girls how happy we are to have them back for a visit. They were here in swarms and buzz continuously from the time they arrived till they left.

Baker, Mary Lib and Charlotte had their heads together for a good session. It made one think of last year's Virginian. It's hard to understand how they ever stopped giggling long enough to get out such a wonderful annual.

Martha Hamlet found it very pleasant to be able to join in the hubbub without having her conscience hurt. There was a day when her main conversational topic was "Lights Out Right Away, Please." Martha Glenn and Zaida had a long chat right in the middle of the dance floor. It seems that at one time the school in which Martha Glenn teaches was a reform school! Lloyd Kelly hasn't let teaching slow her down one bit. She looked better than ever, if that is possible.

Lucy P., "Smitty" and Bernice Jones breezed around in a cloud of dust. Grace Eubank, president of the Cotillion Club in '35-'36 had everything under control. Last year's May Queen, Minnie Smith, has cut her hair and is, of course, "looking good."

There were lots of others that gave us that "old feeling" and made us realize more than ever what graduation means. By next year the freshmen will be able to understand this sentiment. There are always Cotillion Club week-ends to look forward to tho', and "auld acquaintances" blossom anew.

Pi Kaps, Mu Omegas Entertain Members

Pi Kappa Sigma sorority entertained their visiting alumnae at a breakfast in the chapter room Sunday morning. The alumnae attending were: Grace Eubank, Charlotte Rice, Mary Alice Wood, Dot Stone, Sammy Scott, Elizabeth Smith, Bernice Jones, Martha Floyd, Lucille Moseley, Bonnie Powell, Frances Gaskins, and Mrs. Mary T. Eason

Julia May Rainey, Helen Riff, Miriam Ficklin, Marguerite Blackwell, and Martha M. Hardaway were hostesses at a buffet supper given the Mu Omega on Sunday at six o'clock. Besides Miss Leola Wheeler, faculty advisor, the actives and pledges, Mr. and Mrs. James Agee and Mr Donald Morris were present.

Pledges Are Feted

The new sorority girls were entertained by their various sororities Friday night. After refreshments and songs all of the girls visited in the different chapter rooms extending their congratulations.

Ruth Phelps announced that the points for color cup are judged by the number of girls from each class on champion teams, and varsity teams, and the class winners of color rush. Student Government girls will judge the races.

Dr. Jarman has given permission that there be no classes on Monday afternoon.

Last year Green and White waved over the Student and Senior Buildings while red and white adorned the Rotunda. However, the red and white classes received enough points to get their colors for the color cup.

New Lip Accent Can Lift Good Looks To Distinction

By Helena Rubinstein

Before a store window recently throngs of people stopped to admire a beautiful girl modeling a fur coat. She was slim, blonde, exquisitely lovely. She wore a mink coat lined with a rich shade of red over a white satin gown and her gloves were red. But to me, the thing that dominated this luxurious ensemble was the lipstick she wore. It matched exactly her gloves and the lining of her coat which perfectly complimented her own vivid coloring.

Thinking about it later, I wondered. If I had met that same girl on the street or any other place, would she have seemed unusual? Can make-up make such a difference? It can and it does! Any woman can by intelligent study of her own possibilities, lift average good looks to distinction.

Take time to experiment. Learn how to model your face with make-up to create a new personality. For instance, experiment on altering your make-up when you have a new style hat. If you're wearing an off-the-face hat, remember your eyes take on greater importance than they do under the shadow of a brim. Give them new accent with a discreet touch of luminous eye shadow. Tip the eye lashes with Persian mascara. Concentrate your lipstick in the center of your mouth to complement your accented eyes and give the effect of piquancy.

If you are wearing the forward-movement, rolled-brim hat, achieve an effect of sophistication by applying rouge well concentrated, close to the eyes. Choose a smooth, lustrous lipstick in geranium, Chinese red or red raspberry and apply it a bit heavily on the upper lip, following the natural line of the lips. The jutting brim of the hat over the eyes calls for added attention for the lips.

To wear the rich autumn colors successfully, faces may require more liberal make-up. Choose the smartest rouge and lipstick shades to achieve the glamour that fashion demands. The deep, rich-red soft-as-velvet lipstick is one of the loveliest. But color is relevent and it is impossible to make positive rules for it.

If you want to choose your make-up according to your complexion, eyes, and the accent colors of your clothes, write me in care of this paper.

Group Attends Alumnae Chapter Banquet Friday As Honor Guests

Dr Jarman Speaks To Members On Loyalty

Dr. J. L. Jarman, Miss Mary White Cox, Jane Royall, and Miss Mary Nichols attended Portsmouth alumnae Chapter banquet at the Country Club in Portsmouth on Friday evening, November 5.

The Farmville guests were met by several hostesses in the home of Eleanor Dashiell. After a brief social hour and refreshments, the guests were entertained in the homes of different alumnae.

At seven o'clock, one hundred guests assembled at the Country Club. "What's the Matter With Jarman brough the guests to the beautifully decorated banquet table with the college colors—blue and white, original S. T. C. programs, place cards, flowers, and candles. The college evening blessing was sung, and the group was welcomed by Eleanor Dashiell, president. Farmville songs were sung and all guests greeted with introducing songs.

Margaret Johnston, toastmistress, introduced personalities in verse. The roll was called by cities: Norfolk, Newport News, Suffolk, Portsmouth, and then by the classes with responses by classes from 1900 through 1937. Two 1937 baby alumnae stood. Responses to songs and gracious introductions were made by Supt. and Mrs. Hunt of Portsmouth, the president of the Harrisonburg Alumnae Chapter in Portsmouth, the officers of the Portsmouth Alumnae Chapter. Miss Mary Cox, Jane Royal, and Miss Nichols, president of the Association of Alumnae of Farmville.

Dr. Jarman spoke to his girls about their loyalty and cooperation with the projects of their Alma Mater. He traced the achievements of Teachers Colleges in Virginia and commented upon the qualities of the successful teacher as sought by the educators.

As a goal for Alumnae Chapter work, scholarship funds, the Jennie Masters Tabb Memorial Loan Fund particular, were stressed.

Silent tribute was paid by all to the memory of Miss Jennie Tabb, after which the banquet was closed by the singing of Alma Mater.

Nan Seward Installs Freshmen Into Y. W. C. A.

President Presents Lighted Candles

Nan Seward, president of the Y. W. C. A., gave a very impressive talk in installing the freshmen as members of the Y. W. C. A.

"Tonight we are recognizing you as members of the Y. W. C. A. The reason for being such an organization is that it is a voluntary religious movement . . . We have religion to evaluate facts, religion to give us an insight into the real value of life."

"The Y. W. C. A. cannot work effectively unless it feels that it has the spirit of and interest of all its members. Let each of us accept the responsibility of finding and sharing the abundant life."

The ceremony was held in the large auditorium by candle light. Elizabeth Morris led the devotionals service, and everyone sang "Follow the Gleam."

The old Y. W. C. A. Council and the new Freshman Commission were seated on the front row with lighted candles, and after Nan Seward's talk they turned and lit the candles of the one's behind them. After all the candles were lit, everyone marched out and formed a circle in Joan Court while singing "Bless Be the Tie That Binds."

George B. Beale Presents Lyceum Lecture

Mr. George Brinton Beale, editor, critic, and lecturer was presented to the Student Body last Wednesday night, November 10, in the second Lyceum number of this year—a motion picture accompanied by a lecture.

"Tonight with this motion picture, Through the Back Door of the Circus, I shall take you to a new and fascinating world—the world of sawdust and spangles," stated Mr. Beale. "Incidentally there is no sawdust used in a circus, just shavings."

The history of the circus is very interesting. It originally came from India and is one of the oldest of the American institutions. In the circus business there is no "keeping up with the Joneses". The people have an excellent idea of life—they do the best they can and stick to their own business leaving others alone.

The technicolor pictures Mr. Beale described were taken at a distance of about eight feet, so they are clear pictures. The first scenes were of the trains arriving early in the morning—the circus travels in four sections on special constructed railroad flat cars which are 74 feet long.

There were pictures of the "polers" and the "sunbbers" at work unloading the cars. Then the audience was taken to the lot where the "Big top" was being erected under the direction of James Whelan, a man who for 50 years has had charge of seeing the big tent go up.

Everyone works in a circus lot—even the animals. The elephants are invaluable. "And all intelligent elephants are females", our lecturer explained.

There followed pictures of the actual circus stunts, the performers in their tents, the clowns between scenes, the animals being dressed for their acts, and hosts of other scenes.

Mr. Beale told us several interesting facts about circus terms. "Circus people are never from New York or from New Jersey; they are always 'out' of New York

Programs Given By Schools For Book Week

The pupils and teachers of the Rural Training Schools have been engaged in some very interesting undertakings during American Education Week and Book Week.

At Worsham much of the work has been influenced by the theme: Reading—the Magic Highway to Adventure. In the second grade the story of Hansel and Gretel has been told and the children have made a floor piece to illustrate the story. The witches home with candy and cookies, a gingerbread fence surrounding it; the woodman's home, the woods all help to tell the story.

A group of sixth grade children constructed a reading table, painted it, and placed on it some of the books from their grade library which they suggested to others to read. These children covered and lettered some of their new books.

The fourth grade children were most practical. They are celebrating book week by repairing books in their library. This grade is preparing to entertain the entire student body by giving a program at the weekly assembly.

The fifth grade is making a puppet show. They had read a folk tale, rewritten it in a dramatic form, painted the scenery and made the show.

The pupils of the junior and senior classes at Rice gave a program during American Education week on the theme: Education for Peace. Talks, readings and music weer the features of this program.

The Parent Teachers Association of the school at Rice are planning to have a turkey and oyster supper to raise funds for adding books to the library of the school.

John Randolph combined American Education Week and Book Week. At an assembly program participated in by every grade the interest of the pupils in the library was shown by dramatizations, readings and talks by the pupils. Mr. C. W. Dickinson, Director of School Libraries from the State Board of Education made an address.

At the conclusion of the program, a gift of one hundred new books was presented to the library by a representative of the Sigma Sigma Sigma sorority. The John Randolph School Library is the national social service project of this sorority. The sixth and seventh grades at John Randolph made interesting and attractive book posters. Each child represented a book with his poster.

Ten Girls Receive Bids to Debate Club

The following girls were recently honored by election to the Debate Club: Marie Allen, Frances Barnes, Beatrice Bland, Frances Hollaway, Virginia Howell, Caralie Nelson, Margaret Pierce, Mary Rice, Elizabeth Scales, and Margaret Tucker.

These girls will be initiated at the next meeting of the Debate Club. They were selected for membership from a number of girls trying out for the club.

Victory Ball

The management of the Hampden - Sydney German club is sponsoring a dance in the Petersburg armory on Saturday, Nov. 20, following the R.-M.—H.-S. game on that date.

Fall Play Is Great One According to Miss Wheeler

"'Mary of Scotland' is perhaps one of the greatest plays that I have produced," stated Miss Leola Wheeler in explaining what she enjoyed about producing this year's Fall Play. She went on to say that, due to the extreme beauty in the poetry of the lines, although written in a modern day by a modern playwright, it comes much nearer to the old plays of verse than do any of our up-to-date productions.

Although a play of this type is much more difficult to direct, Miss Wheeler explained that she would rather work with this kind than with a lighter, more frivolous type. In the case of the latter, the lines, repeated over and over again, become very monotonous to the director since she alone hears the play in its entirety, rehearsed again and again. The actors themselves have lapses of recreation when they are not going over their particular lines. However, there is such depth and beauty in Maxwell Anderson's lines alone, that they do not become trite and worn-out with constant repitition.

This type of dramatic play, with all its beauty, is much harder to produce than the light comedy, since it is harder for any actor—amateur or professional—to try to portray the characters of the past, for so much in the way of actions, posture and speech that would ordinarily be omitted in the life of today must be taken into consideration. The actors must become accustomed to wearing cumbersome costumes—so different from the dress of today—and they must learn how to conduct themselves and speak in the manner of the age.

For the first time in many years, costumes are being ordered from a costumer, and this, with the elaborate setting, should add to the authenticity and atmosphere of the play.

Miss Wheeler concluded by saying that although this type of play is harder work, she always experiences a greater satisfaction when it's all over, and has proven itself more than worth the extra effort.

"Hansel & Gretel" Is Presented By Major Actors

After a successful presentation of "Little Women" last year, the Clare Tree Major players for children's plays returned to give Farmville audiences "Hansel and Gretel". Three performances on Monday, November 15 drew children from schools around and in Farmville, and many S. T. C. girls attended in the afternoon.

"Hansel and Gretel" was in two acts, the first at the home of the children and the second in the woods where the old witch lived in her cookie house.

Following the fairy tale, the stepmother because of lack of food took Hansel and Gretel into the woods against their father's wishes. The squirrels ate the nuts Hansel had scattered to find his way back home, so he and Gretel walked wearily until they came to the candy house.

The witch planned to fatten the youth and make him into candy sticks as she had done the prince and princess but Gretel secured the magic wand and pushed the wicked woman into the fire. After the children made the candy sticks come back to life and after Shaggy, the friendly bear, had led the parents to them, the king asked the poor family to come to live in the palace as a token of his appreciation of Hansel's and Gretel's deed.

Several of the same actors who were here last year again appeared in this play.

Miss Ella Hiner Dies Suddenly

Miss Ella Hiner of Farmville died suddenly early Tuesday morning.

Miss Hiner was often at the school helping in the home department or assisting Mrs. Shelton in preparing banquets for the girls.

She was the sister of Miss Winnie Hiner, treasurer of the school and Miss Mary Clay Hiner, of the English department.

Students, members of the administration and faculty have expressed their deep regret over Miss Hiner's death. She will be buried in Staunton Thursday afternoon.

Miss Minnie Rice Will Attend Meet In New Orleans

Miss Minnie V. Rice, head of he Latin Department at the State Teachers College, Farmville, Virginia, will leave next Tuesday, November 23, for New Orleans, where she will speak before the Classical Association of the South on Thanksgiving Day at the Jung Hotel.

The subject of Miss Rice's talk is: "Latin of Today: An Opportunity and a Challenge." Speakers representing colleges and universities from fourteen states will attend the meeting. Miss Rice was one of the two speakers chosen from Virginia, the other being Dr. Edwin W. Bowen of Randolph-Macon College, Ashland, Virginia.

The meeting will last 3 days, including 47 talks, 18 on Thursday, 24 on Friday, and 5 on Saturday. Miss Rice will be accompanied on her trip by her nephew, Jack English, who is a graduate student in Chemistry at Johns Hopkins University.

Dr. Francis Simkins Is On Program At Association

Dr. Francis B. Simkins, associate professor of history at the Farmville State Teachers College, will appear on the program of the Southern Historical Association at their third annual meeting of that organization at Duke University on November 19. The subject of his address is "The Parliamentary Manners of An Agrarian Senator", a development from "The Life of Ben Tillman of South Carolina", which Dr. Simkins is writing.

The meeting will take place on November 18, 19, 20 at Duke University. The guests and members of the association will be given dinners by both Duke and the University of North Carolina. Miss Sarah B. Tucker of the history department at Farmville will also attend the meeting.

The Southern Historical Association is a society which has grown to about eight hundred members in the three years of its existence. It was founded for the special study of the history of the south. The official publication of the Association is "A Journal of Southern history.

Students Vote For May Queen From Four Nominees

On Tuesday morning the student body voted for the 1937 May Queen from the nominees from the senior class: Isabel Plummer, Susan Lane, Jennie Belle Gilliam, and Elizabeth Morris.

Bruce Crowell, chairman of May Day, asked the Student Body to consider carefully the girl who was nominated just before the students nominated on Friday.

The girl receiving the highest number of votes will reign as Queen Elizabeth in the Elizabethan theme planned by Kathleen Sawyer. The second highest number of votes cast will determine the maid of honor. The remaining two candidates will automatically be in the court of the queen.

On Tuesday students also nominated further for the May Court. From these nominees, thirty odd names will be selected for girls to vote on for the court in the near future.

The queen and court will be announced in the Dec. 1 issue of the Rotunda. Their names will be withheld until this paper.

Will Scott, chairman of costumes, has begun planning them. Heavy court clothes will be used by the queen and court this year. Other costumes will be lighter.

Four S. T. C. Girls Go On Mad 'Possum Hunt In Moonlight

Four well known S. T. C. girls spent last week-end in an old fashioned estate near Curdsville enjoying, from their animated accounts, an old-fashioned 'possum hunt.

Accompanied by thirteen colored men ranging in age from thirty to eighty-odd (the one at eighty were from the ablest—to say the fair damsetls), around seven hounds and a stalwart brother who agreed to be knight-errant after due persuasion.

Now 'possum hounds enjoy the distinction of being popular at only one season of the year—namely, 'possum season. At other times they break up social events, bay outrageously and all but wake up the dead.

On this particular Saturday the moon was very bright and the woods were very still—until the dogs arrived. The dogs yells and bays soon had their number doubled and even tripled. Little dogs, big dogs, good dogs, bad dogs, all joined in the fray. When they bay, the negroes can tell instantly if the object of their interest is a 'possum by the seriousness of the attack.

'Possums run to trees when the disreputable hounds take it upon themselves to pursue. Then it becomes the task of the hunter to follow the dogs and get that tree. The negroes have an uncanny sense of direction and go straight to the sound, only varying, to go around graveyards.

The hunters arrived. At three trees, shone fleshlights in their pairs of shining eyes and the old negroes jubilantly bagged three specimens, made up of three-fourths lard and one-fourth tallow according to one aged authority. Often the animals "play 'possum"—that is, pretend to be dead. "Dat's the time to watch dem teeth."

Through briars, over wobbly logs, up hill and down dale—nigh on to twelve miles the hunt went on. Gay laughter accompanied the outrageous barks of the four-legged animals.

At last the hunt was over and the tired "Dianas" arrived home and devoured a peck of apples as they roared over their adventures.

"Mary of Scotland" Will Be Given Friday Night By Joint Clubs

Pennsylvania Man Is Author Of Play

The play "Mary of Scotland", to be presented by the Dramatic Club of S. T. C. and the Jongleurs of H.-S. Friday night, was written by Maxwell Anderson.

Maxwell Anderson was born in Atlantic, Pa. He was graduated from the University of North Dakota, and taught at Leland Stanford University and later at Whittier College. He entered newspaper work as an editorial writer on the "San Francisco Bulletin", and later on the "Globe". While in this position, he wrote his first play "The White Desert" which was produced in 1923.

Since that time, Mr. Anderson has written three Pulitzer Prize winners. He has won the Critics prize twice. His most successful plays have been: "What Price Glory!", "Saturday's Children", and "Elizabeth, The Queen".

From the few years of the life of Mary Stuart, Anderson has chosen for his play, "Mary of Scotland", the six that began when Mary first set foot on her unruly land as a queen and ended when she was imprisoned in Carlisle Castle. When the play opens, Mary is only nineteen. She is pictured as a gracious, romantic, and ardently religious young girl.

In direct contrast to Mary, Elizabeth is pictured as a crafty, young, ambitious queen seeking to remove from her path the star crossed girl, who sought only to live and love, and rule as she pleased. Elizabeth is twenty-six as the play begins.

Anderson proved, for the first time in years, that a poetic drama could still be successful. In "Mary of Scotland", he has restored the English language to its high estate as an instrument of lustrous beauty.

John Mason Brown's critical comment on the play, in which Helen Hayes starred, may well sum up its worthiness. He says: "Here is not only the best historical drama that has been written by an America, but a script which brings the full flooding beauty of the English language back to a theatre in which its beauties are but seldom heard. Indeed, one of the most distinguished performances New York has seen in many a long season—is the Mary Stuart of Helen Hayes. It is something you will not want to miss, inflation or no inflation."

Strange Emblem Floats Above Rotunda Columns

Above the stately columns of the Rotunda, there floated in the breeze on Tuesday morning an emblem—the strange emblem of some strange order.

The wind played havoc with the banner, seemingly enjoying its billowy activities as much as I ever enjoyed tossing about the beloved red and white banner.

When it got there, who put it there and the reason for its existence is yet to be discovered. Students can only shake their heads and wonder.

Older students can boast of seeing it there often. To freshmen it is indeed a mystery.

High above questioning eyes, the banner waves on, proudly displaying its skull and crossbones and its odd title "Chi" Many pass beneath the banner. None fail to be curious, but the banner remains there silently in its sinister secrecy, revealing nothing.

Miss Wheeler Has Outstanding Dramatic Record

To Miss Leola Wheeler, director of dramatics, this school owes an undying debt of gratitude for the ceaseless effort and unlimited time she puts into every performance.

Sometimes Miss Wheeler may seem relentless and hard in her ceaseless demands on every department of the Dramatic Club. She is undoubtedly a hard worker. If she were not, plays would not run so smoothly when curtain calls come; if she did not insist on accuracy the splendid plays she chooses would fall far short of the good men who wrote them.

It is the opinion of most people that the great play-wrights themselves would be proud to claim Miss Wheeler's plays as examples of their work. She puts on a play with such apparent ease and finesse that the audience is scarcely aware of the actual work to be done.

Yet actual labor does go into every production. Many hands put forth the effort to bring about each play. Not only Miss Wheeler and the cast but all the departments of the club work on productions. Because this is true, because so many students are connected with the Dramatic club every student should buy a ticket and do her part to put "Mary of Scotland" across.

The best part about Dramatic Club plays is that the person who goes is the one who gains. No person has ever failed to see a good show. What could be a more delightful experience than watching Virginia Agee and Jim Johnston make love in "Mary of Scotland" with Miss Wheeler there to see that they do it right?

Some Days Contain Strange Ecstasys That Are Unexplainable

A day of rare acstasy—Ye've all known such a day—when all the world seemed to "wake up and live"—when the sun came up with a different brightness—when music filled the air. If we think with the poets, Sassoon and Brooke, we can experience the true meaning of this joy.

Everyone Sang
By Siegried Sassoon

Everyone suddenly burst out singing;
And I was filled with such delight
As prisoned birds must find in freedom
Winging wildly across the white
Orchards and dark green fields; on, on; and out of sight.

Everyone's voice was suddenly lifted,
And beauty came like the setting sun.
My heart was shaken with tears, and horror
Drifted away . . . O but everyone
Was a bird; and the song was wordless; the singing will never be done.

Day That I Have Loved
By Rupert Brooke

Tenderly, day that I have loved, I close your eyes,
And smooth your quiet brow, and fold your thin dead hands.
The grey veils of the half-light deepen; color dies,
I bear you, a light burden, to the shrouded sands.

Where lies your waiting boat, by wreaths of the sea's making
Mist-garlanded, with all grey weeds of the water crowned.
There you'll be laid, past fear of sleep or hope of waking;
And over the unmoving seas, without a sond,

Faint hands will row you outward, out beyond our sight,
Us with stretched arms and empty eyes on the far gleaming
And marble sand . . .
Beyond the shifting cold twilight,
Further than laughter goes, or tears, further than dreaming

There'll be no port, no dawn-lit islands! But the drear
Waste darkening, and, at length, flame ultimate on the deep.
Oh, the last fire—and you, unkissed, unfriended there!
Oh, the lone way's red ending, and we not there to weep!

(We found you pale and quiet, and strangely crowned with flowers,
Lovely and secret as a child. You came with us,
Came happily, hand in hand with the young dancing hours,
High on the downs at dawn!)
Void now and tenebrous.

The grey sands curve before me . .
From the inland meadows,
Fragrant of June and clover, floats the dark, and fills
The hollow sea's dead face with little creeping shadows,
And the while silence brims the hollow of the hills.

Glass in the nest is folded every weary wing,
Hushed all the joyful voices; and we, who held you dear,
Eastward we turn, and homeward, alone, remembering . . .
Day that I loved, day that I loved, the Night is here!

How times have changed! In 1837 here are a few of the rules in force at Mt. Holyoke College: (1) No young lady shall be a member of Mt. Holyoke College who cannot make a fire, wash potatoes, repeat the multiplication and at least two thirds of the catechism. (2) No young lady shall devote more than 1 hour each day to miscellaneous reading; (3) (and what hurts most) No young lady is expected to have gentlemen acquaintances unless they are returned missionaries or agents of benevolent societies."

Yes, how times have changed!

To stimulate business, a German theater owner tacked up a sign outside his theater offering a prize of 500 marks to anyone not liking the picture. The audience packed the house before it finally caught on to the trick: the feature was a picture of Hitler making a speech. Result: the owner still has his 500 marks.

Who said people could tell a criminal when they saw him? It's not so, believe it or not. Dr. Fred August of the University of Kansas recently handed out 75 photographs of criminals to his criminology class and asked them to pick the criminal faces. Fifty per cent of the class picked J. Edgar Hoover's mug as that of a desperate criminal!

During the second World Series game, while Charlie Ruffing was pitching for the Yanks, the announcer unconsciously pulled a good one. Some folks say it was "rubbing", but to this column it sounded mightily like Ted Husing said "he's roughing up the ball".

"The Rains Came" Is India Novel

Whether the individual makes the times or the times the individual is the theme of Louis Bromfield's The Rains Came. Using India as a background for his story, Mr. Bromfield reveals the total change which disaster can accomplish in the life of man.

Fern Simon, whose tawdiness is washed away with the flood; Lady Esketh, whose thorough rottenness is replaced by heroism; Tom Ransone, whose acceptance of defeat gives way to purpose; and a number of lesser personages are the characters in the book. At first the novel seems to stand still, but when the descending rains fill the river to overflowing, when an earthquake follows in the wake of the deulge, when 9,000 people are killed in the catastrophe, there is an abundance of action and excitement. Mr. Bromfield's newest book is one of his best and most dramatic.

Undoubtedly more interesting to the school girl, however, is Helen Carlisle's novel of the younger set. Teh Merry Merry Maidens follows the careers of six American girls from the lady when they formed themselves into the "P. I." club. The author has given us an amazing and dramatic story of the lives of her characters. She has told the tale simply, but it is a book which will greatly enhance the reputation of Miss Carlisle.

Orrick Johns tells of his father's life and his own in Time of Our Lives. The life of George Johns is written chiefly with a regard for his activities in the political reform movement in St. Louis. The emphasis in the case of the younger Johns is on his work in the field of literature. To those interested in either field, Time of Our Lives will be of especial interest.

OPEN FORUM

Dear Editor:

For most of us the noble ideals and standards of our school embody a code of ethics in which good sportsmanship and fair play are key words. For the most part, we live by these laws and thus a harmony is maintained which enriches our lives and upholds those things for which Farmville stands. Yet, at times there are those of us who weaken—who seem to lose, to a certain extent, that sense of honor which the spirit of our school has instilled in us to the point of inherency—and in so doing it is we ourselves who suffer.

One obvious way in which we break away from our code of living is in not respecting those who are our friends. True, it may seemingly afford us a great deal of pleasure to pry into matters which do not concern us. Perhaps it is ignorance that prompts us to show such disrespect—ignorance of the fact that certain activities and organizations on the campus have a serious and worthy purpose and are not, so to speak, "all in fun".

This purpose, however, and the benefit which the school should rightfully derive, will be sacrificed, simply because, in weaker moments we selfishly subordinate our reverence for our Alma Mater and our love for our friends to a momentary curiosity and desire for excitement.

Can we not realize the worthiness of certain organizations, and, if for no other reason than our love for our school and the sacredness of her ideals, respect the secrets of our friends and those things which go to make our years here richer and fuller?

Reverberations

Thrills! Heartthrobs! Broken Hearts! and telephone calls seem to be foremost in our minds this week. Accomplishments and failures in love affairs and blooming romances are quite noticeable since the week-end. Isabel has so appropriately chosen O-Kay as her byword. It's nice to be able to see Miller on week-ends, don't you think, Kitty? . . . There seems to be a bit of disturbance in regard to telephone calls. Was it the noise or excitement that made Susan unable to hear the message that we bet was joyfully given from V-I? Let's pause in the midst of heart fluctuations for a fond word or sympathy for the cute German—there are more than one who feel sorry for him and are willing to make a sad situation (supposedly) cheerful. What'cha say, Nan?

The Dramatic Club play is doing well by itself. The hero and heroine know best how to make the situation appear real—there's no defeating of their purpose at any rate. Here's hoping Charlie has no reason to worry. 'Twould be oh, so sad, don't you think, Jinny?

The week-end holds something in store for Sarah Button. The little Whiteing is in a storm—should he ask someone for a date? We don't know . . . Congratulations, Betty! Wouldn't we like to go to Harvard? We might even be satisfied to take either yours or Charlotte's place and accompany Flip to the show. These people who can rate three shows a week from the same person have no kick coming. You've started something, Flip. Incidently, Flip, have you ever been to a show with a "Mill-Stone" 'round your neck? Eh, what?

I would be wrong to mention blossoming romances and omit the Thompson-Dodson affair. 'Tis wonderful that fate has given us the advantages of a co-ed school . . . And there's Micou who seems to have given Johnny quite a rush over the week-end. I'd bet he's happy!

Madeline, maybe you could give Hoober—or is it Hooter?—a little word of cheer—you know a person doesn't fall in love from the effect of will power—it's just one of those things that can't be prevented. He falls with no warming whatever. Suggestion? If there any in regard to these reverberations count ten before you speak! ?!?!, because ye olde reverberator is on the busy list this week. She will return next week. Last minute call! Was Johnnie Lybrook sleepy after the KA party? They're always nice—if you don't believe it ask Johnnie!!

Sing Depicts Color History

The color rush has a long history as was nobly portrayed in "Color Rush through the Ages" in Sing Saturday night.

The cave women with their wild hair and "Lion's skins" were the originators of the idea. They dashed madly back and forth in front of their caves until one was victorious and with great pride hung up her colors. The "Glookum oo-kum" of their language showed just as much excitement over the event as the "hurrahs" and "bravos" of our day do.

It is pleasing to note that the race was not too unrefined for Merrie Olde Englande. Although the lad and lassie were a little more dignified in their bearing, they showed the right spirit of "Ye Olde Colore Rushe."

Shades of the 20's—color scheme of blue, green and red, too much make up a too short short dress—the post-war flapper, but with all her airs and sophistication she put her colors in the right place.

The color rush today—girls sitting around in lounging pajamas and bathrobes laughing and talking. Cat Reed doing an imitation of Eleanor Powell, and Virginia Whitehead Smith giving a fine impersonation of some of the blues singers of the day when in walks Dot Eades portraying Mrs. Laing, and the color rush is on as everyone makes a mad scramble to get off to bed.

There's the same spirit of friendly competition whether it's the color rush of 20 B. C., 1600, 1930, or 1937.

The tragic story of Mary Stuart, Queen of Scots, will come to life Friday night when the Dramatic Clubs of S. T. C. and Hampden-Sydney present Maxwell Anderson's Mary of Scotland.

Historians and biographers have differed many times as to the real life and character of the Scottish Queen, and none, as yet has come to a definite conclusion, concerning it. That she was beautiful, they all agree, but her character and life have long been the subject of controversy.

Mary Stuart was the daughter of James V of Scotland and Mary of Gense, and although she was born and partially reared in Scotland, her education and court training were obtained in France. When she was quite young, some historians say thirteen, she was married to Francis II of France, and thus became Queen of France. During this period, her desire for fame and reknown was great, and she called herself Mary, Queen of France, Scotland, and England. When Mary's child husband died, she lost France's throne, so she decided to go to Scotland and rightfully claim her kingdom which was being ruled by her half-brother, James Stuart, Earl of Moray.

When Elizabeth Tudor, Queen of England, heard of Mary's entry into Scotland, her pent-up anger for all of Stuart lineage came forward, and she resolved to force Mary off her throne. Elizabeth was the illegitimate daughter of Henry VIII and Anne Boyln, and therefore Mary Stuart was the rightful heir to the entire isle of Britain. So, Elizabeth, with the aid of agents and spies—John Knox and Lord Moray supposedly among them—undermined Mary's life and turned her people against her.

In Scotland, Mary fell deeply in love with the Earl of Bothwell, and he with her. Some historians say that he was the one in love; others say that Lord Bothwell was married and left his wife because of Mary. But in this play, both were free and both were very much in love with the other. Both had violent tempers and strong wills; these often clashed—especially when Mary decided it was best for the country and her Stuart line to marry the next heir to the throne, the young, drunken Lord Darnley.

Bothwell, who had been in France since Mary's marriage to Darnley, returned and offered the distracted queen his fealty. She accepted it, named him her officer and a bitter war ensued. It was during this time that Mary's son was born, and her husband blown to bits. Some say Bothwell did it; others say the disloyal lords planned it; some say that Mary herself was in the plot. But Darnley was killed, and Mary and Bothwell married—and, there again, is controversy—some authorities say Bothwell forced her into the marriage.

The war lasted longer than any expected, and ended with Bothwell's men deserting and he and the queen taken prisoners by the lords, headed by Moray. On the condition that Bothwell would leave Scotland and never return, they promised that Mary would be again safely seated on her throne, her power intact. But their treacherousness prevailed, for after Bothwell was exiled, they cast Mary into prison and set Moray up as regent. For months she was held without knowing or even suspecting that she was Elizabeth's prisoner.

One night after months and months of mental agony, Elizabeth visited Mary in her cell. The authenticity of this visit is not known. During this short meeting of the two queens, Elizabeth tried every measure to make her prisoner sign her abdication. She brought out everything her mind could think of from declaring Mary was insane to controlling what future times would think of her. Mary refused, to abdicate through all this, even when Elizabeth brought forth the fact that she held Mary's letters to Bothwell. Having been spurned in her efforts, Elizabeth left the prison, and Mary Stuart was her prisoner until her death twenty years later.

Red and White Conquers On Color Rush Day!

Seniors Win Victory Over Juniors

MANY CHEER

Sophomores Defeat Freshmen

Tuesday, Nov. 16, the class hockey games were played resulting in a double victory for red and white. Class colors, yells, and cheer leaders made these games colorful.

In the first half of the freshman-sophomore game there was much pass work and both teams fought hard. Katheryn Newman climaxed this period with a goal for the sophomores.

The forward line of the red and white team pushed on immediately after the half, Margaret Eckford scoring the first point of this period. The sophomores continued to roll up the score as points were made by Chlotilde Jarman and Katheryn Newman. Helen McIlwaine, as center forward was outstanding for the green and whites. The final score was 5-0 in favor of the sophomores.

The line-up:

Freshmen		Sophomores
Coberly	RW	Mann
Terrell	IR	Jarman
McIlwaine	CF	Newman
Errell	IL	Eckford
Nillsman	LW	Nimmo
Wells	RH	Copley
Edmondson	CH	Fisher
Hubbard	LH	Harry
Hosbris	RB	Vaden
Atkinson	LB	Smith
Thetcher	GK	Blackwell

Red and White was again on top when the seniors scored a 2-0 victory over the sophomores. These teams were evenly matched, Jennie Belle Gilliam scored the first goal for red and white; at the end of the first period Edna Bolick brought in the final point. In the last half, the teams fought back and forth, struggling in vain to score. Ellen Conyers and Louise Bryant were outstanding for the juniors.

Line-up:

Juniors		Seniors
Badger	RW	Bolick
Gwathney	IR	Gilliam
Taylor	CF	Gilliam
Marsh	IL	Mann
Terrell	LW	Mann
Rice	RH	Phelps
Carroll	CH	Thomas

They had been sitting in the swing in the moonlight, all alone. No word broke the stillness for half an hour—until "Suppose you had money," she said, "What would you do?"

He threw out his chest in all the glory of young manhood, "I'd travel," he said.

He felt a warm hand slide into his. When he looked up, she was gone. In his hand was a nickel.

Classes Choose Hockey Captains Before Rush

Edna Bolick Is Senior Leader

Edna Bolick, senior; Ellen Conyers, junior; Dot Fischer, sophomore ;and Helen McIlwaine, freshman were elected hockey captains of their respective class teams on Monday, Nov. 15.

Edna Bolick, who has played hockey all four years in college, represented Farmville in the East-West tournament played here last year. She has also been outstanding in basket ball, playing guard on the varsity.

Ellen Conyers played hockey her freshman year, but, due to an injury, was out last year. Swimming is another sport in which she excells. The H2O club bid her last year after she became a senior life saver.

Dot Fischer, a New Yorker, has been outstanding in all sports, making varsity in both hockey and basketball. She is a leader in class sport activities. Helen McIlwaine played hockey in Petersburg on a high school team before coming to S. T. C. She was recently chosen a member of varsity hockey team.

Katheryn Newman Is Elected Captain Of Varsity Hockey

Katheryn Newman, sophomore, was eelcted captain of varsity hockey for the present season at a recent meeting of the squad.

Katheryn lives in Farmville. She is a physical education major and takes a part in all sports activities. She entered class basketball and class hockey last year. In hockey she was appointed to the star hockey team. Katheryn also participates in class swimming.

Will Scott Is Cheer Leader

Will Scott of Orange is the varsity cheer leader again this year for S. T. C. sports. She has cheered her teams to victory for the past several seasons.

As master of ceremonies at the circus for the past two years, she has put much mirth in the event.

Will is a member of Cotillion Club, president of the Home Economics Club, and is a member of Sigma Sigma Sigma social sorority.

She has the added distinction of being fire chief of school.

Will was a prominent figure in her white and blue at the hockey games directing cheers.

World Sports

New sports are always interesting. One of the more unusual that has come to light in a long time is Night Climbing. This is a branch of mountain climbing and decidedly not meant for Amateurs or beginners. Night Climbing originated at Cambridge, University. It is one of the very serious undergraduate sports, but it is doubtful if it will ever become a major sport because of the attitude of the Faculty. Night Climbing is done at night because good taste forbids an Englishman making himself conspicuous. Good taste also forbids climbing private houses. Black sneakers are considered the correct thing to wear. Beginners usually start with drain pipes that work up to the sides of buildings. The amazing quantity of old gothic structures found in and around Cambridge are particularly favorable to night climbing. One of the most dangerous climbs is the main gate of Saint John's where the stone work is four hundred years old and apt to crumble beneath the climber. The object of this climb is to drape the statue of Founder Lady Margaret Beaufort in the academic cap and gown. For those interested in becoming Night Climbers there is a hand book, "The Night Climbers of Cambridge" written by a Cambridge student who signs himself Whipplesnaith.

Football of Good Old Days

And so to football. Another fine story of the good old days concerns a game between Navy and the Great Lakes Naval Training School back in nineteen eighteen. Badly battered by Navy's powerful drives the Great Lakes team was pushed back to its own goal line .With only one yard to go Navy's Bill Ingram smashed through center and fumbled. From the pile of players emerged Great Lakes' Dizzy Eeileson. The ball in his hands as he dashed toward Navy's goal one hundred yards away. Not a man stood between him and a touchdown. Suddenly, as he neared mid field, an excited Navy substitute jumped from the bench, ran into the field and brought down Eeileson with a flying tackle. Navy's coach declared the touchdown should be allowed and Great Lakes kicked the goal winning seven to six. Duke has a powerful team this year but the eighteen ninety-one team of what was then Trinity College in their game with Furman set a record that will probably never be equalled. In those days when a touchdown counted only four points and the goal kick counted two, Duke rolled up a score of ninety-six to nothing. Every Duke man made a touchdown including the center who was called back and allowed to run with the ball on the occasion.

New York Adds New Train

To a long list of snow, bicycle, camera and fold boat trains the New York, New Haven and Connecticut Railroad has added a new one. The Husking Bee Special whcih carried four hundred odd city slivkers ninety-two miles to the quiet countryside of Kent, Conn. On their arrival, notably convivial after two hours and twenty minutes in the cocktail lounge and bar car, they consumed staggering quantities of pork and beans, cabbage salad, pie, cider, and coffee. Next, a trifle fattened, since an informal poll revealed that only one out of the entire crowd had ever attended a husking bee before, they took up the evening's serious business of husking several hundred ears of corn .The task was made much more exciting by the old fashioned fact that finders of red ears, in proper husking tradition, were priviledged to kiss anyone they chose. The corn exhausted, and the huskers almost equally so, the latter returned to the Grange Hall for a square dance. At midnight the tired revelers returned to the train for the last lap of the New Haven's special birge which a railroad official called "the asndwich of the lot".

Twelve Members Of Varsity Team Play Westhampton

Bad Weather Made Game Wait

Tomorrow twelve members of varsity hockey will journey to Richmond to meet Westhampton College on their home field at 3:30. Those who will go are Estelle Mann, Jennie Belle Gilliam, Edna Bolick, Evelyn Mann, Marjorie Nimmo, Kathryn Newman, Chlotilde Jarman, Hilda Hubbard, Ellen Conyers, Katherine Bailey, Bernice Mann and Ruth Sears.

Harriet Montague of Collegiate School, Richmond, will umpire for Farmville's team.

Although bad weather postponed the S. T. C. hockey game scheduled with William and Mary Extension for last Friday, the game will not be forfeited, Harriette Vaden, manager, has announced.

The two teams will meet on the William and Mary field in Richmond, Nov. 30. It is not yet known exactly who will play. Harriet Montague will again umpire.

Freshmen Labor Over Basketball

Come on, Freshmen that's a basketball you're handling, not an egg. Pitch it in! Good stuff, that was a neat goal. Now guard, you're no bear. Give the girl a chance. She'd be a good player if she had breathing space, and don't forget it. That court's no playground either.

That ball doesn't need a body guard and it doesn't fancy being shadowed. Stick to your assigned section and be there when you're needed. That's what they put you there for.

So on, far into the afternoon the little freshmen labored in the valiant cause of basketball. The light waned and Hoppy Dick was still playing. The general never left fighting army more reluctantly than that basketball battlefield deserted.

Seniors Conquer Cunningham Hall

FINAL RUSH

Four Runners Suffer Injuries

Red and white was victorious in the color rush held at two o'clock Tuesday afternoon. Red and white banners could be seen swinging from all three buildings.

Seniors in traditional style won the race in Cunningham Hall, making their last color rush one of great victory.

The runners in the Rotunda were Aseita Maltamore and Chlotilde Jarman; in Student, Essie Millner and Helen McIlwaine; in Senior building, Inez Chappell and Army Butterworth.

Four of the runners were injured in this short but important event. Those hurt were: Helen McIlwaine, Army Butterworth, Inez Chappell and Aseita Maltamore.

Chairmen for the event from the classes were: freshmen, Ann Leake; sophomore, Lulu Windham; junior, Mildred Gentry and senior, Nan Seward.

A Capella Choir Plans Service of Christmas Carols

Invited Singers Add Voices to Concert

The A Capella College Choir and Choral group will present for their annual carol service Dec. 19 a different program from previous years. Beginning with the "Old English Carol Service" the sacred part will consist of a sacred recital featuring Myron Kahn, Concertmeister of Richmond Symphony Orchestra; Alfred Forrest, Tenor; President Jarman, Baritone ;and Miss Irene Leake, Soprano.

The A Capella group will offer two selections and the entire units of all three choral organizations will sing "The Holy City". In view of the significance of this Recital (in which the A capella college choir will wear their new robes) special invitations will be sent to a large group of music lovers.

The Department of Speech, directed by Dr. Walmsley will share the program, when Miss Juanita Callis will deliver the Christmas message. This sacred Recital should prove one of the outstanding musical events of the year.

Miss Mary Attends Deans Convention With Miss Royall

Miss Mary White Cox and Jane Royall attended the annual meeting of the Regional Association of Deans of Women and Advisers of Girls, which was held at Goucher College, Baltimore, on November 13. The majority of schools and colleges of Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia, and Virginia were represented.

The program was as follows: 10:00 A. M. Registration and Business. 10:45 A. M. "Preparing a Girl for College", Mrs. Jessie M. Holton, of the Holton-Arms School, Washington, D. C. 11:15 A. M. Culpeper Alumnae Give Informal Dinner Thursday

Mothers of Girls Are Guests

The Culpeper Alumnae Chapter was the hostess for a lovely, informal dinner in the Virginia Inn in Culpeper on Thursday evennig, Noverber 11. From the college, Dr. Jarman, Miss Nichols, Miss Winnie Hiner, and Miss Doyall were guests. The mothers of the Culpeper girls now in college were also guests.

The table was beautifully decorated, with yellow chrysanthemums, place cards and candy favors. After the four course dinner, Alma Garlick as Mistress of Ceremonies called on all guests for informal talks. Dr. Jarman congratulated the Culpeper Chapter on the beginning of its seventh year of fellowship and successful activities in loan fund work and cooperation with all college and Alumnae Association policies. Miss Nichols invited the alumnae to the Thanksgiving Alumnae Tea to be given in Miller and Rhoads tearoom on Friday, November 26, from four until six in the afternoon. She stated the general policies of the Association of Farmville Alumnae and expressed appreciation to the Culpeper Chapter for its loyal cooperation. Miss Royall expressed greetings from Miss Mary and gave an interesting account of the Cotillion Dance of the past week-end. Miss Hiner gave greetings from the college. Mrs. Smith, Mrs. Jeffries, and Mrs. Eastham responded as college patrons. Miss Button and Mrs. Thompson responded as alumnae from Dr. Cunningham's administration.

Miss Virginia Tinsley, outgoing chapter president, gave a brief talk on the policies and plans of the Culpeper Chapter. Mrs. Bernard Williams was introduced as the incoming president.

Girls Depart Early Despite Holidays To Come

Isabel Williamson Serves Supper To Problem Club

Members of the Problem Club were entertained Sunday evening at an informal buffet supper at 108 First Avenue. Miss Iasbel Williamson acted as hostess. After a bit of idle chatter in the living room, the feast was disclosed to the eager eyes of the guests. The menu consisted of hamburgers, rolls, tomato sandwiches, anchovy and cheese sandwiches and coffee. During the general confusion which followed, members of the club held an informal business meeting at which much was said and one thing accomplished. It was unanimously voted that Miss Williamson be issued a bid to become a Problem Child, and the type of initiation was decided upon at that point. Upon facing the issue, the active members easily saw that the candidate could "bear" up under any strain. She earnestly expostulated with the club for five full minutes on the subject of one whom they were considering for membership. She decided the issue for once and for all. The Problem Club is happy to announce its new member.

Little brown teddy-bears were given as favors to the following: L. Virginia Carroll, Problem Mother; Prince Smith, Problem Child; Cleo Jarman, Problem Child; Sue Owen, Problem Child, while yellow bears were given to Ginna Jarman, Leader-Astray-Ex-Officio, and Nan Seward, G-gal-Ex-Officio. Miss Williamson's official position will be that of Go-Between.

"Note! Not everyone who entertains the Problem Club at dinner is eligible to membership, although the club is always open to persuasion.

Potomac Alumnae Hotel Meeting

On Saturday at Arlington Hall a meeting of the Potomac Alumnae Chapter was held with Miss Carrie Lutherlin as hostess.

Dr. J. L. Jarman was present to greet girls from the class of 1904 to the present class.

One member present was the first Farmville alumna to study law. She hopes to visit the college this year for the first time since her leaving itt.

The first alumnae dues for the year were sent from this chapter by Dr. Jarman.

Hayes and Waterson Are Council Guests

Guests of honor at a recent Student Council party were Sarah Hayes and Elizabeth Waterson. The party was held after the regular meeting on Nov. 9. Coca colas, nabs, pop corn, and pickles were served.

The old Freshman Commission entertained the new commission at a weiner roast on Thursday, Nov. 11.

Question of Beauty Bath Is Very Vital to Milady

By Helena Rubinstein

"Invitation for Dinner"—Doesn't that sound alluring? And what do you think of first? What will you wear? Yes. But even more important, is how you will look. And you resolve that for this very special party you will take time and pains to be your loveliest, most fascinating self.

How to begin? First, there's the tub. No one can deny that there's no beautifier like a long, luxurious bath. To loll in your tub, feel the caressingly warm water covering you from chin to toe, let your body go limp and allow your taut nerve to loosen, is to set one at ease with one's self and the world. There is a legend that water can relax, renew and rejuvenate and surely there is no beauty rite quite so result-producing as the luxury bath. For this special occasion the bath should be sweet-scented with, for instance, a delicate essence of fine herbs and flowers that dissolve fatigue, invigorates and gives an exhilarating "pick-up" that lasts for hours.

Numberless beauties have kept the secret of their charms locked in a soap bubble and whispered to the world mysterious rumors of milk baths and gentle creams and all the enchanting glamour of retaining beauty through the years by sort of witch's magic.

But it remained for the modern woman to luxuriate in the magic of bubble baths. The millions of oxygen bubbles give new exhiliration to both the skin and the spirit. One pasteurized milk bath looks like the froth of whipped egg whites and the cool silky-white liquid into which the bath is transformed makes every tub a health and beauty ritual. A dip in this refreshing bath scented in pine or floral odeurs, leaves on the skin a fine, almost invisible film of the milk powder which helps to keep it cool, smooth and soft. A deodorizing agent incorporated in the bath insures a fresh, sweet-scented daintiness. To finish off the bath with eclat, to make sure of absorbing even the least suggestion of moisture, a fine, velvety, body sachet gives the body a cool sleek finish and the scent—gardenia, lilac, or carnation, to match the bath—is lastingly fragrant.

If you want to know about the pasteurized milk bath or desire other beauty bathing information, write to me in care of this paper. I will be glad to advise you.

or 'out' of New Jersey." Also, you don't join a circus, you join "up" with a circus.

And, if you ever go to a circus and some accident occurs, you can expect to hear the band strike up a Sousa march. No riot has ever occured yet to the tune of a Sousa piece. You will never hear the "Light Cavalry March", though. In a circus that is taboo. Every time that piece has been played some serious accident has happened to the orchestra.

In closing Mr. Beale left one more interesting fact with the audience, "The circus", he said, "was the first practioner of real psychology."

Lives there a man with soul so dead
Who never to himself has said
To heck with studies,
I'm going to bed.

VOL. XVII. FARMVILLE, VIRGINIA, WEDNESDAY, DEC. 1, 1937 No. 9

Isabel Plummer Will Reign as Queen; Jennie Belle Gilliam Is Maid-of-Honor

Thirteen Seniors Are Chosen For May Court

FIVE JUNIORS

Members Will Be Escorted By Lords

Thirteen seniors, five juniors, three sophomores and one freshman were chosen by the student body on November 23 to be members of the 1938 May Court.

The girls selected are: Virginia Agee, Elizabeth Butler, Virginia Doughtery, Mary Harvey, Eugenia Jolly, Susan Lane, Frances Maxey, Kathleen McCann, Madeline McGlothlin, Ruth Montgomery, Elizabeth Morris, Nan Seward, Gay Stieffen, Caroline Upshur, Mary Harrison Vaughan,.

Frankie Bryan, Elsie Dodd, Vera Ebel, Charlotte Minton Kitty Roberts, Sara Keesee, Virginia Lee Pettis, Lula Windham, and Norma Johnson.

These girls will be ladies in Queen Elizabeth's Court and will be attended by lords who will be selected by the May Day Committee.

The exact roles which the lords and ladies of the court will play have not been definitely decided but it is probable that they will form a court figure and dance the minuet.

The costumes for this year's May Day will be more elaborate than heretofore. Will Scott, chairman of costumes, has been working on the May Queen's and her court's costumes which will be in keeping with the Elizabethan times.

Isabel Plummer, who has been selected as May Queen

Jennie Belle Gilliam who will be maid-of-honor to the Queen.

Miss Grace Moran Attends Meeting As District Head

The annual convention of the Virginia Education Association met in Richmond on November 23, 24, 25 and 26th. The meetings of the convention were held in the auditorium and classrooms of the John Marshall High school, the audience rooms in Hotel John Marshall, Hotel Richmond, Murphy's Hotel and the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts.

Farmville delegates to the contion were the following: Miss Grace Moran, the chairman of the College Section of Prince Edward County Association; Dr. J. P. Wynne, Miss Olive Iler and Miss Grace Mix.

Miss Grace Moran, acting chairman of the Geography Section of the Association, presided at a luncheon program at which Mr. S. T. Emory of the University of North Carolina, a former member of the Farmville faculty, was the guest speaker.

Miss Olive Iler was on the program of the Physical and Health Education Section, being one of the speakers of a Panel Discussion. She spoke on "Meeting the Individual Needs of the City Elementary Pupil."

On Friday afternoon the Farmville Alumnae attended a Farmville Alumnae Tea at Miller and Rhoads.

Roy Dennis Plays For Senior Dance On Saturday

Plans are completed for the Senior Dance which will be given on Dec. 4 from nine to twelve in the gymnasium. Dance tunes will be supplied by the Roy Dennis orchestra of Richmond.

The dance is given by the graduating class each year instead of a musical comedy production such as staged by the undergraduate classes. The Seniors request that this affair be formal for both boys and girls.

Roy Dennis and his band are already well-known at this college though they have never played here before. They have filled several engagements at Hampden-Sydney and in many others in the vicinity of Richmond.

Seniors and their escorts will join in forming an unusual figure which, the committee announces, will be much in keeping with the class as a whole. The theme for decorations will not be disclosed until the dance itself.

Reverend J. B. Hill Speaks to Students

The Reverend J. B. Hill, of Richmond, state and student secretary of the Baptist Sunday School, spoke in chapel this morning.

During the afternoon Reverend Hill held meetings concerning Sunday School activities. The meetings will be continued

Dr. Jarman Celebrates Birthday With the Girls

"Why, I spent my birthday with my girls", Dr. Jarman answered the inquiry as to how he spent the day that rolls around the nineteenth of November each year. And he said the simple sentence in a manner that made one feel that that is the best way to spend any day. Our President came down to the office as usual and stayed until four o'clock, with the interlude of the song tribute in chapel. He attended a dinner given at Longwood by the Student Council, "which I enjoyed very much". Of course he was right there when the curtain went up on the play Friday night. Then went home and called it a day.

Christmas time being just around the corner, and their curiosities being easily aroused on that subject anyhow, S. T. C. girls were interested in the mysterious white bundles that found their way into Dr. Jarman's office. The usual red roses and cigars were not omitted this year. "The fragrance of the flowers is lovely," exclaimed Dr. Jarman. And the fragrance of the cigars—well for lack of a better word shall we say it is fragrant? A set of dishes, of a kind which he is collecting, were among the gifts. The list included two umbrellas—one if he is at home when the rain falls, and another if he is caught at the college—rainy weather being no respector of persons.

When Dr. Jarman first came to Farmville, his birthday passed by unnoticed. On the nineteenth of November, 1919, Miss Mary Finch, who is now a missionary to Japan and at that time was president of the student body, stopped by his office and asked him to come to the room which is now the choral club room, at six o'clock. The executive, very unsuspecting, was on time and was escorted to a little two room frame building which constituted the community center of the school, and was called "the studio." There a feast awaited Dr. Jarman that was the first college celebration of his birthday. He can't remember whether they sang or not, but knowing him we can bet they did, and that a "good time was had by all present." He does remember that it was very cold and that a fireplace was the only source of heat. He had to hurry through the dinner, and go to Darlington Heights to make a war speech, over rough roads and in a questionable open "runabout."

"And," concludes Dr. Jarman, "you haven't forgotten my birthday since that time."

Dr. J. H. Rives Will Be Speaker As Y. W. Guest

The Y. W. C. A. has secured Dr. J. H. Rives of the Centenary Methodist church of Richmond as speaker for December 6, 7, and 8th.

Dr. Rives is well known at Farmville. In 1935 he was guest speaker for the Y. W. The faculty and student body are looking forward to his coming.

On Monday at 4 o'clock the Y. W. cabinet and committee members are giving a reception honoring Dr. Rives in the small reception room. That night Dr. Rives will speak at prayers.

Dr. Rives will speak Tuesday and Wednesday at chapel. Tuesday afternoon at five o'clock an open cabinet meeting will be held for the student body to meet Dr. Rives. He will lead prayers Tuesday night.

Mary of Scotland Proves Success As Fall Play

Miss Wheeler scored another triumph by "Mary of Scotland", the fall play presented on Friday, November 19, by the S. T. C. Dramatic Club and the Hampden-Sydney Jongleurs.

Virginia Agee and Jim Johnson led the large cast as Mary and the Earl of Bothwell, whose great love was shaken by the schemes of Queen Elizabeth, very adequately played by Elizabeth Carroll.

"Mary of Scotland" was presented in three acts, the first two divided into three scenes. Mary appears in the first scene having just landed on Scotch soil after sailing from France where she ruled until she was widowed. In this scene the stage lighting gave the effect of a dark foggy night on the pier. Elizabeth schemed with her adviser in the second scene and in the last Mary confers with a council and declares her impossible love for Bothwell.

Mary married Lord Darnley for political purposes but her throne becomes more and more uncertain as Darnley is killed and she marries Bothwell. Mary falls into a trap and she is imprisoned so that her infant son may be king under the influence of the Earl of Moray.

The last impressive scene shows Mary Stuart imprisoned with Bothwell, her maids, and all her friends separated from her. Here Maxwell Anderson leaves the true story of the tragic Mary Stuart in an important and solemn place.

Many new faces were seen in production and were received well by a most appreciative audience.

Petersburg Girls Are Selected to Take Leads

BOTH SENIORS

Queen Will Play the Part of Queen Elizabeth

Isabel Plummer, of Petersburg and a member of the Senior Class was chosen by the Student Body in a popular vote to reign as May Queen for 1938.

Jennie Belle Gilliam, also from Petersburg and a member of the Senior Class, was chosen maid of honor.

The queen this year will take part of Queen Elizabeth in the theme written by Kathleen Sawyer. The maid of honor will probably take the part of first lady-in-waiting.

Both girls have been outstanding members of the student body. Isabel is vice-president of Alpha Kappa Gamma and Jennie Belle is secretary. Jennie Belle is chairman of the Students' Standards Committee and has been treasurer of the Athletic Association for two years. Isabel is vice-president of the Y. W. C. A. Both girls are members of the Cotillion Club and Sigma Sigma Sigma sorority. Jennie Belle has been in May Court for four years, and Isabel for two.

Elizabeth Morris and Susan Lane, who also ran for queen, will automatically be members of the court.

Bruce Crowell, May Day Chairman, will announce future plans of the committee at a recent date. Practices for the dances and the court scene will probably begin early in April.

Pi Gamma Mu Begins to Plan For Mardi Gras

Pi Gamma Mu plans for a bigger and even better Mardi Gras are now underway. Norvelle Montague, chairman of the Dance Committee, stated that the student body election of the queen and her court would be held after the holidays. Neither the dance band nor the type of decorations has been decided upon. However, Gamma Psi will be in charge of decorating the gymnasium.

Mardi Gras Dance is always held the Tuesday before Ash Wednesday which is the beginning of Lenten Season. No one will be admitted on the floor unless in costume and elaborate prizes will be given to the wearers of the prettiest and the most original costumes.

Debate Team Leaves Thursday For Winthrop

On Thursday morning, December 2, five members of Farmville's varsity debating team will leave for Winthrop College, Rock Hill, S. C., to participate in the annual Strawberry Leaf Tournament.

Lorena Moomaw and Pattie Alston Bounds, the affirmative team, and Sudie Yager and Nora Jones, the negative team, will represent Farmville in the ten rounds of debate. The subject is the National Pi Kappa Delta question. Resolved: That the National Labor Re-

Priceless Possession Is Seen In Having Youth And Guarding Its Gifts

Youth is a priceless possession, one that only those who have lost it seem to appreciate. So often those of us who are young spend our lives using our priceless youth in such a way that it cannot last long.

Mark Twain once remarked that it is a pity youth is wasted on the young. Why do we think youth is wasted on the young? Why is man so created that he seldom appreciates his gifts until he loses them? A great man is not great until he is dead. And so it is with our youth. It is only valued after eyes are dull and step no longer spry.

Candles burning at both ends may leave lovely lights, but we may someday wish we had been less careless of our light when we are in the darkness of approaching age. It is glorious to be young, to walk gayly, to live freely and completely. We all love the idea of our youth when we consider it seriously, but we consider it seriously so very seldom. Let us ponder and be thankful for our youth, enjoy it but so live that its value will be increased, so that we may treasure it for as many happy years as possible.

To quote one author—"Youth, youth! There is nothing in the world but youth!"

Use your youth while it is yours. Be vividly alive, live and let live, but remember always that some day youth will be gone, and save something to take youth's place when it is gone. Don't find yourself in the sad plight of youth's funeral in Rupert Brooks' famous poem. All emotions present after youth's funeral except Love and "that had died long ago."

Rotunda Reverberations

Liz Carroll

Monday morning after the holidays classes were filled with very tired and droopy looking girls. Everybody reported much gayety and most lassies had dark circles to back up their statements . . . wonder how many of them stayed up until the wee small hours for a couple of nights just to acquire them? Some of them were truly genuine, however. A good third of the school apparently spent Thanksgiving Day in Roanoke . . . they were literally floating all over the place. As the V. M. I. and V. P. I. corps paraded to the game one might have seen Susan Lane and her date bringing up the rear blithely waving the good old American Flag.

S. T. C. was well represented at the V. M. I. Ring Dance. If you're interested in finding out who these popular misses are glance about you and note the lil' lockets they're wearing as badges of identification . . . very neat trinkets! One dark haired lass even brought her orchid to school hoping to keep it fresh until Senior dance . . . a neat bit of Graff, eh?

One student celebrated the holiday by getting herself involved in the holy bonds of matrimony. Well, it's a darn good way of getting out of teaching school. Let's hope she'll still have something to be truly thankful for this time next year.

As the time for Senior dance draws near there is a mad scramble for tickets. Each class has been alloted so many tickets and there just aren't enough to go around. Several girls are i na quandry on account of they have asked dates to the dance and can't get tickets for love nor money. Tis indeed a sad plight . . . but if the committee is wise they'll stick to their plan and keep the dance from being turned into a crowded brawl.

First honors in the school of conceit go to the four May Court candidates who were so greatly impressed by their own eligibility and appearance that they voted for themselves. Then maybe it was a good point after all . . . for she who tooteth not her own horn the said horn shall not be tooted!

For several weeks Bill Wing, The Rounder, who dares not sign his name to his trite meanderings in the Tiger, has been making derogatory remarks about this column. One remark was to the effect that Algy . . . whoever he may be . . . had always predicted that this column would hit rock bottom and it has at last done so.

Perhaps he is right . . . but at least the statement implies that Rounda Reverberations had a certain height from which to fall. Judging from the few times that I have inflicted the punishment of reading this illustrious column of The Rounder on myself I would say that they attained the rock bottom stage several years ago and are now some hundred miles or so below the surface level!

From "The Salmite"

"How much do you know of the character of the average college professor whom you have heard lecture? Of some professors, if you had known more you would have believed less of what they said; of some professors, if you had known more you would have believed more of what they said. One of the driest lecturers on American history I ever heard in my life was also a man more learned than any other man I ever knew in American history, and out of the classroom in conversation, one of the juiciest, most delightful, most informing, most stimulating men I ever had the pleasure of associating with. The man in the classroom was useless, out of the classroom he fertilized every mind that he touched. And most of us are really found out in the informal contacts of life. If you want to know about a subject, don't set me up to make a speech about it, because I have the floor and you cannot interrupt me, and I can leave out the things I want to leave out and bring in the things I want to bring in. If you really want to know what I know, sit down and ask me questions, interrupt me, contradict me, and see how I hold my ground. Probably on some subjects you will not do it; but if you want to find me out, that is the only way. If that method were followed, the undergraduate might make many a consoling discovery of how ignorannt his professor was, as well as many a stimulating discovery of how well informed he was."

This very discerning comment is taken from a speech by Woodrow Wilson on "The American College," made while he was president of Princeton University.

In all his writings Mr. Wilson has his eyes wide open to the fact that most students who come to college do not have any devouring passion for learning. They don't see anything interesting in their studies which they must take in order to get their degree. They regard them simply as the necessary evil which must be endured in order to get the good things in college life, namely, what we like to call "social contacts", and of course the magic degree which opens all doors and labels one "educated" as opposed to the unfortunate who is not a "college man".

Miss Privett: "Name three collective nouns."
Norman: "Flypaper, wastebasket, vacuum cleaner."

Thanksgiving Day Is Time When Men Render Thanks

Thanksgiving is a wonderful time. Since the first Thanksgiving when hearts were lifted in praise until this Thanksgiving, inaudible and spoken praises have been expressed. There are so many things for which we should be thankful and we do not always realize these blessings. We should have made this a special day, not regretting the things we didn't have, but remembering the joys, and the blessings that are ours always.

A Thankful Heart
By Esther Floyd

I thank Thee, Lord, for shower and sun,
I thank Thee, for the morning dew;
I thank Thee for each day begun,
Its light that makest all things new;
For flowers that bloom beside the way,
That life, health, love fall to my part—
But most of all, and every day,
I thank Thee for a thankful heart.

A thankful heart is kingly dower,
Is health and love—is a shower and shine
A thankful heart is life in flower,
All things are mine while it is mine.
Whatever, Lord, for me Thy will,
Whate'er in life may be my part,
I shall be more than glad that still
Thou givest me a thankful heart.

A thankful heart is happiness,
Of all men's search the golden goal—
A thankful heart is Heaven—no less,
The promised rest unto the soul.

I thank Thee, Lord, in all my ways,
Giver of all good gifts, Thou art—
But most of all I give Thee praise
For Thy best gift, a thankful heart.

A REPLY

The ethics and code of S. T. C. have been well put and the student body as a whole agrees thoroughly with what has been said about them. However it is obvious that little interest would be maintained by the members of this organization already spoken of if it were not talked about and looked upon with such curiosity and interest. This is proven by their obvious signs scattered here and there in order to start "talk". If they don't care for people to know about them then why display themselves?

We want "A Student" to know that her beloved friends were of course not purposely prying into the affairs of members of this secret organization. We would gladly not speak of it to the members but you see, their names are kept such "deep, dead secrets" that it's impossible to know who they are. "A Student" will certainly realize now, although she didn't last week, that this organization is of great concern to us as competitive secret organizations must be to her. If she does not know this then we advise her to read an issue of the Rotunda in which an editorial appeared to this effect.

In closing we wish to say that if these secret organizations were not preying so heavily on the minds of their members they would not have noticed the curiosity.

Some Student

P. S. We certainly hope this secret organization can practice what it preaches in that it doesn't pry among the student body to see who wrote this article. Let's wait and see.

or "college woman". Very few of them dream of the intellectual pleasure (just as genuine and exciting a pleasure as may be found in a movie or a football game or a dance), which they might find in college. Very few of them ever find this pleasure, or ever come to be inflamed with a passion for anything concerned with the intellect—an ugly word that gives them shivers and visions of horn-rimmed spectacles.

GLEANINGS

By

Virginia L. Agee

* * * *

And now Thanksgiving, the great American holiday, has come and gone. We are back in school—already working harder than ever preparing for the exams that are bound to come: we must not allow examtime to find us napping. Already the glorious holiday is but a hazy dream—that dinner, with the browned turkey and cranberry sauce and pumpkin pie—that game, when we cheered ourselves hoarse— that dance, where we saw everyone all over again and had more fun than enough until the wee small hours of the morning.

Thanksgiving is an American holiday having originated in America by Americans for a very good American reason. Sometime the true spirit of Thanksgiving is lost in the hurry and rush of holiday festivities—but it is rather late to be going into that.

Summing it all up, however, we have a great deal to be thankful for, things which entirely aside from personal benefits: we live in a great free country—we are free to speak and write as we please—we are free from war and tyranny.

Other countries know not the beauty of Thanksgiving Day. Other countries have been lost in the fog and smoke and fire of hate and anger and roaring guns. And while we sat at home and toasted our feet before the big log fire, filled to the bursting point with a well-cooked dinner, many were suffering the untold agonies the results of strife and bitterness.

In China the American ambassador quit his post during the holidays because the pressure in Shanghai was heavier than ever—making living there a greater danger than ever. The Chinese troops were salvaged and overrun by a now confident Japanese army.

The Japanese have gone on their bloodstained way, progessing on through towns and hamlets—leaving terror in their wake and their Rising Sun flags fluttering from pagodas and post offices in captured towns.

In London, the premiers and foreign ministers of Great Britain and France decided in a successful eight-hour discussion of major world problems they were not yet ready to grant any German poltical or territorial demands. This parley, incidentally, is the result of French and English fears as to Germany's desire for expansion.

Although the United States did not sit in on the parley, it is said that those who are participating have promised to keep the United States informed as to the results of the session.

And so, we find the ways of the world swaying in an unearthly manner. In our own country there were, no doubt, those who had not the comforts and joys that we experienced. There are those who had little to eat—as ever: those who had but a spark of fire to keep warm: those who had just enough clothes to keep the frost from biting too severely. We wonder what they had to be thankful for. Perhaps that they are alive—perhaps they were'nt even thankful for that.

A little late—yes—but now that it's over, can't we find one little thing for which to thank the bountiful God?

S. T. C. Hockey Team Conquers W.&M. By Score 5-1

Mann Dribbles Squad To Victory

Farmville triumphed over William and Mary Extension by a score of 5-1 in the last hockey game of the season played at Richmond on Tuesday afternoon.

The first goal was made by Farmville after about two minutes of play when Newman passed out to Mann, who dribbled down the field then quickly shot the ball to Bolick. Bolick with a hard drive centered it and then into the goal. Two points were made in this manner in close succession.

William and Mary's only goal was made when the center with a clear field carried the ball down and with a quick drive scored.

Newman recovered the ball after a center bully and with successive passes from the wing she drove the ball into the goal, giving Farmville a 3-1 lead at the half.

Coming back strong after the second half S. T. C. immediately carried the ball into W. and M. territory and after a struggle Bolick pushed a hard ball beyond the goal keeper to make the fourth point.

After the center bully, W. & M. came close to scoring, but blue and white's score keeper kept the ball out by picking it out of danger. Then the ball was quickly taken out of Farmville territory, and after passing back and forth across the field, Bolick came through once more to score the last point. The final whistle found the ball deep in W. & M. territory.

The line-up was as follows:

Center forward	K. Newman
Center half	E. Conyers
Right inside	J. Gilliam
Left inside	E. Bolick
Right wing	E. Mann
Left wing	B. Mann
Right halfback	H. McIllwaine
Left halfback	H. Hubbard
Right fullback	H. Vaden
Left fullback	E. Gilliam
Goal keeper	R. Sears

Substitutes: Mann, Bryan, Nimmo.

Basketball Team Plans Trip North In February

S. T. C.'s varsity basketball team is making arrangements to compete with a New York College sometime in the late winter. This will be the first time a trip of like importance has been attempted by the team. As yet it is undecided as to which colleges they will play but Dr. Jarman's permission having been given and the necessary arrangements made the team will go either the first or the second week in February.

General practices are being held regularly. The Varsity team will be selected from those having the required number of practices.

Other than thsese games varsity has scheduled games with Roanoke College, January 28, played here; with William and Mary College February 18, also played here; Blackstone College, February 25 played there and Harrisonburg S. T. C., March 4, played here.

Red and White Find Teams Evenly Matched

Red and white scored up more points for the color cup when the Seniors and Sophomores, sister classes and red and whites, played a 2-2 hockey game on the home field on Nov. 22. This game brought to a finish the class hockey bouts.

Both classes played an unusually spirited game, unaided by spectators who seemed unable to withstand the stinging cold weather. The first half went by without either side's scoring; however, both teams livened up in the last half to place the score at a 2-2 tie.

Neglecting T. B. Symptoms Dangerous

"There is a very popular and quite unjustifiable philosophy which prompts one not to do today what he can put off until tomorrow. Many Americans wholeheartedly have adopted this easy going principle, particularly in connection with disease. This is especially true when early symptoms are painless as in cancer, or where they are but mildly troublesome as in some manifestations of tuberculosis," states Dr. I. C. Riggin, st ate health commissioner.

"Physicians in tuberculosis clinics report that by far the vast majority of men and women coming to them for examination with a suspicion that they may be victims of this disease are in an advanced stage when they first see them. Disregarding signs that long since should have sent them to a doctor, they appeal for help when real help is hard and frequently impossible to give.

"At any stage tuberculosis is a disease needing professional advice and the utmost in personal cooperation. On the other hand, if it is recognized early and properly attaced it can be controlled more readily than any other chronic ailment. Indeed, today ktuberculosis continues to be a major iller solely because in so many cases the discovery of its presence is lamentably and inexcusably postponed.

"Tuberculosis, in common with other outstanding killers, cann be and frequently is insidious in its onslaught. But, after all, this is scarcely a real excuse for failing to detect it, inasmuch as in the majority of cases definite warning signs exist.

"The cardinal signs are: 1. A cough that persits; 2. Loss of weight; 3. Easy tiring. A combination of any of these indications, or the presence of any one of them calls for an immediate check-up with the family doctor. While it is entirely possible that one may have these symptoms and yet be tuberculosis-free, no chances should be taken on that assumption.

"The postponement attitude, under such circumstances, not only its foolish but even may result in an unnecessarily prolonged ilness or premature death. Prompt action, no mater how important the symptoms may appear to be, means life, hope and cure."

World Sports

First we had horse races, then dog races, now come rooster races. Started as a joke the races are now quite serious. The newest rooster champion won his title by stepping one hundred yards in sixteen and three-quarter seconds. The sport was originated by C. E. Shaw at a celebration given in Gig Harbor, Washington in 1935. Nine ranchers entered their birds for cash prizes. The race was twenty yards down a street lined with spectators. The first bird to hop, skip, run; jump or fly that far was to be the winner. At the start the roosters, not knowing what was expected of them tried to escape. The race was funny but a perfect mess, however, it gave Mr. Shaw an idea. Remembering how chickens race to be fed when anyone pounds on a pan with a spoon, he tried this method with seven old birds. The roosters soon got the idea of bell and food. Last year Mr. Shaw had six birds trained, this year he has twelve and they now run on a circular track. While many iron clad conventionalists will probably stick to horses, the rooster race has decided advantages. An old race horse isn't good after his racing days are over but a retired rooster racer can turn to cock fighting. Here's to the days when there will be a rooster race track in every pool parlor.

Patricia Power, seventeen, of Worcester, Massachusetts is New England's fastest girl distance swimmer. This year, after winning many junior titles including the national one mile, she entered senior ranks. In short order she won four New England senior crowns. Her New England championships include 500 meter medley, 440 yd. free style, and the mile. Recently she won the three mile title by a three hundred yard margin over the nearest rival. She practices two and a half hours a day, four days a week and hopes to make the 1940 Olympic team.

It is nobody's secret that good high school football players usually manage to get scholarships to college, but until recently few suspected that such commercialism had invaded private preparatory schools. Even colleges that are more or less frankly professional do not usually resort to want ads. But a want ad was just what appeared in the commercial notices of New York newspapers, "high school football players offered full scholarships in military school at once." This is little short of amazing. It begins to look as if amateur sports are a thing of the past. There are many arguments pro and con about football scholarships and the final word has not been said yet by any means. Will Rogers, Captain of Washington and Lee football team, is a fine example of a boy who has made the most of a college education gotten through a football scholarship. Rogers has been an outstanding boy on the campus, is president of "Fancy Dress" and stands unusually well in his studies. He is reported to have said that when this season closes he never expects to attend another football game.

To prevent his Michigan State team from fumbling Coach Charles Bachman conceived the bright idea of smearing the players hands with glue. They couldn't fumble but neither could they pass.

Tony Falherstein, fullback of California, spent his spare moments working as a teamster, a longshoreman and a steel worker. He belongs to one A. F. of L. and two C. I. O. unions. Is this another case of professionalism.

Anyone who has watched the mallet knights of polo knows that a perfect player doesn't exist. The best of them dig divots and fan the air in a manner that would cause your duffer on the golf links to blush. Yet each year, when the United States Polo Association awards handicaps, those who receive top ranking of ten goals are hailed by the press as perfect. This alcolade last week went to Tommy Hitchcock, Jr., Wall Stree banker who has been perfect every year but one since 1922; to Stewart Iglehart, wealthy young contractor whose father is president of Grace Steamship Company and to Cecil Smith, rough riding Texas cowboy.

Farmville Loses Contest to Westhampton Hockey Team

First Intercollegiate Game Lost By Small Score

Farmville was defeated 2-0 in a hard fought hockey game on November 18, by Westhampton College in Richmond. This was the first intercollegiate game in which Farmville has participated in four years.

Westhampton scored her first goal after about ten minutes of play, when the forward line rushed the ball, made a quick pass from wing to center, then into the goal. The ball stayed in Farmville territory most of the first half, but a hard fighting S. T. C. team held them to one point.

Both teams came back stronger in the second half and Farmville carried the ball deep into Westhampton territory, at which time she came nearer to scoring as Newman passed to Mann who dribbled the ball and centered it quickly. A Westhampton player stopped the onslaught by knocking the ball out of bounds and forcing a "bully", after which the ball was quickly hit out of danger.

Senior President Presents Class Man For Last Time In Chapel

Miss Jane Royall Is Loyal Friend of Class

Robed Senior Class Present Songs In Honor

Senior Classman, Miss Jane Royall, was presented to the administration, faculty, and student body by Madeline McGlothlin, senior class president November 23.

Miss Royall has been adviser for the Class of '38 for the four years since it entered State Teachers College in 1934. It is customary that the classman be presented each year, this marking the last such occasion for this class.

The Seniors, clad in academic caps and gowns, marched to their aisle. Miss Royall, Madeline McGlothlin, class president, Carter Belle Munt, secretary, and Elizabeth Harris, treasurer, appeared on the stage. Virginia Agee, vice-president was out of town.

The classman songs of the past three years were sung to Miss Royall as she sat on the stage. Madeline paid tribute to "Jane" as she is affectionately known to the seniors, for her work and leadership within the class. The presentation themes for the four years were recalled with their connotation of the phases of Jane's relation to the class. Two songs were then sung and dedicated to her as Senior Classman.

When Miss Royall was elected in 1934, she was presented to the school as the "Royal Queen of Freshman cHarts", her subjects pleading their allegiance. She became so much a part of the organization's functions that in the sophomore year the class depicted the great clock in the hall watching "Royall, Royall, all day long," as she led them to new victories. Last year, "Captain Royall" was introduced, leading and challenging her juniors in their college life. "Coming to their last year, Seniors hailed Jane as a comrade —a comrade as she presented a serious-faced Miss Royall to the school while Seniors obviously struggled with their emotions.

Jane Royall, who was presented as classman for the last time.

Christmas Rush Begins On Tailfeathers of Turkey

After the turkey—what? This is uppermost in our minds as Thanksgiving fades into the background and Christmas looms on the near horizon. There are many possibilities that the answers will be many and varied.

Of course, the question was settled—for the moment—within twenty-four hours after the turkey, in the way of stuffed groans, convenient naps, the wild cheering of football fans, holiday dances in all their festivity, and the traditional visit to "Grandmother's house." Thanksgiving is gone, but Christmas is yet to come.

There are always so many chances for doing so many things, that we really have a rather dreadful time trying to decide just how to use the lapse of time between the two great holidays.

For instance, there's the Senior Dance, and the first week will pass in a flurry and whirl of expectation. Then, there are thoughts of approaching exams, and the second week will pass—in a flurry. Then, there are exams, and the third week—well, the third week will just pass—we hope.

That's one easy way of dispensing with it. Or, there's the energetic soul who throws himself madly into an orgy of Christmas shopping—and that's another way of passing time. Then too, there's always the thoughtful creature who suggests a lengthy nap, ending on Christmas Eve.

For some of us, a word to the wise is sufficient in the hint about two weeks of good, tall studying—for exams do have a habit of creeping up on one—or need we remind you?

But exams or no exams, when there's Christmas in the air—there's something else there, too, so after the turkey—bring on the Yule log!

Three Students Are Guests for Opera

Beverly Sexton, Mary Harrison Vaughan and Katherinen Moomaw were guests of the Richmond debutantes on November 23 in Richmond for Mozart's comic opera, "Cosi Fan Tutte".

A reception at the Mosque was given in honor of the out of town debutantes in the afternoon from 4:30 until 5:30 p. m. At 8:15 the guests and escorts went to the opera given by the Salisbury Guild.

A dance after the opera at the Westwood Supper Club was held in their honor, with Jelly Leftwich and his orchestra playing.

Alpha Sigma Tau Has Banquet For New Pledges

The Alpha Sigma Tau sorority had its banquet at Longwood, November the twentieth at 7:30 p. m. The color scheme of yellow and green was effectively carried out in flowers and placecards.

The guests included Dr. J. L. Jarman, Miss Mary White Cox, Miss Grace Mix, Miss Virginia Bedford, faculty adviser and Miss Mary Nichols, faculty members. Thirty-five active members and fourteen alumnae shared in the happy occasion of greeting old and new members, the banquet ending with the singing of the Alpha Sigma Tau hymn.

The alumnae who returned were Margaret Pittard, Margaret Carroll, Dot Deans, Agnes Thompson, Jac Morton Hawkins, Elizabeth Moring Smith, Charlotte Hutchins Roberts, Jean West, Alberta Collings, Alfreda Collings, Grace Virginia Woodhouse, Selma Berry, Otey Grubbs and Doris Coates.

Granddaughters Club Chooses Members

The Granddaughters Club has announced the following new members: Nan Duer, Mildred Perdue, Patsy Fletcher, Jane Porter Shepherd, Mary Myrtle Cook, Martha Dee Crawley, Mary Allen Peters, Jean Snow Upshur, Virginia Crews Borden, Jean Moyer, Elinor DuLaney, Elizabeth West, Jean Terrell, Genevieve Cook, Florence Lee, Daphne Wilkerson, Virginia Howell, Sadie Haskins, Jean Bruce Martin, Beatrice Bland, Anna Young, Bessie McMath, Charlotte Stevens, and Pankey Brooks.

Membership in this organization is accorded to all girls whose mothers attended this institution.

Birthday Greetings

You're a wonderful President, responsive and kind
With a touch of the human so closely entwined
And somehow we feel you prefer to sing
There's a personal note—'tis an intimate thing
Shedding forth a bright lustre that travels afar
Inviting the best of whatever we are
And so on your birthday, this thought we impart
You can't beat a man with a song in his heart.

lations Board should be empowered to arbitrate all industrial disputes.

Farmville has for several years attended the Strawberry Leaf Tournament in Rock Hill. Last year at the annual spring forensic meet between Winthrop College and S. T. C. on the Farmville campus, Dr. Keith of Winthrop installed the Gamma Chapter of the Strawberry Leaf. Therefore this debate convention should hold even more importance than it has in the past.

Fifty-Five Attend Alumnae Tea In Richmond

About fifty-five guests attended the annual Alumnae Tea at the Teachers Convention in Richmond during the Thanksgiving holidays given by the General Alumnae Association. The tea was held this year on Friday, November 26 in Miller and Rhoads' tea room.

The tea is given each year for all Farmville alumnae in Richmond for the convention. The guests ranged from the first graduate of this school to several of last year's graduates.

The planning and carrying out of the tea was done by the Gamma Theta Alumnae Chapter in Richmond. Mrs. Pat Adkins, president of Gamma Theta Alumnae Chapter, was in charge of the affair.

Dr. J. L. Jarman and Miss Mary Nichols president of the general alumnae association, received the guests. Among the faculty members present were: Miss Lila London, Miss Wilhelmina London, Miss Grace Mix, Miss Peck, Miss Haynes, Miss Tucker, Mr. McCorkle, Dr. Wynne, and also Mrs. Wynne.

Student Government Entertains President

According to custom, the Student Government celebrated Dr. Jarman's birthday on Nov. 19 by a banquet held at Longwood. The center of the table was of course adorned with a huge spray of red roses. Members of Student Government, Miss Mary White Cox and Miss Jane Royall, who were guests, brought baby pictures of themselves. These were passed about, and guessed upon as to their identity. Caroline Upshur being guessed four times, said she must have been a very ordinary looking baby.

Artist Dance Group Asks for Volunteers

The Artist dance group wants to compose dances. In order to do this they are going to work in groups of two, and they want girls who are interested in dancing, whether they take natural dancing or not, to volunteer to work with them.

A notice will be put on the bulletin board after Christmas, and all the girls who want to take part in this activity will be given a change to sign up.

This is an unusual opportunity for girls who do not have time to take a class in Natural dancing to work it in their extra-curricular activities, and the members of Orchesis hope that many girls will take advantage of it.

Queen Victoria Liked Music

Music was one of Queen Victoria's great interests throughout her life. The Etude says she played well on the piano, was taught the harp, and had a pleasing soprano voice. All the musicians of note who visited England ware invited to appear before the queen.

H.-S., R.-M. Game Is Drawing-Card For S. T. C. Girls

Students Attend Hop at Annapolis

The Hampden-Sydney—Randolph-Macon game in Petersburg proved to be the drawing card last week-end in spite of the fact that dear old H.-S. C. wasn't expected to win. The consistent "Tigers" lost to R.-M. C. with a score of 3-0. Cheer up lads, and all you S. T. C. girls who with loyal hearts root bravely on—another year is coming and from all reports it will prove to be a big one!

A list of those girls who went to the game is a mile long so get into your favorite chair and settle down for a nice long read cause here they are: Patricia Whitlock, Ruth Phelps, Mary Mahone, Army Butterworth, Betty Willcox, Helen McIlwaine, Betty Butterworth, Nancy Pierpont, Elizabeth West, Evelyn Kail.

Nan Armistead, Margaret Britton, Faye Brandon, Elizabeth Fowler, Elizabeth Cline, Rosalie Coberly, Ruth Emma Chambers, Mary Joyner Cox, Jennie Belle Gilliam, Rachel Kibler, Carter Belle Munt, Kathleen McCann, Isabel Plummer, Mary Harrison Vaughan, and Elizabeth Rucker.

Hampden-Sydney — Randolph-Macon games please not some people—they strive for—shall we say—bigger and better things?

Martha Holloway and Virginia Vose sought glee at the Naval Academy in Annapolis.

Betty Harwood even went so far as Harvard in Cambridge, Mass.

Elsie Dodd and Essie Millner went "whizzing" again. Their destination this time was none other than W. and L. in Lexington. Some dances or something.

Esther Atkinson and Marion Worsham went all the way to Hampden-Sydney. Imagine that!

Frances Irving went to her home in Portsmouth.

Luella LaFon, Marguerite Blackwell, Eleanor Watts, Nancy Gray and Helen Reiff trucked off to Lynchburg to the Nino Martini Concert.

Pauline Scott attended the Montpelier Races in Orange.

Meade Neale, Mildred Davis, Hope Dickinson, Jac Johnson, and Eleanor Dodson had their "whoop-pee" good time in the capitol city, Richmond.

Four Delegates Represent School At Virginia Press Association

23 Schools Discuss Journalism At Lexington

Charlotte Minton, Isabel Williamson, Florence Bress and Lenoir Hubbard attended the eleventh annual convention of the Virginia Intercollegiate Press Association on December 3 and 4 at Lexington, Virginia with Washington and Lee and V. M. I. acting as hosts.

There were one hundred and thirty-eight delegates from twenty-three Virginia colleges and one out-of-state college — American University of Washington, D. C. Besides these official delegates, the convention was host to approximately fifty visitors and unregistered delegates from the student publications.

The colleges represented were: Randolph - Macon (Ashland), Lynchburg College, Hampden-Sydney, Bridgewater College, University of Virginia, Washington and Lee, Roanoke College, Radford State Teachers College, American University, Fredericksburg State Teachers College, V. P. I., University of Richmond, Hollins College, Stratford College, Mary Baldwin College, V. M. I., Farmville State Teachers College, Blackstone College, William and Mary, Fairfax Hall, Harrisonburg State Teachers College, Sullins College, Randolph Macon's Womann's College, and Sweet Briar College.

On Friday afternoon and Saturday morning round table discussions were held. Discussing a wide variety of subjects on almost everything connected with journalism and its allied subjects, the three round table discussions held provided all the delegates with a chance to express their own ideas and to profit from the experience of other college journalists.

Friday night at 7:30 all the delegates met in Lee Chapel to hear Mr. Drew Pearson, co-author of the "Washington Merry - Go - Round" speak. Mr. William H. Hudgins, president of the association, presented Mr. Pearson, who spoke on "Behind the News in Washington." The entire address was centered on the three major problems of the Roosevelt administration.

Saturday morning after the discussion groups met, there were two addresses given in Lee Chapel. The first was "The Changing Newspaper" by Mr. John Daus Wise, publisher of "The Richmond Times-Dispatch" and "The World Crisis Today" by Colonel Withers Burness, Commandant at the Virginia Military Institute.

The social side of the convention included a dance held in Doremus gymnasium on Friday night, a trip to Natural Bridge Saturday afternoon and a banquet held at the Robert E. Lee Hotel on Saturday night. Guest speakers at the banquet were Senator Robert W. Daniel of Brandon, Dr. Francis Pendleton Gaines, president of Washington and Lee University, General Charles E. Kilbourne, superintendent of the Virginia Military Institute, and Professor O. W. Riegel, director of the Lee School of Journalism. At the close of the banquet Robert Nicholson of Washington and Lee awarded the cups to seven winners in the annual and newspaper divisions.

The winners were reported by the Executive Committee of the association as follows:

Class A Newspapers

(Published more often than weekly)—won by Ring-Tum Phi of Washington and Lee University; second, the College Topics of the University of Virginia.

Class B Newspapers

(Weekly papers)—won by the Senior Dance Is Perfect

'Twas the night of the senior dance when all through the gym —yes, all through, all over, everywhere you looked there were people and more people. The girls have never looked quite so lovely nor the boys more handsome. W. and L. was there and V. M. I. and V. P. I., William and Mary and Richmond U., Virginia and Annapolis, too, and of course the boys from the "Hill". (We couldn't have a dance without them).

The gym was—well it was beautiful! From the very middle of the room a huge red Christmas bell was hung and it was full of red balloons. Red and green crepe paper streamers caught at the bell and ran to the walls and half way down to the floors. From each basketball basket a huge red stocking hung all chucked full of toys. Around the walls laughing pink-faced Santa Clauses had been tacked and neatly wrapped packages, too. It must have taken a terrible lot of time and mighty hard work to make that gym look like it did, so much like Christmas that everyone under the streamers seemed to have the happy spirit.

Even Santa Claus was there with his bundle of toys which he gave to some of the seniors' favorite children.

'Ere the dance was half over—it was time for the figure. Everyone scrambled for the balcony, so that they could get a better view of the seniors as they marched up the gym with their escorts. They were a picture of grace and charm and beauty. The figure was led by the class president. The initial letter "S" was formed and the numbers three and eight. Everyone clapped loudly. It really was one of the best figures we've ever seen in that gym.

Following the figure the band played "Once in a White"—a senior no-break.

Intermission came and all too soon the end of the dance. We didn't get to see half the people we would liked to have seen. We couldn't—the night was too short.

As we climbed reluctantly up the steps after the dance we heard a freshman say, "Wasn't it wonderful—it looked just like a night club!" Exaggerated of course, the night club we mean, but—wonderful—you bet! It was us at our best.

Local Pi Gamma Mu Chapter Sends Girls to Convention

Madeline McGlothlin and Marjorie Robertson were chosen by the Virginia Gamma Chapter of Pi Gamma Mu to attend the National Convention of the society in Atlantic City, New Jersey on December 28-30. The important problem facing the fraternity and the improvements that each chapter may effect on its campus will be discussed.

Deane Saunders and Ruth Sears were chosen as alternates to the convention. A faculty member of the Virginia Gamma chapter is also expected to attend the meeting. Deane will take Madeline's place since Madeline will be unable to attend.

Dance Class Gives Demonstration

The dance class will present a demonstration class in the S. T. C. auditorium on Tuesday, December 14 at 8 o'clock. The class in presenting this demonstration before the public desires to show the nature of the work which they are doing under the direction of Mrs. W. C. Fitzpatrick. The faculty, administration, students and other persons interested in dance composition are invited to attend the demonstration.

Dr. J. J. Reeves Is Guest Of Local Y. W. C. A.

Methodist Minister Leads Devotionals

Dr. J. J. Reeves, minister of the Centenary Methodist church of Richmond, was the guest of the Y. W. C. A. Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of this week.

During his stay on the campus, Dr. Reeves conducted devotionals in chapel Tuesday, at prayers on Monday and in an open Y. W. cabinet meeting Tuesday afternoon. Tuesday at noon the Y. W. cabinet entertained Dr. and Mrs. Reeves with a lunch in the tea room.

In prayers Monday, Dr. Reeves emphasized the importance of fearing God in putting across his message called "In Secret of Wisdom." By the knowledge in virtue, he claimed that Christ meant that knowledge makes men good, that with wisdom man learns more keenly how important is following the teaching of the Son of God. Dr. Reeves based his statements on scientific fact rather than mere Biblical fact.

In chapel Tuesday, Dr. Reeves declared that every great act has to have a dreamer back of it. He said Pharoah's sad words to Joseph "I had a dream, but it is gone from me" are as pitiful words as man can utter. Music, art and all esthetic beauties are all the work of dreamers who nevertheless, have definite purposes in life. Dr. Reeves concluded his talk with Browning's famous words "A man's reach should exceed his grasp."

"Where do we live?" was the text of Dr. Reeves' message to the Y. W. cabinet and their guests. He said he believed that man lives wherever his interests lie. Man does not inhabit houses, he said, but all kinds of things in which he believes, works or takes part. He believes that these residences can be changed several times a day as the hours progress and man's interest change.

Dr. and Mrs. Reeves have visited various campuses of the State, taking their messages to young people. Dr. Reeves was formerly connected with a Roanoke church. His present congregation is of about 1500 people.

Vera Ebel, Will Present Mr. Coyner To Students

Mr. M. B. Coyner, who will be presented by the Juniors as classman on Thursday.

Vera Ebel, president of the Class of 1939, who will present Mr. Coyner to student body.

Presentation Theme Is Well Known By Students

Classman Will Be Praised

Vera Ebel, president of the Junior class will present the classman, Mr. M. B. Coyner, in chapel on Thursday, December 9.

The theme will be new, as this is Mr. Coyner's first year as classman. He was elected this Fall to fill the vacancy created by Miss Grace Moran's resignation. The presentation theme, therefore, will be a surprise to everyone.

Four new songs were written for the occasion by Frankie Bryan, Frances Irving and Margaret Britton. Two of the class's old songs will be included in the program.

The freshman sister class will be dressed in white and assist in the singing.

Junior Class officers will lead the cheers. The officers are: Vera Ebel, president; Virginia Whitehead Smith, vice-president; Clara Nottingham, secretary; and Louise Anthony, treasurer.

Students Vote For Queen Of Mardi Gras

March has been set for the annual Mardi Gras celebration, sponsored by Pi Gamma Mu, honor fraternity in social science because Easter will come late.

Nominations for the queen and her court submitted by the committee which was composed of the four classmen, Miss Royall, Mr. Coyner, Miss Bedford, and Mr. French, and the adviser to Pi Gamma Bu, Mr. Holton, were voted on by the student body on December 3. Girls on the list included Frances Bryan, Elizabeth Butler, Sara Button, Juanita Carson, Elsie Dodd, Norma Johnson, Susan Lane, Jennie Belle Gilliam, Helen Seward, Nan Seward, Lula Windham, Isabel Plummer, Kitty Roberts, Charlotte Minton, Carter Belle Munt, Gay Steiffen, Betty Hardy, and Betty Fahr.

From these names voters placed one for queen in the marked section of the ballot and then scratched all but the eight they wished for the court.

Mardi Gras at S. T. C. is a small imitation of the great celebration at New Orleans each year.

Debate Club Sends Members To Tournament

At the Dixie Invitational Forensic Tournament, sponsored by the Strawberry Leaf Society, which was held at Winthrop College, at Rock Hill, South Carolina, December 2-4, Farmville was represented by Lorana Moomaw and Pattie Alston Bounds affiirmative, and Sudie Yager and Nora Jones, negative.

The tournament opened formally on Thursday morning with the Strawberry Leaf service in Johnson Hall before all the delegates of the convention. The four representatives of Farmville and two boys from North Carolina assisted the Winthrop girls in the program.

Nora Jones, the senior delegate from Farmville, was S. T. C.'s representative in "Dixie Wedding" on Friday night, a service symbolizing the joining of Winthrop with all the other colleges in the bonds of forensic activities.

Miss Nichols, who was debate coach on this trip, and Nora Jones and Pattie Bounds, who became members of the Strawberry Leaf Society at its installation here last year, were guests at Dr. Keith's table at the Strawberry Leaf banquet.

This convention was the largest ever held at Winthrop. There were over 250 debaters, representing

Miss Irene Hudson Of Louisville Is Y. W Speaker

Miss Irene Hope Hudson, student secretary of the Southern Presbyterian Church from Louisville, Ky. was the guest speaker of a special prayer service held on Dec. 2 by the Y. W. C. A. This service was one of the many all over the country to commemorate the 25th anniversary of the dedication of the Y. W. C. A. National Board Building at 600 Lexington Ave., New York City.

Miss Hudson was visiting Farmville to speak to the Woman's Auxiliary of the Presbyterian Church. She told how greatly the Y. W. C. A. has grown and spread in the intervening years.

Miss Hudson was introduced by Mrs. Frank Crawford of Farmville.

Nan Seward, president of our Y. W. C. A., received an invitation to attend a reception at 600 Lexington Ave., New York City on Dec. 2. There was at that time also a dedication ceremony there.

Our Rotten Communication

THERE are over 600 students enrolled in this school. Besides these students, there are members of the home department, teachers and town girls who wish to telephone occasionally. There are in this whole school exactly five phones, only one of which is available to the students.

At whatever hour you choose to phone, no matter how important the call, you have to wait for the telephone. If it is an out-of-town call, more than likely, around five calls will be put through before your party can get in touch with you, even if you have tried to trace the call. This is an abominable situation, unpleasant to be endured in these modern times when efficiency is demanded.

The administration claims we should study. Well, our activities along that line certainly aren't improved when we often have to wait from seven until ten for one telephone call.

The one telephone we do have is in very poor condition. It is all but impossible to hear whta is being said over it—especially when we have to use it with several people in the home office distracting our attention.

Why cannot we have all the accommodations of an up-to-date school? Why do we have to go all the way to the home office to get a call, no matter how anxious we are to remain informally attired? Certainly easy and satisfactory communication is one of the first requirements of a modern world, and, from the looks of things we seem to have the same telephone system that was first put into existence.

Virginian Plans Get Underway As Drive Begins

The Virginian Staff is beginning a concentrated drive in the sale of annuals. Members of the staff will be at the table in the hall and around to the individual rooms soliciting subscriptions.

Plans for the 1938 Virginian are well under way. All of the group pictures were successful and none will have to be retaken. Mr. Gordon Brightman of John and Oliver Engraving Company and Mr. Walter Brown of the J. P. Bell Company, Lynchburg, Virginia, have been here during the past week helping with the general layout of the book.

A subscription may be secured from any member of the staff with the down payment of one dollar, with four dollars to be paid later in the year if so desired. Subscribe to the Virginian before Christmas, and help the sired. Students are urged to subscribe now and finish payments after Christmas.

FreshmanCommission Will Give Bazaar

The Freshman Commission will give a Japanese Bazaar Friday, Dec. 10 from 4 to 6 P. M. in the rec. This is one of the traditional features of the commission. This year the commission has been unusually fortunate in securing charming Japanese trinkets and novelties which will make excellent Christmas presents.

Tea will be served to all who attend. It is one of the big events of the year sponsored by the commission. The prices of the gifts are very reasonable.

Science Is Saver Of Mankind And Should Be Guarded

Of every dollar of tax money from the American people, more than eighty cents is spent on war and war machinery and less than one-half of a cent in scientific research. This means that we spend less than one-half a cent out of every dollar in carrying on warfare against enemies that we cannot avoid and over eighty cents in useless warfare against other mother's sons.

We claim we have a highly civilized country, as we passively sit in our easy chairs free from worry over yellow fever, smallpox and other diseases that once took their unlimited tolls from us yearly. We accept graciously all scientific knowledge that is handed us. We give our children serums and vaccines against diseases; we eat our meats with complete confidence that all parasites have been carefully excluded. We fuss and get indignant when we hear of deaths from disease, cures for which have not yet been discovered. We accept our blessings, yet we do nothing to make the jobs of scientists easy. To most of us the names of Louis Pasteur, Walter Reed and Madame Curie are merely ones we learned in Hygiene or Biology. These men and women are as great heroes as ever Horatius or Nathan Hale. Soldiers give their lives willingly and die heroes. Scientists give their lives fighting enemies so small they cannot be seen with the naked eye in valiant attempt to further humanity.

In his discovery of the causes of yellow fever, Walter Reed saved more lives than we lost in the World War. Yet we spend one hundred and sixty times as much on just such wars and preparations of wars as we do in helping men who are doing such work as Walter Reed did.

Fellow-Americans, the time is upon us when we must do something or perish. Are we going or are we contributing to science so that it can come to our aid? Insects are the only species of animal life that is steadily on the increase. Great scientists have said that if any type of animal supplants man, it will be the insects. Some have even gone far enough to say that they will some day make the human race extinct. Only science can save us. And yet we sit contentedly in our homes, smugly sure of our superiority.

Books Make Perfect Gifts

Have you been worrying over some of those Christmas gifts you just can't decide about? Then forget it! Books are always suitable and always appreciated. A few minutes of careful thought in your selection—and you have a lasting and worthwhile remembrance.

Novels seem to be the most popular, and there is an abundance of really good ones this season. Have you read "The Running of the Deer?" Written about the average American family it is witty and fast-moving. Don Wickenden, in this book, has given us a sparkling and spicy story.

Honors also go to Faith Baldwin for her "Manhattan Nights". I think the very name is intriguing and those of you who know Miss Baldwin will be sure that the novel is even more entertaining. The same might be said of Mary Robert Rinehart's "Tish Marches On". The reputation of the author is enough to make us eager to find out just what she has to tell in her latest book.

For anyone who likes biographies "The Life of Henry Clay" is particularly good. Glyndon Van Deusen has succeeded in finding much hitherto unissued materials and from this he has drawn an unusually clever and realistic picture of the master statesman. It is our opinion that this is one of the best books yet written about Henry Clay.

I believe all treu Virginians will want to see Charles Smith's interpretation of the University of Virginia. In a series of woodcuts Mr. Smith has presented the University, keeping in mind the "things that Poe saw, that the oldest living graduates saw; things that first year men see and others will see for years to come; things that will reflect something of the spirit and feeling of this place, that is dear to the hearts of so many men who have lived here."

For scores of other delightful books notice any book reviews and don't forget that something to read makes a pleasing gift.

HUMOR

"If you can't change his opinion by getting mad with him try being disappointed in him. He will at least get mad with you."

Said the shoe to the sock, "I'll wear a hole in you",

Said the sock to the shoe, "I'll be darned if you do."

Said the tree to the river, "I'll fall down in you",

Said the river to the tree, "I'll be dammed if you do."

Said the boy to his girl, "I'll put my arm around you",

Said the girl to the boy, "I'll be held if you do."

The Xavier University News comments that a professor who comes 10 minutes late for his class is quite rare. In fact, he's in a class all by himself.

Dean—What do most college students do with their week-ends?

Student—They hang their hats on them.

The decrepit old car drove up to the tall bridge.

"Seventy-five cents," cried the gateman.

"Sold," said the driver.

Aunt Fanny: "Aren't you going to say the blessing, dearie?"

Modern child: "This food is coming to you through the courtesy of God Almighty."

Sarge: "Brown?"
Voice: "Here."
Sarge: "I don't see Brown. Who answered for him?"
Voice: "I did, I thought you called my name."
Sarge: "What is your name?"
Voice: "Stevenopatske."

Ye Ancient Bille Collector: "Sire I have come to collect for that last suit of armor."

Ye Olde Knightie: "Odds bodkins knave. How did you get across the moat into my castle?"

Ye Ancient Bille Collector: "'Twas easy, sire. I caught the gate guard with his bridges down."

LETTER TO EDITOR

For some reason or other things have been sadly mutilated since our return from Thanksgiving holidays. It seems that "some" student has taken it upon herself to get her "punch" twisted as to the author of the Open Forum letter of two weeks ago. Perhaps it has not occured to "some" student that hunches, and especially poorly chosen ones, may be wrong now and then.

It is evident that "some" student comes to conclusions without due consideration and that she is not aware of the fact that there may be others outside a certain organization that choose to defend its name and purpose out of unadulterated admiration and respect which is entirely different from the spirit of envy.

We wish to inform "some" student that this organization stands for the highest and best in the eyes of the school authorities, and that it is only through jealousy and twisted "grape-vine" messages, such as those harbored and nursed by students of the same calibre as "some" student, that unwarranted curiosity and suspicion are aroused. It is a well-known fact among those whose intelligence and sense of reasoning are more than just average that interest—of the right kind—is beneficial to any organization; but this misplaced propaganda does not come under the title of true interest.

We do not lower ourselves to even think of trying to find out who "some" student is—we don't care nor do we wish to know, but shall we say that for her own well-being and health of mind t'would be best to let the matter drop where it stands.

A word to the wise is sufficient!

Rotunda Reverberations

The class of '38's grand finale was a huge success! Everybody entered into the spirit of the occasion . . . there was the spirit of Xmas carried out in the decorations . . . lots of class spirit . . . and quite a bit of lust plain . . . ah . . . spirit!! 'Twas indeed jolly dance and now we can all settle down to a humdrum existence and pray that time will pass quick like a rabbit until Xmas.

The battle of words between that very secret organization, that none of us know anything about except that they always leave their calling card, and a few students on the outside looking in waxes hotter. A couple of weeks ago a member of this group, whose name you mustn't speak aloud, wrote an Open Forum letter railing the prying students who hindered them in their worthwhile . . . activities?? Last week some student made a very clever reply. The general opinion is that this secret and illustrious organization will have to make a neat retaliation or else retreat under fire!!

Mary Hubbard's ulterior motive in attending the Fellowship so diligently has proven of no avail. Each Sunday night she has been in faithful attendance hoping for an admiring glance from one . . . Marshall Keane . . . who is said to be Tyrone Power's double! Imagine her chagrin when upon entering Shannon's the other night she flutteringly greeted him and he turned and asked the group of girls he was with who she was and commented that he believed he had seen her somewhere before but couldn't remember where!!

The budding romance of the leading lady and man of the recent play, Mary of Scotland, appears to be just before bursting into full bloom!! When it was at first a difficult piece of acting for both now promises to be one of the romances of H.-S. and S. T. C. As a result Miss Wheeler will probably be swamped with amorous lads and lassies who want to give their all to art.

Another depression may, as many predict, be just around the well known corner . . . but from all appearances the ribbon business in Farmville will go on booming. There have been warnings of its approach for some time and at last it is upon us in full and colorful force. Bows of ribbon of every known hue adorn the locks of the vast majority of S. T. C. maids . . . blondes, brunettes, redheads, brownettes and tresses of nondescript have fallen victim to the fad! Each day they become larger and uglier!! Some perch upon the top of the head . . . reminiscent of childhood days . . . some are poised on the front of the head and droop gracefully over the eyebrows . . . some are tied upon the back of the head and droop down to the nape of the neck . . . every concievable angle, shape, position and size has been effected!! Many lassies . . . not content with one . . . have put them on back, front and each side of head in ever increasing size and in contrasting colors. The only way you can rise above this sea of ribbon is not to wear a bow! Then . . . you are indeed a conspicuous specimen of girlhood!

Changing Moods Make Normality

"When happiness or sorrow becomes chronic, then it becomes dangerous. Permanent sorrow is produced by the exaggerated pictures of our imagination; the longer we allow ourselves to dwell in that state the further we drift from reality. Permanent happiness tends to make most people selfish, oblivious of reality, uninterested in anything outside their own happiness."

The Fool's Prayer
By Edward Rowland Sill

The royal feast was done; the King
Sought some new sport to banish care.
And to his jester cried: "Sir Fool,
Kneel now, and make for us a prayer!"

The jester doffed his cap and bells,
And stood the mocking court before:
They could not see the bitter smile
Behind the painted grin he wore.

He bowed his head, and bent his knee
Upon the monarch's silken stool;
His pleading voice arose: "O Lord,
Be merciful to me, a fool!

"No pity, Lord, could change the heart
From red with wrong to white as wool;
The rod must heal the sin; but, Lord,
Be merciful to me, a fool!

"'Tis not by guilt the onward sweep
Of truth and right, O Lord, we stay;
'Tis by our follies that so long
We hold the earth from heaven away.

"These clumsy feet, still in the mire,
Go crushing blossoms without end;
These hard, well-meaning hands we thrust
Among the heart-strings of a friend.

"The ill-timed truth we might have kept—
Who knows how sharp it pierced and stung!
The word we had not sense to say—
Who knows how grandly it had rung!

"Our faults no tenderness should ask,
The chastening stripes must cleanse them all;
But for our blunders—oh, in shame
Before the eyes of heaven we fall.

"Earth hears no balsam for mistakes;
Men crown the knave and scourge the tool
That did his will; but Thou, O Lord,
Be merciful to me, A fool!"

The room was hushed; in silence rose
The king, and sought his gardens cool,
And walked apart, and murmured low,
"Be merciful to me, A fool!"

GLEANINGS

By

* * * *

Back in the year of 1927 a page of history was made when a lanky, touseled-haired young man stepped into his monoplane, The Spirit of St. Louis, and made a non-stop flight across the great expanse of Atlantic Ocean. Since that time Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh has been news — everything he said said or done has been spread on the front pages of every newspaper in the United States.

When he married the daughter of the late Dwight Morrow it was great publicity. When their first son was born, it was more than publicity; it was tremendous!

This famous couple, happily married, secure, a lovely home and delightful sunny-haired son—looked on the world as beautiful—a wonderful place!

Then, in 1932 tragedy, stark tragedy knocked on their door, and their son, Colonel Lindbergh's name in miniature, was torn from their arms—kidnapped. Months of agony they went through, wondering, hoping against hope, praying—things suffering parents alone can know. Then, one dismal foggy morning in May, someone came upon the tiny body, badly decomposed, his sunny hair clotted with blood—murdered!

Another son, Jon, was born to them soon afterwards—and upon repeated requests, he was spared the ordeal of publicity his dead brother had known: playing in his sand box, eating his breakfast; learning to walk, showing his two new teeth—little Jon was spared that.

His parents continued to make headlines through good-will tours, the trial of their son's murderer, Richard Hauptman, their lectures and books. And finally in 1935, tired of it all, they voluntarily went into exile in England. America, as well as England, gasped and wondered and continued to wonder. While in England, still another son, Land, was born to them. It astonished the American public that none had known or suspected that this famous couple was even expecting a new arrival to their family.

On December 5, 1937, a tall man and a small woman arrived in New York on the S. S. President Harding. They traveled third class and were not immediately recognized by news-hounds until one alert young man thought their appearance was familiar. The press's advances were repulsed coldly and firmly, and Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh got into a waiting car and were sped away to the home of the Morrows at Englewood, New Jersey.

They have ended their self-imposed exile—for a little while. They have come home—to their native land to celebrate Christmas. Let us hope they have the vacation they desire; let us hope they realize how wonderful this land is!

And let us hope, too, that the news-hounds and curious mobs of on-lookers spare them. We firmly believe that the tragedy that broke their hearts came from publicity and write-ups. We believe, too, that the Lindberghs realize this and are trying to escape it. In England they have peace: they left their sons in England where they would not be hounded by the press: in England they found a sanctuary —a haven of peace—away from the constant demands of celebrity-minded people.

They are back—they came back of their own accord. May they find the place they desire in their own country—the United States.

Annex Now Prize Ring

Round one! There goes the alarm clock. She's up; she's down, —no they're both down, and so it goes. Second floor Annex, otherwise known as Junior Hall, became Madison Square Garden for several nights last week. The ordinary ways of making noise and having fun ceased to amuse; so, some clever soul suggested having a wrestling match. And, oh boy, did they have one!

Naturally, much care was taken to see that all rules were observed and that no foul play went on. The seconds worked faithfully with towels and alcohol between each round (alarm-clock interlude), while frantic managers paced back and forth among the spectators and cheering squad.

At the sound of the bells (alarm-clocks don't alarm in unison) the fighters sprang into action (when they didn't slip), the side-lines cheering with unbelievable energy, while in other parts of the building, early sleepers wished that Madison Square Garden was where it belonged in New York.

The second night of the Olympics resulted in casualties so that the matches were postponed until another dull night.

Athletic Mystery Concerns Ancient Favorite Female Sport

Everybody's doing it—or at least everybody who feels capable, for truly it is a bit rough and boisterous—in the old fashioned sense of the word. Girls who were ladies of eighteen, nineteen, twenty years of age in times gone by did not participate. Oh, no! They had other and better (we hope) things to do. At least this is what we have been told and we can't argue because they are not here to argue with. Good point, eh?

To return to the original idea this activity is boisterous. One throws at, to and up; dashes madly about, stays in one section designated particularly for his or her station; watches position. It is a complicated affair.

Recently the athletic type has gone quite gaga about this particular form of—well, it does seem that they are planning big things in a big way. Sometimes I wonder—it's bound to be exciting, thrilling, yes, I almost wish I did too.

This thing has definite plans as well. Divisions are one of its outstanding features; there are two main points of interest. When these are being approached it seems that excitement like a tidal wave sweeps the people, stirring them to mad cries, to hand clapping and general ejaculation. What is it? Oh, don't you know?

"Gather 'round me children"—but first—did you ever see a basketball?

Math, Golf, Billiards, Skis

By Mary Mahone

Over the first week in Nov. a number of important college football rivalries were settled. Dartmouth beat Princeton, Pitt beat Notre Dame, Stanford beat Southern Calif. and in Crete, Nebraska Doane College beat Nebraska Wesleyan. To little Doane this was as important a football event as any that took place in the U. S. For thirty years Doane and Nebraska Wesleyan have been bitter rivals. Doane is a small fresh water co-ed college but they are as football minded as any of the larger colleges. They have their football traditions and customs along with the best. There is a girl cheer leader and a girl drum-corps, members of which, with their drum escort injured players off the field. After beating Wesleyan some of the students rang the big school bell while others dragged the old Doane hearse around the field. The hearse was supposed to be for Wesleyan's coach. Doane's one claim to fame is the fact that it was the Alma Mater of America's Heart Throb, Baby Faced Robert Taylor.

Coach Finds Math Unnecessary

Plays on the Sacriments Jr. College team are not mathematically minded so coach Hack Applequiso has his quarterback call signals by name rather than by numbers. In the huddle he whispers such directions as Good Earth, the Big Parade, Three Men on a Horse, the Charleston, the hula and the rhumba.

Last week the scholarly forty year old Briton, Capt. George Eyston in strange mashand goggles improved on Sir Malcolm Campbell's world auto record of 302.13 miles per hour. On Utah flats Eyston attained 311.42 miles an hour. "I knew I was going faster than ever before," said Eyston", because I had to hold on to my goggles and drive with one hand. It was one hell of a ride and I don't mean that profanely."

Veteran Golfer Honored

On a Yonkers, New York cow pasture owned by John Reid the golf course for the oldest country club in the U. S. with a continuous existence was laid out in 1888 and named after Scotland's famed St. Andrews. Owner Reid was its first president and his son, Archie, was soon permitted to join as a jr. member. Archibald M. Reid played in eight U. S. Amateur Golf Championships between 1901 and 1913 twice reaching the third round. Now tall, handsome and fifty-three, he was last week designated to top man of golf—to become president of the U. S. Golf Association, taking office next January..

In pocket billiards vulgarily known as pool, pale dark haired Ralph Greenleaf ranks about tops, having been champion most of the time for fifteen years. Last week in Philadelphia Billiardist Greenleaf and lantern jawed Billiardist Irving Crane each had eight victories and three defeats after a three weeks tournament among twelve top ranking players. In the eleventh inning of the play off Crane having defaulted five times found himself with a total of minus one to Greenleaf's forty-nine. Then Billiardist Greenleaf strode to the table and started sinking balls so fast that one had scarcely thudded into the pocket before another had followed it. Blandly running seventy-six Greenleaf packed up his cues and moved off with the match and $1,300 and his sixteenth world championship.

Ski Rules Change

U. S. Ski enthusiasts eagerly sniffing the air for snow last week suddenly found a healthy blizzard raging in their samover. For Emile Allais, inter-champion laid down a new and highly controversial rule for skiing. All skiing turns should be abandoned except the pure Christiana and the parallel Christiana. The French Ski Federation heartily agreed with the champion and promptly adopted his just published "Le Ski Francais" as the official method of teaching Frenchmen to Ski. Ski masters in the U. S. shook their heads over this hasty French abandonment of a twenty year old tried and true technique, doubting whether better skiers could be produced by limiting the repertoire of ski maneuvers.

Gets Underway As Season Nears

Basketball practice is getting underway steadily now and is creating much interest. There is yet plenty of time to get in sufficient practice to win a place on a team.

There are nine seniors, thirteen juniors, 19 sophomores, and about 25 freshmen who are attending practices regularly. Varsity squad will be chosen in a few weeks from these participants.

The schedule of games up to date is as follows:

January 28—Roanoke College, here, 8:00 P. M.

February 18—William and Mary, here, 8:00 P. M.

February 25—Blackstone, there, 8 P. M.

March 4—Harrisonburg, here, 8 P. M.

Mu Omega Holds Banquet For Pledges

Other Groups Enjoy Teas

The Mu Omega sorority held a banquet in the Tea Room on Friday night, December 3rd, in honor of its pledges. A Christmas theme was carried out in decorations, favors and toasts.

Besides the active members and pledges, the following were guests: Miss Wheeler, faculty adviser; Miss Mix, Pan-Hellenic adviser; Mrs. Whitfield, Kitty Smoot, Frank Smoot, Mrs. Cook, Eleanor Haag and Frankie McDaniel, all alumnae; Mrs. Hubbard, patron; and Mrs. Fitzpatrick, honorary member.

Miss London Serves Tea

The Phi Zeta Sigma Club was entertained at tea by Miss Willie London, adviser, at her home on Thursday afternoon.

Gamma Theta Tea

On Sunday, December 5th, the Gamma Thetas had a tea in their chapter room from five until six o'clock. Tea, sandwiches, and cakes were served. The room was lighted by candle light. Active members and Miss Stubbs, faculty adviser, were present.

Sigmas Entertain

The Sigma Sigma Sigma sorority was entertained at a tea on Sunday afternoon by Betty Butterworth, Eugenia Jolly, Jennie Belle Gilliam, and Nan Seward. Tea and sandwiches were served.

The Tri Sigmas will hold their pledge banquet in the tea room tonight. Christmas decorations will be carried out.

Alpha Kappa Gamma Entertains Guests At Program Meeting

Members of Alpha Kappa Gamma and several guests were entertained with a program in the sitting room of Cunningham Hall before a wood fire Tuesday evening.

The regular meeting of the circle was held before the guests arrived. Dr. J. L. Jarman and Miss Mary White Cox, honorary members, Miss Grace Mix and Miss Mary Nichols, former advisors were the guests. Miss Florence Stubbs, national executive secretary and Miss Jane Royall, national president, were the members present besides the active student members.

Isabel Plummer, vice-president, introduced each person on the program. Elizabeth Roberts read a paper prepared by Elizabeth Morris, who was unable to be present, in which were stated facts to prove that Alpha Kappa Gamma members can make the campus a better place because of their existence on this campus. This paper closed with the quoting of Emily Dickinson's poem "Then I Shall Not Have Lived in Vain."

Virginia Agee then read and talked on the life of Joan of Arc, patron saint of this circle of the order. She also closed with a poem on the life and purpose of the Maid of Orleans.

Miss Jane Royall then presented a story filled in unconsciously in the answering of pointed questions by the members.

Elizabeth Shiplett, president, assisted by several members served sandwiches, tea and cakes, decorated like Christmas trees, to guests and members.

INSPIRATION to loveliness—Jean Dickinson, charming young radio star, is an example to women of how beauty can be acquired by careful attention to skin, eyes, hair, hands and costume.

A Perfectly Balanced Beauty Diet For Every Skin in the World

By Helena Rubinstein

Specialists who improve and preserve the beauty of women knew that certain basic principles are involved. They knew that beauty in a woman is chiefly dependent on health and cleanliness. That it can be stimulated and nourished. That it can be improved by the use of cosmetics carefully chosen. That heridity has the first word about each person's appearance, habits of living the last word.

Every woman may develop practical, effective and economical habits of beauty which she can follow in her own home. The simplest and easiest way is to follow a three steps to beauty plan. A co-ordinated treatment which cleanses the skin deeply, re-supplies needed oils and gives tone to weary tissues.

A good plan is to use the time on four or five days for concentrated care of the skin. On other days give special attention to hair, hands and nails. If you will adopt the three steps to beauty treatment and stand by it a whole month you will be so delighted you never will give it up. Even in two weeks the improvement will amaze you.

First, cleanse with a special washing preparation, as for instance, one consisting of tiny grains which lather beautifully and which do things to your face. The magic little granules reach down into the pores, dissolving all impurities and blackheads. They eliminate blemishes too, and wipe out that fatigued look. And for beautifying arms and elbows they are ideal. The oily blemished skin will benefit by their daily use, while the dry skin needs them only twice-a-week. Most skins do better if an application of cool, silky cream, as for instance, one made from pasteurized milk is smoothed over face and neck after washing and left on a few moments.

Second, lubrication and clearing action through a tissue cream blended from herbal juices and other beneficial ingredients smooths out tired lines, corrects crepiness and is equally vital for a young skin because it intensifies its natural fineness. If these two creams are used in conjunction with one another they work in perfect harmony and aid remarkably in the correction of lines, dullness and fatigue, giving the skin fresh radiance and vigor.

Third, a good skin toning lotion to impart a refreshing coolness, close the pores and keep the skin texture supple. This prepares the skin for make-up.

Try it. Make the most of your looks and of your life. Become a more efficient and interesting as well as a better looking woman.

If you would like to have detailed information about skin care, write me in care of this paper.

Pitt Co-eds Plan Campus Etiquette

"Pittiquette" is to the University of Pittsburgh what Emily Post is to society in general. It is edited by a sophomore co-ed and is presented to all freshman girls at the University.

That they will have no excuse for not looking before they leap, these are some of the points it makes:

"Save the rhumba, tango and southern swing dances for private showings.

"Collect names. Make it a point of finding out the name of someone who speaks to you so that next time you can say, 'Hello, Mary.' Not, 'Oh, hello-o-o.'

"Give your courtesy musices a little exercise. Which means rising for faculty members—even the seniors.

If S. T. C. Girls Sang For Their Supper What They Would Sing

If S. T. C. girls had to sing for their supper what song would they sing? At a specially conducted poll held at the table in the hall Monday votes were cast for the favorite song at Farmville. When the results were counted the Queen of Songs turned out to be "Once in a While", winning with 55 votes.

"I Still Love to Kiss You Good-Night" followed close on its heels for the position of Maid of Honor.

The songs that are in the court in order of favoritism are: "Stardust", "Night and Day", "You Can't Stop Me From Dreaming", "Harbor Lights", "Remember Me", "Tears in My Heart", "If It's the Last Thing I Do", "I'm Getting Sentimental Over You" and lastly "The One Rose".

Many others received nominations but not enough votes to win an honor in the court. "I Love You Truly", "My Rosary" and "Ah Sweet Mystery of Life" were not forgotten by the student body. Dr. Jarman's favorite, "Keep on Hoping" was a runner-up. Dr. Wynne cast his vote for "My Old Kentucky Home", and Mrs. Warren likes. "Ah, Sweet Mystery of Love". Dr. Simkins favors "Estrallalite" (Little Star).

Billie Lewis thinks "Show Me the Way to Go Home" tops them all. It is hoped that Prince Smith and Sue Owen can account for "Ring Ding D"—it must be original 'cause it's not in our list.

As the last word, Vera Ebel steps in tune with the season to "Santa Claus is Coming to Town."

Congratulations to the Queen and her court. May they be happily hummed with honor!

Usual Trips Are Not Hindered By Senior Dance

Alumnae Return For Dance

There was much swishing and swing of hats and bags as many girls scurried hither and thither dismissing all thoughts of lessons, approaching exams, and even the Senior Dance from their minds. On the while, it was a week-end of much excitement for those going, coming, or staying.

Marjorie Woolfolk, Marguerite Russ, Yates Carr, Margaret Barnes, Eleanor Pearce and Ella Ware went to Richmond.

Pattie Bounds, Nora Jones, Lorena Moomaw, and Sudie Yager all lost their voices in Rock Hill, S. C. They represented S. T. C. in a debate tournament.

Elizabeth Morris spent the week-end at the College of William and Mary in Williamsburg.

Frances Warriner visited friends in Washington, D. C.

Frances Bryan attended her brother's wedding in Richmond.

Livian Powell, Frances Pope and Helen Green motored to Lynchburg.

Flash! Ruth Curtis Robeson had a date in the "rec" Sunday night.

Virginia Reed Turner went home to that dentist again. It seems that Perry Smith has taken a liking to the dentists, too—Hers is in South Hill.

Charlotte Minton, LeNoir Hubbard, Isabel Williamson and Florence Bress went to Lexington.

Frances Ellett and Mary Elizabeth Pettigrew visited their homes in Roanoke.

Others going home were Edna Bolick, Dot Davis, Jac Davis, Louise Allen, Kitty Brooks, Helen Dooley, Katherine Edwards, Martha Meade Hardaway, Pattie Jeffries, Margaret Thomas, Frances Williams, Billy Lewis, Pauline Scott, Frances Lyons, Frances Barnes, and Ethel Burgess.

Alumnae returning included Mary Lib Slater, Pauline and Mary Jones, Dot Wise, Polly Wall, Sue Mallory, Virginia Baker, Selma Berry, Doris Brandis, Elise Turner, Kitty and Frank Smoot, Ruth Crumley, Katherine Williams, Billie Lewis, Pauline Conway, Kitty Fitzgerald, Helen Fern Perdue, Frankie McDaniels, and Mary Bowles.

School Voices Will Present Christmas Carols Sunday Night

Mr. Strick Reserves Seats for Visitors From Many Towns

The A'capella College Choir and Choral Club will present their annual Carol Service in the College Auditorium, Sunday evening, December 19th, beginning at 8:30 P. M. Included in the concert will be Myron Kahn, concertmaster of the Richmond Philharmonic Orchestra, Alfred Forrest, Tenor of Hampton, Virginia and Miss Irene Leake, noted soprano of Farmville. The Christmas message will be delivered by Miss Juanita Callis.

Engraved invitations have been mailed throughout Southside Virginia and one hundred and fifty seats have been reserved for guests coming from Newport News, Portsmouth, Hilten Village, Hampton, Petersburg, Richmond, Keysville, South Hill, Drakes Branch, Appomattox, Lynchburg, Pamplin, Crewe, Victoria, and Green Bay. This unusual interest is due in part to the fact that the A'capella and College Choir will wear their new robes and many parents and friends will be here to listen to the program.

Members of the Woman's Club of Farmville, who are interested in the choral organizations, are giving wide publicity to the concert, and the interest in the Student Body is unusual.

Students will be admitted only on presentation of a silver offering made at the door and the Executive Committee has announced that no student will be admitted who does not comply with the request. This offering is necessary to meet the heavy expense involved.

Mr. Alfred H. Strick, Director of the three choral groups states, "The robes are similar to those worn by leading universities of America and as far as is known not duplicated in Virginia. I feel sure the Administration, Faculty and Student Body will be proud

Organization Heads Will Place Gifts Under Lighted Tree

In connection with the customary White Christmas Celebration this year, two Christmas trees, brightened by red lights, decorated the S. T. C. campus for the holiday season. The two fir trees by the Colonnade were decorated in the traditional manner on Tuesday night, December 14.

Tonight the student body will gather about these trees on the campus for the presentation of gifts for White Christmas. Christmas carols will be sung as heads of classes and organizations bring donations for the Christmas boxes sent to needy families.

The expense for the trees was shared by the students, the faculty and Alpha Kappa Gamma.

Alpha Phi Sigma Holds Program Meet

A program was presented by members of Alpha Phi Sigma at its last meeting made up of discussion of the lives of two ancient Greek philosophers and a musical selection.

After a brief business meeting, Margaret Black, head of the program committee presented the following program: Plato by Jane Rosenberger, Aristotle by Alma Ricketts, Epicurus by Sara Melba Beale. Jane Hardy gave piano selections between each discussion.

Juniors Present Mr. Coyner Thursday As Classman

Mr. Coyner, as Coach of the Junior Class, was presented by Vera Ebel, president of the class, in chapel last Thursday morning.

The class, dressed all in White, was seated on bleachers on the stage. Vera Ebel, Virginia Smith, Clara Nottingham, and Louise Anthony, officers of the Junior Class, acted as cheerleaders. They were dressed in dark green, carrying out the class colors, green and white.

The Freshmen, sister class of the Juniors, also dressed in green and white. They stood while "Green and White" was sung. "Classmates", Junior class song, followed this. The Cheerleaders led the class in a cheer for Mr. Coyner. Original songs to the tune of familiar school songs were dedicated to Mr. Coyner. After the singing of these by the Juniors, Vera Ebel presented Mr. Coyner, scholar, friend, coach and Classman.

Pi Gamma Mu Chooses Project For Year's Work

Travelogue Will Be Worked Up

Pi Gamma Mu, National Social Science Fraternity, announced its annual project as Pan American Relations at a program meeting Tuesday night, December 7.

This year the work will be in the form of a Travelogue picturing the relation of the United States to the Latin American Countries. It will further include a discussion of the activities of the Pan American countries that are important to the United States.

At the program meeting of the society on Tuesday night Virginia Whitehead Smith discussed the present war between Japan and China. She pointed out the past history of both countries leading up to present conditions. Virginia brought out the fact that while China is larger and more thickly populated it is not so well organized as Japan.

The final discussion of the question brought about the conclusion that past history and prevailing conditions make it possible for the small country of Japan to fight successfully the larger nation of China.

Miss Mary Presents Message to Students In Student Meeting

"Thoughtfulness is the best gift" was the theme of Miss Mary White Cox's message to the members of the student body at its meeting Thursday, December 9. She suggested that they be more considerate about minor things.

Mary Harrison Vaughan, Editor of "The Rounta" urged the members of the student body to make a special effort to cooperate with Dr. Jarman's desire that we march out of chapel in an orderly manner.

The Student Standards Committee offered its plan of Closed Study Hour for trial.

S. T. C. Basketball Team Journeys North

Panzer College at East Orange, New Jersey has scheduled a game with Farmville on February 11th or 12th. Panzer is a Physical Education school for girls and promises a tough game for Farmville. This is one of the schools that our team will have to conquer on its northern trip. Dates with other Northern Schools have not been definitely set.

Susan Lane is Elected Fete Queen Second Time

Susan Lane of Altavista who will be Queen of the Mardi Gras for the second succeeding year.

Eight Members of the Court Are Chosen by the Student Body To Attend Her Majesty the Queen

Susan Lane, of Altavista, has been elected for the second time by the students to be queen of Mardi Gras to be held this year on March 1.

The queen's court will be composed of Frances Bryant, Charlotte Minton, Elizabeth Butler, Kitty Roberts, Elsie Dodd, Jennie Belle Gilliam, Nan Seward, and Gay Stieffen.

Mardi Gras is sponsored by Pi Gamma Mu and held every year on the Tuesday before Ash Wednesday. The court and queen will wear Spanish dress and Matillas. They will be escorted by invited escorts and will promenade the gym before and after the queen is crowned.

Susan Lane was queen of Mardi Gras last year. This is the first time in the history of the Mardi Gras dance on this campus that a girl has been queen both her junior and senior years. Susan is president of the Cotillion Club and of her social sorority, Alpha Sigma Alpha. She was a member of May Court last year and was a runner-up to the May Queen this year.

Costumes are becoming the main requirement for Mardi Gras, Norvell Montague, chairman of Mardi Gras, has announced that a costume company of New York will send a representative to discuss possible orders with students if they are interested. Costumes are required for all dancers, and prizes for original costumes will be bigger than they have ever been this year.

Cotillion Club Issues Bids To Freshmen

Fifty freshmen were elected to be invited to join the Cotillion Club by its members last week.

The girls who will recieve bids are:

Esther Atkinson, Crews Borden, Margaret Barnes, Mary Cecil Bynum, Alice Leigh Barham, Ethel Carr, Ruth Carney, Ann Cocks, Genevieve Cook, Anne Camp, Frances Dudley, Frances Dickinson, Mary Sue Edmondson, Elnora Faison, Theresa Graff, Margaret Godwin, Lois Griffin, Nancy Hopkins, Harriett Haskins, Marian Heard, Martha Holloway, Emily Hoskins, Norma Johnson.

House Council Presents Trial Study Hour Plan

The House Council and the Student Council presented to the students at Student Body meeting on Thursday a system of Closed Study Hour for trial during the remaining period of this quarter.

Due to prevailing scholastic standards throughout last year and this fall ,the need for a more effective Study Hour was felt, and the two Councils presented this trial method to create conditions more conductive for study to the Student Body as a whole.

The system includes these points: Students are to remain in their rooms from seven-thirty until ten o'clock unless going to the library, to classrooms to study or to scheduled meetings. When leaving their rooms for these

Weird Ghosts Defend Secrecy In Wee Night Hours

Saturday night suddenly there issued from the gym a wierd, unearthly cry. To the rescue sprang the president of the House Council and several other agitated individuals

A queer group of white-shrouded figures crouched in the center of the gym, to all appearances awaiting a fray. People who were there stated that they were most surprised at the speed with which the peculiarly garbed one disappeared into Miss Iler's office upon being approached.

Soon a lusty battle between the girls aroused from slumber and the ghostlike creatures. Girls with hair rolled for night and rumpled pajamas dashed home for more coats and eagerly joined in the assault. Soon hockey sticks were used for weapons. Blood thirsty screams brok the stillness of the buildings as the door nearly caved in from the impactt.

Mr. Reed arrived on the scene and demanded an explanation. Soon he, too, began trying to get the ghosts to come out of the office. Suddenly, very unexpectedly, he changed his technique and stopped bothering the defendants.

Disappointed, the assailants went home, leaving the relieved "order" to its ghostly activities and the gym to an appalling silence.

World Traveler Will Lecture Here January 14

Richard Halliburton Brings His Lecture

Richard Halliburton, world traveler and writer, will be the guest speaker for Beorc Eh Thorn on January 14 in the auditorium.

Mr. Halliburton attended and graduated from Princeton where he entered to take Military courses mostly. Here he was a member of the editorial boards of the Princetonian and the Princeton Pictorial, and was editor-in-chief of the latter in his senior year.

After the war he went to New Orleans, where he signed on a freighter and traveled up and down the Atlantic. Hence, he missed his junior year at College, but re-entered and received his A.B. degree in 1921. .

His name became known in fifteen languages because of his yearning for adventure and his series of wanderings. Setting out for Europe on a freighter, by the time he returned he had climbed the Matterhorn, had been imprisoned at Gibralter, lived with beach-combers in the East Indies, had come in contact with Chinese pirates, and by the time he was twenty-three he had completed what the Japanese considered impossible—climbing Fujiyama in midwinter. From these adventures Mr. Halliburton wrote the "Royal Road to Romance". This book was rejected by nine publishers and accepted by the tenth only because the publisher had heard one of the adventurer's travel talks. "The Royal Road to Romance was a best-seller for three years and was translated into fifteen languages.

For his "The Glorious Adventure", published in 1927, he followed the trail of Ulysses, swam the Hellespont, ran from Marathon to Athens, and climbed Mt. Olympus.

He describes in "New Worlds to Conqeur" his visit in Mexico and in North and Central Americas, his life for a month spent on Robinson Crusoe's island in the same conditions described by Defoe, his visit to Devil's Island, and his swimming the Panama Canal.

He and a pilot then flew in a newly-purchased plane to Timbuctoo and Persia, crossing the Himalayas to Borneo and the Philippine Islands for materials for "The Flying Carpet" which he published in 1932.

All of Mr. Halliburton's books are marked with youthfulness and love of adventure since he puts minute observation secondary to adventure. He loves poetry and has a feeling for human achievement. He writes vividly in narrative form which is filled with swift movement and variety.

Dance Artists Perform Tuesday In Gymnasium

Mrs. Fitzpatrick's class in "The Fundamentals of the Dance", assisted by several members of Artist Dance Group, gave a demonstration in the gym, Tuesday night, December 14.

The girls entered the gym in formation and danced in four groups. The dances included rhythm study, elevation series, percussion move, swings, and uneven methods.

The object of this demonstration was to create through the school more interest in the modern dance.

Magician Performs In Auditorium

Birch, the magician, will be in the auditorium tonight at 8:00 o'clock.

One of his tricks is the Hindu Rope trick. To perform this trick he throws a rope into the air; then he has a Hindu to climb the rope. Another one is the vanishing pony. He has a pony on the stage, and the pony vanishes.

Another stunt is escaping from the box. Birch is mailed in a box made by the local Taylor Manufacturing Co. and escapes leaving the box nailed.

Mabel Sperry, the xylophone artist, will be with him.

This performance is being sponsored by the Brickert Oil Co., and the admission is 25c and 40c.

We Will Pay For Our Part If We Have Phones

Poor telephone communication has been the cause of much discussion on this campus recently. This is a most vital subject to all people concerned since there has been so much discontent about the system of getting and receiving telephone calls.

Since we, the students, are the ones most affected by poor service, we, the students, will be the one most affected by good service. Therefore we are the one to make the request for more telephones and to bring about their installation.

Not one of us wants to be unreasonable and hasty about this request, although each of us sees the urgent need. We need a drastic change in our telephone communication to benefit us mainly, and we are not considering ourselves in comparison with any other institution. The need is entirely personal to this school.

We admit that we pay very meager funds to attend this school. We also declare that whenever a new improvement has been added to the school that the state has not been able to provide, we have been willing to pay more so that the improvement could be added. Why can we not a trifle more in our student funds and have good telephones.

If each student paid 50c a year, that would make around $300 for phones. Every telephone costs around $50 a year for constant use. That would mean 6 more telephones for the students to use, and we would be 6 times more advanced toward twentieth century communication.

Come, Faithful, To Bethlehem

Joy at Christmas time—praise to God for the blessings that are ours—thanks to Him for letting us live—these are the things we must have this Christmas.

Oh, Come, All Ye Faithful

Oh, come all ye faithful, joyful and triumphant.
Oh, come ye, oh, come ye to Bethlehem;
Come and behold Him, born the King of angles:

Sing, choirs of angels, sing in exultation,
Sing, all ye citizens of heav'n above;
Glory to God in the highest—

Yea, Lord, we greet Thee, born this happy morning;
Jesus to Thee, be glory given
Word of the Father now in flesh appearing.
Oh, come let us adore Him
Oh, come, let us adore Him,
Oh, come, let us adore Him,
Christ the Lord.

Christmas Eve
Clara Morris

On a thousand stately alters
Candles flame and flame,
Honoring His lowly advent
To the stable bare.

Let my heart be calm as starlight
In the frosty air.

All the winds are wild with music,
Carols for a King—
Shepherds shivering at midnight
Heard His angels sing.

Let my listening heart be silent
Still their praises sing.

Low-beamed lintel, columned portal
Wear His star of birth
Who had not a friend to greet Him
When He came to earth.

Let my open heart's door offer
All its humble worth.

AT CHI AGAIN

To read this column it would appear that the Martins and the Coys are at it again. However, we wish to apologize to the Chi members for kindling the spark which became a mighty blaze. It seems in all this heat Chi has said rather rash things. We hope they will sympathize with us in our dumbness (?) in not seeing the worthiness of this organization. In their last article (you know we are having chummy correspondence with Chi now) they explained to us what an admirable organization they were. "He who doth not toot his own horn, said horn may go untooted." We are willing to bet they're winded after last week's blowout.

You can see we are sticking to our views here-to-fore stated (by the way our hunch about the organization was right.) Hoping we may be friends despite our views we remain those same students, Y and Z. We hope this puts an end to things. So, in closing we wish to all Chi members a very merry X—mas.

Delta Sigma Alpha And Mu Omega Win Ssholastically

The Delta Theta Alpha sorority had the highest scholastic average for the spring quarter 1937. The plaque awarded to the sorority having the highest average for the entire year will go to Mu Omega. The averages for the spring and entire year are as follows:

Averages for Spring 1937:

Delta Theta Alpha	1.945

CHRISTMAS MESSAGE

Once again the time for the pay Yuletide season has arrived—perhaps on the program with snow this year along with the usual bright lights, shining eyes and cheerful words. This is the traditional time for the giving of gifts. It has been so since Christians first accepted the fact that the wise men came to the manger of Christ, the infant Lord, in Bethlehem, bearing gold, frankincense and myrrh.

If you and I were really to choose what gift we could give that would bring the most happiness to the world, what gift would we choose? Perhaps we would choose to be cheerful and glad of heart and that would be well. Perhaps we would choose to be tolerant and that too, would make the world better.

Perhaps the greatest gift would be to give our love. If we give that freely, then we can never speak evil of another's name, can never be selfish or unkind. Love can overcome all hatred, all wickedness if it is only great enough. Love, above all else, was what Christ left men as the greatest lesson to be learned of life. If there is love, there can be no wars, and no grief is so great that love of God cannot make it more bearable.

Christmas is man's birthday celebration for Christ, his Savior. What greater gift can we give Him than our love—our complete love for other men, for God and for our own self-respect?

Make Christmas a gay and memorable time. The entire Rotun staff extends you its joy of this beautiful season. May it live on in your hearts always in the true spirit of love.

HUMOR

"Will you join me in a bowl of soup?"

"Do you think there's be room for both of us?"

Keydet: "Waitress, do you stuff olives here?"

Pretty (?) Waitress: "No, I don't think so, but I fill dates."

A Toast

Here's to my girl, may God take care of her. I can't afford it.

"Not many fellows can do this," said the magician as he turned his Ford into a lamp-post.

Humpty-Dumpty sat on a wall,
Humpty-Dumpty had a great fall.
All the king's horses and all the king's men—
Laughed like hell.
Twinkle, twinkle, little star,
How I wonder what you are,
Shining in the sky so high—
Just like a blasted light bulb.

"She's a very nicely reared girl."

"Yes, and she looks good from the front, too."

Paul Revere (shouting at window): "Husband at home?"

Lady: "Yes."

P. R.: "Tell him the British are coming."

P. R.: (shouting at another widow) :"Husband at home?"

Lady: "Yes."

P. R.: "Tell him the British are coming."

P. R. (shouting at another window): "Husband at home?"

Lady: "No."

P. R. (dismounting): "To hell with the British!"

Neighbor Brown: "Do you know that Jones has eleven children?"

Neighbor Smith: "He's gone stork mad, hasn't he?"

S. T. C. Indulges In Noel Cheer

Three occasions this week are dedicated to the celebration of the Noel season. On Wednesday night, the custom of White Christmas offerings will be observed. For Thursday night, the annual holida ybanquet has been planned by Mrs. Shelton. Following the banquet, the student body will adjourn to the large auditorium to sing carols and will then proceed to the Rotunda for the Hanging of the Green.

White Christmas is under the auspices of the Y. W. C. A. Each organization in school will give some amount of money which will be used to buy Christmas baskets for unfortunate families. The service will be held at the lighted tree on the campus right after dinner when presidents of the various groups will bring the offerings forward to place them at the foot of the tree.

Christmas dinner is an event looked forward to by the students. Formal attire will be the order of the day as all join in enjoying a hearty meal. Dr. Jarman and other members of the administration and the faculty will be guests of the girls for this celebration. The dining hall will be decorated with greens to add to the festive spirit.

Immediately after dinner, eevryone is invited to go to the auditorium to sing the beloved Christmas carols as the candle light adds its spirit of devotion. When this very beautiful service is over, all those present will take the cedar and go to the Rotunda where they will hang it.

Rotunda Reverberations

The first snowfall of the winter brings forth the fair maids of S. T. C. in full regalia. Approaching exams are forgotten as the girls don snow suits, riding habits, boots and gayly colored mittens and frolic in the snow!

The Seniors that journey to Shannons each night at 10 o'clock have been enjoying a very amusing little by-play for the last couple of weeks . . . that is the girls who do not bear the brunt of it find its humorous side. As they enter the door every night a certain group of girls are pounced upon by a certain blonde maid . . . after that the scene resembles that of a group of mice scurrying here and there trying to shake off an obnoxious cat. Veiled hints have proven useless . . . even when they ignore their ardent admirer it is of no avail. What to do next seems to be their problem. Some people seem to be so dense that rudeness in the extreme must be resorted to in order to be rid of them. Why not try it, girls?

The riding instructor appears to be a very versatile young man. He gives promise now of becoming the campus Don Juan. First one and then another of his pupils are seen in his company . . . however, rumor has it that Mary Jackson is leading the contest!

Several girls in S. T. C. have expressed the desire that the lads of Hampden-Sydney learn that a little friendly interest does not necessarily mean complete and undying love. No doubt it would be a very good lesson for them . . . but man in his insufferable conceit will hardly prove an apt pupil!

That noble experiment . . . closed study hour . . . is now in full swing. Each night from seven-thirty 'till ten we must remain in our rooms . . . should it become imperative that we attend a meeting or leave for any other purpose then we must ask permission and sign up with our hall president. Our college has often been likened to a two by four prep school and now little doubt remains that it is so. True some of us may be quite young, but are we so adolescent that we must be confined to our rooms in order that those who desire to study may do so? If girls are old enough to be in college then they are old enoung to know when they should study without having to be driven about like a herd of cattle! Those girls who have had the desire and the mentality to accomplish that desire have had little difficulty in the past. If these two requisites are absent then complete confinement would be of little use. There is an old adage that says that you may lead a horse to water but you can't make him drink and closed study hour seems to be a very good application of it. Few of us are so ill bred or so inconsiderate that we gallop about the halls at night making unnecessary noise in order to keep others from studying. The majority of us are fairly intelligent college students . . . should we not be treated as such???

GLEANINGS

By

Virginia L. Agee

And she brought forth her firstborn, and wrapped him in swaddling clothes, and laid him in a manger; because there was no room for them in the inn.

And there were in the same country shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night.

And, lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them: and they were sore afraid.

And the angel said unto them, "Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people.

For unto you is born this day, in the city of David, a Savior, which is Christ the Lord."

Thus the sweetest story on all the earth long ago—a Savior, the Life of the world, was written! On a cold, starry-clear night He was given in birth. Today, we celebrate Christmas—the Mass of Christ—in honor of this long ago birth.

And while Christmas doesn't mean this to all of us, its significance tugs at our hearts and fills our eyes with the happiness that such a Being as Christ Jesus lived—and died to give us such a life as we now lead and the dreams of our individual lives in time hereafter.

Christmas—the word holds a magical meaning for us. It means a vacation from studies: it gives us opportunity to recall days gone by—when our eyes widened when we say Santa Claus—when we awoke on Christmas morning to see the tree a thing of beauty, dressed in tinsel and twinkling ornaments.

And as we grew—Christmas took a different meaning. It's deeper significance was known to us—we began learning the story of the three Wise Men and of their gifts to the Christ Child—we learned to give in love to others, as they had done so long ago.

We grew older still and Christmas was and is a wonderful thing! To cut up fruits and nuts for fruit cakes and plum puddings—to smell their delicate odor wafting through the house while we bake; to know the delight of trimming the tree and making it a fairy's delight with artificial glory; to hang stockings even yet—as old as we are: to feel the mysterious atmosphere when the rattle of tissue paper and the locking of drawers come from behind closed doors; to see the glory of the heavens when carols are being sung outside in the snow; to watch the soft light of a candle and feel its beauty pierce the very heart and soul of you; to feel the warmth of an open fire melt your worldliness and the brightness of its flames bring dreams to your secret mind!

To wake on Christmas morning and see the sun sparkling on snow; to experience the delicious excitement when you open the beautifully wrapped packages, all symbolic of the love someone holds for you in their heart; to partake of the feast of the year and know you'll never live through the day after you've eaten the last bit of the plum pudding that had been borne to the table—flaming, steaming, delicious!

And then to ponder—to think—to live and be young! To put on your loveliest dress and your dancing shoes and dance, and dance, and dance—not only to music of the orchestra, but to the tune of happiness in your own heart!

Christmas—magical season— wonderful season—season full of significant blessings and triumphs!

A. A. Council Presents Adviser With Silver

Party Is Given Members

A Christmas party was given for the A. A. Council Monday Dec. 13, in the parlor of Senior Building.

The parlor was decorated with holly and the finishing touch was a lovely tree all decorated with tinsel and snow.

Refreshments were served consisting of hot chocolate, cream cheese nabs, peanuts and fudge cake.

After the delightful refreshments "Old Santa" himself appeared and added to the glee by his pack of presents which he distributed to everyone. Helen McIlwaine was given a "rat" to keep the freshman class on top; Ruth Sears was awarded a "paddle" and "ball" to keep S. T. C.'s tennis team going.

Then Dot Fisher (who was Santa) received a "rat" in remembrance of those rat days of last year. All the girls seemed quite thrilled over their individual gifts.

Last of all to Miss Iler, Santa presented a silver tray and a jelly spoon and to the president, Ruth Phelps was presented a card telling her about her gift that was delayed, but is on its way.

After this Santa adjourned and Dot Fisher returned to take his place. Everyone gathered around th efireplace and sang Christmas songs until "Lights Out" was sounded on the hall.

reasons they are to sign up on a chart on each hall president's door, as to where they are going and the time they leave their rooms. Other conditions or reasons making it necessary for a girl to leave her room are to be discussed with the Hall President.

During the time the Students are expected to note defects and to conscientiously consider it for the purpose of making constructive criticism.

At the beginning of the winter quarter the Student Body will vote on the plan and through its opinion and corrective suggestions a more operative and more adequate system will be developed.

World Sports

The echoes of football are gradually dying away but there are a few more stories that must be told. Here is one about a high school coach in Philadelphia. When he was hired the school's followers thought they were going places on the gridiron. The first year the new coach's team played ten games—and lost them all. The next year they played ten more without a victory. They played ten more the next year and again failed to win. They lost the first nine of their games this season and finally, in the last game, they came through with a victory. Somebody went to their dressing room to congratulate the players. Most of the players were in tears.

"See here now, you shouldn't be crying," the visitor said. "You should be happy after winning the game today."

"No, we aren't happy," one of the players replied, "We are sorry. We are sorry to know that there's a football team worse than we are."

Why did California select Alabama and not Pitt or Fordham for its New Years Day opponent? What negotiations went on behind closed doors before the Rose Bowl announcement was officially given out last week? Here's the inside story. California's preference in order were: first, Minnesota; second, Dartmouth; third, Pittsburgh; fourth, Alabama and fifth, Fordham. Though both Minnesota and Dartmouth had said they opposed post season games, California made last minute efforts to change their minds. For two days the Bears waited hopefully for news from Minneapolis or Hanover. Meanwhile Pittsburgh players, weary of sitting at a telephone that didn't ring, held a meeting and voted not go to the Rose Bowl even if asked. Had Pittsburgh been patient the phone would have rung. They eliminated themselves by talking too soon. California turned to the next choice. Alabama—unbeaten, untied and never defeated in four Rose Bowl games. There's nothing to the rumors that Fordham was black-balled for religious, scholastic or social reasons. The Rams were fifth in line.

The baseball fans in Pittsfield, Mass. demanded their money back when they attended a movie called "The Great Garrich." They claimed they went into the theatre under the impression that the story was about Lou Gehrig.

Skiing is a $20,000,000 industry in the United States. Six hundred thousand people have found it less expensive than driving high powered automobiles or airplanes and quite dangerous and thrilling. To increase the knowledge of skiing and make it less dangerous for the untrained or badly trained 75 percent of United States Skiers, whose numbers are increasing 100 percent each year, the National Ski Association last week too steps. The association, a member of the Federation International de Ski, believes that United States skiing has reached the point where only teachers of proven qualifications should give instruction. To gain this approval, plus a handsome diploma, potential United States Skimeesters journeyed to Bolton, Vermont to be inspected by Otto Schreibs, head of the newly formed American Ski School. Otto Schneibs is a solid little Bavarian who has probably done more for the promotion of skiing in the United States than any other person. Until last year he was the ski coach of Dartmouth where he turned out six championship teams in six years. His Dartmouth pupils, all very fond of him, constantly baited him just to hear him reply in his terrific gutteral accent. A few years ago a pupil asked him what to do if, on a downhill run, he should suddenly rush upon a skel studded with rocks and trees. Replied Otto: "Get off and valk."

For the edification of dubs and experts alike, the all time, definite book on skiing is being published this week. "Skiing, the International Sport" contains twenty-one articles on every phase of skiing by the world's leading authorities. It contains nine reproductions of paintings in full color and two hundred and fifty photographs. If you are interested in skiing you can get one of these invaluable guide books from the Derrydale Press for the nominal sum of thirty-five dollars. Who says skiing isn't an expensive sport?

A shipment of new biology text books at Mississippi State Teachers College produced some fireworks recently.

A chapter on evolution annoyed John M. Frazier, biology teacher, to the extent that he ripped out the offensive pages from 60 books.

His action, a decade after Tennessee's famous "monkey trial" renewed the evolution discussion. Mississippi fundamentalists in 1926 had enacted a law forbidding teaching or use of books which related the theory that man "ascended or descended from a lower order of animals."

Alpha Phi Sigma Establishes Exchange For Sale of Books

"For Sale" and "Wanted" notices will be extinct next quarter in S. T. C. Girls won't have to be chasing books all over the school. They can go to one place for their book and if it isn't there, be certain that they must buy a new one.

This innovation will be due to the book exchange, sponsored by Alpha Phi Sigma, for the first week of each new term.

Girls will take their old books to the little sitting room where the exchange will be situated, state the price they wish to get for them, and get a receipt.

If the book is sold, Alpha Phi Sigma will deduct 5c from the price paid. However, this is not a money making proposition, but a service project. Since it is to be a service rendered, Alpha Phi Sigma hopes that the stutdents will cooperate and refrain from putting up notices on the bulletin board.

On Saturday, which will be the last day of exchange, students will bring their receipts, and get either their books, if they have not been sold, or their money, if they have been sold.

Sleds Glide During Snow

Snow in December reminds me
Of all the beautiful in life,
Its purity is like a soul
That has been cleansed by night.
It seems the first few flakes
Gather as they fall
The impurities, the dust and all
That makes the air breather
A sort of unpleasant need.
Then—when the cleansing is o'er,
In the snow's spotlessness we succeed
In seeing the purity of the soul
Of God's blanket of white a likeness.

With snow in December comes the jingle of sleigh bells, lanterns on "blockades" that warn drivers, and black smoke rising from the burning of rubber tires. The streets not yet cleared of the white blanket make a perfect track. The sleds glide smoothly and swiftly down the hills and around the curves. Thrills, fears, sighs and song accompany this great pastime that comes so seldom in our latitude. Would that we were given a night to enjoy fully the beauty of this whiteness! I dare say we'd have red noses, even cold feet perhaps, and bruises but enjoy it . . . Not an editorial on the desire to go sleigh riding but an expression of joy known heretofore.

It's simple arithmetic that the more cars General Motors sells the greater this organization grows. And the solid fact back of that growth is this: General Motors cars must continually offer more in terms of extra value to win those sales. It is only because General Motors is great that it can maintain the research and improvement program responsible for such modern betterments as the Turret Top, the Unisteel Body, No Draft Ventilation, Knee-Action and advanced Hydraulic Brakes.

Alumna Publishes Prize Poem In Farmville Quarterly Review

Two Girls Marry This Fall

A prize-winning poem written by Edith Gray was published in the Quarterly Review this Fall. She is an "old" girl, Class of '20, and her "The Lesson" won the poetry prize for 1937 offered by the Virginia Federation of Women's Clubs.

Wedding bells have lured many S. T. C. alumnae into the greatest of all professions—homemaking.

Another member to the profession was added on November 27 when Miss Helen Sanford Wilkins of Lynchburg was married to Mr. Herbert Armstrong Wells of Charleston, W. Va. The wedding took place at noon at St. Paul's Episcopal church in Lynchburg. The church was beautifully decorated with ferns, palms, and similax white chrysanthemums and white snapdragons and was lighted with cathedral candles and smaller tapers in branched candlebra.

The bride's gown was of rose white satin and was made in princess style. Her tulle veil was held by orange blossoms and she carried a bouquet of white roses and snapdragons.

The couple left for Florida where they are spending their honeymoon and later they will go to Charleston, W. Va., to make their home.

Mrs. Wells attended Randolph-Macon as well as S. T. C., and Mr. Wells received both his B. S. and M. A. degrees from V. P. I. as an honor graduate. Both are graduates of E. C. Glass High School.

Wedding bells chimed for another "old" girl on November 13 in Charleston, W. Va. Miss Zell Hopkins and Mr. Thomas Layne of Farmville were married at the First Presbyterian Church in Charleston at 7:30 in the evening.

The altar was decorated with palms and lighted by white tapers. Her gown was a burgundy velvet with black accessories worn with a shoulder corsage of gardenias.

The groom was attended by Mr. Will Kayton of Farmville.

Following the ceremony, a reception for members of the bridal party and friends was held at the Daniel Boone Hotel in Charleston after which the couple left for a trip to New York and the New England States. They are now living in Farmville.

Mrs. Layne attended Mount de Chantal Academy at Wheeling, W. Va., and is a graduate of Nazareth Academy of Nazareth, Ky. She also attended S. T. C.

Among those who attended the wedding from a distance were Mrs. M. M. Layne, Miss Virginia Layne, Billy Bruce, L. J. Crosby, Will Kayton, and Miss Alice Hardaway of Farmville.

Students Will Enjoy Christmas Dinner In Dining Room

Turkeys, cranberries and everything nice—that's what the Christmas dinner will be made of. All the student body will trip gaily to the dining room Thursday night in silks, satins and laces.

The tables will be elaborately decorated and Dr. Jarman will be present to dine with his girls.

Hanging of the greens will take place immediately after dinner. This is an old tradition in school which has been handed down from year to year. The freshman commission will hang the greens on the posts and up the railings of the stairs in the rotunda while the rest of the student body will sing Chrismas Carols.

Seniors Give Officers Gifts

The officers of the senior class entetrained Jane Royall class man and Miss Mary at dinner in the tea room Monday evening.

At this time gifts were given to Madeline McClothlin president, and Jane from the class. Madeline's gift was a pair of rose and white lounging pajamas while Jane's was teaspoons of the pattern they started for her several years ago.

The other senior class officers are Virginia Agee, Carter Belle Munt and Lib Harris.

Y. W. Officers Plan Party

The Y. W. C. A. cabinet and officers will have a Christmas program meeting Wednesday night at ten o'clock. Everyone drew a name and a present typical of the person's character will be given. The social committee will serve refreshments.

Keydles and Mutests

The "Keydle" Club celebrated the initiation of two new members at their annual banquet in the team room, Tuesday evening, December 11.

The Mutest Club also held a banquet in the tea room Wednesday at high noon, the members met with due solemnity and partook of a ceremonial meal of hamburgers. New members were discussed unfavorably because of lack of eligibility.

Clothes From Santa Will Be Part of Season

Now that we've had a taste of real snow so that Christmas is definitely in the air, our thoughts have rushed ahead in a mad whirl to thousands of things to be included in those twelve precious days. Although you're probably not exactly planning to plunge from your Christmas shopping into an orgy of buying clothes, you may want to tuck a little note to Santa in the toe of your stocking —or, you may just want to know what's being worn—and why.

This year's Mid-Season collection of fashions is tricky, but extremely contradictory. Paris seems to have been doing a bit of experimenting in waist lines, for they go up, and down—but always in. Although temperamental, they're most intriguing—if you can get away with them. They vary from hip-length fitted tunics to tiny boleros—short as yokes. The general contour of milady's silhouette seems to be x-shaped with tiny fitted wrist, and gradually flared skirt.

However, the season's "tops" is hit in evening wear which includes gowns with sequins—just oodles of them—glittering here and there and everywhere, full-skirted dresses of velvet (extremely chic), glimpses of lace underskirts and yards of fluffy net, sprinkled with multi-colored paillettes—if you so desire.

For the hair, veils are naturally still de-luxe whether they drape themselves gracefully over fragile flowers and ostrich plumes, or park jauntily atop stiff, velvet bonnets on tiny, pill-box dinner hats.

Jewelry too, is taking on extravagance as the pass-word is gold—gold bracelets, (as many as you like), gold clips, or wide gold cuffs—but always gold.

For foot-wear, all kinds of evening sandals are prevalent with the possible addition of an extremely new adaptation of the Lido cork soled beach shoe, in gold kid, black satin, or what-have-you—that is for those of you that hit the rule under five feet five and want an additional inch or two of dignity.

At any rate, Christmas time is the time to look your best, and don't we all look our best when inspired, after sundown, by the mood, the music and—the company?

So brush up your curls, or sleek your bobs, don your sequins and your veils, and remember that at Christmas time—the Mid-Seasons shine their brightest!

Sophs Drink Cider and Sing

The mighty Sophs had a real Christmas party on Monday night, Dec. 13, and old Saint Nick himself was there. Anne Scott had just finished giving a rhythmic activity to the tune of Posin' when, with a mighty bustling, the door was opened and in he came.

He brought with him lots of good cheer and presents for Miss Bedford and Jane Powell. While apple cider and ginger snaps were being devoured, Laura Morris and Helen Hager sang Christmas carols.

The fire roared and the girls chattered until all too soon it was eleven o'clock and time for everyone to be in bed.

VOL. XVII. FARMVILLE, VIRGINIA, WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 12, 1938 No. 12

Beorc Eh Thorn Presents Richard Halliburton Friday Night

Renowned Traveller Will Entertain With Adventures

On Friday evening, January 14, Beorc Eh Thorn will present the well-known author, traveller, and lecturer, Richard Halliburton.

Many students are familiar with Richard Halliburton's books from his first, "The Royal Road to Romance", to his latest, "Seven League Boots" in all of which he holds his readers' rapt attention. Few girls have had the privilege of hearing him speak. Mr. Halliburton has accomplished so many feats of interest and daring that his subject matter alone is sufficient to hold his listeners.

The summer after his graduation from Princeton, Richard Halliburton heard the call to adventure and set forth for the first time on the "royal road to romance". Since then, it has led him far and wide, but he has always followed it, whether to Mount Everest or the wilds of Africa, and perhaps that's why he is today, one of the most widely traveled of the younger authors of the age.

His escapades range from swimming in the moonlit pool before India's Taj Mahal, to spending a night atop Mount Olympus. They include a personal interview and dinner with Haile Selassie, the viewing of the actual remains of Columbus, being imprisoned at the Rock of Gibralter for making forbiden photographs, following Hannibal's trail over the Alps on an elephant, the exploration of the Acropolis and Parthenon by night, (most of his expeditions seem to have been accompanied by moonlight) and many hair-breadth escapes, besides countless other adventures of the type that people always long to perform but never seem to have the chance or

RICHARD HALLIBURTON

"Sister Pat With Apologies to Brother Rat" is Junior Title

"Sister Pat—With Apologies to Brother Rat" is the title of the Junior Class production to be held in the auditorium January 26.

The production is different from any which has been presented here before. S. T. C. expressions will be used throughout and school characters will be taken off.

Frances Hutcheson is directing the comedy. The committee heads are: Louise Anthony, costumes; Kitty Brooks, staging; Jean Taylor, lighting; Florence Bress, business; Marguerite Blackwell, publicity and Frances Steed, program chairman. The characters for the production will be announced later.

Miss Bedford Will Be Presented By Sophomores

Miss Virginia Bedford, the Sophomore classman will be presented by Jane Powell on Thursday, January 13.

As Miss Bedford is a member of the Art Department, and is very much interested in it, both last year's presentation and this year's pertain to art.

In the presentation last year, each section of Virginia was represented by a girl in a living picture with Miss Bedford as the artist to blend them together into a beautiful painting.

The class as a whole will sing several songs dedicated to Miss Bedford, of which the words, the music, or both have been composed by members of the class.

Pi Gamma Mu Delegates Attend Convention

Marjorie Robertson and Deane Saunders represented the Farmville Chapter of Pi Gamma Mu at the sixth national convention of the society which met in Atlantic City, New Jersey on December 28, 29, and 30th.

The world problems of the day was the subject of the three leading addresses. Dr. C. A. Ellworth, Professor of Sociology at Duke University, presided. One of the chief features of the program was the banquet, at which time the Honor Key of Pi Gamma Mu was to have been presented to Admiral Richard E. Byrd, former Honorary National President. Admiral Byrd was unable to be present and Dr. J. E. Mooney of the American Academy of Air Laws of New York University accepted the Honor Key for him.

The girls stayed at the Chalfonte-Haddon Hall Hotel. There they had a room overlooking the Atlantic. They met many of the people who were spending their holidays at the hotel. They were invited to a dance each night. One night they joined the "Big Apple" dancing class and learned how to do a new step "Sissy Breeches".

The city was sponsoring a contest for Christmas decorations. Everywhere they went they saw wonderful sights. One night one of the big Christmas trees in the hotel caught on fire. If one had seen our girls at that time he would have seen how beautifully they remembered their fire drill rules. It is said that Deane actually got a book to show her presence of mind.

"The convention was indeed marvelous and we did have a grand time. Each night we wined and dined, of course. Deane did the wine-ing and I the dining, with our friends," said Marjorie.

Farmville Debaters Place in Upper Third at Winthrop

The results of the Dixie Invitational Tournament held at Winthrop College, Rock Hill, South Carolina on December 2-4 have been received here by Dr. Walmsley.

In the Dixie Tournament there were 185 debators which were arranged in three groups, first, those who had debated on teams in last year's tournament; second, those who had debated this year on teams; and third, those who had not debated on teams this year. Farmville was entered in this last group. Of the sixty debaters in group C, Lorana Moomaw and Pattie Bounds were rated first and second in this list. Nora Jones and Sudie Yager were in upper third of this group.

February 15 Is Deadline for Annual Subscriptions

February 15 has been announced by the "Virginian" staff as the deadline for subscriptions to the annual.

The engravers have completed about half of their work. The staff has reported that the annual is nearing completion. They would appreciate any payments or subscriptions.

Since expense is so great for yearbook publication, a large number of subscriptions must be sold for the publication to be completed without a deficit. The annual has never been placed on student fees because annual editors have thought the publication would be little benefited by such a charge.

Last year the annual, edited by Virginia Baker, won excellent rating by the Associated Intercollegiate Press. This year no group picture had to be re-taken which is unusual. The rest of the work of the staff centers around write-ups of individuals and groups.

It is because the annual is expected to arrive from the press complete around May 1, that the subscription contest has to be closed so soon.

State Director Of Music Presents Plan

Mr. Wilfred Pyle, director of State Music, spoke in chapel this morning on the possibilities of bringing the Virginia Symphony Orchestra to this vicinity at an early date. Mr. Alfred Strick introduced Mr. Pyle.

Mr. Pyle has been interested in opera, symphony and other types of music for some time. When the government decided to help musicians through the past depression with its employment aid, Mr. Pyle was chosen in 1935 to form a concert band with as many unemployed musicians as could be used.

For over two years this band

Dr. Jarman to Attend Vanderbilt Event

Dr. J. L. Jarman, president of State Teachers College, Farmville, is one of 400 representatives of American and foreign colleges and universities invited to attend the formal inauguration of Dr. Oliver C. Carmichael as chancellor of Vanderbilt University in Nashville, Tenn., Feb. 5.

Delegates to the inauguration will take part in a symposium on higher education in the South, in which sessions will be devoted to liberal arts, medicine, engineering, law theology, nursing and graduate education. The symposium will cover two days preceding the inauguration date.

Isabel Williamson Attends Y. W. Meeting At Ohio

"It was just like going to school—class all day—but did we make up for it at night!" hummed Isabel Williamson, delegate to the National Assembly of Student Christian Organizations. The assembly met during the Christmas holidays at Miami University, Oxford, Ohio. Approximately two thousand students from colleges all over the United States were present; other countries were represented, too. Some of the students came from Japan, China, and Porto Rico.

The conference was divided into commissions, each commission having a special topic such as "Student and Campus Living" and "Student and Citizenship."

"I chose 'Student and Campus Living' since I was sure that it would apply to our own school. Discussions and lectures were held from eight to twelve every day and from seven to ten at night. All the students told of the problems of their particular school and discussed such problems as group antagonism, friction between sororities, fraternities and other groups, inter-racial problems, and local standards.

"One of the main things that impressed me was the good a Y. W. can do if the student body will cooperate. Here at Farmville we seem to have the idea that the Y. W. is an organization for assies. A great many problems could be cleared if the student body would regard the Y. W. as one of the most important organizations on the campus.

Miss Stubbs' Work Is Recognized By Virginia Group

Professor Is Only Woman Honored

Miss Florence Stubbs, associate professor of History and Social Sciences at Farmville, was recently honored by being selected as one of twelve most outstanding Virginians of the year 1937. Incidentally, Miss Stubbs is the only woman among the twelve. She was chosen because of her excellent course in the field of interracial relations.

Miss Stubbs is conducting a course on the Negro that has been recognized throughout the South as a model type of instruction in the field of interracial relations. What impressed authorities in this field was the unvarnished realism with which the teacher in this case taught a subject that is so often approached on education vehicles equipped with euphemistic shock-absorbers.

From the first, she felt that the ways to improve relations between the races in the South was to promote a better understanding of the Negro, his background, his achievement, the difficulties under which he lives and works, and the importance of creating more opportunity for him. More than 200 students, many of them now Virginia teachers, have taken Miss Stubb's course, and the influence of this teacher of teachers has been an ever-widening circle.

The Southern Commission on Interracial Co-operation regarded Miss Stubb's work as so outstanding that it asked her to deliver one of the principal addresses at the Blue Ridge Interracial Institute held at Blue Ridge, N. C., last summer. There, she described her course for the benefit of Southern educators attending the meeting. The course has been offered since 1934.

Miss Stubbs was a charter member of the Virginia Social Science Association and during

Rotunda Will Be Entered in Contest

Copies of The Rotunda from October 1, 1937, will be sent to Minneapolis, Minnesota, as an entry in the Associated Collegiate Press college newspaper contest.

The paper will be judged from the standpoint of makeup, editing and content. A score sheet will be returned to the editor showing mistakes and giving the official rating.

At least half of the colleges in the United States enter this contest. The scores wil lbe announced to the various staffs around April 1.

Kappa Delta Pi Holds Regional Meeting Here

Dr. Thomas D. Eason, who will be one of the principal speakers of the Kappa Delta Pi regional meet.

Winter Lyceum Will Bring Noted Baritone Here

Earle Spicer, baritone, who many think equals Tibbett, Werenrath and David Bispham, will appear in the auditorium January 18 as the Winter Lyceum.

He has a "voice of rich quality and power" and a "priceless sense of humor", says one enthusiastic reviewer.

Mr. Spicer has won international fame as a concert and radio singer. He has sung before Crown Heads of Europe and has been soloist with many of the World's leading Symphony Orchestras. . . He was the baritone star of the Fuller Brush Radio program who came "knockin' at your door" each week for three years over a nation-wide network of the National Broadcasting Co.

He studied in London and won the approval of such distinguished conductors as Sir Henry Wood—Queens Hall Proms; Sir Landon Ronald—London Symphony; Arthur Fagge—London Choral Society and Sir Adrian Boult—Music Director of the British Broadcasting Co. . . Here he has been guest soloist with the New York Symphony—Cincinnati Symphony—Toronto Symphony — Boston Handel and Haydn—New York Bach Cantata Society—Westchester Festival—Toronto Festival, etc.

This program of Old English and American Ballads is unusually distinctive and vastly interesting from both a musical and an English literature standpoint. His college engagements include Columbie, Cornell, N. Y. University, Syracuse, Barnard, Bucknell, Alle-

Nine New Students Enroll in School

New students in school this quarter are Anne Easley, Lynchburg; Mai Cooper Hutcheson, Norfolk; Frances Fletcher, Colverton; Irene Gills, Buckingham; Margaret Morton, Farmville; Emily Nance, Evington; Virginia Lowe, Charlottesville; Bessie Smith, Newport News; Katherine White, Bedford.

Maude Beckham, Farmville, was the only graduate from S. T. C. at the completion of the fall quarter.

Dr. Thomas Eason Will Deliver Address

Dr. Thomas C. McCrachen, Dean of the School of Education at Ohio University, Athens, Ohio, is the principal speaker at the regional conference of Kappa Delta Pi to be held on January 15, with the Beta Epsilon Chapter at Farmville, Virginia. Dr. McCrachen is the executive president of Kappa Delta Pi and is an outstanding leader in the field of education.

Dr. John W. Carr, of the Alpha Tau Chapter at Duke University, will speak Saturday morning on "The Program for Local Chapter Meetings."

Dr. Thomas C. McCracken, and Dr. Thomas D. Eason will deliver addresses at the luncheon at Longwood on Saturday. "The Challenge for Membership in aKppa Delta Pi" is the subject for the address by Dr. Eason, Director of Higher Education, State Board of Education of Virginia.

Dr. W. J. Gifford of Harrisonburg State Teachers College, Miss Anna Halberg of Wilson Teachers College, Washington, D. C. and Dr. M'Ledge Moffett of East Radford State Teachers College will lead group discussions on Saturday afternoon. Dr. Gifford will discuss "Making Kappa Delta Pi Significant on the Campus." "Holding Power of Kappa Delta Pi and Alumni Relations"' is the subject for Miss Halberg. Dr. Moffett speaks on the "Use of Ritual in Program Making".

Dr. Jarman will give the welcome at the luncheon meeting at Longwood on Saturday. Miss Pauline Camper of the Beta Epsilon Chapter presides. Dr. Thomas D. Eason and Dr. Thomas C. McCrachen will speak at the meeting.

The Program for the conference is as follows: 10:30-11:00, Registration Student Building Lounge; 11:00-12:15, General Session, Little Auditorium; Greetings of Beta Epsilon Chapter—Dr. J. P. Wynne, Music, Elizabeth LeGrand; Address, "Programs for Local Chapter Meetings"—Dr. John Carr.

"Worship" Is Theme Of Special Y. W. Prayers Program

A special program of prayers has been arranged by the Y. W. C. A. for this week. The topics, for the week, are based principally on the book, "Why Worship", by Muriel Lester.

The program of topics for each night is as follows:

Monday night, "Worship"; Tuesday night, "Worship Releases us from the Domination of Self", "Worship Brings Release from Domination of Others"; Wednesday night, "Worship Brings Release from Fear of Death", "Worship Brings Release from Anxiety"; Thursday night, "Worship Brings Release from Boredom", "Worship Brings Release from Prejudice"; Friday night, "Worship and the Creative Instinct", "The Choice".

The Y. W. president urges every student to attend prayers each night this week, for she feels it will be beneficial to all. She also stated that much time has been spent on developing this program and it is, and will prove to be, both helpful and instructive.

Kappa Delta Pi Was Organized On This Campus

In 1918 a group of students banded together at State Normal School for Women to form an honorary society in the field of education. The organization was called Pi Kappa Omega. It had unusually high standards in scholarship and only a deserving few were eligible for membership. An attempt was made to make Pi Kappa Omega national, and a chapter was established at Harrisonburg.

Several members of the faculty at Farmville became interested in a national educational society that was coming to the front in the educational world. This fraternity had grown out of the Illinois Education Club which had been founded at the University of Illinois in 1909. The organization had spread to other colleges, and in 1911 it assumed the name of Kappa Delta Pi.

When our school became a State Teachers College, Pi Kappa Omega took the lead in establishing Kappa Delta Pi on our campus, and merged into that organization, forming Beta Epsilon chapter of Kappa Delta Pi. It is now one of 108 chapters located in colleges all over the United States.

The purpose of Kappa Delta Pi is to encourage high intellectual and scholastic standards, and to recognize outstanding contributions to education. It endeavors to quicken professional growth by honoring achievement in educational work, and to maintain a high degree of professional fellowship among its members.

Start New Year With New Books To Enlighten Hours

Have you started the New Year right by beginning one of those books you've always intended to read? Remember how many good novels you missed last year? During 1938 try picking up some favorite for just a short while each day. You'll be surprised how quickly you finish it.

Have you looked at "After 1903—What?" Of course, you know what a fine humorist Robert Benchley is, and this last is one of his best books.

"The Citadel" continues to win the applause of the public, and well it may, for Dr. Cronin's is one of the greatest novels about doctors. United Press says of it "As powerful as adrenaline, as dramatic as an emergency, as penetrating as a faucet."

An Atlantic Book just out is "The Third Hour" by Geoffrey Household. A story of four adventures, it is entirely deserving of the enthusiasm which it has aroused.

For a corking good mystery, you must read Leslie Ford's "The Simple Way of Poison". If you like mysteries or know Leslie Ford, you won't rest until you've seen his new book.

"Lady Be Good" is another of Katherine Dunlap's successes. It is an unforgettable story of a butterfly mother and a dependable daughter; the book is of intense human interest.

Eleanor Roosevelt has given us her plan for peace in "This Troubled World". Mrs. Roosevelt doesn't thing peace is an immediate possibility, but states rather that human naure must be changed to secure lasting good will. For the present she believes armaments are necessary in order to enforce pacifism upon belligerent nations.

Richard Halliburton

By Mary H. Vaughan

Richard Halliburton is one of the most delightful lecturers you have ever heard. He keeps an audience utterly fascinated while he gestures wildly, talks briskly and describes vividly!

His words are the same vital adjectives that make his books full of zest and buoyancy. He is eternally young. One could easily imagine his adored Taj Mahal getting old as Richard Halliburton. He is the very essence of vigor and "joie de vie". His seems to be—"Youth—there is nothing in the world but youth!"

Halliburton is a slender, nice-looking chap who does not seem ill at ease in his proper clothes but who seems never to let you forget that he could wear improper garb and be not only at ease but completely charming.

In the unaccented English of the truly educated, Halliburton goes gayly from one edventure to another. Actually his audience goes through the adventures with him. Even the physical exertion seems to take place in listening to this animated person.

He makes life as the ordinary person lives it seem dull and drab; yet he offers compensation in the fact that he offers his books to keep life somewhat romantic. His royal road to romance will call you for weeks after hearing him entertain, until finally you settle down to life as it must be to you. Always, though, you have a touch of envy because there is one who will never settle down, who will "sail beyond the sunset till he dies."

"Delighted to have met you, Mrs. Higgins," gushed the new resident. "Do come over to see us some night."

"So sorry, dear," replied Mrs. Higgins, "but we never go anywhere. You see, my husband is partially paralyzed."

"Oh, don't let that worry you. My husband is that way more than half the time."

There are some things on which we can figure
Like taxes and skeeters and such.
And some things with finger and trigger
We can't figure out so much.
We can figure the crops and the weather,
The mumps, the measles and the flu,
But hanged if a fellow can figure
What congress is likely to do."

Rotunda Reverberations

Flash!! Another Rotunda scoop (?) coming up! The students of S. T. C. return to school with the memories of a hilarious holiday to face many weeks of appalling boredom! Nothing is scheduled to happen for eons and if the unexpected were to occur few could arouse themselves from Christmas reminiscing long enough to take notice. So . . . we start the Happy New Year!

Nan Seward and Julia May Rainey return to duty triumphantly sporting A. T. O. pins. Congratulations on the greatest amount of work over the shortest period of time.

Once upon a time a certain S. T. C. Junior went with a very nice young gentleman who drove many miles in a very lovely automobile to see her on week-ends. But the young maiden decided she was making too much time and withdrew from the arena in order to give her competition in school a chance to score a few times. Would you call it a parable or a fable?

A question of interest looms upon the horizon . . . Is Jack Pedigo's current flame a certain fair Senior or her ever present roommate?

Ginna Jarman has just returned after taking a week off for a nervous breakdown. If a charming young man with sweeping eyelashes is a new form of nervous breakdowns, maybe a few more of us had better take time out for one.

The campus G-girls start the new year off with a vengeance . . . about ten or twelve unfortunates will reign in and about our vine covered walls for several weeks to come.

Speaking of queens . . . our Mardi Gras queen is conspicuous these days by her absence from all social gatherings. Her chariot is at present a school bus and she reigns . . . in true teacherly fashion . . . over the country school room.

Quarterly grades serve as the chief topic of conversation . . . as the letters pour in from home we hear solemn resolutions about more study and less play . . . which will soon go the way of all good resolutions.

One of Margaret Stallard's young swains called from Kentucky to wish her a happy birthday and told her to listen to a certain orchestra's broadcast from Louisville for the song to be dedicated to her . . . so she listened for many, many hours . . . around five in the morning there was still no such song and she gave up in utetr disgust and retired.

And now with humble apologies for a lot of boring tripe I issue a plea for bigger and better scandal and many efficient reporters!

THEATRICAL REVIEW

This week's theatrical batting average was pretty low—no hits, one run and two errors . . . Versatile Cornelia Otis Skinner came through with "Edna His Wife", a one-woman show in which Miss Skinner is the only occupant of the stage, aside from scenery and props . . . She acts each different part in monologue in eleven scenes, squeezing 37 years in the life of a drab woman into a two and a half-hour performance . . . Production errors of the week were "Something for Nothing", which vitriolic critics wouldn't take "for nothing," and "Siege," a Spanish War drama . . . Both folded shortly after the premieres . . . Our vote of appreciation to English importations Mac Kenzie Ward and John Williams for their faultless characterization in Ina Clair's Barchester Towers, itself a well-staged lampoon of British church politics in the nineteenth century . . . Bandmaster Abe Lyman will handle the music assignment for Billy Rose's French Casino while fan-famed Sally Rand will serve as a draw for libidinous males.

You Can Get Out of a Thing What You Put Into It

A year is just a lot of days, and we may make them what we wish.
"You get out of a thing exactly what you put into it." Each day may, if we wish it so, a chapter in our lives that we shall want to read or recall over and over again because it was a success.
When things go wrong
As they sometimes will,
When the road you're trudging seems all up hill,
When the funds are low
And the debts are high
And you want to smile,
But you have to sigh,
When care is pressing you down a bit,
Rest, if you must—
But don't you quit.

Life is queer, with its twists and turns,
As everyone of us sometime learns,
And many failure turns about
When he might have won
Had he stuck it out;
Don't give up, though the pace seems slow,
You may succeed with another blow.

The Day

By Grace Noel Crowell

The day will bring some lovely thing.
I say it over each new dawn.
Some gay, adventurous thing to hold
Against my heart when it is gone.
And so I rise and go to meet
The day with wings upon my feet.

I come upon it unaware
Some sudden beauty without name;
A snatch of song—a breath of pine
A poem lit with golden flame;
High tangled bird notes keenly thinned
Like flying color on the wind.

No day has ever failed me quite.
Before the grayest day is done,
I find some misty purple bloom,
Or a late line of crimson sun,
Each night I pause, remembering
Some gay, adventurous, lovely thing.

HUMOR

Conversation overheard in a chicken incubator:

"Come on, fellows. Let's go. Last one out's a rotten egg."—Pitt Panther.

"Oh, Mrs. Flatbottom, I never seen a child as badly spoiled as that son of yours."

"Why, Mrs. Murphy, I don't believe you."

"Oh, yes he is, too. Just come out and look what the fire engine did to him.—New York Medley.

Found on a freshman's registration card: Name of parents: Mama and Papa."—Aruguian.

Christmas Aftermath: I stood beneath the mistletoe and waited patiently
My secret love just hurried by
And never glanced at me.
So now I'm eating yeast cakes
I'm using Lux and Lifebouy,
And waiting for next year.

Copied from Aquinas:

Freshman: "Just how long do you think a man should keep his arm around a girl?"

Soph: "Until he hears his watch strike."

Frosh: "But watches don't strike do they?"

Soph: "Of course not, silly."

First Student: "I have a chance for the basketball team."

Second Student: "Really? When is it going to be raffled?"

"The Guild of St. Mary's asks that the decorations for the church this year be memorials for loved ones who have passed on as far as possible.—Church paper notice.

Thieves who ransacked the golf club took away every bottle of whiskey and beer in the place. The other 18 holes were not touched.

What is the sense of having a boycott against Japanese made goods when we ship more American made goods to Japan than we import from that country? The Japs would surely retaliate and we would be losers, with the laugh on us.

GLEANINGS

By

Virginia L. Agee

The Ne w Year was rung into this world twelve days ago—there were loud whistles and gay bells and happy voices. To many, it meant the turning over of a new page in individual life—books. Resolutions—strong and steady; ideals—high and beautiful: determination—keen and unshaken: many claimed them when the year was but a day old. Already more than a few persons have broken over, and it's a very sorry scheme—yet harmful to none but themselves. It not only shows lack of character, but a will as weak as water. Resolutions are funny things—why make them only to break them? 'T were better to let them go, to make no false promises to oneself, if in the end we say—"I didn't mean it anyway; I knew I'd break over." Simple?—of course it is and a very easy thing to do. The hard thing to do is to grit your teeth and stick by your previous decision, come what may!

Seven months ago a serious war broke out in China when Japanese troops attacked the latter with no official declaration of war. Hardship, bitterness, unnatural death, panic, disease have walked hand in hand with the vast population of China.

Japanese planes bombed the beauties of the ancient civilization; dropped sudden death on non-combatants; irked the U. S. and Great Britain. Japan has walked over international law by disregarding neutral territory as was the case in Shanghai. She insulted the U. S. government by deliberately bombing and sinking the Panay — which resulted in the deaths of several U. S. citizens and government employees.

It has been these things that Japan has marched through holding her Rising Sun flag high in the air and turning half way around in her march to apologize profusely for the insults she has been in the the habit of throwing right and left.

And now Nanking, China's capitol, has fallen into Japanese hands. General Swane Matsui, commander-in-chief of the Japanese military area, has ridden triumphantly through her streets. The Rising Sun flags flutter in the breeze.

China is tired—she has been tired for many years because of the poverty of her people. She is exhausted now because of the strain of war which may destroy what little peace and comfort she struggled for. Her troops are seemingly broken in spite of her inexhaustible man-supply; she retreats and cries out.

Japan presses on—drunk with success and victory. Behind her she leaves smoking towns, starving men and women, orphaned babies. She stops at nothing. It is a shame!

A shame! How futile that word is and yet how much it expresses. We can only hope for a quick retaliation of Chinese forces, for some renewed hope and spirit for her to carry on this ristasteful, gory war. And may she be triumphant!

Germany's Herr Hitler also sticks in our craw! Not only has he made that country a sort of breeding-house for the world, but he has put fear and unadulterated terror into the hearts of its people. Aloud, they cheer him and proclaim his name; inwardly, they shudder to think of what would happen if they did not kneel and kiss his boots as he passed by.

The latest development is the banning of the collection of President Roosevelt's speeches; the classing of them as "undesirable literature". It is true that Roosevelt's policies are kind of "screwy", but he does make good speeches; they are well-written and well-delivered and hardly to be classed as "undesirable."

Hitler is a coward and a weakling. His attempt to be a second Mussolini is making him the laughing stock of the world.

A sorry scheme of things?—oh yes—without a doubt.

Twenty Girls Make Varsity Basketball Squad

Three Games Will Be Played Here

Twenty girls, six of them seniors, five juniors, three sophomores and six freshmen will compose S. T. C.'s varsity squad for the coming basketball season. These players, chosen from a large group who have been trying out for the past week, are Ruby Adams, Elizabeth Berryman, Jennie Carroll, Ruth Emma Chambers, Ellen Conyers, Rosa Courter, Virginia Crute, Sue Eastham, Ellen Gilliam, Jennie Belle Gilliam, Lavalette Glenn, Mary Grainger, Elizabeth Hillsman, Hilda Hubbard, Chlotilde Jarman, Jean McConnoughey, Ruth Phelps, Juanita Smith, Virginia Whitehead Smith and Jennie Taylor.

With last year's captain, Frances Hudgins, the only player not back at school, the team anticipates one of the most successful seasons in many years.

Six games, three of them to be played on the home floor, are already scheduled, the first to be here with Roanoke College on Jan. 28. On Feb. 9 the team will journey to New York City. Definite plans have been completed to compete with Panzer College of Physical Education in East Orange, N. J. While on the trip, they will probably play a school in Baltimore and also in New York City.

Games with William and Mary College and Blackstone College, played in previous years, are also scheduled.

Perhaps the biggest game of the season is that to be with Harrisonburg S. T. C. on Founders Day, Mar. 4. For the past two years Farmville has known victory over the school with which competition is so keenly felt. Many alumnae will also be present for this game.

Varsity practices will be held on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday afternoons at 4 o'clock.

Nine Freshmen Will Play On Class Team

Nine girls will represent the freshmen in class basketball for 1938.

The girls who will compose this line up are Elizabeth Hillsman, Rosa Courter, Hilda Hubbard, Mary Sue Edmondson, Mary Cecil Bynum, Mary Grainger, Helen McIlwain, Juanita Smith and Asita Altomare.

The schedule of games is tentative, but the team will probably meet high school teams of Farmville, Hampton, Rice, Prospect, and Alexandria.

H20 Club Will Take Course In Life Saving

Members of the H20 club will take a course in life saving this quarter in order to aid in teaching and passing others in this course in the spring. Under new rules, the senior life savers must renew their test each year in order to hold their official badge and recognition.

Classes in life saving will continue this quarter as previously scheduled. The pool will be open each afternoon and on Saturday nights.

Slap that Ball Over the Ping Pong Net

Yeah, it's Ping Pong again. Let's start the ball flying. Did you say what ball? Ping Pong balls, of course. Where? In the Home Office. Call for them any time except during study hour. And by the way, be sure to return them to their proper resting place. It might be well to add here that the recreation hall and ping pong during study hour are definitely taboo. Sad but true.

There. Guess I got that ball over. Now, it's your turn. Slap that ball.

Folk Dances Take Students Back to Anglo-Saxons

Back to the Anglo-Saxons. Back to the swing and rhythm of music generations ago, dance before our time—a bit of the classic portrayed on the modern gym floor.

It's a regular gym class with these teachers—to-be—hops, skips and whirls to the rhythm of an ancient folk tune.

Could you? Sure thing. Might be a bit rusty. I said rusty not rustic—but I believe I did have that when I was a freshman.

That folk dance is really pretty though; and you just wait 'til Founders Day. If you've never danced in public, then here's you chance to burst forth and shine, girls. Um-m-m Fun?

Jongleurs May Give Second Joint Play

"There is a possibility that the Jongleurs will give another joint production with the S. T. C. Dramatic Club in the spring" said Lawrence Wood, vice-president of the Jongleurs, last week. Negotiations are being made with Miss Leola Wheeler, director of "Mary of Scotland", he explained, and she may decide to direct another joint play this year. If the plan develops this year will be the first in which the Jongleurs and the Dramatic Club of S. T. C. have given two plays in joint production.

Work is now being done on a one-act play to be given shortly after exams. Plans for several other one-act plays to be given during the Spring also are being formed.

Some of the athletic attaches at the Univeristy of Virginia are a little downcast over the loss of promising members of the Freshman football team through scholastic deficiencies, particularly the failing by the wayside of center Jack Murden from Norfolk, and Wilkerson, a fine tackle. Murden, without a doubt was the finest center to show up at Virginia in a decade and his performance all fall was outstanding. Only in the class room did he lag during the semester and this, at Virginia, is fatal to one's chances of varsity eligibility and following fall since there is no chance to make up the work that is dropped during the regular year. This means that Murden, nor any of the other suspended, will have a chance to play in 1937. Whether they will return to school is also problematical. On the bright side, however, was some exceptionally good classwork by other freshman footballers. Lee McLaughlin, the star tackle, passed every subject and Moseby Cardoza, the outstanding freshman back made the dean's list! The performances helped to soften the shock of losing men like Murden and Wilkerson.

Budge Wins Trophy

The Amateur Athletic Union awarded the James E. Sullivan Memorial Trophy for 1937 to J. Donald Budge. The first tennis player to be named as the outstanding athlete who by his performance, example and influence as a man did most to advance the cause of sportsmanship.

Horton Smith Defeated

Lenord Dodson won the Hollywood, Florida, open golf tournament. The twenty-five year old unknown defeated Horton Smith, his former teacher, by three strokes in a eighteen hole play-off. Afterward Dodson exclaimed, "Imagine me winning a tournament. I won't believe it until I see it in the newspapers."

At Champaign, Ill., the Notre Dame basketball team, undefeated in nineteen straight games, lost to the University of Ill., in an overtime period 33 to 32.

Dorothy Round, English tennis queen, didn't play in last summer's matches. Instead she married Dr. Donald L. Little. The Wembledom champion announced last week that she wouldn't defend her title. "I love to play tennis all over the world," said Mrs. Little, "but don't want to live that sort of life forever. I'm satisfied to settle down and be a good wife."

Dartmouth Producers Skiers

When Otto Schniebs was in charge of the Dartmouth College ski team it had few real challengers in the United States. But last year Schniebs resigned and a twenty-five year old Swiss named Walter Prager was imported to succeed him. He took over Dartmouth's winter sports quietly confident he could do as good a job as his predecessor. Last week Coach Prager was sure enough of himself to divide his ski squad into six man teams to meet two important challenges, east and west. The less experienced half of the Dartmouth squad traveled to New York's Lake Placid to face other eastern college teams in the Lake Placid's club's annual invitation tournament. The first day curly haired Ed Meservey won the cross country race, followed by two Dartmouth teammates who placed second and third. Next day Ed Wells, who had won the Stalom the day before placed first in down hill. On the final day Meservey placed second in the ski jump, which gave him first place in the combined cross country and jump, brought Dartmouth's score to 300 points, seventy-nine more than second place Williams. Coach Prager himself accompanied the other six men to Sunvalley, Idaho to meet University of Washington in a dual meet. Washington, coached by Otto Lorg, pet pupils of famed Skimeister Hannes Schneider, is to western skiing what Dartmouth is to Eastern skiing.

When Dick Dowance, generally recognized as the best skier in the United States, sprained his ankle, making a practice run last week, Coach Prager was apprehensive. But his other five skiers went on to make a clean sweep of the meet. Dartmouth took the first five places in the cross country races and first four places in both the down hill and Stalom events. Dartmouth's skiers under Prager remained as invincible as they were under Schniebs.

In London the fog was so thick that the Chanton soccer eleven's goal keeper stayed at his post after the other players had left the field. No kidding.

Class Swimming Contest Will Take Place

Points on Cup Will Be Awarded

Interclass swimming meet between sister classes will be held on Tuesday night, Feb. 15. Participants will receive points for the color cup of their class and also individual points. From the participants of this meet a varsity team will be chosen for the inter-telegraphic meet in March. The speed events for competition will be the breast stroke, back crawl, and free style stroke. Diving and form swimming will be judged entirely for form.

Inter - telegraphic swimming meet will also give color points and individual points to those taking part. By this inter-school plan, schools and colleges from all around send results to a decided destination: the school having best time in speed and best record form will win the meet.

Practices will be held one night a week and will increase later if necessary. One member of the H2O club will be appointed to each class to instruct and help plan for that class' part in the meet.

Physical Education Courses Present Varied Phases

Many and varied phases of physical education con be found in S. T. C. courses this quarter.

Freshmen are taking folk dacning in their gym classes. The other dancing classes which are being taught this quarter are natural dancing, tapping and dance composition. All of these are open to anyone wishing to take some form of dance.

Swimming is in great demand by girls, and these classes show a large enrollment. Classes are divided into beginners, intermediates and advanced.

Seasonal sports class is taking basketball and lead up games for this sport. The coaching classes are studying this sport also.

Many Girls Spend Week-End In Lynchburg

Agnes Buchanan Attends Wedding

Two weeks of Christmas vacation seemed inadequate for some people who checked in on Monday night, ran through the schedule several times and departed with bags for a gala week-end Friday or Saturday.

Lynchburg, as usual, had that magnetic attraction for many. "Many" in this case included Mary Harvey, Evelyn Montgomery, Livian Powell, Mary Elizabeth Petticrew, Nancye Pierpont, Margaret Lindsey, Jenny Carroll, Carter Belle Munt, Ruth Curtis Robeson, Bert Gartrell, Emily Hoskins, Helen Watts and Annie W. Holden.

Agnes Buchanan went home to attend her brother's wedding.

Ruth Sears went as far as Washington to have her good time.

Jo Quinn and Kitty Carlton spent the week-end in the fair city of Richmond.

Frances Dickinson and Shirley Stephens visited friends in Charlottesville.

Frances Steed went to Petersburg Sunday, via auto.

Prince Smith is convalescing at her home in Lawrenceville—too much Christmas Cheer!

Frances Maxey and Kitty Brooks declare that they spent a quiet week-end at home with their families in Clarksville.

Others who went home are Deane Saunders, Lucy Staples, Frances Barnes, Blair Goode, Mary L. Cox, Pattie Jeffries, Eleanor Dodson and Virginia Doughty.

Alumnae returning were Nellie Goodwyn, Dot Price Wilkinson, Louise Eubank, "Hippy" Hurt, Sue Mallory, Virginia Baker and Charlie Clarke.

Nancy Byrd Turner Lectures for Local Woman's Club

Miss Nancy Byrd Turner, of Ashland, Virginia, poetess and lecturer of note, was presented by the Junior Woman's Club of Farmville in an open meeting on January 14 at 4 o'clock in the small auditorium.

Miss Turner lectured on "The Adventures of a Verse Writer." Her talk was illustrated by readings. Some of the poems that she read have never been published. A few of them were from her latest collection of poems, "Silver Saturday." This collection contains short poems on gardens, homes and everyday life.

Whether Miss Turner tells of a strange journey of historic characters, of the glamour of childhood, of quaint darkies, or of her own experiences as a writer, she never fails to handle her subject with imagination and humor.

Dorothy Fischer Reviews Father Malachy's Miracle

Father Malachy's Miracle is an emotional religious play with its setting in Edinburg, Scotland. It is ta play filled with joy, love, disappointment and despair. Greed, carelessness and fear are shown by those who at first do not believe in and respect the Almighty God.

Father Malachy, played by Al Shean, performs his miracle by moving a night club to a rock in the middle of the ocean and then back again.

Despite the many discouragements which Father Malachy faces, His perseverance and efforts, shows that faith in God conquers all.

"Father Malachy's Miracle" is one of the most impressive plays I have ever seen. It offers moments of joy and of laughter, a delightful picture of the gay side of the life of men and women but it also portrays the endured dissentations affecting Father Malachy.

The entire scenery was impressive, but the scene that impressed me most was on Christmas morning when Father Malachy walks into the night club, kneels down and prays. At first he is laughed at and scorned by the many intoxicated merry-makers but gradually they become frightened, realize their mistake and kneel down beside him in prayer.

Each actor portrays his part with ease an naturalness, showing his character and personality.

Al Shean was decidedly the most outstanding performer as the lovable, sincere Father Malachy.

Southern Methodist English Professor Tells One

An English professor at Southern Methodist University gets a laugh out of all this publicity about $15,000-a-year football coaches and emphasis on the "win or else" policy.

Years ago he was a football coach himself at Southwestern University in Georgetown, Tex.

"My Southwestern team was one of the strongest in the state," he related. "One day the president of Southwestern and I were strolling across the campus.

"Our football team is doing well this season, isn't it," the president remarked.

"Yes, it is making a fair rec-

Thought and Study Are Put on Resolutions For 1938

Amidst the ringing of bells, the screaming of sirens, the blowing of whistles, showers of confetti and strains of "Auld Lang Syne" the old year was rushed out, and a brand new year, still giddy from its rapid entrance into this twentieth century is here. And with it comes the annual habit of resolution-making.

"I resolve to—". What an excess of sky-gazing and brown study as you, meaning well, try to pluck a resolution out of the air!—something that will look like a self-sacrifice on paper and will satisfy your conscience and yet, won't be too big a strain on your will power.

Your conscience pricks you when you think of the studying that was put off and the rushing and cramming that had to be done to make up term papers, note-books, etc. before examinations. So that is jotted down as a fine resolution. "Resolved to study and keep up my work from day to day."

How about the many mornings you overslept and went rushing down to class only to find yourself late? And how about those unexcused absences? O, you'll have to do something about that, you say, and jot down Resolution No. 2.

A gentle hint from home or maybe a more severe prodding from that quarter brings to mind the fact that you spent too much money last quarter. Shannons, shows, coco-colas—it was so easy to spend, slipped through your fingers so readily, but the remainder of the school year you'll "do better", "cut down", "deny yourself". High sounding and well-meaning these and many other such resolutions, but are you going to keep them or when this year is over, will you tear up the unkept "Resolutions of 1938" and resolve to keep the "Resolutions of 1939"? Instead why not resolve not to make any resolutions and just be the best of whatever you are?

Mrs. J. E. Walmsley Is Buried Here December 18

Funeral services for Mrs. Margaret Kasey Walmsley, wife of Dr. James Elliot Walmsley, head of the history department, were held at 2:30 o'clock December 18, 1937, at the Farmville Methodist church with the Rev. Edgar Allen Potts, pastor, officiating. Interment followed in the Farmville cemetery.

Mrs. Walmsley had been ill for seven weeks, but her death was unexpected.

A native of Bedford, Virginia, Mrs. Walmsley had made her home in Winchester, Kentucky; in Jackson, Mississippi; and Rock Hill, South Carolina; moving to Farmville in 1925. She was a member of the Farmville Woman's Club, the U. D. C., the Daughters of the American Revolution, the Huguenot Society of Virginia, and was active in church and social life.

Besides her husband she is survived by three daughters, Mrs. Margaret W. Billus of Flushing, N. Y., Mrs. Douglas Gee of Displanta, and Miss Louise Walmsley, a student at Peabody College.

Representatives of each of the student organizations on the Farmville campus were honorary pallbearers.

Mrs. Tabb's Brother Dies in Blackstone

Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon, January 2 at 2 o'clock in Forest Lawn Cemetery, Richmond, for Dr. John Cecil White, brother of Mrs. J. H. Tabb, superintendent of the tea room, who died at his home in Blackstone late Saturday. His death followed a two-day illness of heart trouble.

Dr. White was a graduate of Hampden-Sydney in 1922. The Kaleidoscope of that year contained the following quotation, "He was manager of the football team and business manager of the Kaleidoscope in '21-'22. These honors give an insight to the character of one of the most popular seniors in school."

He is survived by his wife, two children, four brothers and four sisters.

Student President Announces Failures; Urges Study

There were 119 class failures during the fall quarter, as announced by Elizabeth Morris at the regular meeting of the student body on Monday, January 10.

In the freshman class, there were 73 failures, in the sophomore 32, in the junior 11 and among the seniors only 2.

Using this record as a basis Elizabeth urged students to consider the subject of closed study hour closely. Dudley Allen, president of the House Council passed out blanks for students to criticize the trial closed study hour which was installed the week before Christmas. Space was left on the blanks for suggestions by the students. The results of this poll will be published in next week's Rotunda.

Symphony

practiced tedious hour under Mr. Pyle's supervision. Now, states the director, the orchestra, while lacking a few players to make it a real symphony, is a rather nice concert band.

Recently John Powell, eminent Virginia musician, asked Mr. Pyle to visit him with the idea of forming a complete Virginia symphony. At first the seemed impractical to the state director, but he found that John Powell, possessed of an idea, would not give up until something constructive had been done.

Correspondence with North Carolina's band of unemployed musicians under government pay, disclosed the fact that the weak spots in the Virginia orchestra were strong in the North Carolina one. This left both orchestras in the same general conditions because neither orchestra was willing to give up its strongest players. For a while 22 Virginians played in North Carolina, and later 25 North Carolinians played here. Now the Virginia band has several North Carolina players.

Richmond came to the rescue and gave $2000 to the orchestra for the hire of more players, and now the orchestra is in fine shape.

"A state-wide orchestra is never self-supporting," declared Mr. Pyle. His idea is that if several communities will share the expense of a Virginia orchestra when government aid is stopped, as it must soon be, then the actual loss will be little. Mr. Pyle believes that the gain culturally in the privilege of hearing the best music will be worth the loss.

For the last two months, Director Pyle has been going through the state getting the views of towns on this idea of his and John Powell's. He finds college towns particularly enthusiastic, and desires to give Farmville the opportunity of hearing this orchestra. After hearing the band, he asks that students and town people give him frank opinions of the plan of promoting a Virginia symphony.

At the convention you can always lead a delegate to water—but he won't like it.

Cofer-Warriner Nuptials Held In Blacksburg

Bernice Copley Is Bridesmaid

Christ Episcopal Church in Blacksburg was the scene of the wedding Wed. evening, Dec. 29, at 8 o'clock of Miss Frances A. Warriner, oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin A. Warriner, and Mr. John Wheat Cofer of Pikeville, Ky., son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Gilbert Cofer of Roanoke. Church decorations were Christmas greens with white cathedral candles on the altar. The Rev. Richard Martin performed the ceremony.

The maid of honor was the bride's only sister, Miss Anne Warriner, and the bridesmaids were Miss June Harris of Washington, Miss Fay Lucus and Miss Mary Barksdale Hutcheson of Blacksburg, and Miss Bernice Copley of Kenbridge. The maid of honor and bridesmaids wore white taffeta dresses with bouffant skirts of tulle. Their short veils were held in place with clusters of flowers. They carried arm bouquets of red roses.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a white satin gown, made on princess lines with a train, and her long veil of illusion was fastened with orange blossoms. Her only jewelry was a necklace, worn by her grandmother at her wedding, and she carried a white prayer book, showered with gardenias and lilies of the valley.

The groom had as his best man, Mr. Walter Holberton of Columbia. The ushers were Mr. Forest E. Wheat of Roanoke, Mr. E. R. Brown of Washington, Mr. James C. Ware of Dunnsville and Mr. Robert Hummell of Blacksburg.

The special music was rendered by Miss Helen Hoyer of Hampton. Her selection was "Because" composed by Guy d'Hardelot.

After the ceremony there was an informal reception at the Warriner house for relatives, out-of-town guests and friends from the town and college. Mr. and Mrs. Cofer left later in the evening for a motor trip south, which included visits to Miami, Florida, and New Orleans, La.

Earle Spicer Sings Famous Ballads For Lyceum

Ancient People Of Importance Wrote Songs

Earle Spicer, famous baritone appeared here Tuesday, Jan. 18 as guest artist in the first of the winter quarter lyceums. His program was of unusual interest because of the history of his achievement.

A great part of Mr. Spicer's program was composed of ballads, some of which were written by such famous people as King Charles I, King Henry VIII, Queen Anne Boleyn, and Handel. Ballads are favorites with this versatile artist, and he takes great delight in singing them to his audiences. Compositions on this particular occasion included traditional English and American ballads. A cordial, informal atmosphere prevailed as Mr. Spicer introduced his selections with bits of history and humor. Not a little of the excellence of the entertainment was contributed by the accompanist, Mr. Merl Freeland.

This talented baritone who was born in Arcadia has been singing ever since he was a youngster in the choir of his little, country church. Since that time he has studied in Europe, taking time out to join the British forces in the World War, and then returned to his career to achieve the distinction of entertaining many of the royalty of Europe with his enviable repetoire of musical selections. He has been outstanding not only in concert and oratorio work but has been a member of the artist staffs of the British Broadcasting Company, and the National Broadcasting Company. He broadcasted as soloist for the Fuller Brush Company for nearly three years.

Mr. Spicer has had some amusing experiences due to his given name. Once, in London, at a grand reception he gave his name "Earle Spicer" to the host, who thinking him to be one of the Noblity, at once pompously and in a loud voice announced him as "His Lordship, The Earl of Spicer."

Debate Club Submits Full Schedule For Intercollegiate Meets

Realizing the need for a clearer understanding of some of the vital problems before the world today, the Debate Club debated Wednesday night, January 12, on the subject, "Resolved: That nations should sever all trade relations with aggressor nations."

The debate was given by the new members of the club with Virginia Howell and Mary Rice upholding the affirmative side against Margaret Tucker and Frances Holloway of the negative.

Following the program, Nora Jones, the Debate Manager, submitted a list of the debates which have been contracted. The schedule includes an exchange debate on February 12 with Lynchburg College. On February 18 Farmville has a dual debate with Roanoke College; February 24 an exchange debate with Bridgewater; February 25 Randolph-Macon College (men) here; March 2, University of South Carolina here; March 3-5, Convention at High Point; March 24, Gettysburg here; April 5, Waynesburg here; April 8-10, Grand Eastern Tournament, Rock Hill; April 11, Shippenburg State Teachers College here.

Other debates will be arranged with the University of Richmond, Hampden-Sydney and Randolph-Macon.

Halliburton Presents Stories Of Travels

Her name was Mademoiselle Elizabeth Dalrimple. Dally to her friends, and she was a Paris zoo beauty of seventeen, weighing three tons and possessing a most alluring snozzle. In short, she was the elephantine companion on which Richard Halliburton, who lectured here Friday night, declared he traveled in style over the Alps Mountains on the trail of Hannibal as he proceeded to conquer the Italians.

Dally and Halliburton left Paris after causing a street riot in protest of auto horns and started on the trail of the great conqueror. The author showed in animated gestures how Dally moved her snozzle less and less as air became more and more thin. In one place she kept villagers from observing an age-old custom of church attendance because they preferred seeing their first elephant at her bath. Dally got mountain sick and had to be called such illustrious pet names as "peanuts", "dear cabbage," and "sweet carrot" before she deigned to unblock the traffic.

At St. Bernard Pass, the author declared the kindly monks of the famous monastery claimed they were overcome at the increase in visitors because of Lady Dally's appearance on the scene. The monk's faithful St. Bernard dogs put on all four brakes in surprise at Dally's strange appearance with both ends waving, as if to say "which end is what?"

As the two companions began to go down the Italian side of the Alps, Dally began to become joyous. "Her snozzle once more waved like this", stated Halliburton waving his arm in imitation, "because she thought she was again in her native India."

A minor catastrophe almost ended the gay journey when the Italian northern army mistook the elephant and his rider for the look-out of the Ethiopian army. "Hello, general, how are you?" the irrepressible adventurer demanded from his height as he lumbered past an officer on a mere horse. This was fatal because Dally laped wildly into the air as the Italians fired in pure spite at

The play, "The Woman Who Understood Men", will be presented by the apprentices of the Dramatic Club at the regular meeting Wednesday night, January 19, in the large auditorium.

This play will be directed by Alpha Lee Garnett, the head of the acting group of the Dramatic Club.

She also announces that the final examinations for all apprentices must be completed by January 22.

Dr. E. Clinchy States Three Rules for Life

Subject of Talk Is Human Relations

Dr. Everett Clinchy, a speaker under the auspices of the Jewish Chautauqua Society, lectured to the Student Body on Monday night, January 17, in the large auditorium on bettering human relations among different races, nationalities and religions.

Dr. Clinchy stated three rules of living: "to live and annilate different peoples, to live and let live and to live and help others live. In living together we need communication, education of the good in various peoples and on awareness of the fact that we can live together peacefully and for the good of the whole. To live as we should in following this third rule, it is necessary that we go out of our way to bring about the well being of the people in other groups, races and nations."

Dr. Clinchy gave outstanding facts in the development of religious liberty through the work of Thomas Jefferson, James Madison and Ralph Waldo Emerson. The importance of the schools is training the teachers to present this problem of racial and religious differences to children was stressed. A teacher can, he believes, condition in young people any emotions on ideas she desires. Students here as teachers have in their hands a plastic people.

"What can we do about it?" Dr. Clinchy had two suggestions in answer to this question. In assembly programs representatives of groups that make up communities may talk to the children. The teacher may often remind pupils that forty nations have supplied people that make up our civilization and have contributed to its culture. The American civilization is rich because it is the most varied.

In conclusion Dr. Clinchy stressed the importance of bringing into teaching the understanding of races, nationalities and religions.

Spring Cotillion Will Be In Early April

The Cotillion Club has chosen Saturday, April 2, as the date for the Spring Cotillion. At this time, as has been the custom, there will be a tea dance in the afternoon followed by the formal dance that night.

An election was held for a committee to make nominations for next year's leader. The committee is composed of "Lib" Harris, Jacqueline Johnson and Eleanor Dodson.

Miss Bedford Has Blended Class Into Rainbow

Jane Powell, the president of the Sophomore class, presented its classman, Miss Virginia Bedford for the second time in chapel, on Thursday, January 13.

Because of the talent that has been recognized in Miss Bedford, the Sophomore class chose her to be its "artist through the years" and to blend the various abilities of its class into a complete and harmonious picture.

The class last year presented its classman as the master of art and the girls were the different colors in her paint box. This year the Sophomores drew a picture for the student body. The colors of the class were used to make a rainbow, at the end of which was a pot of gold, Miss Bedford.

The classman song, words by Mary Page Huff and music by Jane Hardy, was sung at the opening of the presentation. Following the actual presentation of Miss Bedford to the Student Body, other songs written by members of the class were sung to the classman. To the tune of "Red and White" the class marched out of the auditorium.

Kappa Delta Pi Regional Meeting Held Here

Dr. Thomas C. McCracken, executive president of Kappa Delta Pi, spoke at the final meeting of the Kappa Delta Pi Regional Conference held in Farmville on Saturday, January 15. Dr. McCracken spoke of the founding of Kappa Delta in 1911 by Dr. W. C. Bagley. He further discussed the aims and ideal of the organization and its present economic status.

Dr. J. L. Jarman extended the welcome at the luncheon meeting at Longwood on Saturday afternoon. Dr. Thomas D. Eason, director of higher education, spoke on the challenge of membership in Kappa Delta Pi. Dr. McCracken also discussed the work and duties of the organization.

Group discussions were held in the afternoon. The leaders in these discussions were: Dr. W. J. Gifford, counselor of the chapter at Harrisonburg, Miss Anna D. Halberg, counselor of the Chapter at Wilson Teachers College in Washington, and Dr. M'Ledge Moffett, counselor of the chapter at East Radford.

Chapters of Kappa Delta Pi of the following colleges were represented: Gamma Alpha chapter at East Radford, Delta Gamma Chapter from Athens, West Virginia, the Alpha Chi Chapter at Harrisonburg, Alpha Tau chapter at Duke University, the Delta Lambda Chapter at Wilson Teachers College in Washington, the Alpha Xi Chapter at William and Mary and the Beta Epsilon Chapter at Farmville as the host for the conference.

Students Vote For Regulated Study Hour

The Student Body approved the system of regulated study hour presented by the student committee, at a call meeting Wednesday night, January 12. The president of the House Council, a representative from each council, and a senior affiliated with neither group served as the committee.

The regulated system approved by the students comprises the following points: The hour set aside for study is from 7:30 P. M. until 10:00 P. M., a strict enforcement of regular school Busy Signs, which can be used during the appointed study hour only, constitutes the main feature of the system; to prevent abuse of the Busy Sign, special signs are to be made by the students for other occasions; students reminded 4 times of using Busy Signs at any other hour will receive a call down. Members of the House Council and the Student Council will enforce the system, one call down will be given without warning for any undue noise on the halls or in rooms or for crashing a Busy Sign or

Girls Will Apprentice On Rotunda Staff For Six Weeks

Judged by ability, willingness to work, promptness and similar essentials, new members of the Rotunda staff will be selected from a large number of try-outs, mainly among the freshmen.

The try-outs cover the same articles covered by the present staff. They also adhere to the same rules recognized by the staff. These will include the four requirements recently added, namely:

Unless the article is of news that has not taken place by Sunday it must be placed in the Rotunda box by Sunday night.

Each editor will carefully go over her particularly assigned article sometime Monday morning and return the article to the girl to be rewritten if it is unsatisfactory.

The rule for the handing in of articles by Sunday night will be strictly enforced by the keeping of a record of each reporter by her editor. Failure to hand in

Junior Production Has Something, Says Reporter

The Junior production has got something. First it has a catchy title—"Sister Pat with Apologies to Brother Rat."

Then it has a script that promises to rival that of its namesake. It is a breath-taking comedy. The three heroines romp through situations and conditions that are typical of life at S. T. C. The plot is divided into three acts. In the first act we will recognize the scene as the Rotunda several days before the exciting Cotillion Club dance. Here, as people are discussed, mud is thrown, puns are punned, destinies are decided and history is made. The second act depicts a student's room during intermission of the dance. Ah, here we have the plot unfolding. One of the heroines, Sarah, falls in love and the trouble begins—as it always does at that crucial point. Sarah, with the help of her friends, plans a daring escapade that culminates in the last act with—wouldn't you like to know?

Third the production has a cast

Light Is Needed By Blind Japanese As They Destroy

God said "Let there be light," and there was light. And God saw that it was good that the world had light.

Figuratively, when a man comprehends he is said to see light. For man that is a good state. When a person flounders in the dark and suddenly sees light and finds his way, that is good. When a man is in the dark and cannot find light, that is bad.

Japan cannot claim she sees light when she advances imperialism at the price of ruthless destruction of the happiness of thousands of helpless Chinese. When men desire wealth to the extent of forgetting all regard for humaneness, then there is indeed a need for light for there is certainly a darkness in men's minds.

The Japanese general rode in triumph through the war—wrecked streets of Nanking where earlier starving and weeping mothers and children had hastened to leave homes before the dreaded enemy brought hunger, disease, and chaos with him.

Let us pity China. Let us send money and needed necessities, but let us go no further in this war. Remember 1916 and the futility of that war. Remember our boys who died for an obscure cause promoted by propaganda. Remember Flander's Field and keep faith by stopping this slaughter.

Let us stick by beautiful day of peace and by our President who says so forcefully "I hate war!"

Halliburton Books Are Exuberant

Richard Halliburton has been described as a "Composite of Marco Polo, Benvenuto Cellini, Dean Swift, Doc Cook, Joan Lowell and Bob Ripley." Those of us who heard Mr. Halliburton last week are inclined to agree. Adventure, travel, exaggeration, and humor combined to make his one of the liveliest lectures we've yet heard. Vital, compelling, totally different, Richard Halliburton has the power to transpose us from S. T. C. auditorium to India, Italy, France. Naturally everyone who heard him is eager to read any of his books which have been missed previously.

Seven League Boots, one of his latest books, is also one of his most exuberant. The reader in his imagination travels from Florida to far places in Italy and Siberia. Probably to us one of his most interesting tales is that about Fort Jefferson. Built between 1846 and 1860 for a fortress, it was later turned into a prison. Here was sent Dr. Samuel Mudd, who set the leg of John Wilkes Booth after the assasination of Lincoln. Although the physician was not convicted of having any part in the plot to take Lincoln's life, he was nevertheless imprisoned. But yellow fever sprang up, striking down inmate and guard alike. Due to his work among those who were stricken, Dr. Mudd was released. The story is intensely grisly, but it has not half the horror of the tale concerning Peter Ermakov, a dying Russian. According to Mr. Halliburton, Peter relates the ghastly murder, in which he and two of his friends were involved, of the Romanoffs.

None of us could forget Mr. Halliburton's account of his crossing the Alps a la Hannibal. He tells about this also in Seven League Boots. It is interesting to compare the two versions.

For those of you who are teaching in the elementary school, The Occident is excellent for younger boys and girls. Based on travel experiences, it is a selection of his most striking adventures. As Halliburton stated in his lecture, he always loved the history of far places. It has made it possible for boys and girls to travel with him over the entire globe. Starting at San Francisco, he goes to New York, Washington, South America, Haiti, crosses the Atlantic, sees Pompeii, Moscow, the Monastery fo St. Bernard. The conversational style is unusual for younger boys and girls.

Rotunda Reverberations

Chi, the campus Klu Klux Klan, has been doing some of its noble, secret and philanthropic work for the past week. Clad in solemn robes of white sheets and armed with paint brushes and cans of red paint they paid several formal calls last Friday night. Caroline Upshur, Frances Irvin, Mary Harrison Vaughan, Frances Hutchinson and Kit Pilcher were among those favored with a visit from this worthy organization. They were told of their various and sundry misdemeanors and as a warning against the seriousness of repeating their misdeeds had their faces and locks smeared with brilliant red paint. In their undue enthusiasm, however, they painted the school sheets too, and 'tis rumored that the home department is up in arms!

The campus G-girls continue their diligent warfare on students who tend to slide from the straight and narrow path. Monday night some eight or ten girls were caught in the various hangouts down town . . . so . . . the list of campus queens increases!

Even G-girls take time out occasionally for romance. Ruth Curtis Robeson's extra-curricula activities center around a young ministerial student at H.-S. C. The new flame burns so brightly that she has apparently forsaken Aunt Molly . . . her old love back home!

Among the things one would like to know . . . What has happened to the Jimmy Christian-Margaret Britton affair? . . . Why Frances Steed runs around singing "Oh Bliss", "Oh Bliss"? What Frank Sullivan thought the other night when Soap turned up? . . . Why Louise Anthony is wearing her ring on the wrong hand? . . . Why Nancy Grey is sporting a diamond (?) these days? . . . Why Lenoir Hubbard wants the Rounder skunked? . . . Why GeGe Doughty is just living for the PiKA parties? . . . Why Lib George Wilson and Caroline Willis were so anxious to be on campus? . . . Why Horace Cromer does his studying in Shannons? . . . Why Mary Harvey is feuding with Craft? . . . Why Marjorie Woolfolk goes to the Fellowship? . . . Who Madeline McGlothlin's man of the moment is? . . . Why several freshmen assume the hostess in a night club attitude in Shannons? . . . Why it seems like three years instead of three weeks since we've been back in school?

God Can Give Us Grace

A few moments—if only we would take them everyday to talk with God, asking forgiveness for our sins and for guidance—this world would be a bigger place and a finer place in which to live.

Prayer

By Christie Lund

There are a few things I have prayed for, Lord,
A few small things your grace alone can give:
The strength to leave unsaid the bitter word;
The power to say the kind one and forgive
All that is said or done by thoughtless men,
Blinded a little while by envy, hate;
The courage to go on and try again
When hopes have failed. The patience, Lord to wait.
The wisdom to see clearly and to cling
To simple truths, though fame and glory dim;
The faith to make a dream a living thing;
The worthiness of heart to follow Him.
A gentleness of soul, a spirit meek,
The nobler life. These are the things I seek.

Letter to Editor

Dear Editor:

Beorc Eh Thorn deserves the thanks of the entire student body for bringing such a person as Richard Halliburton to this campus. From comments among students, it seems that he has become overnight one of the most popular speakers ever to talk here.

The auditorium Friday night was more quiet than it has been in the last four years, to my knowledge. This shows the student body liked Beorc Eh Thorn's guest.

If an organization can bring such speakers as John Erskine, Richard Halliburton, Lawrence Lee and Nancy Byrd Turner to this campus, it has done well if it accomplishes nothing else.

A Senior

GLEANINGS

By

Virginia L. Agee

The scene of war permeates the entire world. A spark kindled several years ago in Ethiopia by a land hungry dictator was nursed into a thin flame by the Civil War which is still raging in Spain; that thin flame was fanned into a good-sized blaze when Japan invaded China seven months ago. It isn't that one war leads to another—though in an argument, it would come to that. So many things happen! Shall we attempt to explain that statement?

Long years ago, after the great World War, an agreement was signed by the leading nations of the world—and thus, the League of Nations was formed; a wonderful thing, but it did not last. In the past six or seven months Italy, Germany, and Japan have withdrawn from that parley . . . the bombing and sinking of English, French and American vessels in the neutral waters of the Mediterranean in connection with the Spanish conflict . . . the stubborness and the chummy relationship of Mussolini and Herr Hitler . . . the pouncing of Japan on China . . . the refusal on Japan's part to accept a bid to a parley made up of Great Britain, France, and —supposedly—herself . . . . the disturbance aroused when Great Britain and the United States protested Japan's warfare on innocent Chinese noncombatants . . . the deliberate and malicious bombing of the U. S. destroyer, Panay, and the Standard Oil ships. These all have occurred within the past six or seven months.

The United States does not want war! But for that matter, who does really want it? In his speech at the dedication of the wonderful new bridge in Chicago, President Roosevelt ably vocalized the sentiments of the American population on that issue when he said, "America hates war. America wants peace!"

* * *

Of course we want peace. At all expense we want peace. We of this generation know no thing of the hardships and bitternesses and agonies that walk hand in hand with war. Those older than we do know. Know what it's like to live in trenches . . . to see and hear bombs exploding and bullets grazing the anatomy . . . to see a comrade fall under the deadliness of a well-aimed bullet and perhaps to even experience the same . . . to see the dead and wounded lying everywhere . . . to hear the groans . . . can you see it? Of course not—but many of you have heard all about it. Perhaps you, too, can still remember the joyfulness and relief that reigned in the atmosphere when the Armistice was signed; perhaps you remembers waking and hearing the bells ring and the whistles blow!

And yet, the United States must be prepared in case. Thus, the building of many warships; the experiments with aircraft; the readiness of the reserved army.

President Woodrow Wilson also said the United States wanted peace at any expense—in 1916 we entered the great World War.

* * *

The Revolutionary War was fought for independence; the Civil War was fought for unity; the World War was fought for the peace of other countries as well as our own. The next war will be fought for—what?

America—the land of the free and the home of the brave; America the beautiful; may the star spangled banner wave in triumph—but—

"In Flanders fields the poppies blow between the crosses row on row—"

and

"We are the dead; short days ago
We lived, felt dawn, saw sunset glow,
Loved and were loved, and we lie
In Flanders fields."

Halliburton Plans to Cross Pacific in a Junk

By MARY H. VAUGHAN

"I hope to leave in June for China and leave there in October for America on a Chinese junk," said Richard Halliburton as he leaned against the mantle and smiled at me from my perch on a stool at his feet.

He hopes to arrive in San Francisco by February 15, 1939 for the opening of the fair there where he will appear with his junk and entertain visitors with his adventures. The story of his trip across the Pacific with his rice and his animals will be the first chapter in a book he is beginning called "The Royal Road to Romance in America."

His latest book is mainly for the upper grammar grades as a fascinating textbook and is called "Richard Halliburton's Book of Marvels." He has written two such books of marvels and reviewers everywhere praised them highly as aids to geography teachers. Halliburton modestly says they are of value mainly for their pictures.

"I could have told you of the assassination of the Romanoffs, but I deemed it too bloodthirsty," he looked quizzically at me, and I was glad he didn't because he was frankly wondering how much I could take.

One faculty member told Mr. Halliburton he judged he spoke purely for entertainment, of course. Mr Halliburton denied that he did that. "I believe," he said, "that we remember stories of great things more than we do historical account of them." I agreed with him because I, for one, will never again forget how Hannibal went over the Alps on elephants which were undoubtedly mountain sick.

"My philosophy in all my books has been to present fascinating historical events in story form so that history may be fully as entertaining as it really is," he said earnestly, and I just as earnestly planned to teach history as such, so convincing was he. He likes to appeal to young people because he approves heartily of young people, and is complimented when they like his books. Evidently the public likes his books because "The Royal Road to Romance" alone still is bought by 50,000 people yearly.

"Are you an only child?" asked one listener. "Yes," he responded quickly with an impudent grin, "Are you?"

He tries to get home to his parents who live in Memphis, Tenn., at least at Christmas time although he sometimes fails to get there. This year he was home for the holidays. He finds his mother rather a poor audience for his adventures as any mother would be. She thinks he takes too many risks and she must think he's away from her too much.

My heart went out to him when he said he understood my job. He was editor of a school paper when he went to prep school at Lawrenceville, New Jersey, and he often interviewed people. His first subject for interview was Billy Sunday.

Halliburton hasn't married because "he's tried and tried and as yet has had no luck". I doubted that, but had to take him at his word. I wondered secretly if he had found anyone who could keep up with him.

His sincere friendliness and definite charm make him as nice a person as he is fascinating as a speaker. He is natural and seemed quite boyish in his delight over the response his talk here received. He likes to tell stories especially funny stories so he tells them. "If I tell a funny story, maybe you'll remember me a week," he smiled again as he asked if that was what I wanted. I thanked him for his graciousness, and thought as I looked at him that we would remember him and his lecture for at least a lifetime.

Borrowed Humor

Hospital Notes

By way of the University of Virginia paper, there comes the following story about a student at Hampden-Sydney. Upon entering the hospital for a supposedly legitimate purpose, the boy was asked to fill out a report form. After examining the form, the school physician was quite shocked:

Name: Joe College

Home Address: I'm afraid I'll never get there again.

Class: Somewhere between the Freshman and Senior.

Room: Sometimes

Reason for Reporting: Have a quiz tomorrow.

Date of Illness: Last week when the teacher assigned it.

Do you use tobacco: Only to smoke.

Form and Quality: Prince Albert by the tin.

What tests do you have today: French. Tomorrow: None.

Treatments: I'll take your brown pills, but put me in the infirmary until it's over.

Swimmers Begin Life-Saving Tests For Senior Badges

Former Winners Need to Renew Championship

The H20 Club will begin senior life-saving tests this week, practicing at the pool each Thursday night at 7:30.

An examiner's test will be given [illegible] in the year; those wishing to take this test must first pass the senior life-saving. If this is not passed once it must be [illegible] this year. Those wishing to renew the test may take the test with the H20 Club.

To be eligible for the examiners' test a person must be twenty-one year of age, or be majoring in physical education, or have a job as assistant director in a summer camp. In this case she may take the test at her present age.

Girls Scouts of Farmville are working in the pool on Wednesday nights at 8 o'clock in order to secure a junior life-saving badge. Miss Ruth Leonard, swimming instructor, is giving the test with the aid of college students.

Practices for the inter-class color meet to be held February 15 will be as follows: Red and White (Sophomores and Seniors)—Tuesday nights at 8 o'clock; Green and White (Freshmen and Juniors)—Wednesday nights at 7:30 o'clock Practices will begin next week and continue until the time of the meet.

Freshman Team Plans to Play Farmville High

S. T. C.'s freshman basketball team will meet Farmville High School team in the college gymnasium January 25 at 7 p. m.

Hilda Hubbard captains the Freshman team composed of Elizabeth Hillsman, Rosa Courter, Mary Sue Edmondson, Mary Cecil Bynum, Martha Grainger, Helen McIlwaine, Juanita Smith, Asetita Aitomare, and Louise Ewell.

Schedule for the remaining games is as yet undecided but a correspondence to arrange meets is being carired on with several schools.

Book Exchange Proves Success

The book exchange which was sponsored by Alpha Phi Sigma during the week of January 4 through January proved to be popular. Seventy - five requests for books were received, eighteen books were handled and twenty-four books were sold.

At the regular meeting of Alpha Phi Sigma on January 2 the fraternity voted to continue having the exchange at the beginning of each quarter.

They hope that in the future they will be able to work out a system whereby they can handle books to be rented.

Seniors Present First Sing Program

"The 'sing' contest will begin on Saturday night, January the 15," Isabel Williamson, chairman of the "sing" committee announced.

The "sing" contest is sponsored by the "sing" committee a part of the Y. W. C. A. The contestants for this contest are the four classes.

On Saturday night, January 15 the Seniors will present the first "sing" of the contest.

The Chairmen for these programs from the classes are: Virginia Agee, senior; Pattie Bounds, junior; Marjorie Nimmo, sophomore; and Martha Welcher, freshman.

The judges for the contest have not yet been selected.

World Sports

Mary Mahone

On the streets of her native Oslo, Sonja Heinie causes almost as much of a stir as King Hookon. In the United States where she has become a movie star in the two years since she gave up her amateur standing as figure skating champion, Sonja's popularity is fast becoming coparable to that of America's exsweetheart, Mary Pickford. When last week Madison Square Garden announced that Sonja Henie in person would appear in Manhattan this month in a skating spectacle, her admirers stampeded the garden box office and took away ten thousand dollars worth of tickets the first day of advance sale. Remembering well that Miss Henie had recently sustained a slight concussion when she toppled on her head during the filming of her latest picture, "Happy Landing", Garden officials promptly cabled Loyd's of London for a $250,000 accident insurance policy of the long procession of sports figures—from Dempsey to Vast, the wonder horse—who had preceded Miss Henie in Madison Square Garden's five decade history not one had ever been considered worth such a precaution.

In Rock Hills. South Carolina. Pride Ratterree bought a dog, paid to have it trained for bird hunting and then took it to the fields. The dog came to a point. Ratterree fired—and killed a cat. Who says instinct is not stronger than training?

A race horse is only as good as his feet. Great care is exercised today in the art of horseshoeing (and we don't mean pitching horse shoes). Previous to the fifth century buckskins tied with rope were used, then iron plates, nailed around the rim of the hoof were substituted. The forced marches of Alexander, the Great, Hannibal and even Napoleon were often halted until the horses could grow new hoofs. Iron plates gave way to steel, but even that was far too heavy for race horses. The craze for speed brought the aluminum shoe. Further progress was made when Leonard Liepmon introduced a calk of the hardest steel in the aluminum shoe. This gave the shoe strength and added very little weight. During the past five years horses wearing aluminum shoes have established five world records and seventeen American records.

Those who attended the meeting of the mid Atlantic Association of the United States Lawn Tennis Association in Washington are still laughing at the crack made by Major Quesenburg (spelling not guaranteed) of Alexandria. Discussing the proposal of India to authorize open competition between amateur and professional tennis players, the Major observed that the U. S. L. T. A. is supporting shamateurs instead of amateurs.

Did you know that Bitsy Grant, the tennis player, tried hard to enroll at V. M. I. before he finally landed at the University of North Carolina? It's a fact. Athletic and military officials at the institute were surprised one day when the Atlanta mite entered the office, gave his name and said he wished to become a cadet. Naturally they knew of Bitsy's tennis prowess and were anxious to have him. A check up on his prep school credits, however, revealed that he was shy by half a unit and thus would be ineligible to compete in athletics until his junior year, by which time he could have made up the missing work. It's a matter of record that Bitsy decided against this course and matriculated at Chapel Hill.

They say necessity is the mother of invention and whether it was necessary or not Carl Bryson, an aquaplane stunter from Cypress Gardens, Florida, has made an unusual inventor. My Bryson reports that for those who can't afford an aquaplane, a butcher table makes a most satisfactory wave skimmer.

Gene Tunney attributes the double feature wind up of one of his favorite fight stories to Eddie Neil. Its starting point was the occasion of Tunney's talk on Shakespeare at Yale some years ago at the request of Professor William Lyon Phelps. Tunney picked the character Ajax from "Troilus and Cressida" for discussion, describing him as a "blustering, blundering braggart like Jack Sharkey". Sharkey then training at Pompton Lakes, New Jersey reacted explosively to a request for his comment, shouting, "Who? what? why tell that so and so Tunney I'll get even with him". It was Neil who also thought of getting the reaction of the old mauler, Jack Dempsey. "Who Shakespeare?" exclaimed Jack, "Sure if it helps his racket, I'm for it."

Clare Tree Major Will Present "Little Men"

Louisa May Alcott's Book Is Enacted

Clare Tree Major will present "Little Men" in the S. T. C. auditorium on Wednesday, February 2.

The play is based on the book "Little Men" written by Louisa May Alcott. The action is placed in a boy's school kept by Professor Blow and his wife. The story centers around Nat, a ragged thin waif from the slums who was sent to the school to be taken care of and reformed.

The Clare Tree Major group of actors from the Children's Theatre of New York has played in Farmville two times before. "Little Women" and "Hansel and Gretel" have been presented by them at S. T. C. during the last year.

Mrs. Major has been appointed to the committee on Road Companies, Children's Theatres, a national organization of producers, managers, playwrights, actors and production heads. Her appointment was made as recognition of the fact that her four companies play to audiences of more than half a million people throughout twenty states.

"The plays are better than ever and most delightful. 'Little Men' was charming and Nat simply perfect. When he played in the second act, and at the finish, there wasn't a sound anywhere; the audience was spell-bound. I was thrilled by the soul put into the plays," says Miss Anna Rice, Pabst Theatre, Milwaukee in speaking of the Major production of "Little Men."

Halliburton

the ridicule of generals.

Up, up ran panic-stricken Dally until she had to give up and lie down because once more she was mountain sick. "That woman is going to obey!" decided Halliburton from where he had been tossed in the mad flight, and he bribed an Italian truck driver to attempt to pull her down. Dally began to pull the truck instead so that idea was given up in haste. It took twelve hours to go that last mile.

After a triumphant entry into Italy, Halliburton left Dally in the zoo without having to collect from Lloyds of London for a single injury to her precious self. Dally, he felt happy with a huge elephant harmonica.

From the elephant story Halliburton proceeded to the story of his purchase of a beautiful red and gold airplane called "The Flying Carpet," on which he and Mayo Stephens, his companion and pilot, set out from Hollywood to go to Persia and carry a princess away in real Arabian Nights' style.

A vivid account of his feats in killing wild donkeys on the banks of the Mississippi convinced the father of two beautiful princesses, Flower of the Morning and Star of the Night, that he was competent enough to be trusted with the valuable cargo of the two young ladies on a flying expedition. For two hours on the exciting day the eager American shined himself for his "royal girl friend" as Mayo Stephens slurred "The Flying Carpet."

A regular delegation of the whole city of Tehereen viewed the princess seeker as he waded to his rented 1932 Buick with 600 pounds of pure princess. The buxom princess went up separately and Halliburton rested in the shade of the one who wasn't going up, on the ground, disgusted with life in general because he couldn't even ride with a Persian princess on a magic carpet after coming from America for the express purpose of doing so.

His anger was appeased when sometime later, Mayo carried him, unaware of his privilege, on a ride with none other than the real queen of Persia!

From Persia, the two set out for Bagdad where they achieved the esteemed privilege of being allowed to take Prince Ghazi, the popular crown prince, a delightful schoolboy of sixteen, flying. Ghazi bribed his worried father into allowing him to go flying by getting an A on a class that wasn't athletic.

At the request of Ghazi, Stephens put The Flying Carpet through such stunts that Halliburton got very ill. As he came back to normal, he missed Prince Ghazi. Stephen finally found the enthusiastic prince dangling by one foot, waving eagerly at friends below. Halliburton snatched him back in the plane and breathed a sigh of relief as the safety of his beard, by which he had vowed he'd return the boy, became assured.

Characteristically, Halliburton closed his lecture by saying he had not failed his purpose in talking if he had for one ten minute period removed his audience to other places than Farmville.

Dr. Jarman Among Notables at Reception Of Governor

Dr. Jarman was among those who attended the reception given by Governor and Mrs. George C. Peery, last Wednesday night, in honor of the members of the General Assembly and state officials. The reception was held at the Executive Mansion. Vases of mixed cut flowers and greens decorated the mansion for the affair.

There were many distinguished guests present at this reception which will be the last formal social function given by the Peerys while they are living in the mansion.

Among the guests Dr. Jarman met many alumnae of this school who were wives of prominent men throughout the state.

If the weather permits Dr. Jarman will attend the first reception of Governor-elect Price, which will be held tonight at the mansion.

The system enforced endeavors to provide conditions conductive to study without impairing the freedom of the individual.

When You Can't Even Take A Bath What?

If you were a Sophomore, high and stately, and you wished to take a bath, what would you do? Yes, you've answered correctly—you would immediately proceed to "plug" the tub and start the water (but, hot, of course) flowing with an immense force and hoping that you won't return to greet a tub with water "oozing" over the sides and a river to wade through before you can check the flood.

You may think that heaven is with you when your tub does not overflow, but my dear little Sophomore worse incidents might occur—for example:

A certain Sophomore on second floor Main had left her water running for her steaming bath and coming back she greeted an empty tub. The solution? Very simple—a clever little Freshie pulled out the plug and the water as it came in flowed out with a gurling sound. How awful! Well, so much for case No. 1.

Here is case No. 2.

If you leave the water running and put a towel over the door and also one on the floor, then "meddlers" are afraid to enter. How do I know? Two Freshmen on Whitehoue Hall tried this trick and when they felt that the tubs might be filled, they proceeded to walk in and hop into their hot oblition. They left the poor hall president, her roommate and several others who were also waiting, filled with awe as well as anger or anything else a hall president might be filled with.

Now for case No. 3.

Perhaps you are one of those persons who have adolescent minded friends that are always playing cute tricks on you. If this pertains to you, don't broadcast the fact that you are planning to take a bath for pranks are to follow! This was the case of the unfortunate Sophomore on third floor Main: When she went to her Saturday night dip another Sophomore and a friend swiped her bath robe. Cute of them! But, she did not think so. With fury in her eyes and anger in each pounding "tootsie" she bravely wrapped her two by two towel about her and stalked down the hall with all the glory and pomp of Napoleon.

Well, it's all in a college life and so if you really plan to enjoy a peaceable bath accept advice—take a shower!

Atkinsons Entertain Alpha Sigma Alphas, Pi Kappa Alphas

Mr. and Mrs. P. T. Atkinson entertained the Alpha Sigma Alpha sorority of S. T. C. and the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity of Hampden-Sydney at a party on Saturday, January 15.

The party was held in the Pi K. A. House after the guests had attended the Richmond-Hampden-Sydney basketball game.

As each girl arrived, she was given a tiny corsage.

Before open fires the refreshments were served; sandwiches, pickles, mints, peanuts, coffee and white cakes decorated in red with the letetr Pi K. A. and A. S. A.

Alpha Sigma Taus Are Entertained

Miss Virginia Bedford, faculty member and advisor of the Zeta Tau Chapter of Alpha Sigma Tau, entertained the chapter at tea on Sunday afternoon from 4 to 6 at her home on High Street. Besides the actives the pledges were present.

Sandwiches, tea and cakes were served by the hostess assisted by Margaret Bailey and Gay Stieffen, officers of the Chapter.

that is carefully chosen and carefully coached by Frances Hutchinson. Frankie Bryan is Pat, Lib Wilson is Kappy, and Clara Nottingham is Sarah—three as delightful people as ever you met. Elizabeth Burke, a studious comedienne, and Army Butterworth, being herself, furnish humor that will tickle the best of them. The hero is confined to a voice outside the window and your imagination. The cast goes around calling people by their real names and speaking the S. T. C. language. Even current gossip is brought in. You had better wear a veil 'cause you never know when they will be telling the lowdown on you right out there in the audience. Even the faculty is not exempt.

Songs, dances, and even a blood-curdling, riproaring, hair-raising-even-on-bald-heads fight is included in the program.

The Junior production has definitely got something—I mean really.

Westminster Choir Will Present Program Here

Dr. J. F. Williamson Conducts Group

Westminster Choir known as the American Symphonic Singers will present a program at State Teachers College on February 5. This will be the first visit to our campus ever made by the distinguished group from the Westminster Choir School which is associated with Princeton University.

Over eight hundred concerts in the United States and Europe have been given by the Chorus in the last fifteen years. There are thirty-two young people of college age in this musical organization. Physical fitness is a rigid requirement, being obtained through intense exercise. Highest professional training is given Westminster Choir by its brilliant conductor, Dr. John Finley Williamson. He has created an orchestra of human voices and today is rated internationally as one of the foremost authorities on choral singing.

Many of the girls at this college are acquainted with members of chorus are looking forward with keen interest to welcoming them as well as their associates to the campus for so outstanding a musical event. This community is represented in the chorus personnel by George Walker, son of the present Dean Walker of Hampden-Sydney.

Among the selections included on the program are "Ave Maria", "Tear", "Old Black Joe", Water Boy", a negro spiritual, and Jerome Kern's "Old Man River."

The visit of the Westminster Chorus to this college promises to be among the most outstanding numbers in the Artists Series for the year.

First Pan-Hel Dance To Be February 5

"Saturday, February 5, will be the date of the Pan-Hel dance," Frankie Bryan, president of the local Pan Hellenic Council announced today.

This is the first Pan Hellenic dance to be held in S. T. C. and it is hoped that the Pan-Hel dance will be instituted as one of the most important events of the winter season at Farmville in the future.

The dance will be formal and there will be a no break dance for each sorority on the campus. Bids will be extended to the college girls next week.

Dramatic Club Presents Trial Play Acting Apprentices

"The Woman Who Understood Men", a one act play, was presented by the Dramatic Club acting group apprentices in the auditorium Wednesday night at the club's regular meeting.

The play was coached by Alpha Lee Garnett, head of the acting group. The cast: Judy, Virginia Howell; Ed, Jannie Lee Peake; Susan, Hazelwood Burbank; the mother, Elizabeth Garrett, and father, Agnes Sale.

This is the last of this quarter's apprentice plays. The apprentices have completed their entrance examinations to the club and will receive bids in the next few weeks.

Local Pi Gamma Mu Chapter Wins National Honor

Virginia Gamma Chapter of Pi Gamma Mu, National social science society at Farmville has been notified that its series of programs for 1936-37 was the best from among all the under graduate chapters of the organization in the United States.

Chapters of Pi Gamma Mu are divided into graduate and undergraduate groups. For Farmville's chapter to receive such a high rating among all of the undergraduate schools is indeed an honor. The chapter receiving equal mention was that of the University of Toledo, which was singled out for its excellence among the chapters of the graduate groups.

The winning programs were built around topics of current, general and social interest. Virginia Gamma presented the representation of a national armament conference.

Different girls represented the varoius countries and attempted to answer the vital facts before the nations today.

Pi Gamma Mu, which was established to recognize those students who have shown outstanding ability and interest in Social Science, and tries to instill in their minds a scientific attitude toward all social questions, is one of the two active chapters that continue their work throughout all 12 months of the year.

Virginia Acworth, who graduated last June, was program chairman of the winning project.

Louise Walmsley Receives Bid to Delta Psi Kappa

Louise Walmsley, a graduate of the Class of '36, was elected to the membership of Delta Psi Kappa, national honor fraternity in physical education. Louise is taking graduate work in Physical education at George Peabody College for Women in Nashville, Tennessee.

The requirements for membership to the fraternity are doubly hard. There are only a limited number of persons from each class eligible and the girl is only considered if she has grade above B on all subjects.

Louise was very active in the extra-curricular activities while she was in college, her main field being in physical education. She was manager of tennis her first year in college; secretary of the Athletic Association her sophomore year, and vice-president of the A. A. her junior year. She was elected president of the A. A. her senior year. She was an ex-officio member of the Student Council her last year in school.

Louise served on the Town Girls' Committee, and the Freshman Commission of the Y. W. C. A. She was treasurer of the Junior Class and sports editor of the "Rotunda". She was a member of the Student Standards Committee.

Dr. Moffet Speaks On China Conditions

Mr. M'Ledge Moffet, a missionary from China, who has returned to visit her sister Mrs. Crawford in Farmville spoke to the geography classes last week.

Since Dr. Moffet has been in China for thirty years he is thoroughly familiar with the conditions that exist there. He discussed the current problems existing in China and the possible outcomes of the situation as it now stands. Dr. Moffet also gave an insight into the life in China and how different from America.

After the lecture, Dr. Moffet answered questions that were asked from his audience.

Junior Production Portrays Typical S.T.C. Student's Life

Hear ye! Hear ye! Freshmen, Sophomores, Juniors and Seniors, lend your ears! Would you like a peep through the keyhole at the going-ons at S. T. C. If the answer is in the affirmative (and of course it is) come to the Junior production, "Sister Pat, with apologies to Brother Rat" to be presented in the auditorium January 26. A similarity to the famous "Brother Rat" (with apologies) makes it one of the most original and entertaining productions ever presented by our "Broadway".

Members of the Junior Class wrote the script, and the happenings and characters represent personalities of those we know so well (not excluding beloved faculty members). The plot includes three acts. In the first, we will find ourselves glancing at a scene in the Rotunda discussing the coming Cotillion Club dance. What happens? Well—anything could! The second act takes place a few days later. The dance is well on its way, and the scene takes place in a student's room during intermission. My-Oh-My what a perfect leading up to a glorious climax! What happens! Just guess. Of course there is a love affair (after all, typical S. T. C. life is being shown to us!) What happens then? Well—you wait and tell us!

So—for a night full of laughs, thrills—and who knows maybe tears, the Junior production will give it all.

Junior Production To Be Given Tonight

"Sister Pat With Apologies to Brother Rat," the Junior Class Production, will be presented Wednesday night in the large auditorium.

This fast-moving comedy will depict scenes in and around S. T. C. The Cotillion Club Dance forms the background, with scenes before, during, and after the ball being shown.

The cast of the play, which has been directed by Frances Hutchinson, will include Frankie Bryan as Pat, the heroine; Lib Wilson as Kappy, a friend; Clara Nottingham as Sarah, another friend; and Elizabeth Burke and Army Butterworth as the comediennes.

Songs and a dance will complete the program.

U. D. C. Offers Cash Prizes for Best Book Reviews

Mrs. Thomas J. Starke, division historian of the Virginian Division of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, has announced the awarding of two prizes that can be won by students of this institution.

For the best review of Dr. Douglas Freeman's "R. E. Lee" by a college student the organization will give $15, and for the best review by a state teachers college student of "The Development of America" by Fremont P. Wirth $15 will be awarded.

Dates for these articles to be submitted have not been announced.

Juniors Give Hilarious View Of Scene in Dormitory Starring Butterworth

LeNoir Hubbard as a veritable smoothie and Margaret Britton as an incarnation of Flapper Fanny met, giggled and remarked about the Junior production in front of the stage in chapel Wednesday morning.

After prattling and peeping the two sophisticates revealed a bunch of Juniors in closed study hour. Army Butterworth danced in and interrupted cramming by leading the group in "I Ain't Gonna Study no more."

One of Miss Barlowe's pupils, en route to the training school, then entered and was resplendent in modest bloomers and high socks. She was revealed as Mabel Burton after some recognizable imitations of her teacher.

From hearty laughs of the audience and vague hints as to what is in store for ones who go, the Juniors have every right to expect a record crowd at their show "Sister Pat with Apologies to Brother Rat."

The College Choir Gives Its Annual WRVA Broadcast

The College Choir and the A 'Capella Choir under the direction of Mr. Alfred H. Strick held its annual broadcast over station WRVA in Richmond Friday evening, January 21, from 6:30 to 7:00.

The program for the evening was as follows: "Jesu Joy of Man's Desiring" by Bach, sung by the A 'Capella Choir; "Beloved it is Morn" by Aylward, sung by the soloist, Miss Irene Leake; "Where-e'er Ye Walk" by Handel, sung by the A 'Capella Choir; "The Holy City" by Adams, rendered by the College Choir; "Quiet" by Sanderson, by the A 'Capella Choir; "I Love Life" written by Mana Zucca, sung by the College Choir and the Alma Mater, by Miss Jennie Masters Tabb, sung by the entire choir.

The choir was accompanied to Richmond by Dr. Walmsley, Miss Nichols, Mr. Graham, Mr. and Mrs. Tucker, Dr. Potts, Mr. Hollingsworth, Miss Bugg, the choir sponsor, and Mrs. Laing as chaperon.

After the broadcast the choir was entertained at an informal banquet in the Coffee Shop of the Richmond Hotel. Guest speakers for the evening included Mr. Walter Bishop, manager of the broadcasting station, who was introduced by Annette Roberts, and Mr. Charles Houston, the "Side Show" columnist of the "Richmond News Leader", who was introduced by Frances Steed. The Coffee Shop was decorated in the colors of the college, blue and white. A rose was given to each person who attended the banquet.

Those girls making the trip were Frankie Bryan, president, Frances Steed, vice-president, Elizabeth Burke, treasurer, Annette Roberts, secretary, Caroline Gwathmey, librarian, Ruth Curtis Robeson, Kathrine Moomaw, Roberta Slade, Virginia Agee, Kathryn Ryburn, Bruce Crowell, Yetive Dawson, Vera Ebel, Marion Raine, Elsie Dodd, Laura Nell Cralle, Virginia Lane, Annabell Wescott, Pattei Jeffries, Bonnie Avery.

Freshman Classman To Be Presented On Thursday

Ruth Lee Purdom, Freshman class president, will present its classman, Mr. Raymond Holloday (Charlie) French, to the Student Body, Thursday, January 27.

The presentation will take place during the regular chapel period in the large auditorium. Officers of the class will appear on the stage with the classman.

The class will remain in the audience. Classman songs, composed by members of the class will comprise a feature of the program.

This is the first presentation of the Freshman class. When interviewed by a reporter the class president refused to impart information concerning the theme of the event. "The presentation", she stated, "is to be a surprise."

Officers of the Junior's sister class as elected in October are Ruth Lee Purdom, of Danville, president; Esther Atkinson of Hampden-Sydney, vice-president; Billie Lewis of Charlottesville, secretary; and Betty Fahr, of Richmond, treasurer.

Senior Class Nominates Girls As Personalities

Twenty-five seniors were nominated by the senior class Tuesday night from which ten members will be chosen as the most outstanding members of the class.

The membesr nominated are Dudley Allen, Virginia Agee, Edna Bollick, Mary Joyner Cox, Ducky Davis, Jennie Belle Gilliam, Elizabeth Harris, Kitty Jamison, Susan Lane, Madeliene McGlothlin, Norvell Montague, Ruth Montgomery, Libby Morris, Carter Belle Munt, Ruth Phelps, Isabell Plummer, Marjorie Robertson, Libby Roberts, Josephine Quinn, Nan Seward, Will Scott, Gay Steiffen, Carolyn Upshur and Mary Harrison Vaughan.

Pictures of the ten girls chosen from the twenty-five will appear in the last ten issues of The Rotunda as Senior Personalities. Their identity will remain a secret until divulged on the editorial page of this paper weekly.

The class will vote for the ten girls next Tuesday night at class meeting.

Helen Fern Purdue Wins Beauty Contest At Manchester

Helen Fern Purdue, a member of the certificate class of 1936, won first place in a beauty contest which was held at Manchester High School on Friday, January 21. Helen Fern has been a member of the faculty of the school for the past two years.

Helen Fern was very active in the extra-curricular activities of the school during her two years here. She served on the Campus League, and on the House Council as Hall President her Freshman year and as House President her Sophomore year. Her Freshman year she was also the class representative to the Student Council. Helen Fern was a member of the Dramatic Club, the Granddaughters Club, the Artists Dance Group, the Cotillion Club, and the Association of Childhood Education.

She was a charter member of the H2O Club and she was also a member of the Athletic Association and the Y. W. C. A. Helen Fern was a member of Gamma Theta social sorority.

She won over a large number of contestants in the beauty contest which was given to raise money for the school's athletic fund and for the library.

Honor Fraternity For Leadership Taps Six Juniors In Chapel

Head of Society Gives History of Fraternity

Six Juniors were tapped Alpha Kappa Gamma in Chapel on Thursday, January 20. Those girls were: Pattie Bounds, Sarah Button, Miriam Ficklin, Charlotte Minton, Kitty Roberts and Virginia Whitehead Smith.

After an invocation by Dr. Jarman, Elizabeth Shipplett, President, gave the history of Alpha Kappa Gamma. It was founded in 1928, an honorary fraternity standing for leadership in womanly service. Its patron saint became Joan of Arc, their ideal. Such leadership, as was Joan of Arc's, Alpha Kappa Gamma seeks to attain. The President concluded her history by saying: "'Such leaders have been found among you."

Pattie Bounds is News Editor of the Rotunda, a member of Pi Kappa Delta, Pi Gamma Mu, and Beore Eh Thorn, is vice-president of Orchesis, a member of the Cotillion Club and is vice-president of the Debate Club. She was a member of the Dramatic Club and Alpha Phi Sigma, a member of the Campus League, the Student Standards Committee, and the membership committee of the Y. W. C. A., her freshman and sophomore years. She is a member of Gamma Psi and Alpha Sigma Alpha sorority.

Sarah Button is a member of the Dramatic Club, Le Cercle Francais, Cotillion Club, on Freshman Commission, Town Girl's Committee her Freshman year, on the Church Cooperative Committee her sophomore year, Gamma Psi, President of Alpha Phi Sigma, Treasurer of Y. W. C. A., and is a member of Sigma Sigma Sigma sorority.

Miriam Ficklin is a member of the Pan Hel Council, on the Chapel Committee, is a member of Home Economics Club, Cotillion Club, Assistant Photographic Manager of "Virginian" her sophomore year, Business Manager of "Virginian" her Junior year and is a member of Mu Omega Sorority.

Kitty Roberts is a member of Gamma Psi, Assistant Library Editor of Farmville Quarterly Review her Junior year; was Sophomore representative to Student Council; Secretary of Student Council, her Junior year. Assistant Literary Editor of Virginian, her Sophomore year; member of Cotillion Club and the Sing Committee; Literary Editor of Virginian, her Junior Year; and is a member of Alpha Sigma Alpha Sorority.

Virginia Whitehead Smith has been president of Gamma Psi her Sophomore and Junior years; is a member of Alpha Phi Sigma; Assistant Business Manager of Dramatic Club, her Sophomore year; Business Manager of Dramatic Club this year; Cotillion Club; Publicity Committee of Y. W. C. A. her Freshman year; Varsity Basketball squad for three years; Manager of Basketball this year; Manager of Volley ball her Sophomore year; has been a member of class teams; and is a member of Gamma Theta Sorority.

Y. W. C. A. Promotes True Womanhood As Aim in Living

Of all the organizations on this campus, the Y. W. C. A. seems to be the first in ideals of true womanhood. Always this group of young women has striven to develop the best types of citizenship and school spirit among students.

In this modern age, ideals cannot be neglected because of the swift way that life passes. We must hold to the heritage that our forefathers gave us when they built this country. No country has ever yet stayed an important world power if her people lack high standards and fear of God.

During college days, the ideals of future American voters are being formed, we, as prospective teachers, have a particular important job—that of guiding the children we teach in the spirit of the best Americanism.

On this campus characters can best be built by becoming a part of the Christian spirit of the Y. W. If each of us responds to the prayers, speakers and campaigns that the Y. W. cabinet sponsers then we will become better women. To be noble women as the founders of the Y. W. C. A. desires, we must accept not only the form of the organization but its Chrisitianity and unselfish service.

Angela Morgan Writes Great Poem Of New Hope

Angela Morgan has written a poem in which she expresses the fervor and optimism that are typical of her. To look for greater things; to expect a brighter dawn when the morning breaks—this is the spirit that has led men on—this is the spirit of optimism.

Song of the New World

I sing the song of a new dawn waking,
A new wind shaking
The children of men.
I say the hearts that are nigh to breaking
Shall leap with gladness and live again.
Over the woe of the world appalling,
Wild and sweet at a bugle cry,
Sudden I hear a new voice calling—
"Beauty is nigh!"
Beauty is night! Let the world believe it.
Love has covered the fields of dead.
Healing is here! Let the earth receive it,
Greeting the Dawn with lifted head,
I sing the song of the sin forgiven,
The deed forgotten, the wrong undone.
Lo, in the Past, where the dark is risen,
Shines the rim of the rising sun.
Healing is here! O brother, sing it!
Laugh, O heart, that has grieved so long.
Love will gather your woe and fling it
Over the world in wanes of song.
Hearken, mothers, and hear them coming—
Heralds crying the day at hand.
Faint and far as the sound of drumming,
Hear their summons across the land.
Look, O fathers! Your eyes were holden—
Armies throng where the dead have lain.
Fiery steeds and chariots golden—
Gone is the dream of soldiers slain.
Sing, O sing of a new world waking,
Sing of creating just begun.
Glad is the earth when morn is breaking—
Man is facing the rising sun!

Student Feels Need For Flag

Dear Editor:

When we enter the State Teachers College in Farmville we are immediately impressed by the school's spirit.

Our school has many splendid traditions and we soon believe in them and respect them. These little things, which after all are not so little, add together to form the great whole, known as school spirit, or by some as our love and respect for her.

During our lives we are taught to love and respect many things. Perhaps our highest respect of earthly things is required, and received by our community and her traditions.

Our flag is among these treasured traditions. Couldn't we get a new flag. (Our present one is so worn), and show our love and respect by at least lowering it at sunset?

Sincerely yours,
A Freshman

Y.W.C.A. Explains Its Purpose And Seeks Cooperation

When we become members of the Young Women's Christian Association, we promise certain things to ourselves and to those about us. It is in declaring our purpose that we set ourselves forward as volunteers to make the world more livable for others. "We, the members of the Young Women's Christian Association of the State Teachers College, Farmville, Virginia, unite in the desire to realize full and creative life through a growing knowledge of God, and to have a part in making this life possible for all people. In this task we seek to understand Jesus and follow Him."

Every day the question is asked all around us, "What is the purpose of the Y. W.?" To all appearances, people seek to find the answer to be material, whereas, its true spiritual meaning and depth explain themselves in the form of the oath which we take. In a national association like the Y. W. C. A., which has set its ideals and aims so high, it is the individual's very thoughts and actions which determine the success of the local group. And they are the local groups composing the national association which represent a great part of the youth of the world today. We are shouldering a large responsibility. Much of the future depends upon the way in which we interpret our purpose—the way we carry it out. Let each of us, then, accept eagerly the responsibility of helping our Y. W. C. A. realize its aim.

Worthwhile records of the week for your "must" list include pairings "I'm in Dutch with the Duchess" - "Powerhouse" and "Good Night Angel" - "Swingin' in the Corn," both by Hal Kemp and his band (Victor 25718, 25722) . . . "Duchess" is Hal's own composition, while "Powerhouse" is one of Raymond Scott's more terrific swingeroos . . . the tunes on the other disc are from "Radio City Revels," the flicker Hal made for RKO, Saxie Dowell doing the vocal on "Corn" . . . Benny Goodman turns in a neat duo in "Loch Lomond" - "Camel Hop" (V 25,-717), Martha Tilton handling a fine vocal on the former . . . also recommended is Larry Clinton's "The One Rose" - "Oh, Lady Be Good" (V 25724). Ben Wain doing the vocals . . . Among unusual collaborations on B'way is that of Father Jules Goodman (Harvard '99) and Son Eckert Goodman (Harvard '31) on "Many Mansions", the very swelegant play in which Alexander Kirkland turns in a dynamic performance . . . the Hollywood Restaurant has closed its doors . . . Billy Rose's new French Casino still has to open its doors . . . Rose is taking a long-shot gamble by presenting a "book" show in his new spot . . . whether or not it will pan out remains to be seen whether the diner can inhale his soup, concentrate on the plot and be nice to his date, all at the same time . . . Dr. Frank J. Tone (Cornell '91) received the 1938 William H. Porkin Medal of the American Section of the Society of Chemical Industry . . . Dr. Tone is more popularly known as the father of Cornellian Cinemaster Franchot Tone who, incidentally, is planning an early B'way appearance with Joan Crawford . . . Michigan's George Olsen has moved his band to La Conga . . . Austin Marshall, the juvenile of George M. Cohan's "I'd Rather Be Right", was a member of Mask and Wig at Penn.

Miller Brand's Novel "Outward Room" Is Rated Among Best

Reading good books is one of the most inexpensive and yet one of the most pleasurable pastimes that we have today. In our library there are many books that would be well worth our while to read.

One of the most unusual books of the season is Miller Brand's "Outward Room." The story tells of Harriet Demuth's struggle to escape the haunting despair of her own making and to find happiness. Opening in a hospital for the insane, the plot develops quickly and smoothly. Harriet, believing that she can find happiness in the outside world, runs away and goes to New York. Here she gets work and makes many friends. Her love for John Kohler finally lifts her out of despair and brings her that most desired of all things—happiness.

Miller Brand is a new author and he is young. This, his first book, is receiving many favorable comments from critics everywhere. The New York Times gave it a write up that would be the envy of more experienced authors.

"The most peculiar book I ever read. Definitely! But it held me to the end," said one of our students.

"The strangest book I've read in a long itme, but most fascinating, was the comment made by one of our assistant librarians.

As has always interested us, especially when it is made in familiar surroundings. "Bugles Blow No More" by Clifford Dowdy is written about Richmond during the Civil War. Because we are Virginians, because Richmond is our capitol city, and because we love our Southland, we should read this book! Intensely interesting, it is being praised highly and deserves our attention. Read it!

These are by no means the only good books in our library. Books on special topics, travel books and biographies are only a few of the types to be had. Visit our library and look for yourself, and—read!

GLEANINGS

By

Virginia L. Agee

How long has it been since the first strain of "Balancing the Budget" tickled our ear drums? Everyone must admit that the tune has begun to be somewhat frayed around the edges. However, in spite of its apparent wearing, the budget is no nearer the white line which means balanced than the earth on which we live is to the moon, the sun, or any other heanvenly body.

When the Roosevelt Administration began its over-sized task six years ago—the budget, although not as properly balanced as it should have been, was in comparatively good shape (that is, in good shape compared to the state it is in now). And then came the spending regime, when huge sums were appropriated for different projects bearing various sundry letters of the alphabet that money has continued to flow from the hands of the tax payers, through the hands aof the government, and into the hands of those who are being aided by the Alhpabetic Administration.

Upon re-election to the supreme office first speech—began the ditty we have heard so often, balance the budget. It has been no small task, we must admit that, but the quirk comes when we realize that the budget is so unbalanced that it is not likely to be balanced for years and years—and then some!

In speaking of the Alphabet Administration, do not think we are knocking it in all ways, but like everything else, it has its good and bad points. Several of the projects are wonderful and uplifting—such as the CCC and some phases of the PWA.

The lives of many young men were literally saved when the CCC came into existence. It means a new start to some who had given up all hope in the face of utter defeat. Not only that, but it was the building up of the cry of "save the natural resources. The CCC has done much in beautifying our country and in the saving and culturing the timber growth.

As for the PWA it has aided in the building of bridges, many beautiful buildings, schools and roads. In some parts of the country it has worked miracles. In other sections it is the laughing stock and also the subject of utter disgust. That situation rules where it takes a laborer half an hour to wheel a wheel-barrow of rocks across the road and empty it—then take an additional forty-five minutes to wheel it back and reload it.

Other projects bearing the letters of the alphabet are good—some have proved their worthlessness, such as the dead and buried NRA—some are decided failures but have not as yet proven such, the Better Homes project for example.

Back to the business of balancing the budget. With all this great spending and lending going on one can easily see that its going to take a mightly long while.

In China the shameful, bloody war still rages. Japan announces that if this war continues she will be in dire need of men and funds; China, too, needs money but we know she has the men—we hope that will be her winning point.

While each country is intent on bombing each other from the air—raiding, pillaging, plundering—wrecking Chinese territory completely, those innocents from the entire area are wandering around—lost from relatives, cold, hungry, terrified.

For this reason the China Travel Service set up a "human lost and found department" to help countless thousands of refugees find the relatives from whom they have been separated by the war. Thousands of Chinese have registered their names and addresses and the names and last known addresses of their missing relatives. Long lines of these unfortunates await patiently day and night outside the branches of the agency for the hope of news.

It is this side of wars that we do not think of very often—this is the truly human side—the side not advertised nor glorified!

Social life and gayety on the campus are definitely on the lag these days. Even the lads at H.-S. have deserted their various loves and the local hang-outs for the past few weeks. The throes of examinations keep them occupied . . . while the fair co-eds wander aimlessly about like lost sheep!

Prospects of a Pan-Hellenic dance cause a slight rift in the dark clouds! However, if February 5th is to be the date of the dance it will probably be memorable only as an affair conspicuous by the absence of men. The PiKA dances at Hampden-Sydney are the same week-end . . . so all who desire dates must seek elsewhere. Stretching the number as far as possible there might be sixty of the opposite sex from other schools and localities who by the grace of gawd and a fast back-field can be prevailed upon to attend. Whatever the general concensus of opinion may be regarding our neghborhood college we must concede that they furnish most of the material for our social gatherings. Our Circes who can lure men several hundred miles to attend a girl break dance are a very small minority! Still it may prove to be a very noble experiment.

Will Scott and one of the Shannonite force are "closer than a quarter to nine" these days . . . The Isabel Plummer-Bill Kay romance flowers and flowers and flowers . . . Ditto for the other half-dozen followers of Eros . . . The Problem Club continues to be the most exclusive organization on campus . . . 'Tis rumored that the Junior production, Sister Pat, takes a crack at practically everybody on campus . . . There is a possibility that the spring play will be given jointly with the Jongleurs . . . Isabel Williamson spent the most interesting weekend of her college career entertaining a guest . . . Varsity Team Meets Roanoke Business College Friday Night

Seven Games Are Now Scheduled For Season

Farmville's varsity basketball team will meet new competition when the girls of National Business College of Roanoke come here for a game on Friday, January 28. Practices have been held each afternoon in preparation for this, the first game of the season.

This Roanoke Colleges' first season in Inter-Collegiate ball games. They are said to have a well organized team. The game will start promptly at 8 o'clock.

One more game is added to the six games already scheduled. When the team goes to New York on February 9, they will play Notre Dame Womans College in Baltimore as well as Panzer College of Physical Education in East Orange, N. J. and a school in New York City. The trip will last four days the girls will return on Sunday, February 13.

On February 18, William and Mary College will come here for a game; Farmville will meet Blackstone College there on February 25. Varsity basketball season will come to a close on Founders' Day, March 4, when the game with Harrisonburg will be held.

Fifteen Girls Book For Riding Lessons Coming Quarter

Fifteen girls are booked for ridin glessons for the coming quarter. Horseback riding is being offered in S. T. C. for the first time this year.

The eight horses, owned by Herbert C. Pulliam of Appomattox are stabled several blocks from the College. The old Hampden-Sydney road and trails in and about Longwood comprise the bridle paths. James C. Langran is instructor.

Girls who ride for pleasure may secure a book of twelve tickets at the cost of ten dollars. Thirty regular riding lessons are offered for twenty-five dollars.

Among girls receiving instruction in riding are Mary Jackson, Peggy Young, Jean Clark, Marguerite Russ, Margaret Black, Marie Eason, Mary Allen Peters, Ruth Sears, Rose Allen Higgenbotham, Mary Wilson Clarke, Eugenia Jolly, Florence Bress, Elizabeth Butler, Isabelle Plummer, and Nancy Hopkins.

Athletic Association Sponsers Ping Pong Tournament in Rec

Maybe you've noticed some of these agile armed dames "hitting and chasing" down in the "rec" o' nights right after dinner. Liza Wise and Theresa Graff and Amy Butterworth and Margaret Britton are really taking it earnestly as a part of their daily "rhythmical acitivities", in fact.

We're speaking of ping pong, that spirited table game that gets your arms, legs and body keyed up to the point of real "muscle activity,"—and your emotions, well, 'tis justt plain fun, they say.

It won't be just play now. According to someone's suggestions, the Athletic Association will sponsor a tournament in ping pong during February. Girls who are interested in competing are to sign on the dotted line of the bulletin board. Eliminations will be made till the champion is determined. The bouts must be played off before March 4. Get busy, girls!

The biggest sports news of the past week was the Braddock-Farr fight. British Tommy Farr seems to have an evil Genius or a jinx. In both the match with Braddock and the previous one with Louis, Farr lost by a close decision. Those who listened to the Farr-Louis match was sure Farr had won. In the Braddock-Farr bout the decision was so close that the judges were divided. Braddock is a natural favorite because of the fact that he was down and out, made a strating comeback, was ousted and seems (since his decision over Tommy Farr) to be well on the way to the top again. Public sympathy always goes to a game fighter. There has been talk of a return Braddock-Farr bout and Braddock has also been offered another fight with Maxie Baer from whom he won the championship in 1935. Braddock has put off giving his answer until he can consult his wife. Whether Braddock fights Baer or Farr it is most probable that if he wins he will be given another crack at the Brown Bomber.

In Madison Square Garden, Henry Armstrong, California's world featherweight champion, knocked out Enrico Venturi, lightweight. The Italian claimed a foul, but the New York Athletic Commissoin—whose rules ignore low blows—impounded Venturi's purse of $6,150 to investigate a charge that he was faking.

In New York City, Frances J. Ryan, husky Columbia University Junior, tossed the twelve pound shot putt to a new indoor world's record of sixty feet, seven and five-eights inches—one foot, four and one half inches farther than the six year old mark of Leo Sexton, Olympic Champion.

Setting a new course record of sixty-seven—five under par—Sammy Snead, of White Sulphur Springs, West Virginia, won the three thousand dollar Bing Crosby golf tournament at Delmar, California for the second straight year. His thirty-six hole score was one hundred and thirty-nine.

To settle the question of the difference between the baseball's newly adopted by the two major leagues, Clark Griffith, president of the Washington Senators, turned to the government. He asked the Bureau of Standards to test the relative speeds mechanically.

For the third straight year pitcher Carl Hubbell signed the first New York Giant contract. The southpaw who last season led national league hurlers with twenty-two victories and eight defeats received a two thousand dollar raise.

Unlike baseball, ice hockey is one of the lowest scoring games there is. When the Montreal Maroons beat the Montreal Canadians, last week, eleven to seven, hockey experts rustled back through the record books, discovered that the total score of eighteen points was the major league's highest. Previous high was an eight to eight tie.

High scores for the current major league professional hockey season are the Boston Bruins with a total of thirty-two points in twenty-three games. Low scorers are the world champion Detroit Red Wings, with a total of thirteen points in twenty-five games—an average of a little over a point a week.

At Adelaide, Australia, ambidextrous Jack Bronwich trounced Donald Budge, Wimbledon and United States Singles Champion 6-8, 6-1, 6-3. It was Budge's fourth defeat since November.

In Los Angeles, Tennist Ellesworth Vines beat Fred Perry 4-6, 13-11, 8-10, 6-2, 6-3 in the opening encounter of their second year of coast to coast professional barn storming. This year's tour has a new promoter and a new mode of pay. Instead of Francis T. Hunter, the promoter is Chicago's Jack Harris, promotion chief of the Wilson Sporting Goods Company. The mode of pay—to stimulate competition and quell suspicion of collusion after they finished all even last year—is a bonus for each victory (in addition to salary and a bonus for the greatest number of victories at the end of the seventy-five match season. To the victor goes a possible thirty thousand dollar tour with Donald Budge next year if Mr. Budge turns professional.

No longer will amateur tennis players support themselves on expense accounts. In Miami last week the United States Lawn Tennis Association ordered that tournament costs of each player must be itemized and barred "lump sum and round figure" expense payments to amateurs.

Freshmen Open Ball Season With Victory

Team Sinks Goal After Goal

Freshman basketball opened its season last Thursday in the College gymnasium with a crushing victory of 36-2 over Rice High School. The visitors played hard in spite of the handicap of a light team.

Freshmen displayed skill and precision as they sank goal after goal. The guards were successful in holding Rice to one field goal which was made in the last quarter.

The substitutes entering the last half played an exceptional game, continuing to pile up the score to sweep the team on to victory.

No one girl was accountable for the large score, although there were several brilliant performances during the game. The Freshmen played with perfect teamwork which had been built up in the grinding practices day after day through the fall.

Again on Monday, the opponents, Farmville High School, suffered at the hands of the Freshmen who were victorious with a score of 48-12. The passwork of the winning team was particularly outstanding.

Freshman basketeers who played in the two games are: N. Hubbard (Capt.), E. Hillsman, V. Crute, R. Courter, M. Grainger, J. Smith, M. Edmondson, L. Ewell, and A. Altomare.

The soda fountain boys who have been called "squirts" and "soda jerkers" will adopt a new name for their profession. It stands to reason that if undertakers are now "morticians" and the corset fitters who help you to regain your old form are known as "corsetieres" then why not call the fountain boys "fountaineers".

Twenty-seven Amelia High School Girls Organize Club

This year the librarian of the Amelia High School library has been visiting throughout the county with the endeavor to extend library service into the various graded schools. Since the new teaching methods based on the use of varied materials have supplanted the old type of teaching, involving the use of only a few textbooks, circulation of material is the most necessary in the schools.

Through these visits the librarian has found that in every instance there is at least the beginning of a good library collection. Some schools have been more fortunate than others in securing funds with which to purchase new books. However, every teacher has adopted as one of her aims for this year that of adding to her library a group of worthwhile books that will enable her teaching to be more vital and more appealing to her pupils.

The book collections, so far, have been prepared for circulation by putting into effect the same system that is used in the Amelia library. Since the teaching duties of the one-room teacher are in many casse so heavy, a pupil library has been appointed to take charge of this work. Also, the teachers throughout the county are bringing their worn copies to the Amelia library for repair and mending.

Future Teachers Organize

Twenty-seven pupils at the Amelia High school who expect to become teachers, recently got together and organized a club. They named this club the Student Teachers' Club.

Lois Gilliam ha sbeen elected president of the club; Mildred Willson, vice-president; and Jessie Wilkins, secretary. Mr. Helms is the sponsor of the group. Meetings will be held each week for discussion, and some of the colleges may be visited in the Spring.

The following are members: Virginia Beaver, Ann Borum, Marion Bowles, Margaret Clark, Lula Easter, Rose Farley, Emma Mason Warriner, Katherine Hall, Marion Hodnett, Julia Jamerson, Beulah Jones, Ercelle Jones, Juanita Morgan, Willie Moyer, Frances Rucker, Edith Smith, Edith Tinsley, Nancy Vaughan, Mildred Willson, Lois Gilliam, Margaret Mitchell, Dorothy Ellington, Marjorie Easter, Edith Crone, Elsie Wills, Marjorie Wood and Jessie Wilkins.

Major Group To Present Child Classic

Woman's Club Sponsors Play

"Little Men" directed by Clare Tree Major will be played in S. T. C. auditorium on February 2 under the auspices of the Woman's Club of Farmville.

The novel "Little Men" was written by Louisa M. Alcott as a sequel to "Little Women." She placed the action in a boy's school, and depicted herself as Jo in the character of its sympathetic mistress. It was a very natural setting for two reasons. Her father, Bioson Alcott had just such a school in Boston. Jo's professor-husband in the book is patterned after him. Louisa was herself a school teacher until at thirty-six she met her first great success with the publication of Little Women.

In the boy's school kept by Professor Bhaer and his wife, the children received excellent training and the care of the understanding mother of the school family. Each Saturday night the boys were allowed a fifteen minute pillow fight which Mrs. Bhaer even entered sometimes. On one Saturday night just before the pillow fight a thin, ragged little boy knocked on the door. He was Nat from the slums of Boston, who had played a violin in a street band before being sent to the school by a friend of Mrs. Bhaer. Nat's life at Plumfield was very different from anything he had ever known before. He had new rules to learn, and he gained a sense of honor and the act of living with people. Nat developed in his violin playing to such an extent that it was arranged for him to play before a great violinist in Boston.

The play closes with Nat's looking forward to going to Boston and having him pour out his happiness; no one doubts the possibility of his proving to be a world genius some day.

Sing Presents Ourselves As Others See Us At Our Very Worst

"O would some power the giftie gie us
To see ourselves as ithers see us."

We did get a birdseye view of ourselves as the faculty sees us in Chapel at Sing Saturday night.

We saw ourselves rushing into the auditorium several minutes after the Chapel bell had rung, pushing and pulling others out of the way and stumbling over other girls' feet to get to our seats to read, with squeals of delight, those all important letters from the Jims, Bills and Toms of our acquaintances.

As the strains of Alma Mater are played, now loud, now surprisingly soft, by Mr. Strick, one by one we straggle to our feet as one lone Senior marches down the aisle. We sing out with gusto seemingly trying to make up for the absent ones.

Again Mr. Strick strikes the piano. Miss Purdom lifts her baton, and two or three chords later we begin, some singing one hymn, some another, and some still a third, while others remain seated and laugh and talk over compared letters or the morning "finnues." The more considerate and conscientious work cross-word puzzles. To add to the bedlam a dignified Senior comes rushing in with a package, and half the student body turns to watch her open it, chattering as she does and breathing forth exclamations of surprise and admiration as the contents are finally reached.

Mr. Grainger rises to make an announcement about English 101 while Dr. Simkins, with hand on head, strikes the pose of Napoleon or somebody.

After it is all over, we breath heavy sighs of relief and rush pell-mell out of the forbidden side doors—probably commenting "I think we ought to have better conduct in Chapel, everyone else was making so much noise I couldn't make my roommate understand a word I said and furthermore, I couldn't even read my letter in peace."

Dr. J. L. Jarman Attends Reception Honoring Price

Dr. J. L. Jarman was one of the many distinguished state officials who attended the Inaugural Reception for Governor Price on Wednesday, January 19.

The affair was marked by all the ceremony and splendor which accompanies an inauguration of a Virginia Governor.

Many alumnae of Farmville also attended the reception. The wife of the State Treasurer, a sister of the Attorney General, the wife of the Adjutant General, the wife of the Associate Professor of Law at the University of Richmond, and wives of two of the members of Parliament were among them.

As Governor Price was a former pupil of Dr. Jarman when he was at Emory and Henry college, the reception held particular interest for him.

Advisors Entertain Sorority Members; Mu Omega Has Tea

Miss Olive T. Iler, advisor to the Alpha Epsilon Chapter of Pi Kappa Sigma entertained the actives and pledges at her home on Friday evening, January 21.

The Mu Omega sorority entertained members and pledges at a tea Sunday afternoon, January 23, in the Chapter room. Besides the actives and pledges Miss Leola Wheeler, faculty advisor and Mrs. Walter Fitzpatrick, patron, were present.

Miss Grace B. Moran, faculty member and advisor of the Alpha Chapter of Alpha Sigma Alpha, entertained the chapter at tea Saturday afternoon at five o'clock at her home. Besides the active members, the pledges and Miss Mary Elizabeth Staples of Lynchburg were present.

The plate was very attractively arranged with croquettes, potatoe chips and hot rolls.

Congressional Jam Session Is Theme of Senior Sing

Madmciselle Hummingbird from Buzzardsville created quite a furor among the members of Congress when they were holding a jam session in the College Auditorium Saturday night. They flirted and carried on in a very unusual way. Two of the gentlemen became ardent suitors. Of course the President, members of Congress, and the Judges of the Supreme Court were not actually in our midst, but it was a very clever "take off" staged by the Senior Class for Sing.

Who would think of Liz Carroll as President of the United States? There is now no doubt about her qualifications. She can say "my friends" better than our own Mr. Roosevelt. And can she fish! It would be well for the head of our nation to continue to practice else Liz might beat him at his own sport.

If ever Congress is in need of someone to fillibuster, Will Scott would be just the person. Not only was she almost as ardent a suitor in persual of Madmoiselle Hummingbird as Ruth Montgomery, but she could sing louder and longer than any other representative.

The Judges, Members of Congress, and the President were unable to decide what should be done with the money in U. S. Treasury. Congress and the Supreme Court were in a contrary mood and insisted upon saving it. This, however, was not agreeable to Mr. President. It was finally decided that the best thing to do was "to call the whole thing off."

Mu Omega Leads Sorority Grades For Fall Quarter

The committee for averaging sorority grades have announced the following averages for the fall quarter 1937: Mu Omega, 1.879; Alpha Sigma Tau, 1.777; Gamma Theta, 1.769; Delta Theta Alpha, 1.755; Sigma Sigma Sigma, 1.684; Pi Kappa Sigma, 1.583; and Alpha Sigma Alpha, 1.514.

Miss Florence Stubbs, advisor to the Gamma Theta Sorority is chairman of this committee, following Miss Leola Wheeler who was last years chairman.

The Mu Omega sorority has held the first place in the sorority averages for the past three years.

Elizabeth Butler Is Secretary of Club

Elizabeth Butler was elected secretary of the Granddaughters Club last Wednesday night to fill the vacancy left by May Terrell, who did not return to school this term.

After the election Elizabeth Burke, the president of the Granddaughters Club, urged each member to try to have her mother visit the school on Founder's Day, March 5. The Club is planning to give a tea honoring the mothers that can be here on Founder's Day.

More Libraries for Rural Communities

A love of books and good literature is one of the marks of an educated person, according to Miss Ruth Current, state home demonstration agent at North Carolina State College.

"Many of our home demonstration club women over the State like good books," she continued, "but often they don't have a chance to get the books they would like to read.

"For this reason, we are trying to establish home demonstration club libraries in the different counties. Some have been established already, but many more are needed."

At various club meetings, Miss Current added, some of the women make reports on books they have read, and in this way the others are given a chance to learn about more books than they would have opportunity to read in full by themselves.

"Can you drive with one arm?"
"You bet."
"Okay, have an apple."

Bounds, Gilliam Attend V. P. I. Saber Club Dance

Others Visit And Go Home

During the past week-end, there was a mad scramble as 150 girls paused for a moment to place "going-away" slips on file in the home office before dashing hither and yon for a happy-go-lucky, care-free time in some other port.

Pattie Bounds and Jennie Belle Gilliam attended the Saber Club Dances and boxing matches at V. P. I.

Alma McCann and Frances Steger visited Elsie Parker at Blackstone College.

Rachel Kibler, Ruth Winstead and Cathrine Phillips spent the week-end in Crewe.

Jane Powell was the guest of Harriete Vaden at her home in Richmond. Others going to Richmond were Ora Wilson, Elizabeth Butler, Margaret B. Baily, Beverly Sexton, "Tizzie" Rawlings, Elizabeth Sieber, Virginia Pilcher, "Bill" Stone, Kathrine Gray.

Rebecca Bland, Mary Barclay, Forrestine Whitticar journeyed to Hilton Village.

Several girls went to Danville as usual. These were "Tony" Anthony, Frances Steed, Marion Raine, Bruce Crowell, and Ruth Lee Purdom.

"Lina" Willis spent the week-end in Fredericksburg with her mother.

Grace Allen Pittard and Livian Powell went to Emporia.

Helen Callihan and Juanita Callis trucked off to Mathews.

Margaret Godwin seems to find Williamsburg very magnetic. She went back there again last week-end!

Elizabeth Morris stayed with her cousin in Fork Union.

Others and their destinations included Irma Carpenter, Janelle Shelar, "Liz" Shiplett, Virginia Whitehead Smith and Jean Scott: Roanoke.

Ada Sanford, Jane Hardy, Ruth Emma Chambers, Blackstone; Esther Atkinson, Hampden-Sydney; Perrye Smith, Goldsboro; Patsie Smith, Norfolk.

Girls going home were Marguerite Snell, Elizabeth Tindall, Elizabeth Kent, Fannie Lee West, Erna Dickerson, Mildred and Katherine Habel, Jacqueline Beal, Ruth Curtis Robeson, Carolyn Ford, Kathleen McCann, Virginia Richards, Army and Betty Butterworth, Nan Seward and Marjorie Wicks.

V. M. I. Arrives Here And Leaves Carnations On Chosen Ones

How much have we heard about the "language of flowers". S. T. C. has a new meaning for pink carnations—V. M. I. Lee's birthday resulted in quite a few left shoulder's carrying a burden of a pink carnation, the hearts under which were rivaling a steam pump.

Next year we'll have to see that S. T. C. gets a holiday the same time V. M. I. dies. It will be so much more convenient. Most of the lucky girls took the day off anyway, especially after their own special uniform arrived.

Uniforms were everywhere. Shannon's looked as if the army had given a call for recruits. Smiles and happy faces were everywhere, too.

Martha Williams Weds Wat Fugate In South Boston

Martha Williams of South Boston, former student here, will become the bride of Watkins Fugate, head coach at Thomas Jefferson High school in Richmond, in the South Boston Presbyterian church Thursday afternoon, January 27.

Only members of the two families and close friends of the couple will be present at the ceremony. After the wedding, they will take a short trip, and Mr. Fugate will be back at school Monday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Fugate will make their home in Richmond.

"The Third Hour" Is Vivid Novel

Geoffrey Household's The Third Hour offers a particularly enticing combination: vivid characters, striking situations, and unusual ideas. In this international novel, the author has attempted through his characters, drawn from several nationalities, to show that men and women everywhere are fundamentally the same. Mr. Household has kept before him the realization that human nature is little affected by country. Whatever happens in the story happens to a living personality.

But Mr. Household hasn't once attempted to "preach". Perhaps that is one of the most charming things about his book. It offers a basic idea, the solution of which the reader himself may decide. The style of writing which the author uses is excellent, and those who appreciate good fiction will undoubtedly like it.

The Moon Is Making is a story of deefct. The principle characters, with one exception, are avaricious and domineering. Miss Jameson's use of the omniscient point of view is perhaps overdone. She tells too much about her characters, instead of letting us see for ourselves.

Other new books well worth your reading are Farson's Transgressor in The Tropics, Lewis' Prodigal Parents, Martellis' Italy Against the World, and Jarrett's The Silver String.

Westminster Choir Will Sing Here Saturday Night

Princeton Choir School Singers

Westminster Choir, world famous singers from the Westminster Choir School of Princeton University, will present a program in the State Teachers College auditorium Saturday night, February 5, at 8 o'clock. This choir, known as the American Symphony Singers, is directed by Dr. John Finley Williamson, and is composed of thirty-two young college students. It has been heard in over seven hundred concerts in the United States and has made several European tours.

The program will be as follows: "God is a Spirit", by David Hugh Jones; "Ave Maria" by Edward Stringham; "Who is She that Ascendeth," by Healey Williams; "O Thou in Whose Power," by Noble Cain; "God's Grandeur," by Samuel Barber; "Songs of Conquest," by Harl McDonald; "Oh, What a Beautiful City," by William L. Dawson; "Old Black Joe," by Stephen Collins Foster; "Water Boy," by Avery Robinson; "Old Man River" (from "Showboat"), by Jerome Kern; "Choral Symphony," by Roy Harris; "Soldier, Soldier" (Virginia Folk Song) by John Powell; "The Mother's Vow" (Omaha Indian Song) by Arthur Farwell; and "Navajo War Dance" (Navajo Indian Melody) by Arthur Farwell.

The Westminster Concert is one of the most outstanding numbers on the Artist Series Program for this year. Tickets will be on reserve at White Drug Store.

Y. W. Council Sends Girls to Richmond Regional Meeting

Nan Seward, Isabel Williamson, and Miss Mary Nickols attended a Y. W. C. A. meeting in Richmond on Saturday, that was composed of the Virginia area that was present at the Miami Convention, which was held during Christmas. The chief feature of the program was a panel discussion about the work that has been done. The subject for discussion was "Commission and Favored Units at Miami."

Sunday morning they joined Ruth Curtis Robeson at a regional meeting of the Virginia area of the Y. W. C. A. Colleges represented besides Farmville were, Randolph-Macon Womans College, Lynchburg College, Westhampton, Fredericksburg, Radford, Virginia State Normal for Negroes, and Hampton Institute. The purpose of the meeting was to inform the college of the area's plans for the coming year and to formulate solutions to the area problems.

There were a number of National Council members present Dr. Susan Lough of the University of Richmond gave a report to the meeting of the Public Affair Group from which she had just come. It was decided to have the second Area Committee meeting in February 1939.

Kathryn Jamison Is To Attend Convention

Mary Ann Sanderson, Mildred Gentry, Doris Miller, Frances Holloway, Marguerite Snell, Evelyn Beale, and Virginia Yager were invited into the Virginia Gamma Chapter of Pi Gamma Mu Tuesday night, February 1.

At the meeting following the initiation, Kathryn Jamison, the president of the chapter was elected to attend the convention to be held at Vanderbilt University in Nashville, Tennessee, on March 4 and 5. Margaret Bailey was selected as alternate.

Soph Production Will Follow Theme Of Night Club

Marie Eason and Isabel Williamson are Co-Directors of the Sophomore production "Club Manhattan", which will be given in the "Rec", Wednesday night, February 9.

There will be tables reserved for the guests. Cigarette girls will sell coca-colas, nabs and candy.

Kathryn Watkins is chairman of properties, Margaret Etheridge, decorations; Kathryn Moomaw, refreshments; Essie Millner, dancing; Eloise Whitley, tickets; Doris Chestnut, programs; Jane Hardy and Jerry Hatcher, music; Olivia Stevenson, costuming.

Anne Scott, the master of ceremonies will present to us the new song and dance program at the reopening of Club Manhattan. Last year the class of '40 presented the same club, but although the theme is old, the program is new, and original.

Boys will be allowed to come, and an intermission will give the guests an opportunity to dance to the music of the Sophomore orchestra.

Clark Will Play For Pan-Hel Dance On Saturday

Hartwell Clark and his University of Virginia Orchestra will play for the Pan-Hellenic dance to be held Saturday night, February 5. Vera Ebel was chairman of the committee for the selection of the orchestra. Elsie Dodd and Miriam Ficklin served as assistants.

In the receiving line will be Dr. J. L. Jarman, Miss Mary White Cox, Miss Grace Mix, advisor to the Pan-Hellenic Council, Miss Virginia Bedford, advisor to Alpha Sigma Tau sorority, Miss Olive T. Iler, Pi Gappa Sigma advisor, Miss Grace B. Moran, advisor to Alpha Sigma Alpha sorority, Miss Pauline Camper, advisor to Sigma Sigma Sigma, Miss Florence Stubbs, advisor to Gamma Theta sorority, Miss Lucile Jennings, Delta Theta Alpha advisor and Miss Leola Wheeler, advisor to Mu Omega sorority.

Ruth Sears is chairman of the ticket committee; Margaret Bailey and Madeline McGlothlin are working with her.

Virginia Whitehead Smith is chairman of the decoration committee. Assisting her are Virginia Agee, Kitty Roberts, and Edna Bolick. The theme of the decorations will remain a secret until the night of the dance. Pledges of the sororities will help with decorations Saturday afternoon.

The floor committee is composed of the Pan-Hellinc alternates. They are "Jo" Quinn, Caroline Faris, Mable Burton, Virginia Whitehead Smith, Martha Meade Hardaway, Sarah Hayes, and Caroline Gwalthmey.

Eleanor Dodson is chairman of the flower committee with "Duckie" Davies and Jennie Belle Gilliam.

Baptist Student Union Sponsors Prayers

The Baptist Student Union is sponsoring prayers for the week of January 31. The general topic for the week is "Living Christianity on the Campus".

The sub-topics, dates, and speakers are as follows. On Monday, Beatrice Bland spoke on "What is the Secret of It?" Jane Jackson and Marion Harden gave a dialogue on Tuesday entitled "Who Are You?" On Wednesday night Ruth Phelps will speak on "What Are You Doing?" "What Is the Value of It?" is Elizabeth Luck's talk for Thursday. Virginia Pilcher will conclude the program on Friday night, speaking on "What Is The Beauty of It?"

Juniors Present "Sister Pat" as Class Production

Theme Based On College Life

The Junior production, "Sister Pat With Apologies to Brother Rat" was presented January 26 in the large auditorium.

The theme of the production dealing with life at S. T. C. was portrayed in three acts. The first took place in S. T. C.'s Rotunda after dinner, the second and third in a typical dormitory room in school. Action centered around a Fall Cotillion Club dance—before and after.

Sarah, an attractive, dramatic young girls contributed color and excitement through engaging in escapades and breaking regulations.

Comedy entered with Mary, the student who through loyalty to duty, denied herself the pleasure of attending the dance.

Vivacity and hilarity marched through the action of a group of fun-loving girls at a college dance.

Members of the cast were Kappy, Elizabeth George Wilson; Pat, Frankie Bryan; Sarah, Clara Nottingham; Mary, the student, Elizabeth Burke, a government girl, Dot Buckland.

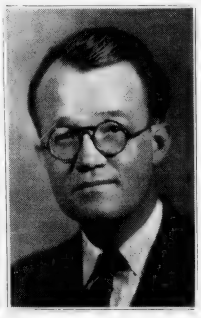
Other girls: Nancy Gray, Jennie Carroll, Dibbs Tyree, Margaret Britton, Theresa Graff, Mable Burton, Margaret Stallard, Amy Powell, Bunny Yonce, Louise Bryan, Marjorie Wicks, Army Butterworth, Elsie Dodd, Virginia Whitehead Smith.

The script for the production was composed by members of the Junior class. Frances Hutcheson was director.

Between acts Frances Steed and Virginia Epes Irby sang.

Anti-Lynching Bill Will Be Discussed In Open Meeting

The Anti-Lynching Bill will be the subject for discussion in the open Pi Gamma Mu forum on February 8, at 8:30 P. M. in the Student Building Lounge.



This bill, holding a limelight in the present session of Congress, has been severely criticized by such notable congressmen as Senators Glass of Virginia and Tom Connoley of Texas, and upheld by several others; principal supporters being Senator Wagner and Representative Gavagan.

Students are urged to attend this meeting and voice opinions on this bill.

Twenty Girls Accept Bids to Sororities

The mid-winter rushing season ended Thursday night when the seven educational sororities on campus issued bids to 20 girls. The following girls were pledged:

Sigma Sigma Sigma: Pauline Scott, Orange; Bess Windham, Petersburg.

Alpha Sigma Alpha: Betty Fahr, Richmond; Ethel Carr, Richmond; Jean Scott, Roanoke; Bobby Latture, Lexington.

Alpha Sigma Tau: Ruth Carney, Churchland; Theresa Brinkley, Portsmouth; Katherine Underwood, Cedar Glenn; Faye Brandon, Suffolk; Frances Prichett, Petersburg; Nancy Goode Bland, Boydton.

Pi Kappa Sigma: Margaret James, Kendall Grove.

Mu Omega: Elizabeth West, Portsmouth; Beverly Blair, Portsmouth; Eloise Williams, Newport News.

Delta Theta Alpha: Helen Green, Staunton; Mary Marshall Prosise, Hebron; Elizabeth Warner, Warsaw; Mildred Harry, Suffolk.

Miss M. S. Willett Y. W. Secretary Visits Farmville

Miss Mary Jane Willett of Atlanta, Ga., national secretary of the Y. W. C. A., who visited this campus Monday said "Miss Smith, a former secretary told me if I ever went to southern colleges, to be sure and go to Farmville."

Miss Willett declared that she was informed that Farmville girls would ask thousands of questions and show complete interest in her answers. She was so enthusiastic in her stories of her expectations about Farmville that Dr. Jeffers declared she was "like another Halliburton with her tall stories."

She met the faculty advisors, Dr. Jeffers, Miss Nichols, Miss Jennings and the Bible instructor, Miss Gisler, at dinner and for a meeting later in the evening. Then at 8:30 she talked with the cabinet members and finally talked to Nan Seward, president of the local Y. W., who was ill in her room and unable to attend the cabinet meeting.

Miss Willett is on her way to Atlanta from the Virginia regional meeting in Richmond over the week-end.

Debate Club Holds Practice Debate On National Question

Another in a series of practice debates was held Wednesday, January 26, when Beatrice Bland and Frances Barnes, debating on the affirmative side, met Caralie Nelson and Margaret Pierce, negative team.

This year, Dr. Walmsley, the debate coach, has been trying to give all of the new girls actual debating experience. By having them debate on both sides of the question he is endeavoring to place the girl on the teams for which they are best suited.

The subject for debate was the National Pi Kappa Delta question "Resolved: That the National Labor Relation Board should be empowered to enforce arbitration in all Industrial Disputes."

A Recipe Is Offered For The Perfect S. T. C. Girl

If one tried to make a perfect S. T. C. girl what ingredients would it take? Of course the personality would be rather complex but . . .

First, put in Margaret Stallard's figure, with some of Isabel Plummer's stateliness. Add Susan Lane's style, with the good looking clothes of Blair Goode. Under hair the color of Dorothy Eades', place Sarah Button's brains. Mix in the musical ability of Frankie Bryan, with the speaking voice o. Clara Nottingham, and the singing voice of Virginia Lee Pettis. Add the sweetness of Jennie Belle Gilliam's face, plus Nan Duer's quaintness. Next, throw in a cupful of Kitty Roberts' arti-ness, and a few grains o Essie Millner's natural dancing talent. Measure out a few drops of Eugenia Jolly's ability to get a man somehow. Mix this with a few more drops of male attaction—(a hint may be gotten from Pattie Jeffries).

Don't forget Mary Harrison Vaughan's vivacity and the leadership of Madeline McGlothlin and the determination to do a job well of Florence Bress. Put in the sincerity of Anna Shifflet and Martha Meade Hardaway's firmness of purpose. Compile with the dignity of Mildred Stone and the spirit of Norvell Montague. Mix with the athletic ability of Ruth Phelps and the sportsmanship of Jennie Carroll. Complete with a pinch of Army Butterworth's foolishness.

Theme Developed Around Chemistry Laboratory

Freshmen Are Compared To Molecules

Mr. Raymond Holladay French, Freshman classman, was presented by Ruth Lea Purdom, president of the class of '41, in chapel last Thursday morning.

The Freshman class, dressed in white, marched down the aisle to the front of the auditorium. The class officers, Ruth Lea Purdum, Esther Atkinson, Billie Lewis and Betty Fahr, were seated on the stage. Six girls, dressed in smocks stood around a table, which was equipped as a science laboratory, mixing acids in test tubes. Since Mr. French is a science professor this was the theme of the presentation.

"When we came here in the fall," Ruth Lea said, "we were many molecules without any definite position. Our greatest scientist has developed those positive charges that will place our class on top."

The Juniors, sister class of the Freshman, stood as "Green and White" was sung. They were also dressed in white. Other songs dedicated to Mr. French followed "Green and White".

Dramatic Club Bids Are Issued To Seventy-Two Girls

The Dramatic Club has issued bids to girls who have apprenticed for three months in the following departments:

Lighting: Annie Ruth Baird, Ruby Bane, Nancy Bryant, Margaret Coalter, Dorothy E. Davis, Patsy Fletcher, Theresa Graff, Betty Greig, and Nancy Hopkins.

Properties: Bonnie Avery, "Panky" Brooks, and Harriet Haskins.

Make-Up: Rosalie Coberly, Louise DeJarnette, Mary Sue Edmonson, Blair Goode, Dot Hatcher, Doris Isbel, Lucy Wingo, Maude McChesney, Mary Walker Mitchell, Louise Painter, Mildred Perdue, Betty Turner, Eleanor Watts, and Mary West.

Acting: Esther Atkinson, Beatrice Bland, Hazelwood Burbank, Elizabeth Barrett, Emily Hoskins, Marion Heard, Marjorie Holt, Virginia Howell, Agnes Pickeral, Jean Scott, Roberta Slade, Betty Slocum, Martha Smith, "Bill" Stone, Evelyn Thorington, Margaret Tucker, Martha Whelchel, and Marion Worsham.

Costuming: Elizabeth Berryman, Nancy Bland, Ellen Bowen, Frances Holloway, Mary Jane Jilliffe, Essie Millner, Alma Oakes, Virginia Polly, and Jane Rosenberger.

Business and Publicity Group: Frankie Bolton, Eloise Gwalthmey, Frances Pope, Jean McCorkel, Caralie Nelson, Katherine Reed, Marguerite Snell, and Shirley Ann Stephens.

Staging: Lucy Blackwell, Ethel Carr, Jean Clark, Betty B. Fahr, Caroline Gwathmey, Chlotilde Jarman, Florence Lee, Mary Mahone, Mary Hille McCoy, Sue Owen, Jane Porter Shepard, and Jean Stephenson.

Why Not Put Our Living Rooms To Use!

There are in this school eight well-furnished living rooms and seven sorority rooms that are not used in the way that they could bring the most happiness to students.

We have been blamed constantly on the campus for meeting boys off the campus and for walking the sidewalks of Farmville when we have dates. If we could use all the living rooms available to us when we are with boys, maybe our behavior would be more above reproach. We are normal girls and we like boys. We are not bad, and we don't like to break rules.

We deny that the privacy we'd have on dates if allowed to use more space would mean any unladylike behavior on our part. We just think that we, as natural girls, could have more fun on our dates, make more interesting conversation and have less desire to break rules if we had eighteen rooms for dates instead of three.

We could sign for a certain room to save the home office trouble in case of a call, and each member of the home department could look after couples in her building with slips sent in at one control spot, the Rotunda, as always.

With conditions more natural and homelike, we could be more natural and find talking less strained with one pair of ears listening to our prattle instead of a dozen or so. Serious couples wouldn't have to dodge ping pong balls or listen to discords, and playful couples wouldn't have to listen to the Japanese situation if we could just spread out.

Books, Candy, Radio Comprise Typical S. T. C. Week-end

A book, a box of chocolates, and the radio, beside me, playing dance tunes.

What could be more appealing on a Saturday afternoon at College? Yes, what? Those of us who have experienced it could think of lots of things, off-hand.

Do you cute girls who truck off every week-end to dances, boxing matches, flower shows, or whatever you do truck off to, ever cast a backward thought to your less-fortunate sisters who remain patiently (?) on campus, day in—day out, week-end in—week-end out, months and years in and out? —no, you probably don't—we wouldn't either—so perhaps you'd be interested in learning just how those Saturdays—from noon on—are spent.

Since bed usually wins out over breakfast, on Saturday, everyone is quite ravenous by lunch-time, so after having, locust-like, consumed everything in sight, we swarm from the dining-room, bereft of its charm, to trip over suit-cases in the Rotunda and be reminded bitterly that some of the homegoers have still to go home.

From there, each goes his own way—and may the best man win, in trying to cheerfully pass four hours of Saturday afternoon, or just—pass them. Upon arriving at the room, we remember that roomie, too, has joined the ranks of the deserters. That's bad. So the next thing to do is to try to scare up a few friends who, by some strange coincidence, haven't gone away.

When, after much searching, we discover three such oddities, a huddle is formed for the purpose of deciding what to do. Since the show was so good the everybody saw it yesterday, that's out—definitely. And unless you want to see "Shoot 'Em Up Pete and Cactus Lil", shows are discarded entirely.

Finally, the suggestion of a walk is agreed upon by all, and promptly put into effect. On passing through the Rotunda, and being greeted by several sets of belated home-goers, we close our eyes with a shudder as their chorused good-byes reach our ears.

Once on the walk, things begin to improve until Ginny remembers that she needs some branches and things for her teaching, and Sue, who sneezes at the sight of weeds, goes into a fit of hysterics and is rushed from the scene.

We wend our weary way schoolward where we sit and watch the Fords go by until five-thirty. Of course there's no mail—there never is on Saturday night, so we sit around some more until dinner time.

After appeasing the inner woman, we snatch our apples and rush to the auditorium. Then comes Sing—the only bright spot in the day—and for ten minutes we forget our trials.

There follows the long evening in which we play a little bridge, eat a little, bull a little, and wander around a great deal, until, at ten—or two, as the case may be—we fall back on the pillow with a sigh that wants to be a full-grown scream, as we resolve to never spend another Saturday in school—until the next week comes along.

"One American" Is Frazier Life Story

Turn to page 220 of One American. For that matter, turn to any page of the book, read a few lines, and we'll bet you won't stop until you've started at the beginning and read to the end. One of the highest compliments we can think of paying any book 400 pages in length is to say that it is too short. One American is decidedly that. In contrast to many autobiographies, we feel that the author should have told us more of his experiences in far places.

Mr. Frazier, evidently a character somewhat like Richard Halliburton, takes us to Siberia, Mexico, Russia, Turkey, China, Italy. But just look through an atlas for a complete list of his travels. Arrested in Italy and almost shot, Mr. Frazier mentions briefly and casually his near encounter with death. And that is just one episode in a book paced full of them. If the monotony of everyday routine is bothering you, pick up One American. It's a certain escape from boredom.

Do you know why Kipling went to India: Then you want to see Van de Water's Rudyard Kipling's Vermont Feud. It gives the story of why Kipling left America forever. The account is one which has never been given in any previous biography.

Are you a victim of the "candid-camera craze"? Then you just must have Get That Picture—The Story of the News Camera-Man by Aaron Eyrickson.

It's exciting how pictures are made; the equipment, the photographer uses, the adventures the cameraman has, the place of the women photographer. All of this is told in Mr. Erickson's new book. So here's your chance to get a grand book, you amateur photographers and you who would like to be.

Did you like Anthony Adverse? Then you'll want to read Hervey Allen's Action at Aquila. His new book is being published on March 4, so don't miss a first edition.

OPEN FORUM

To Whom It May Concern:

What could be more effective, more workable, more simple, and so easy to abide by as our new house council system?

We all agree that the fewer rules there are, the fewer there are to break. Therefore, we know that if this system is to be a success we must all do our part by not taking advantage of our busy signs. While each of us does her part, it is the particular duty of the house council and of Student Government to enforce it.

Then what do you think of a Hall President who takes a "Busy Sign" from the door of a room and enters, with the sign in her hand, saying she hasn't broken the rule?

A Happy State of Mind Is Essential To Interesting Life

That happy state of mind, so rarely possessed, in which we can say "I have enough," is the highest attainment of philosophy. Happiness consists, not in possessing much, but in being content with what we possess. He who wants little always has enough.—Zimmerman.

I believe in gittin' as much good outer life as you kin not that I ever set out to look fer happiness; seems like the folks that does, never finds it. I jes' do the best I kin where the Lord put me at, an' it looks like I got a happy feelin' in me 'most all the time.—Mrs. Wiggs.

The World As It is

It's a gay old world when you're gay,
And a glad old world when you're glad,
But whether you play
Or go toiling away,
It's a sad old world when you're sad.—

It's a grand old world if you're great
And a mean old world if you're small;
It's a world full of hate
For the foolish who prate
Of the uselessness of it all.

It's a beautiful world to see.
Or it's dismal in every zone:
The thing it must be
In your gloom or your glee
Depends on yourself alone.
—S. E. Kiser

My Philosphy

I allus argy that a man
Who does about the best he can,
Is plenty good enough to suit
This lower mundane institute—
No matter of his daily walk
Is subject fer his neighbor's talk,
And critic—minds of ev'ry whim
Jest all get up and go for him!

It's natchural enough, I guess,
When some gits more and some gits less,
For them—uns on the slimmest side
To claim it ain't a fair divide;
And I've knowed some to lay and wait,
And git up soon, and set up late,
To ketch some feller they could rate
Fer goin' at a faster gait.

The gins is bad when folks commence
A-flinin' fault with Providence,
And balkin' 'cause the earth don't shake
At every prancin' step they take.
No man is great till he can see
How less than little he would be
Ef stripped to sell, and stank and bare,
He hung his sign out anywhere.

My doctern is to lay aside
Contentions, and be satisfied;
Jest do your best, and praise er blame
That follers that, counts jest the same.
I've allus noticed great success
Is mixed with troubles more er less,
And it's the man who does the best
That gits more kicks than all the rest.
—James W. Riley

GLEANINGS

By

Virginia L. Agee

It is with dread, terror, and misgivings in our hearts that we face the newest, most decisive move of the all-powerful nations of the world—the biggest step since 1914. It is the plan of these powers to aid China economically and financially. Great Britain, France and Russia are already to extend this aid to war-stricken China and have asked the cooperation of the United States.

These three major powers have decided to put their strengths along with China against Japan whether or not the League of Nations approves. It seems that Poland is the country that is playing the role of "stopper", for she refuses to submit to any plan for aiding China. If the League disapproves, it's going to be too bad, because already it seems as if the so-called master minds of these leading nations have come to a definite conclusion.

Great Britain has already followed their decision by swiftly moving land, sea, and air forces toward her far east naval base, Singapore. Already she has scheduled mock battles and combined training in large scale and closely guarded maneuvers.

There have been many reports from Japanese spokesmen that there have already been Russian air forces collaborating with those of Chinese insignia. France, so far, has had nothing (officially) to do with this Eastern conflict that is beginning to gnaw on the hearts of nations that heretofore have done nothing but look on and protest at the inhumanity shown on the part of Japanese air squadrons.

So far, the United States has refused to join the English-French-Russsian plan of Chinese defense. So far, Secretary Hull and President Roosevelt have denounced any intention of collaborating with these plans that may go further than originally depicted, and which may cause this country to become involved in an international war. The present plans of the United States are to continue to play the role of a neutral nation—one which shows no partiality and proves this point by shipping armaments and other supplies to both countries engaged in their own feud.

England, Frances, Russia, and the United States may be four of the major powers of the world—they may well head the list of the great nations, but it must be remembered that there are otner countries in the world whose policy is the same as that of the Japanase government—the policy and determination of the expansion of territory. We are speaking of Germany and Italy—and we know that that is bound to be the case because of the Ethiopian conflict and desire of Hitler and Mussolini for a greater and more rapid reproduction of their individual subjects. And, having this policy, what is to prevent their sympathizing and aiding Japan? Then, too, we must not put Poland out in the cold; we must remember that they are vigorously protesting the decision of England, France and Russia.

If the situation as predicted above came to pass, it will be practically impossible for any nation to remain neutral. There is not a nation in this world that is not closely allied with some other nation; involved in some sort of political intrigue. And—when the blow falls—if it falls—(and we hope and pray that it doesn't) it will be the most disastrous, the most appalling catastrophe that has ever occurred to and on this world.

And with all this discussion concerning the Chinese-Japanese confict we find that China has tasted both victory and defeat in the space of two days. Three days ago she gained new footholds in the Shantung province—driving back and surrounding insurgent forces of Japanese. Two days ago, when met by a Japanese force at Suchow, three thousand Chinese were wiped out, and the lifeline of China's defense was badly crippled.

Rotunda Reverberations

By Liz Carroll

Here's a new extra-curricula activity for you! It seems that some fair members of that far famed Junior hall made a high A average on ride snatching during the past week-end. They got a liberal education on the various spots of interest (?) in Farmville, too. 'Tis said that seed growers hang out in queer places . . . but they certainly produced a prize crop of rides. Here's to bigger and better conventions in this fair city!

Speaking of life on Junior hall. Does anyone know what's so hilariously funny about the letter that Frances Irving got from a "use to be"? It certainly seemed to afford no end of amusement. Then there's Lib Wilson's mix-up over the Pan-Hel dance. Having two dates would be a bit difficult—especially when one of them, in desperation, wires wanting to know if she is Siamese twins.

Just for statistics sake, some of us are eager to know just what it is in Lexington that is conductive to development of fever blisters. Remember last year when Eugenia came back with a prize display of blisters—and now it's Lula Windham . . . 'Deed 'tis a mystery!

Some of the members of the Problem Club represented that worthy organization at their "convention" in Crozet last week-end. It's a shame what long hours these conventions take—those poor gals stayed out 'til five o'clock Sunday morning—probably collecting alumnae news!

It's nearly time to "doll up" in your gayest spirits for the grand reopening of "Club Manhattan"—the Sophomore's night club. Dame rumor hath it that this year's floor show is the essence of sophistication. Midst all the excitement of the proud Sophs we've heard snatches from their numerous conversations—nothing very definite, just murmers such as "Night and Day" . . . practice . . . dancing during intermission . . . more and better food . . . rush for tickets.

Sounds pretty good, dontcha think? Looks like we'd better reserve our tables early.

The Juniors certainly went to a great extent to show us ourselves in "Sister Pat". We deny that some of the scenes were quite natural, but we acknowledge their originality. It was a lively piece of entertainment with some rank cracks!

Varsity Defeats Opponent 19-16 In First Basketball Game of '38 Season

Jenny Carroll Is High Scorer For S. T. C.

Farmville's varsity basketball team emerged victorious over Roanoke National Business College with a score of 19-16, Friday, January 28, in the S. T. C. gym. This was the first seasonal game for the Farmville squad, which has a record of no defeats for the past three years.

The game was fast in action, the score at the half being 14-11 in Farmville's favor. Each side shot goal after goal to keep the score close throughout the game. Jenny Carroll was high scorer with a total of 14 points.

The lineup was as follows:

S. T. C.	forwards	R. N. B. C.
*R. Chambers		Terrill
J. Carroll		Haller
	Guards
*E. Gilliam		Sisk
V. W. Smith		E. J. Cloonor
	Centers
*R. Phelps		G. Clooner
S. Eastham		Wallier

*Subs: J. B. Gilliam, C. Jarman, E. Conyers.

A. A. Will Present Prizes to Entrants Of Ping Pong Contest

A ping pong tournament is being planned for the first time. It will be a ladder tournament, taking place sometime before Founder's Day though a definite date has not yet been set. Those trying out for the Tournament may challenge one another. The winner will be given an award by the Athletic Association.

Tryouts for the bout are to sign up on the bulletin board in the hall. A certain number of practices will be required before a person is eligible for participation.

Among those already signed up are: Margaret Britton, Jenny Carroll, "Scottie" McAllister, Jack Cocks, Anne Cocks, Mary Grainger, Charlotte Henderson, Helen McIlwaine, Betty Butterworth, Laura Nell Crawley, Nancy Pierpont, Elizabeth Butler, Ruth Phelps, America Selasse, Ruth Curtis Robeson, and Chtotilde Jarman.

Team Elects Gilliam Captain of Varsity Basketball Squad

Ellen Gilliam, of Prospect, has been elected by her teammates as captain of basketball for the 1938 season.

Ellen now a senior, is majoring in elementary education. She left S. T. C. in 1935 after two years to teach, and returned as a Junior in 1936. Ellen has been a member of the Varsity team in basketball, on which she plays guard position, all four years.

She has played on varsity hockey teams and participated in class athletics also. She is a member of the Monogram Club.

Frosh-Soph Court Encounter Played Off Today

The champion class in interclass basketball will be determined when class teams meet this week. The Freshmen-Sophomore "play off" will be on Wednesday; the Juniors will oppose the Seniors on Thursday. The winning teams from these two groups will probably meet on next Monday to determine the champion class team. Winning teams will get points for the color cup.

How Absurd

The Pacific Coast Conference (made up of ten colleges) has the number one basketball team, the number one crew and the number one football team in the United States this year. A little self conscious about the perennial charges of subsidation directed overtly and covertly at some of its members, the Pacific Coast Conference last week decided to find out just how professional it really is. That the member colleges not exactly trust each other was evinced by the researchers they chose to investigate their affairs. He was pug nosed Edwin N. Atherton, one time G man and recent head of the San Francisco graft inquiry.

Sonja Heinie Turns Down $17,000

There's nothing like being above money grubbing. Sonja Honey (as Winchell calls her) turned down seventeen thousand dollars for a matinee in Madison Square Garden. When asked how she could afford to turn down that much money Miss Henie said she just couldn't get up that early in the afternoon.

Hartford, Conn. has been chosen by the National Bowling Congress for the United States women's Sweepstakes Championships, which are to be held February the fifth. It will be the first time they have ever been held in the North.

American Golfer Goes to England

Champion Johnny Goodman of the United States amateur golf realm is going after the British amateur Championship, he said the other day. As a member of the United States Walker Cup team Mr. Goodman will be in England for those matches, but the British amateur is another matter. Goodman believes the United States Golf Association may make arrangements for the Walker cuppers to be in England in time for the British Amateur, scheduled two weeks before the cup matches. But if they don't, Johnny is going to be there if, he said, he has to go alone. He had hoped to enter the United States National Open—he held that title once—but the Walker Cup trip will keep him out of that tourney. A mild Nebraska winter has given the amateur champion plenty of chance for play at home, and he has kept his game below par. His present plans are to confine his tournament play, between now and time for sailing for England, to the Houston, Texas invitation meet, and maybe one other tourney, if business doesn't interfere.

Notre Dame Captain Resigns

Alec Shellogg, Captain-elect of the 1938 Notre Dame football team has resigned the Captaincy, it was reported last week. Shellogg gave no reason for withdrawing from school and University officials pointed out that the tradition of the University in such cases was to withhold comment. Shellogg was a Junior in the college of Arts and came from Newcastle, Pennsylvania, winning his letter as a sophomore as a reserve tackle. He was first string right tackle during the 1937 season.

Mighty Glenn Cunningham served notice on his most pressing challengers that he is still the peer of American milers last Saturday when he raced to a decisive twelve yard victory over Archie San Romani, his New York Curb exchange team mate in the Prout meet's K. of C. mile. He ran it in four minutes thirteen and eight tenths seconds, before an overflow crowd of thirteen thousand at the Boston Garden. It was the fourth consecutive time that the twenty-eight year old Cunningham has brushed aside all opposition in this featured event. Last year with Don Lash pushing him, the flying Kansan set a new Boston record of four minutes, eleven and nine tenths seconds, three and seven-tenths seconds slower than his world indoor mark.

Don Budge Wins Australian Title

Donald Budge, world's number one amateur tennis star, proved conclusively last week that his exhibition match defeats were no slump. When he routed Jack Bromwich, nineteen year old Australian Davis cupper, 6-4, 6-2, 6-1, to add the Australian lawn tennis title to his American and British crowns. Twice during this Australian visit Budge had lost to Bromwich in exhibitions, and once to Baron Gottfried von Cramm of Germany. But last week the Australian youngster had no chance at all. Budge took command of the situation at the outset and had his opponent baffled and erratic long before the end of the match.

The womens singles title also went to the United States as Dorothy May Bundy, of Santa Monica, California, whipped Australia's Miss Stevenson, 6-3, 6-2. In a mixed doubles semi-final Gene Mako, Budge's double partner, and Dorathy Workman of California lost to C. F. Long and Nancy Wynn of Australia, 6-2, 6-3.

The H2O Club and several senior life savers are reviewing their Senior life saving tests on Thursday evenings. Those being tested will teach the spring life saving classes in order to receive the red cross examiner's badge.

Junior life saving and beginners' classes are being held on Wednesday evenings for the Farmville Girl Scouts. S. T. C. girls aiding in this are Louise Bryan, Mary Grainger, Lucy Blackwell, Dot Fisher, and Myra Smith.

Orchesis Will Present Dance Program

Theme of Program To Remain Secret

Orchesis, student dance club, under the direction of Mrs. L. G. Fitzpatrick, will sponsor a short program of dances in the college auditorium on Tuesday, February 22. The club will be assisted by students from the Composition and Fundamental classes.

The program, the title of which has not yet been announced, will consist of several light numbers, as well as several serious dances. There will be a theme varied from the standpoint of form such as a cannon; the same theme varied according to rhythmic aspects such as resultant rhythm; and others will be varied according to content and rhythm.

The dances are all original, some of which are planned for the content and dramatic elements involved. The costumes are also original. Elizabeth LeGrande has composed several pieces of music for the program.

Inter-Color Water Meet Is Scheduled For February 25

Friday, February 25, has been set as the final date for the inter-color swimming meet. Practices started last week and are to be held on Tuesday and Wednesday nights. For participation in the meet, six optional practices in the afternoon will be required in addition to the scheduled night practices.

Most events are represented, however more are needed in the breast stroke for speed. There are still vacancies in all events.

Participants in the contest will receive points toward the color cup for their class and also individual points. From these participants a varsity swimming team will be chosen for the inter-telegraphic swimming meet which is to be in March.

On Squad

Mary Sue Edmundson, a freshman from Baskerville, Virginia, has been added to the present varsity basketball squad. Mary Sue has been active in athletics since her entrance here last fall. She competed in class hockey, swimming and because of her outstanding ability in class basketball was appointed to the varsity squad.

"Little Men" Is Presented in S. T. C. Auditorium On Wednesday

Dramatic Troupe Here For the Third Time

Clare Tree Major will present "Little Men" in the S. T. C. auditorium Wednesday, February 2 at 8 P. M. Through the Farmville Woman's Club an essay contest is being sponsored in connection with the play, for school students in Prince Edward and Cumberland counties. Free tickets will be awarded as prizes for the two pupils in each of the elementary schools and each High school submitting the best essay. Details will be announced by the school officials in each school.

The play, "Little Men" is based on the book written by Louisa May Alcott. The action is placed in a boys' school kept by Professor Bhaer and his wife. The story centers in the adventures of Nat, a ragged thin waif from the slums who was sent to school to be cared for and reformed.

The Clare Tree Major group of actors from the Children's Theater of New York has played in Farmville twice before under the sponsorship of the Woman's Club, presenting "Little Women" and "Hansel and Gretel" which were events of unusual entertainment and cultural value to the nearly 3,000 children from the vicinity who witnessed the four performances. No one at all familiar with the high artistic merit of the Clare Tree Major production can fail to realize what an opportunity two of her plays in one season places in reach of local young people.

WHAT'S THIS?

It's early morning and eight hundred good little S. T. C. girls are still sleeping, though they've been in bed since their hall presidents called lights out at 10:30.

All's quiet on the Western Front, and all through the building for that matter. Then, suddenly the villian creeps up (in the form of the 7:30 bell) and eight hundred alert little faces peep expectantly from the covers, each girl thrilled by the anticipation of another thrilling day at S. T. C.

Eight hundred energetic damsels jump from their beds, like so many shots from a gun.

Every girl dresses quickly and thoroughly, and rushes down to a delicious breakfast, being led by the delightful aromas that assail their nostrils.

After consuming a moderate breakfast, the subject of this—go to their rooms to prepare for classes with the same great anticipation they had for breakfast. For every class holds in store for their an hour of excitement, wonder and awe.

After a delightful day, packed with lively doings, these girls hasten to their rooms, bring out busy signs and work studiously on tomorrow's assignments.

At the regular hour, ten-thirty, the respective hall presidents call "lights out" and these wonderful specimens of the modern world jump into bed and dream sweet dreams of what the morrow holds in store for them.

Explanation"

In the North folks would say this was a fit, in the South, they'd call it an untruth, but in S. T. C. we'd call it a —— well draw your own conclusions.

Eleanor Watts Attends Hop at Naval Academy

Will it never cease—this constant going? Dances, dates, boxing matches, parents, home and many other unknown reasons never fail to lure the girls away from the college. These factors combined caused nearly 400 girls to leave for a week-end elsewhere.

As usual there were many going to Richmond. They were: Margaret Black, Virginia Winston Smith, Mable Burton, Virginia Vose, Martha Holloway, Ethel Carlson, Jane Hardy, and Jack Johnson.

Frances Maxey attended the dances at Chapel Hill.

Eleanor Watts spent the week-end in Annapolis, Md.

Those visiting in Roanoke were Dot Buckland, Nancy Gray, Marguerite Blackwell, Lorena Moomaw, Theresa Graff, Charlotte Minton, and Jean Taylor.

"Ginna" and Chlotilde Jarman had as their guests for the week-end Sue Owen and Jenny Carroll.

Mary Carr Motz stayed with friends in Yanceyville, N. C.

Elizabeth Glasgow visited her mother in the University of Virginia hospital.

Emily Hoskins went to her home in Lynchburg accompanied by Alpha Lee Garnett.

Elizabeth Wilkinson is back in school after having to stay at home several weeks because of a broken ankle.

Judith Marshall and Eleanor Pearce spent the week-end in Charlottesville. Marjorie Wicks also went to Charlottesville. She attended the boxing matches at the University of Virginia.

Lois Powell was the guest of Nan Armistead at her home in South Hill.

"Gee-gee" Doughty visited relatives in Kenbridge.

Sue Eastham, Betty von Gemmingen, and "Sistee" Stringfellow motored to Culpeper.

Girls going home included Dudley and Louise Allen, Virginia Allen, Frankie Bolton, Kitty Brooks, Edna Bolick, Clara Bain, Lucy Baskerville, Nora Jones, Sadie Haskins, Elizabeth Prince, Mary Harrison Vaughan, Sara Melba Beale, Kitty Carlton, Eloise Gwaltney, Pasty Smith, Genevieve Moody, Carter Belle Munt, Kathrine Harrison, Lenoir Hubbard and Pattie Bounds.

A thing of beauty is a joy forever.
But the joy is rapidly gone,
When I see you, my beautiful thing,
Without your makeup on.

Fancy Dress Ball Draws Girls To Lexington

Several S. T. C. girls attended the dances at Washington and Lee last week-end. They were Lula Windham, Irma Carpenter, Ruth Carney, Susan Lane, Helen Watts and Pattie Jeffries.

The girls attended four dances: Thursday night, the Junior prom; Friday night the fancy dress ball; Saturday afternoon the Phi Kappa Sigma dansant, and Saturday night the O. D. K. formal.

Fancy dress ball was the high spot of the week-end. The theme was that of a ball given by the governor of South Carolina just before the Civil War.

One end of the gym was fixed to represent the porch of the governor's mansion. The leader, Will Rogers and his partner Margaret Woods, of Sweetbriar, entered here and received their guests in the ball room, which was decorated as a garden. Gates were at the opposite end of the gym where the footmen admitted the guests who were announced as the characters they portrayed. After the guests had arrived there was a Virginia Reel. Jan Garber played for the dances. Favors for the girls in the figure were manicuring sets. Lula Windham was in the figure at the Junior Prom.

Fleishman's Yeast Aids Pimple Faced Sara To Win Popularity and Fame

Poor pimple faced Sara was never invited anywhere. The gang came by to get her for the house-party—she wasn't going. They knew why—but who would tell her about Fleishman's Yeast—? Johnny would tell her cause he was drunk—sure Johnny. And so he did—it was too good to be true but she'd try it!

Later the set takes Sara to the house party only to have the other boys monopolize her—because she is a different girl — entrancing without her pimples—and can she sing. Fleishman's Yeast has saved Sara.

Sonny is happy at play and mother content with reading—the joys are there until—daddy comes home with ole man coffee nerves and the glooms. He stumbles over the foot stool—grabs the paper from Sonny—poor frightened kid runs out of the room. "Why isn't supper ready?" nothing ever suits him—ole man coffee nerves is always on his trail. Until mother brings him a cup of Sanka! The joys beat the glooms up—"Curses! failed again!" says Mr. Coffee Nerves. The joys dance in triumph and daddy tells Sonny a story—three cheers for Sanka it's saved a happy home.

It's night. Daddy's tossing in the bed. "I can't sleep." Mother gets up and fixes the covers—the baby begins to yell—What to do? What to do? Poor mother rocks the yelling baby but he won't go to sleep—daddy keeps tossing and fretting. Then mother gets an idea—the Ovaltine. She makes baby drink some and before she can cross the room to daddy, baby is asleep—and before she can get her glass daddy is snoring too. The next morning they awake so rested that they jump from the bed singing and dancing. They wake baby who has gained at least a hundred pounds during the night. Fine stuff—this ovaltine!

She always went to the dances with little brother and he was stuck for the evening. Even her best friends wouldn't tell her! But brother did—he presented her with a big bottle of Listerine—and presto! She became Miss Popularity winning favor with the boys even trucking Brownie. You'll bet she'll never be without Listerine!

Vera Ebel Is Sponsor for U. of R. Dances

Several S .T. C. Girls Attend Set

Vera Ebel, president of the Junior C'ass was one of the sponsers for the annual midwinter set of dances held at the University of Richmond January 28 and 29. Mr. J. Thomas Johnson of Richmond was her escort, Margaret Carpenter of Norfolk, Helene Miller of Richmond, and Mary Ellen Fortice were the other sponsors. These girls were presented with lockets from Epsilon Tau Epsilon, interfraternity council.

The dances were held in Millhiser gym which was decorated in red and blue, the school colors. Ray Keating and his orchestra played for the Friday night dance and Hob Williams played for the tea dance and the Saturday night dance.

Among the S. T. C. girls who attended the dance were Betty Butterworth, Margaret Britton, Boonie Stephenson, Frances Dickinson and Virginia Agee.

Elizabeth Berryman Is Instructing Class In Etiquette

Elizabeth Berryman, Junior, is to instruct a hostess course in general etiquette to the girl scouts of the Farmville High school troop. The course will last four weeks and will culminate in a tea and formal reception given by the scouts for their mothers.

Table manners, written invitations, letters of acceptance, "bread and butter letters," table decorations, favors and place cards, planning a formal dinner, formal and informal luncheons, teas and parties will be studied. Miss Berryman hopes to develop in her pupils the poise and confidence of a perfect hostess.

Dr. J. F. Williamson Presents His Westminster Choir

Compositions Are Written by Americans

The Westminster Chorus, directed by John Finley Williamson, presented a program of compositions by American composers on Saturday night, February 5.

The Chorus comes from the Westminster Choir school in Princeton, New Jersey and is making a concert tour. It is made up of fourteen boys and seventeen girls, all of college age.

The program began with a group of sacred songs, followed by a powerful number extolling the conquest of man and his exaltation, called "songs of conquest".

The next group contained four songs which were well known, and were probably more applauded and praised than any group.

The "Choral Symphony" by Roy Harris was followed by a group of American folk-songs.

The closing encore was a benediction dedicated to former members of the chorus, who, if they are present in the audience always stand.

Dr. John Finley Williamson, director of the Westminster Chorus.

Choir Will Give Sacred Music Program Sunday

The College choir, a capella and Chorul Club will give a musical program in the Methodist Church Sunday evening, Feb. 13. Soloists will be Miss Irene Leake, soprano; Miss Frances Steed; and a quartette composed of Misses Annette Roberts, soprano; Bruce Crowell, second soprano; Frankie Bryan, first alto; and Virginia Agee, second alto; and the combined choirs of 120 voices singing the "Holy City".

In place of the sermon by the pastor, Miss Juanita Callis will give a talk on "Music in Religious Worship." Miss Callis is one of the leading debaters at State Teachers College, and under the direction of Dr. Walmsley has gained a reputation as a public speaker. This program should prove interesting to all music lovers.

Alfred H. Strick, head of the music department, will direct the program and preside at the organ.

A. C. E. Sponsors Musical Program Of Primary Grades

Parents and friends of the performers and A. C. E. members filled the small auditorium to capacity on last Thursday night, February 3, to witness the music program sponsored by the Association of Childhood Education.

Kitty Jamison was chairman of the program which was a display of the musical talent of the primary grades of the campus training school.

"Growing Music Interests of Children" was the title of a talk delivered by Ervin Mae Hamilton. Following that each teacher told of the music work of her particular grade before the pupils performed.

Since rhythm work plays a large part in the kindergarten, these children danced to varied rhythmical tunes. Pattie Jeffries directed the Kindergarten music First grade, under the direction of Elvira Ligon, presented several songs. Jacqueline Johnson was the teacher of the second grade songs. Third grade, Mary Joyner Cox teacher, presented a character song. Fourth grade singing was led by Charlotte Morton.

Miss Mary Talks To Student Body On Consideration

Miss Mary White Cox, head of the home, talked to the student body at the regular meeting on Monday, February 7. She asked that girls be prompt in going to classes and coming to the dining hall. She also asked students not to wear scarfs around their heads to meals and down town. She reminded us to be more considerate of others in work around school. "The influence you exert unconsciously determines your personality," she stated.

Mary Harrison Vaughan corrected an error concerning the selection of the editors and business managers of the Virginian, the Rotunda and Farmville Quarterly Review. These girls will be selected by a committee composed of the outgoing editors, the advisors of the publications and a representative from the student body which is approved by the students.

The student body voted that in the election of the major officers for the coming year, the girls should be listed for the office in that field in which they had done their most outstanding work. This plan will be carried out in the major elections in March.

Ruth Phelps urged everyone to come to the basketball game to be played on Wednesday night, February 14, between members of the student council and Y. W. C. A. The admission to the game is ten cents. The proceeds will go toward the installation of the loud speaker in the dining hall.

Elizabeth Morris requested that girls be more careful to observe busy signs and to be on their honor to report any person breaking them. She also asked girls not to give long lists of names to be read in the dining hall, but to leave them in the home office so that the maid could put them at the various tables.

Miss Moran Will Be Guest Speaker At Lawrenceville

Miss Grace Moran of the geography department will be the guest speaker at the Brunswick county meeting of teachers at Lawrenceville this week-end. Miss Moran will speak on "Organization of the Subject Matter to Meet the Needs of the New Curriculum."

This is the third talk Miss Moran has made this school session. In October she spoke at Harrisonburg and in December she spoke at Hopewell. At both of these meetings she spoke on the "Modern Trends in Geography."

Mary H. Vaughan Is Selected Senior Class Historian

Butterworth, Agee Are Giftorians

Mary Harrison Vaughan was elected Historian of the Class of '38 at its meeting on Tuesday night. Betty Butterworth and Virginia Agee were elected Class Giftorians at this time.

The class history and the giftatory are the two speeches that are given at class day exercises. The history is also published in the annual.

Mary Harrison is editor of The Rotunda. Last year she was theme chairman of May Day and for two years she was editor of the Farmville Quarterly Review. Mary Harrison is a charter member of Beore Eh Thorn and is a member of Alpha Kappa Gamma. She was a member of Alpha Phi Sigma. She is a member of Sigma Sigma Sigma, social sorority and the Cotillion Club.

Betty Butterworth has worked on the class productions and on the class sings for the four years she has been here at school. Her sophomore year in college she worked on the class day committee. Betty is a member of Sigma Sigma Sigma, social sorority, and the Cotillion Club.

Virginia Agee has been very active in the Dramatic Club having taken the lead in many of the plays. She has directed many of the class productions and sings. "Ginny" is vice-president of the Class of '38 and secretary of the House Council. She is a member of Alpha Kappa Gamma, Mu Omega, social sorority, and the Cotillion Club.

Dr. G. W. Jeffers Represents S. T. C. At Nashville

Dr. G. W. Jeffers of the biology department represented Farmville State Teachers College at the inauguration of Chancellor Dr. Cliver Carmichael of Vanderbilt College and President S. C. Garrison of George Peabody College in Nashville, Tenn., last week.

There were two or three hundred college representatives dressed in colorful robes. The oldest college representative led the march. After three days of educational conferences Dr. Jeffers returned to Farmville.

"Who Stole Bozo & Bozanne?" Pleads Two Of Our Seniors

"Who shot Cock Robin?" But that's an old refrain, for the newest plaint is "Who stole Bozo and Bozanne."

Bozo and Bozanne were two lovely young dog-fish who once frolicked in high glee in their native haunts. For many years they swam happily about like all other little fishes. Came the sad day when two men a-fishing went, with their little hook and lines, and that was the end of the lives of Bozo and Bozanne.

The rest of our story is concerned with the much more interesting phase of their existence—the post-mortem era. Ah, were they but to see the interesting things which were yet to happen to them. Had they but lived to witness their tragic doom.

With a little formaldehyde, Bozo and Bozanne maintained an extremely life-like appearance, and it was thus that they made their debut at S. T. C.

It was on January fourth, to be exact, that Bozo and Bozanne first entered the lives of Mary Harrison Vaughan and Mary Harvey. It was, in fact, from Bozo and Bozanne that Mary and Mary Harrison learned about dog-fish. In the interest of biological research, these two enthusiastic lab students put weeks of untiring labor on them—to learn about the two little fishes and how they grew.

But Mary Harrison and Mary are, after all, only human, and who could resist Bozo and Bozanne. Not they. So a genuine affection grew up on the part of the researchers which was rewarded by the fact that Bozo and Bozanne were two of the most satisfactory fish ever to enter a biology lab.

Came the sad day. Mary and Mary Harrison tripped gaily to lab, anticipating with high glee their coming rendezvous with Bozo and Bozanne. Their work was nearing an end. All had been drawn but the nervous system. Soon, Bozo and Bozanne could be consigned to their final resting-place. But first there was that little bit of work to be done. So they hurried in and ran over to get Bozo and Bozanne.

Their joyful countenances of a moment before were replaced by

Honor Fraternity Holds Open Forum On Anti-Lynching Bill

Pi Gamma Mu, the national honor fraternity for Social Science, conducted an open discussion in the Student Building lounge on Tuesday night, February 8, on the Anti-Lynching Bill.

The case for the Anti-Lynching Bill was presented by Florence Bress, who not only had her ideas on the subject, but also the different arguments that have been upheld by such supporters of the bill as Senators Wagner and Van Nuys. Pattie Alston Bounds had the different arguments against the proposed bill as have been given by Senators Glass, Russell and Carnery. Nora Jones and Dudley Allen led the discussions, following the talks, by asking questions on the bill.

This discussion marks the first in a series of programs that Pi Gamma Mu will conduct this year on bills that are before our national government.

February 15 Has Been Announced as Annual Deadline

"It's going to be up to par if not even better than ever before. It's democratic, and everybody is taken care of," declared Mr. McCorkle, reminding the student body to subscribe to the Virginian as soon as possible. He then announced that February 15 will be the very latest date on which an order for annual will be accepted.

The total costs of printing the Virginian is usually about $2,000, besides miscellaneous expenses. Although at this time the number of annuals sold is somewhat less than the sales at this time last year, the staff is, according to Mr. McCorkle, "running on faith." About ninety-five per cent of the plates are ready and waiting to be printed, all paid for with the exception of $15.

So, as Mr. McCorkle concluded, "Help your school, help the annual staff, and help yourself by putting in your subscription by February 15."

Ruth Montgomery, editor of the annual, is busy getting literary work lined up. All class and organization write-ups are being written. The annual should go to press earlier than usual so it is most important, states the editor, that the subscription contest be closed at once.

S. T. C. Students Will Attend Debate Convention

Meeting Will Be In Kansas

"Farmville will be represented by Pattie Bounds, Lorana Moomaw and Nora Jones at Pi Kappa Delta convention in Topeka, Kansas", announced Dr. Walmsley at a meeting of the Debate Club on Wednesday afternoon, February 9.

The Pi Kappa Delta convention will be held in Topeka from April 17 to 22. This year there will be a student congress as well as debate and oratorical contests. Pattie Bounds will be Virginia's Alpha delegate to the congress and will be a member of the House of Representatives. Lorana Moomaw and Nora Jones will represent S. T. C. in the debate contests and debate both sides of the National Pi Kappa Delta question: Resloved: That the National Labor Relations Board should be Empowered to Enforce Arbitration in all Industrial Disputes.

As this Pi Kappa Delta convention is one of the largest student congresses ever attempted, delegates are expected from all corners of the United States. Many senators and congressmen, as well as several state governors will also attend the session.

Philosophy Class Installs Donkey Club Saturday

Both faculty and student members of S. T. C. who were philosophical in thought expressed their thoughts with braying as they became members of the Donkey Club in the rec on Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock. This club was organized by Miss Jennie Wilson in summer school two years ago for girls interested in fun as well as philosophy. Miss Margaret Turpin of Lynchburg presided over the initiation service, assisted by Miss Ruth Phillips of Petersburg. Other members of the summer school club present were Virginia Wilson, Blanche Doswell, Loulie Shore, Rose Smith, Mabel Barrett and Hilda Harvey. After the initiation a short business meeting was held at which the following officers were elected: president, Deane Saunders; vice-president, Elizabeth Butler; secretary-treasurer, Alma Ricketts. The meeting concluded with a banquet held in the tea room at which Miss Turpin again presided. Short talks were made by Dr. Jarman, Dr. Wynne, Mr. McCorkle, Deane Saunders, Elizabeth Morris and Madeline McGlothlin.

The members of the Donkey Club in school include Dr. Jarman, Mr. McCorkle, Mr. Holton, Dr. Wynne, Mr. Coyner, Mr. Bell, Martha Bailey, Katherine Jamison, Bessie Smith, Elizabeth Watterson, Alma Ricketts, Madeline McGlothlin, Deane Saunders Elizabeth Morris, Evelyn Hastings, Bruce Crowell, Mary Hubard, Ethel Burgess, Janie Lee Young, Ruth

S. T. C. and H.-S. C. Hold Practice Debate

Hampden-Sydney will debate Farmville on Thursday night, February 10, at eight o'clock in a dual practice debate.

Mary Rice and Frances Holloway will debate on the affirmative side of the question against a Hampden-Sydney negative team which has not been announced.

Nora Jones and Sudie Yager will uphold the negative side against Bert Gartrell and Malcolm Campbell. The subject for debate is the national Pi Kappa Delta question for 1937-38.

President Declares Farmville Will Keep Present Name If Possible

Bill Before State Legislature Is Opposed

"Farmville State Teachers College will not change its name unless conditions make it necessary," answered Dr. Jarman when questioned concerning the bill about changing the names of the four state teacher's colleges which is before the legislature.

Dr. Jarman feels that changing the name of the college may place the emphasis on liberal art education rather than teacher training. A few years ago the State Board of Education allowed the four state teachers colleges to offer a liberal arts course leading to the B. A. degree. They offered this course so that girls of moderate means who wished to take the liberal arts course could do so by attending any one of these college which still kept teaching as their outstanding purpose.

Fredericksburg State Teachers College was the first to ask that its name be changed to that of Mary Washington College. Harrisonburg State Teachers College then asked to change its name to Madison College. If the bill passes, these two colleges will become Mary Washington and Madison College respectively and the other two will have the privilege of changing their names subject to the approval of the State Board of Education.

Exchange Debate To Be Held With Lynchburg College

Nora Jones and Sudie Yager, Farmville's varsity negative team, will leave here Saturday, February 12, for Lynchburg; where they will debate with the Lynchburg College varsity affirmative team. At 8 o'clock Saturday, February 12, Frances Holloway and Mary Rice representing Farmville on the affirmative side will debate a negative team from Lynchburg College in the little auditorium at Farmville.

The subject for debate is the national Pi Kappa Delta question, Resolved: That the National Labor Relations Board Should Be in Power to Enforce Arbitration in all Industrial Disputes. This subject, which is the basis for most inter-collegiate debates this year, is one that is considered vital to the welfare of our country, and one on which much is now being written in the newspapers and magazines of the country.

Nora Jones, a senior, has been on the Farmville debating squad for her four years in college here and has been recognized by Pi Kappa Delta for her debating ability. Although Sudie Yager has been on the debate squad for only one year, she was rated highly at Winthrop College in Rock Hill, when she attended the Dixie Invitational Tournament there in December. Frances Holloway and Mary Rice made the debate club in the fall and the debate with Lynchburg College will mark the beginning of their intercollegiate debating.

Art Fraternity Issues Bids To Smith and Whitley

Gamma Psi, honorary fraternity for art, wishes to announce two new members. They are Perry Smith and Eloise Whitley.

The three-fold purpose of this organization is to encourage work in all phases of art, to furnish a forum for the discussion of all matters pertaining to art, and to honor artistic ability in the school.

Farmville Founded As Teachers College, Why Change Now?

In the state legislature, there is bill for the changing of the names of state teachers colleges to omit the "teachers" in the titles. Two of the Virginia state teachers colleges have already voted to change their names if the legislature agrees. Dr. Jarman opposed this proposal although he declared Farmville would change her name if the other colleges changed theirs.

This paper heartily approves of Dr. Jarman's standing on this issue. This is a teachers college supported by the state. It has been an institution of dignity and good repute since its founding fifty-four years ago. Farmville State Teachers College has become a worthy name of a worthy college. No other name could mean so much to alumnae and to girls planning to attend college.

Teaching has always been called the noblest profession a woman may enter. A school of law is called a school of law. Doctors are trained in a medical school and preachers in a theological seminaries! Why should we feel ashamed to be called a teachers college if we are not ashamed of being a part of the teaching profession? We should be so proud of our profession that we'd want to go to a special college for our special job.

If we change our name and remain a college of little expense, where will we be in comparison with such colleges as Sweetbriar and Hollins? Then we will be merely a second rate liberal arts college with the teaching profession stuck far in the background—a hang-out for girls who want a liberal education for little money. In other words with the loss of our main purpose as signified in our names, we will lose our identity.

Madame Curie's Life Related in Novel Written by Daughter

Reading like a novel, and yet far more fascinating than most novels dare to be is the story of "Madame Curie" as told by her daughter, Eve.

Marie Sklodowska was one in a family of many children. Her father, who encouraged her in her study of science, was a professor of physics in Warsaw. Her mother, who was an invalid, died when Marie was very young, giving her her first experience with grief. Shy and very quiet by nature Marie had an eagerness for scientific knowledge that caused her to endure many hardships. Because her family was so poor, Marie had to work hard in order to get the money to send herself to college in Paris. Here she met and married Pierre Curie, and they had no money, the young couple spent their honeymoon touring the country on bicycles. After Pierre had gotten a position as professor of physics in one of the municipal schools, the Curies started experimenting in a small laboratory set up in one of the school rooms. Here Marie spent most of her time stirring huge caldrons o boiling liquid. Between stirs she found time to care for her baby girl and to fix the three of them something to eat. Finally from her boiling pots, Marie and her husband got the precious element radium. After Pierre's death in 1906 Marie carried on the work of aiding humanity.

Here is a biography that you will be proud to say you have read, and that you will read again and again. I cannot urge you enough to read this story of a great but modest woman who lived, worked, and died that others might live.

Some like books on travel and some like to read biography. In Gunbar Gunnarsoon's autobiographical story of Iceland, "Ships in the Sky", we find both of these qualities.

The story is told by a small boy, Uggi Greipsson, who fears and loves his father. When his father becomes too stern, Uggi runs to his mother for comfort. He spends many happy summer days in the pasture learning to swear oaths with the shepherd boy. But the damp, drear winter days come and he must stay indoors. On these days Uggi loves best to sit at his Grandpa's knee and hear tales of the Norsemen. Trolls and gnomes seem to creep into the room as Grandpa talks, and little Uggi looks around to see if all is well. Often he is told to look for the ships in the sky, but he never sees them because God always puts the clouds in front of them as they sail past the earth.

Gunnarsoon takes us to Iceland in this book and when we finish reading we wonder how we came home so quickly. Then sighing, we resolve to go back tomorrow to see if it is still there.

OPEN FORUM

To the Editor:

As a member of the Senior Class, I have a just protest to make. We, as Seniors, are entitled to certain privileges; we know that they are few and far between, but at the same time we like to feel that they are ours exclusively.

We are supposed to have full rights to the Senior parlor—yet underclassmen (and especially the Freshmen) deem it fitting and proper to usurp that place for the entertainment of their dates. It is most aggravating that these underclassmen have no respect for Seniority.

Speaking for more than a few members of the Senior Class, we would remind the Rats that their dating place is in the "rec"—the place we dated when we were Freshmen.

Signed—A Senior

A REPLY

Last week a student expressed the desire that hall presidents observe busy signs. May I remind that student that she also is forgetting her honor when she does not report any girl who breaks her busy sign rule. She, too, is negligent and deserves little consideration.

Y. W. C. A. States Purposes of Two Committees

The Y. W. C. A. in a series of articles wil try to explain the functions of the different committees working on the Y. W. board.

The Publicity Committee of the Y. W. C. A. tries to keep the students informed as to what the Y. W. C. A. is doing through its special committees, such as the Prayers committee and the World Fellowship committee. At the beginning of each quarter it makes the finding of second-hand books easier by cataloguing the ads in so far as it is possible, under their respective subjects.

This committee tries to keep a poem posted which will be interesting and inspirational to those who stop to read it. It hopes that "a poem a day will keep the blues away."

The Publicity Committee would like the cooperation of the students in keeping the bulletin boards neat. This would make publicity much more effective.

Chairman: Frances Thomas

You've seen the green poster on the Y. W. bulletin board on weekends, announcing church services and special Sunday events? That is part of the work of the Church Cooperative Committee of the Y. W. C. A. This committee, made up of representatives from each of the four churches, fosters cooperation, and acts as a link between the town churches and the college. It attempts to stimulate church attendance, and to clear and apply suggestions made by both students and ministers. The latter meet with the committee at appointed times, about once a month.

Early in the year the committee sends cards to Freshmen and new girls welcoming them to the Farmville churches, and visits all new girls during the first week of school, extending to them a personal invitation to the town churches.

Give the committee any suggestions about church-college work you may have. They'll be most welcome. And watch the green poster on week-ends.

Chairman: Norvelle Montague

"Let Knowledge Come Already Digested" Pleads Lyda Huff

Lyda Huff has written a great many poems, some of which are soon to be published.

The following verses are characteristic of Miss Huff's poems which express a great deal of truth seasoned with a grain of wit.

I yearn to know how to fill every nook
With brains, and yet I won't read a book.
I catch at crumbs that fall from brains
Who have not feared to take the pains
Of the long hard way to wisdom's fane.
The midnight candle, the hard cold floor.
I learn from him who strains his eyes
Microscopic print that I despise.
I'd like to know more about Socrates
And the barrel home of Diogenes.
Spinoza's fate is the envy of me.
Who delve so scarce in philosophy.
I know naught of Bryon or his perfect verse.
Naught save that Byron ended up in a hearse.
And still I aspire. I pray to the skies
That someday I'll be infinitely wise.
For oh! I love knowledge. I'm so interested,
But, please dear God,
Let it come predigested.

With Miss Jeter as first mate.
First Mary Virginia who does her duty
And Isabel who is our beauty.
Next Jennie Belle is so sweet
And Caroline quite petit.
Will Scott is our riot,
But Mabel is quite quiet.
Agee is first rate
But Ruth is nearly always late.
Anne is always in a dream
But Edna leads our team.
Frances Thomas does good work.
Frances Kent's one not to shirk.
Then Eugenia with agile grace
And Annie Watson with baby face.
And last of all these — no not saints
Is little Fay so quaint.
It must be said, we're a jolly crew
Even tho' we're always in an awful stew.

Rotunda Reverberations

By Liz Carroll

The Pan-Hellenic dance was a surprising success! Most girls paid off their obligations at the various colleges other than Hampden-Sydney . . . and then there were the Choir lads who caused momentary heart throbs.

Hampden-Sydney reports that the PiKA dances were the best set of the year. Bill Wing, that very capable columnist who signs himself the Rounder, had Sweet Briar trouble over the week-end. He invited a young damsel from this institution and told her to bring the school with her. Since Sweet Briar is the supreme height to which most Joe Collegiates aspire, he must have been flattered by his marvelous achievement . . . for she not only came herself . . . but brought four friends with her!

A recent visitor to our school has given this thumbnail description of Mr. Bell, an instructor of philosophy: "A sputtering candle on a book of Plato."

"How to Land a Man" . . . In one easy lesson!! Those interested in such a course should apply to Eugenia Jolly!! Even strangers passing through town succumb to her devastating charm. A handsome Yankee . . . en route to Florida . . . stopped at the Weyanoke the other night and was so overcome by our southern hospitality as exemplified by Miss Jolly that he has practically caused chaos in the U. S. Postal System.

Ginny Agee, our campus Katherine Cornell, is again the victim of Cupid's arrows! This time the object of her undying affection is a young Viking from the University of Richmond. In the wake of the gridiron hero we wonder if my lord of Bothwell will remain in the arena?

Among Hampden-Sydney woman haters Fred Reed seems to be the most vehement! This amusing and otherwise intelligent young synic voices the following opinion regarding the fairer sex . . . "All women are nil . . . And of all nil women those at S. T. C. are the most nil . . . And among the most nil of all nil women the blondes are the most nil!

According to Ginna Jarman the eternal tri-angle situation is some fun as long as you're just an innocent by-stander but when you become the party of the third part the humor diminishes.

It seems that Mable Burton was issued a warrant by Fred Beck for slandering his and his fair lady love's name in "Sister Pat" but we hear that he had the tables turned on him. When Sheriff Clark called for Fred 'tis said that you could hear his knees knock for miles around.

Things we'd like to know:

1. What is a floor committee for? If anyone would like to know Abe Daniels would be more than delighted to answer all questions.

2. Whose no-break dance was "In the Still of the Night"?

3. Why Sara Keesee and Kitty Brooks are in ecstacies over this week-end? What a charm Annapolis and uniforms do have! You'd better watch out—Dick and John!

4. Why Fred Beck is making down payments on a V. M. I. uniform?

5. Where Jimmie Christian's picture and fraternity pin are NOW?

GLEANINGS

By

Virginia L. Agee

The eyes of the world are turned anxiously and interestingly toward the scuffle between nations as to just who will reign as "queen of the seas", and, incidentally, the air, also. To the eyes of the casual observer it seems as if the all-powerful nations are at each others throats in the effort to outdo each other.

So far, the U. S. A. leads the list in having more battleships and planes ready for immediate use than any of the others; Great Britain is second in number; but she leads in tonnage; Japan ranks third, and France follows with a close fourth.

For years, Great Britain has gone down in history as possessing the strongest, most efficient fleet of ships in the world. She has retained the coveted "queen of the high seas," and still does so if bulk has anything to do with it. She is far ahead in that factor even now, than the United States who leads in number.

The building and perfecting of many men-o'-war and flying demons of death and destruction is one of the greatest industries in the world at the present time. Every ship-building, boat-launching town in the world resounds with the clang of metal on metal and the voices of many men hard at work fashioning huge sleek battleships. The air stations are humming with newly-developed ideas of motors for planes; with tryouts of the finished product.

Every nation of the world is busy corresponding with other nations—trying desperately to form cliques and mutual understandings and protective meaures. The major war departments are filled with papers and manuscripts bearing detailed accounts of the tactics and maneuvers of sea, land, and air forces.

Food for thought—?

Il Duce is hard at work training his stalwart Italians the famed military goose-step of the old German regime. He is very anxious to have it down to perfection when Herr Hiter sojourns to Italy—unofficially (?) of course. Great Britain is righteously indignant over the sinking of one of her battleships in the Mediterranean by Spanish Insurgent forces. It is to be expected, naturally, that there will be most profuse apologies—and the incident will be forgiven and dismissed! It has happened before and will probably turn into a frequent occurrence before the wrinkles of world affairs are finally ironed out—at any rate, smoother than they are at present. Japan still holds wholesale slaughter-parties of the Chinese, in spite of the fact that China has been for two and a half weeks in her New Year—the year of the lion. She has left behind the year of the os; she declares that in this, the new year, her men shall have a change of heart and fight with a vigor to be likened to that of the lion. Strangely enough, Japan is also in the year of the lion, according to the Japanese Zodiac. We wonder which lion will prove most ferocious—!!

One cannot read much about the history of the World War without coming across the name of the great woman spy, Mati Hari, the most ruthless operator of the sort ever known—and, the most efficient.

Recently, in London, charges were filed against a citizen by a woman who declared he was betraying his country by selling armament plans, etc. She was a trim, petit woman, a spy in the English Secret Service, and she had worked with his man for three years—gathering scraps of evidence, bit by bit, until her proof was strong enough to file charges against him. Little by little she had worked her way into his complete confidence—over the period of three years.

Isn't it strange and hard to realize that a man would lose enough of his pride, of his sense of honor as a gentleman and a citizen to betray the most vital secrets of his country?

Green and White Triumph In Inter-Class Basketball Games

Freshmen Win Over Seniors and Sophs

After trouncing the Sophomores in an easy victory of 34-8 two days before, the Freshmen triumphed on last Friday, February 4, to win the college class basketball championship over the Seniors who had eliminated the Juniors by a score of 18-14 on Thursday.

Outplaying the Seniors throughout the game, the green and white scored a few seconds after the starting whistle when Hubbard, the Freshman captain, at forward position dropped a goal. With the quick and accurate passwork of the entire team, Edmundson was ever alert to receive the ball and make her basket. At the end of the first quarter, green and white had a start of 10-0 over their opponent.

Freshmen captured two more goals in the second quarter; Chambers succeeded in scoring for the Seniors to bring the score to 16-2 at the half.

With the opposing team far in advance, the Seniors fought hard, scoring six points to two points gained by the Freshmen in the third round. The last quarter consisted of similar plays, the agile Freshmen proving a bit too swift and sure for their elders and bringing in six more points to two additional points of the red and white Senior team. The final score was 24-10 for the Freshmen over the Seniors.

Line up:

Seniors	Freshmen
R. Chambers	H. Hubbard, Capt.
J. Gilliam	M. S. Edmonson
R. Phelps	E. Hillsman
M. Ames	R. Courter
E. Gilliam, Capt.	J. Smith
J. McConaughy	Va. Crute

Jimmy Braddock, the man who came back from nowhere to win the world heavyweight championship and a lot of cash money he needed very badly, has at last given in to his wife and announced that he will retire. He is all through with fighting. Jimmy has been fighting since 1926, he admits to thirty-two and he proved he is still a pretty good man with his dukes when he outpointed Tommy Farr. All that being admitted, he announced, "I have spent fifteen years in the game and in fairness to everyone, including my wife and children, I believe it is time for me to withdraw." After handing out thanks to his "manager and friend", Joe Gould, the fans, boxing officials and newspapermen, Braddock went on to explain that he would continue his association with Gould in a new business venture. It is rumored that he may follow in the footsteps of ex-champion, Jack Dempsey, and open a restaurant.

Eleanor Holm, two year old niece and namesake of the champion swimmer, is starting her training early at Miami Beach, Florida. Her teacher is Lottie Schoemmell, the distance swimmer, who hopes to make another Holm champion of the child.

The University of Virginia has one undebatable answer to those who contend that college boxing is detrimental to participants in after life. The answer was recently presented to six thousand spectators at a recent match in the Memorial Gymnasium in Charlottesville. At the close of the freshman bouts and preceeding the varsity bouts twenty-seven excavalier ring stars stepped into the ring to be introduced to the audience. There wasn't a cauliflower ear in the house. There was no mark on any of them that might identify them with boxing. Instead they resembled what they really are—a group of successful business men. But there was one exception—all looked physically fit.

Professional football needs college football, says Coach George Halas, of the Chicago Bears. And here's why. "We need the men who come up with such fine training we don't have to spend two or three years getting them ready. So long as these colleges keep on with their football programs, it's just dandy for us. Pro football take the place of college football? Boy I hope not. We need college football."

It looks as though the popularity of post season football games is dying out. Princeton, Harvard, and Yale stopped playing post season games several years ago. Now the University of Pennsylvania has passed a new ruling forbidding post season games for the Panthers.

Bitsy Grant, the dynamic Atlantan, plans to skip the remainder of the Florida tennis circuit and return to his insurance business for the next few weeks. "It's getting to be just as hard work playing tennis now as working at home, with all these young stars making it tough to win matches" said Grant, who is ranked fourth nationally. Grant was upset in the semifinals of the recent Dixie meet at Tampa, Florida by Wayne Sabin of Hollywood, California, and eliminated last Friday in the Surf Club quarter-finals by eighteen year old Frank Kovacs of Oakland, California.

Robert Smith, twenty year old lightweight fighter from Richmond, Virginia asked for a jail sentence in Baltimore so he could train for his next fight. Magistrate Elmer H. Mille, considering a vagrancy charge against the boxer, gave him ten days in the city jail. Smith said he had fought only twice in several months. One fight was in Salisbury, for which he netted fourteen dollars after paying for treatments for his nose, but said he only received advice to "go home and put ice on it." The six-fifty went for food. "I thought if I could get in jail," he told the magistrate, "doctors would fix me up. I'd get good food and I'd be ready for more fights when I get out."

Bozo and Bozanne

those of blankest dismay and deepest bewilderment. Bozo and Bozanne were gone! Vanished! Utterly and completely! With frenzy and panic, the two Marys searched high and low—but to what avail. It was in vain. Bozo and Bozanne were gone—definitely.

Mary and Mary Harrison loved those little fish. They realize it—now that it is too late. Would you want to spoil their Senior year at college? How would you feel if someone stole your fish? Well, that's how they feel too.

Someone who thought they liked Bozo and Bozanne better than Mary and Mary Harrison did, but who now know they didn't, can complete the happiness of their last year at college.

WHO stole Bozo and Bozanne?

Ethel Gilliam, captain of the varsity basketball squad.

March 1 Is Deadline For Ending of Ping Pong Tourney

Twenty-four girls have signed to compete in the ping-pong tournament which is being sponsored by the A. A.

Working the tournament by the "ladder" method, each entree is given a number; she in turn may challenge any one or two girls above her number. The winner then changes places with the girl she beats and likewise challenges those numbers above hers; and so on 'til eliminations determine the champion. Each entry must play off within one week of the challenge or forfeit her chance.

Mable Burton, manager of minor sports, states that the tournament will end on March 1 and the girl who is at the top of the ladder will automatically receive the award.

Student Council and Y. W. Play Basketball

For the first time in the history of S. T. C. basketball, the Student Council and Y. W. C. A. will match their basketball abilities before the student body on next Wednesday night, February 16. Every member of each organization will play, excepting those on the varsity squad. The uniforms of the players have not been decided upon.

An admission of ten cents will be charged. The proceeds will go to the fund for installing the loud speaker in the dining hall.

Varsity Squad Leaves for Northern Trip

Team Meets Panzier And Notre Dame

The members of Farmville's varsity basketball squad will leave tomorrow morning, Feb. 10, for a northern trip to compete with two colleges, Notre Dame Woman's College in Baltimore, Maryland and Panzier College of Physical Education in East Orange, N. J.

Leaving Richmond by train Thursday morning, the squad will make their first stop at Baltimore for the game with Notre Dame on Thursday night. Friday morning will find them on the train to New York City where they will "sight-see" until Saturday afternoon. Hotel Gov. Clinton will be their New York residence. The game with Panzier College will be played on Saturday night. The team will return to school on Sunday night.

Those who made the trip are: Elizabeth Berryman, Jennie Carroll, Ruth Emma Chambers, Ellen Conyers, Ellen Gilliam, Sue Eastham, Chlotilde Jarman, Ruth Phelps, and Virginia Whitehead Smith.

Jennie Carroll Is Head of Inter-Class Swimming Meet

Jennie Carroll has been named chairman of the inter-color swimming meet to be held on Feb. 25. Contestants will compete by classes in swimming for form and skill in free style, back crawl, breast stroke, form swimming, and diving.

In accordance with the plan, leaders have been selected from among H2O club members to instruct each class in preparing for the meet. Norvelle Montague will instruct the Seniors, Ellen Conyers the Juniors, Marjorie Nimmo the Sophomores, and Sidney Yonce the Freshmen.

Hartwell Clark Furnishes Music At Dance Held Last Saturday

Pan-Hel Council Sponsors Dance

State Teachers College was the scene of a Pan-Hellenic dance Saturday night with Hartwell Clark and his Virginians furnishing the music.

The dance began at 9:30 o'clock. The advisors of each sorority stood in the receiving line in Student Building lounge with Dr. Jarman and Miss Mary. They were: Miss Mix, head of Pan-Hellenic; Miss Moran, Alpha Sigma Alpha, advisor; Miss Stubbs, Gamma Theta advisor; Miss Camper, Sigma Sigma Sigma advisor; Miss Jennings, Delta Theta Alpha advisor; Miss Wheeler, Mu Omega advisor; Miss Iler, Pi Kappa Sigma advisor; Miss Bedford, Alpha Sigma Tau advisor. The Pan-Hellenic organization sent corsages to each of the advisors.

The decorations in the gym carried out the spirit of Valentine Day. Red and white hearts covered the sides of the wall and streamers, carrying out the color scheme, ran from the center of the gym out to the sides. The pledges of the sororities composed the decorations committee, which was headed by Virginia Whitehead Smith.

During the course of the evening, each sorority had a no-break dance.

"I'm Getting Sentimental Over You" was played for Alpha Sigma Tau, "Sophisticated Lady" for the Sigmas, "Night and Day" for Mu Omega, "You're a Sweetheart" for Delta Theta Alphas, "Solitude" for the Pi Kaps, "Liebestraum" for the Alpha Sigma Alphas and "Time on My Hands" for the Gamma Thetas.

Seven Girls Receive Bids to English Honor Fraternity

Beore Eh Thorn, English honor society issued bids to seven girls Tuesday night. Those girls receiving invitations to join were: Laura Morris, Frances Pope, Mary Mahone, Mary Louise Stoutamire, Iva Cummings, Elizabeth Shipplet and Virginia Whitehead Smith.

Beore Eh Thorn was organized in 1935 when the students who were majoring in English and those who were interested in the subject felt a need for a society in which the study of English would be furthered.

One of the society's main purposes is to bring one distinguished speaker to the college every year. In 1936 they presented John Erskine as their first speaker. In 1937 they brought Lawrence Lee to our school. In 1938 Richard Halliburton was the guest speaker.

Beore Eh Thorn also takes a very active part in sponsoring the college magazine, "The Farmville Quarterly Review."

Gamma Theta Gives Pledges a Banquet

The Gamma Theta sorority entertained its pledges with a banquet at Longwood last Friday night. The tables were decorated in blue and white.

Dick Davies, head of the chapter, presided as toastmistress. Toasts were given by Virginia Whitehead Smith, Isabel Williamson, Martha Weichel, and Frances Hutchison.

Besides the active members Miss Mix, pan-hellenic adviser, and Miss Stubbs, chapter adviser were present. Alumnae who returned for the occasion were Mrs. Coyner, Mrs. Anne Peple Gills, Helen Fern Perdue, Jean McClure, Martha Glenn Davis, Anne Davis, Helen Cover and Martha Moore.

Julia Mae Ramey Attends Dances Held at Uni. of N. C.

There were not so many leaving the campus last week-end. This was most probably due to the fact that our own Pan-Hel dance proved more attractive.

Julia Mae Rainey motored to North Carolina last week-end where she attended dances at Duke University and University of North Carolina.

Mary Page Huff spent the week-end at her home in Christiansburg.

Mary Jane Joliff visited friends in Winchester.

Eleanor Watts, Catherine Cassell, Virginia Vose and Harriett Haskins spent Sunday in Richmond.

Among the S. T. C. girls going home for the week-end were Margaret Black, Jacqueline Beale, Jane Fowler, Lena Hale and Martha Meade Hardaway.

Kitty Roberts, Sudie Dunton, Mary Elizabeth Badger and Elizabeth Glasgow motored to Charlottesville Sunday.

Susan Lane and Virginia Doughty spent the week-end in Curdsville.

Helen Hoyer, Bernice Copley and Alice Gayle Ferguson visited in Kenbridge last week-end.

Last Sunday Will Scott, Kathleen McCann, Mary Elizabeth Petticrew, Helen Watts, Ann Easley and Mary Ann Willis motored to Lynchburg.

Alumnae returning were Bugg Byrd, Helen Fern Perdue, Martha Glenn Davis, Ann Davis, Jean McClure and Virginia Baker.

Our "Book of School Life" Incomplete Without a Copy of the 1938 Virginian

Hear ye! hear ye! come one, come all, last call for subscriptions to the 1938 "Virginian". February the fifteenth is the deadline, so all of you girls who haven't subscribed yet had better begin saving your pennies and have them ready by next Tuesday.

Just think what you will miss if you don't get an annual this year! You'll feel left out on that much-anticipated day when they arrive and everyone is impatiently waiting to get hers in a long line that stretches down the steps of the Science Building on out of the door and on, on up the walk. You'll be sorry you didn't subscribe when you see the happiness spelt on each girl's face as she marches away from the line triumphantly holding a pictorial and written history of one whole year's work and play at Farmville. Each one of you is a part of that book and helped make it, and should have a copy to enjoy now and to stow away for reminiscing later—that you may smile at the "old-fashioned" dress and the peculiar ways you are wearing your hair now. Maybe you may weep a little for the friends that have been separated from you and sigh for some of the good times you had back in 1938.

Oh, you say, I can get one next year, and I got one last year, so it won't be necessary to have one every year. But if you don't, you're leaving a gap in your four years of college life. None of us likes to read a book with a chapter torn out, and so it is with annuals. Each is a chapter in our "book of school life" and it would be incomplete if we didn't have an account for each year.

You might even say, "I can use Roomies". But it won't be like having one of your own, for you can't have it autographed, and that is an invaluable part of an annual. Then too, hedging in on someone else's property isn't playing fair.

So do without a few shows, a few coca-colas, a little candy, if needs be, and subscribe to your "Virginian"—it's worth it!

"Club Manhattan" Features Guest Speaker At Reopening

Returned by demand! It's here again! Bigger and better than ever before! Straight from the heart of good-time New York, the sophomores bring to you again—"Club Manhattan".

Anne Scott, master of ceremonies for the grand re-opening February 9 at 8 o'clock of the Club Manhattan, will really have song, dance, music and rhythm at her fingertips. Nothing of night club concern will be omitted this year. One will forget he is really under the roof of S. T. C. He will most probably go drifting out to the South Seas when Virginia Lee Pettis renders her lovely song.

There is nothing like good ole southern hospitality — Katherine Newman and Margaret Ethridge will really make you long for dem ole plantation days. Wait — one minute—you say you've heard? Yes, there's going to be a guest artist but this will be the surprise of the evening—no it isn't Charlie McCarthy—even better than that. The pride of the program is in the guest artist.

Tambourines, grass skirts, castinets, white ties, top hats and tails, chorus girls singing and dancing, the strains of a far away orchestra, but no farther than across the spacious dance floor, the rhumba, dancing between numbers of the regular program, and oh so many secrets that must be kept—is there anything else one could want in a night club? We have it.

Oh, I knew there was something else. The dance Lula Windham and Isabel Williamson do is quite the thing! Don't miss that! That beautiful number to which they dance so beautifully, is enough to bring forth sighs and longings for who knows. It will also be sung by six pretty girls, not ten. They are: Micou Sneed, Frances Pulley, Jane Hardy, Sara Keesee, Ruth Curtis Robeson and Cornelia Story.

Surely you've heard those announcements about the "Black and White Chorus". Each person has his own ideas as to what it will be, but if you want to see something out of the ordinary on the S. T. C. stage, you can't miss the "Black and White Chorus."

You certainly will want to take advantage of the re-opening of Club Manhattan, February 9, at eight o'clock in the "Rec." It's a relaxation from the humdrum of the day's classes—it's a trip to New York for only two bits! It's an opportunity, you must not let it slip!

Dr. J. E. Walmsley Represents S. T. C. In Richmond

Dr. J. E. Walmsley, head of the Social Science department, will represent Farmville at the Virginia Association of Colleges which will meet in Richmond on Friday and Saturday, February 11 and 12.

The association is made up of college officials, but as it will be impossible for Dr. Jarman to attend the meeting, Dr. Walmsley has been delegated to take his place.

The association, which meets to discuss general college problems in headed this year by Dr. Dave Wilson. On Friday the topic for discussion will be "N.Y.A. Work and Its Success". Saturday, the group will deal with problems of "Vocational Guidance." It is this last topic on which Dr. Walmsley will speak.

A. C. E. Issues Bids To Seventeen Girls

Association of Childhood Education, National organization for primary grade teachers, recently issued bids to girls. To be eligible for membership, one must have passed her quarter in practice teaching. Seventeen girls accepted bids and were initiated on last Thursday, February 3. Caroline Upshur, A. C. E. president, presided.

New A. C. E. members are Frances Alvis, Louise Campbell, Delha Chambliss, Marie Dix, Alice Gayle Ferguson, Margaret James, Pattie Jeffries, Agnes Jennings, Evelyn Kail, Julia Lyons, Nancy Moss, Frances Russow, Janelle Shelor, Virginia Tuck, Agnes Wagstaff, Montaine Warmack, and Mary Elibabeth Wilson.

Nothing makes one feel more lonesome and forlorn than the hearing of "Good evening, ladies and gentlemen" coming through a radio in one of our dormitories.

Plummer Presides Over Open Y. W. Cabinet Meeting

On Tuesday, February 1, the Y. W. C. A. held an open Cabinet meeting presided over by Isabel Plummer, due to the absence of Nan Seward.

At this meeting, delegates to conventions gave their reports.

Ruth Curtis Robeson gave a brief account of the convention she attended in Richmond on January 30.

Caroline Upshur reported on the convention she went, to as delegate in Atlanta. Colored people as well as white, were present and many of them held important positions in the Y. W. C. A.

Isabel Williamson and Miss Nichols attended the convention held at Miami University in Ohio. Isabel told of the meetings held during the day and Miss Nichols reported on the activities held at night. On New Years Eve a dance was held and at exactly twelve o'clock, a prayer was made for the coming year and the dance was continued.

After the reports had been given, suggestions for improvement in the Y. W. C. A. were asked for by members of the Cabinet.

Pi Kappa Alpha Dances Held Last Week-End

Alumnae Return For Occasion

The Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity was host for a set of dances held at Hampden-Sydney College February 4 and 5. An intermission party was given at the fraternity house Friday night.

The Southern Serenaders furnished the music for the dance Friday and Darrin O'Brien and his orchestra played for the dansant and dance Saturday. The Comity Club was gayly decorated in the fraternity's colors, yellow and dark red.

Town students who attended the dances are: Virginia Epes Irby, Jacqueline Adams, Rosalie Grear, Mildred Potter, Ervin Mae Hamilton, Frances Dudley, Virginia Reid Turner, Elizabeth Cralle, Susie Clark, Margaret Motley, Maxine Lewis, Betty Hardy and Ann Dugger.

Former S. T. C. girls who returned for the dances are Lucy Shields, Jane Burke, Mrs. Ollie Hayman (Frances Britton), Henrietta Ivers, Helen Byrd Harris, Muriel Bowman, Mrs. Charles Smith (Emily Geyer), Bugg Byrd, Margaret Farrar and Katherine Irby.

Roland Leveque Brings Orchestra March 1 for Mardi Gras

Norvell Montague Announces That Costumes Required

Pi Gamma Mu, national honorary fraternity in social science, will sponser its annual fete, the Mardi Gras dance on March 1. Roland Leveque and his orchestra will provide the music. Norvell Montague is general director of arrangements, being assisted by Jean McConnahuey, business manager, Martha Bailey, decorations chairman, and Deane Saunders, floor chairman.

Roland Leveque and orchestra are from Fredericksburg and are well known in the northern part of the state as well as around Richmond. They have made two trips abroad.

Norvell gives assurance that the decorations are very gay and dancers are expected to supplement the festive scene with colorful costumes. No one will be permitted on the floor who is not in costume and mask.

Prizes this year are much more expensive than those of former Mardi Gras dances, being well worth the competition. They will be displayed soon in Martin the Jeweler's window. Decisions are three in number, including the most original costume, the most beautiful costume, and the most attractive couple. Names of the judges have not yet been announced.

Members of the court will be gowned in costumes of Spanish derivation somewhat similar to those used last year. The court consists of: Susan Lane, queen; Gay Stiffen, Jennie Belle Gilliam, Nan Seward, Elizabeth Butler, Kitty Roberts, Charlotte Minton, Elsie Dodd and Frankie Bryan.

These young ladies will be accompanied by escorts from near-by colleges. The coronation and grand march will take place shortly after the dance begins. A short floor show has been planned to follow the march but definite plans for it will not be publicized until nearer the date.

Due to the usual overcrowded conditions at the previous Mardi Gras dances, a positive limit has been placed on the supply of tickets. There will be available four hundred coed and two hundred escort tickets, sales commencing on Monday, Feb. 21, at an admission price of fifty cents a person. Spectators may obtain their tickets at twenty-five cents.

Coach Announces New Forensic Teams

Dr. J. E. Walmsley, Farmville's forensic coach has announced the new teams for this season.

The Public Speaking Squad will be made up of three veteran speakers, Florence Bress, Juanita Callis and Janie Lee Young, and two newcomers, Beatrice Bland and Coralie Nelson. These girls will enter into after-dinner speaking, impromptu speaking, extemporaneous speaking, and oratorical contests.

The debating squad has nine new members this year. The affirmative teams are as follows: Lorena Moomaw and Pattie Bounds; Frances Holloway and Mary Rice; Frances Barnes and Mildred Stone ;Vivian Womack and Elizabeth Scales.

The negative teams are Sudie Yager and Nora Jones; Marguerite Snell and Marie Allen; Virginia Howell and Ruth Sears; and Margaret Price and Margaret Tucker.

Dance Club Will Present Recital On February 22

The members of Orchesis, the Composition Class and several members of the Fundamentals Class, under the direction of Mrs. Louise Fitzpatrick, will present a recital in the large auditorium on Tuesday night, February 22 at eight o'clock. The student body, faculty and friends are invited to attend the recital.

Mrs. Fitzpatrick has directed the dance club in all of its recitals, and all of the dances are original. As Mrs. Fitzpatrick has studied at Bennington several summers under such dancers as Charles Wiedman and Martha Graham, she is a very capable director.

The program which will be presented Tuesday night will be as follows: "A Round" by Composition Class. "Absurdity", a dance repeated from last year by Orchesis. "Three Variations on a Theme" by Composition Class, "Meeting and Greeting" by the Fundamentals Class, "Theme and Variation, Level Study, Cannon and a Resultant Rhythm" by the Composition Class, "Gossip" by the Dance Group, and last of all "A Life Cycle" made up of four dances, "Work", "Play", "Prayer", and "Death" by Orchesis.

Quarterly Review Has New Cover Editor Announces

"The magazine has been sent to press and should be out before the last of the month," says the Editor-in-chief, Norvell Montague. "The cover is to be a bright new —but that's the surprise!"

There are to be works from many new and talented contributors in the winter issue of the Farmville Quarterly Review.

"Leadership", by an Alumna, Mrs. Flourney, is an unusual essay of the great leaders that have been given by the South to the World. "Victorian Album" is an attractively written article by David Terry on the literature of the Victorian age. Pattie Bounds has given us the vivid narrative of her travels as a hostess around South America and the Central Americas the past summer.

"Life Must Go On" is a short story whose setting is in Farmville. The plot is centered around a certain S. T. C. girl, who invited a Georgia Tech boy to a Cotillion Club dance here. It is somewhat of a tragedy, vividly written by Sara Button. Norvell Montague has written a clever little story on a Wallflower as yet she has not selected a name for it.

A dog's life—a dog's love—a man's love for his dog—three in one given to you in Marion Hardin's "Mike". "A Woodland Romance" written by a freshman Ernestine Meachum is a rural sketch of beauty. Mary Mahone has given us a take-off on a "Smart Alec Yankee" in Allegory.

New poetry contributors are Hazel Wood Burbank, who wrote "Ascension"; Bess Windham, who wrote "Skyline"; Johnny Lybrook who wrote "I Loved You Not"; and Charlotte Davis, who wrote "Pondering".

Contributors with whose works you are already acquainted are Beverly Walker who gives us a sketch from the "other side of the railroad track" entitled, "Why?" and also a poem called "Verses". There are poems by Becky Sandridge, "My Mood to Night" and "Life and Death" and a poem, "R. S. V. P.", by our good friend and alumna, Margaret Price.

Norvell says the editors have worked very hard to make this issue much better—"It isn't an easy job putting out a magazine and trying to make it good," she said.

Chairman Tells Of Plans for Founders Day

Classe to Give Skits Depicting School Life

Mr. M. Boyd Coyner, chairman of the Founder's Day Committee has announced the following program for the Founder's Day exercises. Friday night, March 4 at 8:00 P. M. the Farmville basketball team will play Harrisonburg State Teachers College basketball team. Saturday, March 5, at 9:00 A. M. the annual business meeting of the alumnae association will be held in the small auditorium.

The classes in school will present various phases of college life, as it is today, at the birthday celebration in the large auditorium from 10:30 until 12:30 on Saturday morning. At this time Dr. Jarman will speak to the students and the alumnae.

The alumnae will have a luncheon at Longwood at 1:00 P. M. Saturday. The annual play and dance demonstration will be given by the freshman class in the gymnasium at 3:15 P. M. The swimming pool will be open to the alumnae who wish to go swimming from 4:00 until 5:00 P. M.

The Farmville Chapter of the Farmville State Teacher's College Alumnae Association will be hostess to the returning alumnae at a tea to be held in the recreation hall from 4:30-5:30 P. M.

At 8:00 P. M. in the large auditorium a Harp Trio will be presented as an artist's number. After the Lyceum number there will be a reception in the Student Building Lounge for all the alumnae.

The Founder's Day Committee decided not to have the Founder's Day Dance this year since they felt that the alumnae didn't enjoy this feature of the entertainment program. The day is prepared particularly for the alumnae, so it was felt that the program should consist of features in which the alumnae are interested.

The Founders Day Committee is composed of Mr. M. B. Coyner, Chairman and junior classman, Miss Jane Royal, senior classman, Miss Virginia Bedford, sophomore classman, Mr. Raymond French, freshman classman and Nora Jones, Elizabeth Morris, president of the student body, Frankie Bryan and Nancy Gray, student representatives.

Lynchburg College Is Victor Over S. T. C. In Exchange Debate

The Farmville affirmative debating team, composed of Frances Holloway and Mary Rice, lost the debate with Lynchburg College Friday night, February 11, at Lynchburg. The members of the Lynchburg team were Sidney Bedford, first negative speaker, and Simon Heller, second negative speaker.

Lychburg's affirmative team debated Farmville's negative team here the same night. Wesley Inge and Shirley Rosser, from Lynchburg defeated Sudie Yager and Nora Jones, of the Farmville team. Reverend Edgar A. Potts, minister of the Farmville Methodist church acted as critic judge for this debate.

Both debates were on the national Pi Kappa Delta question Resolved: "That the National Labor Relations Board Should be Empored to En orce Arbitration of all Industrial Disputes."

Dr. J. E. Walmsley Attends Meeting In Richmond

Dr. J. E. Walmsley, Head of the History Department of Farmville State Teachers College, attended the meeting of the Association of Virginia Colleges, in Richmond at Hotel Jefferson on Friday and Saturday, February 11 and 12. Dr. Walmsley went as a representative of Dr. J. L. Jarman.

On Friday the important issue before the Association was the topic of scholarships and loans of the students in the colleges of Virginia. The question of whether a large part of the loan was used only as a racket by the students was discussed.

Dr. Dabney Lancaster of Sweet Briar led the discussion on Saturday. His subject was "Vocational Guidance of College Students."

Music Committee Sponsers Programs

The purpose of the Music Committee is to furnish appropriate music for prayers and for any other occasion which may arise.

This year at Christmas and at several other occasions various students sang and these programs will continue throughout the year. The committee also is working on violin selections to be played at prayers.

These girls are gradually getting a collecting of music, which will be left in the Y. W. C. A. library to be used on later occasions.

Sophistication Reigns As Sophs Present Night Club

The smooth sophistication of Sara, singing "Sweet Someone", lots more of Samon, white being called black, and black, white, until the twain did meet, rhythm, laughter, syncopation, dancing, music—all got together in a mad, Manhattan Night Club to make the Sophomore Production.

If last year's Club Manhattan was good, the re-againing the other night was the mosta of the besta, and if Walter Winchell'd been there, we could refer you to his column, but since he wasn't in town, you'll have to take our word for it.

The surprise of the evening came with Gay Stieffen, guest artist from the sister class, and that meant Gay—twirlin', truckin', and goin' to town as only Gay can.

A new starlet came out as Mary Kathryn Nininger showed us another little girl with a voice that had something. Lula and Isabel made "Night and Day" become a reality, Jerry and Jane did some tall tickling of the ivories, "Sally" and "Slim" showed us how the "cullud" folks got rhythm. Beverly was a most subtle Latin from Club Manhattan, if you please, while Brownies' truckin' "shone", and Cou left her traps to do "The Sweetheard of Six Other Guys" in typical Cou style.

And finally, as all good things must, the biggest of re-openings with its gaiety, its "Men About Town" — and, incidentally, of Hampden-Sydney — galaries of girls, the ever-present cakes and nabs, fun, more dancing, came to an eno under the fall of the baton of that diminutive mistress of ceremonies, Ann Scott, but, may we add, a good time was had by all!

S. T. C. And H. S. C. Dramatic Clubs Practice 'First Lady'

Editor Selects New Girls for Rotunda Staff

Fifteen reporters, five typists and nine members of the circulation department have been added to the Rotunda staff following a period of six weeks of apprenticeship. Most of the new members are from the freshman class.

Norma Pamplin, Edna Strong, Jean Terrell, Mary Walker Mitchell, Elizabeth West, Mildred Callis, and E. Byrd Hutcheson are news reporters added to the staff.

Mary Sue Edmundson and Shirley Stevens will write sports and society news, respectively.

Feature reporters invited to join the staff are Agnes Pickerell, Kitty Cassell, Dell Warren, Ann Bradner, Sadie Cobb and Hazelwood Burbank.

Frances Pritchett, Harriett Johnston, Maude McChesney, Frances Barnes and Jane Rosenburg will be added to the typing staff.

Mary West, Anne Benton, Caralie Nelson, Jeannette Ferguson, Katherine Watkins, Anna Maxey, Eloise Gwaltney, Elizabeth Prince and Martha McKinstry will take their places on the circulation staff.

These girls take up duties immediately on the staff. Further tryouts on the staff wil probably be held later in the spring.

College Girls Sing At Methodist Church In Annual Program

The College Choir, A'capella and Choral Club gave their annual sacred concert at the Farmville Methodist Church Sunday evening, February 13, at 7:30.

The first number on the program was "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring" which was sung by the A'capella choir. The scripture was read by Florence Bress and followed by "One Sweetly Solemn Thought" sung by the quartette. Juanita Callis gave a talk on "Music in Religious Worship" after which the A'capella rendered "Ave Verum".

The next number, "Ave Maria", was sung as a solo by Miss Irene Leake and was followed by the offertory. The program was completed after a selection by the Junior A'capella, with the combined choirs of 120 voices singing "The Holy City".

Fastest Typist Gives Demonstration

Miss Stella Willins, the world's fastest woman typist, demonstrated her accomplishments in this college Tuesday, February 8 before an audience in the small auditorium.

Miss Willins demonstrated typing here at something over 100 words a minute. This unusual typist was invited here by Miss Craddock in the interests of the writing department.

In 1937 Miss Willins set a world's record for typing by writing 128 net five-stroke words per minute for one hour from unfamiliar copy, a new woman's record.

Kay Francis Made Movie of Same Political Play

"The First Lady" has been chosen by Miss Wheeler for production, to be the spring play, given jointly by the S. T. C. Dramatic Club and the H.-S. C. Jongleurs. The play was written by Kathleen Dayton and George M. Kaufman.

The theme of the play is the brilliant society life of the Nation's capital and the making and breaking of reputations over teacups.

The play was on Broadway for several years, and was produced as a movie with Kay Francis as the star.

The leading chaarcter is Lucy Chase, and is drawn from Alice Roosevelt Longsworth. Virginia Agee, who is well known for her leads in former plays has once more the honor of being the lead, the "First Lady". Jane Cawe played this part on Broadway.

Belle, an older woman, will be played by Alpha Lee Garnett. Jessie Busley had the part in the Broadway show.

Irene Hibbard will be played by Chlotilde Jarman. On Broadway Lilly Cahill took the part. The other characters have not been decided upon.

This is the first time that the Jongleurs have given two productions in a year with the Dramatic Club. April 8 has been set as a tentative date.

Emily Hoskins Will Direct Production

"'Sausages and Sweepstakes' will be the name of the Freshman production," announced Ruth Lea Purdom, president of the Freshman Class.

The production is to be a modern version of "the three little pigs and how they grew". It will be a musical with many song and dance teams.

Emily Hoskins is directing the production. Martha Whelchel is in charge of the business and publicity groups. The other committee heads will be Lighting, Patsy Fletcher and Jean Upshur; Staging, Alice Lee Barham; Costuming, Helen Seward; Music, Norma Johnson and Betty Shumate; Dancing, Mary Sue Edmundson; Program, Crews Borden and Frances Dudley.

The date for the production has not been definitely decided. The two tentative dates are February 25 and March 2. The admission charge will be 25c.

Elizabeth LeGrande Presents Program

Under the direction of Miss Elizabeth LeGrande, the Junior A Cappella Choir presented a program of songs in chapel Wednesday, February 9.

Songs they chose were "Finlandia" by Sibelius, theme from first movement of "Symphony in D. minor" by Ce'sar Franck, and "A Song Without Words" by Hugh White.

Members of the Junior A Cappella are Anne Cocks, Lile Poole, Virginia Richard, Louise Wells, Mary Sue Simmons, Estelle Smith, Angelina Nicholas, Agnes Cole, Jean Moyer, Anne Cole, Virginia LeGrande and Eleanor Dulaney.

An Unusual Basketball Team and Coach — We're Proud of You!

The basketball team of this college certainly deserves a word of praise in The Rotunda. The past two years in succession the has remained undefeated. So far this record has been kept unbroken this season.

Miss Ller has a team of which she is proud in every way, and the team is also proud of its excellent coach. The northern trip was a huge success, and we're betting that our team will complete the third year undefeated.

We must beat William and Mary, and when Founder's Day comes along, we'll be raring to wallop Harrisonburg to make our alumnae glad they've come home. Let's give them all our support. If the school authorities are willing to let them miss classes for games, if Miss Ller is willing to give time and effort in coaching the girls, and if the girls themselves are willing to spend hours of practice in the afternoon, then we students owe them at least our presence and approval at games. We're proud of you, team, and we pledge our support!

West Point Is Scene of Novel By Banning

'Fess up, now, is there a one of you who doesn't sit up and take notice when someone says "West Point"? Well, you'll like Kendall Banning's "West Point Today", because one whole chapter is devoted entirely to advice to girls who want to visit the Academy. Of course we don't vouch for the efficacy of Mr. Banning's advice, but it sounds good, and it certainly makes interesting reading. For that matter, the whole book does that.

The plebe is introduced to us on his first day at the Point. From that time on, Mr. Ducrot, the typical American youth, endears himself to the heart of the reader. The daily routine, the furlough, the honor system, everything that is a part of the life of the cadet is recounted in Mr. Banning's book. The humor and unusually clever manner in which he narrates makes even the author's detailed descriptions interesting. So, here's your chance, you girls who like West Point (or the cadets) and want to know more about it.

And here's a chance for you who want to know more about New Orleans. If you have a mental picture of a "City Beautiful", then you may be disappointed, for "New Orleans Drawn and Quartered" does exactly what the name implies. Olive Leonharat has drawn a picture of a decaying city, rather than the picturesque, beautiful Orleans we've all imagined. Lyle Saxon aptly expresses the opinion of the reader in the verse:

"The pen of Olive Leonharat has a cruel, catlike touch;
It drips with gall and venom,
Lewdness, lechery and such.
The result is simply awful—
And I like it very much!"

Just Wait, Girls Come Spring Annuals

For the past week you've heard it everywhere, 'Have you subscribed to the Virginian?—Well, you'd better do it now—'fore it's too late'. The annual staff have been on their toes and probably some you have been "on your ear" because people have kept on and on coming in your room and you have kept on and on saying, "No". But, come the first bright and shining day of May, some people will wish that more and more other people had kept on and on coming in their rooms with a super-potent king of persuasive power—because we hear that this 1938 Virginian that has been so much "in the public ear" so constantly is truly an attractive volume. In fact, 'tis said by some it is a "smooth article".

Certainly you've often seen Ruth Montgomery dashing down the hall fairly hidden by a stack of huge packages, and then the next minute you see her in whispered conference with "Pickles" and other staff members. All these goings-on have a deep and hidden significance, and that significance is that those oft-spoken of "annual secrets" are more numerous and surprising than ever before.

Y. W. C. A. Includes People of Nations All Over World

In speaking of the Y. W. C. A., we as students have a tendency to be local-minded. We seem to ignore the fact that we are participants in the World's Student Christian Federation: a federation that concerns people of all nations. We all "unite in the desire to realize a full and creative life through a growing knowledge of God."

Two speakers of importance are brought to our campus each year through the World Fellowship Committee. This past fall, Dr. Rives of Richmond was with us for two days during which time he spoke in chapel, at prayers, and at various other planned programs. Dr. Rives' influence is mostly spiritual. We wish to bring Dr. Koo, a Chinese speaker here in the near future and, while we are not yet sure that it will be possible for him to come, we feel that a visit from him will be profitable as well as enjoyable.

In addition to bringing speakers to Farmville, the World Fellowship Committee sponsors prayers every Wednesday night. On this night we endeavor to bring faculty members or outsiders to speak; their topics usually concern a phase of World Fellowship. If we have due notice of a coming speaker and he has made known the program, we try to build up an atmosphere for his approach through Wednesday night prayers.

Any improvements or suggestions which will aid the World Fellowship Committee will be welcomed and greatly appreciated.

Priscilla Leonard Presents Recipe For Happiness

People today more than ever before are reading recipes for obtaining happiness. We are eager for pamphlets, books, or anythinig that will show us in "three easy lessons" how to be popular. "How to Win Friends and Influence People" is enjoying great popularity with the masses simply because it gives helpful suggestions to those who want friends.

Priscilla Leonard has written a simliar recipe in verse. There is enough good advice in this short poem alone without reading books, for us to find the joy that we want and the friends that we need if we will do what it says.

A Memory System

Forget each kindness that you do
As soon as you have done it.
Forget the praise that falls to you
The moment you have won it.
Forget the slander that you hear
Before you can repeat it.
Forget each slight, each spite, each sneer
Wherever you may meet it.
Remember every kindness done
To you, whate-er its measure.
Remember praise by others won
And pass it on with pleasure.
Remember every promise made
And keep it to the letter.
Remember those who lend you aid
And be a grateful debtor.
Remember all the happiness
That comes your way in living.
Forget each worry and distress.
Be hopeful and forgiving.
Remember good, remember truth.
Remember Heaven's above you.
And you will find, through age and youth,
True joys and hearts to love you.

New Auto Gadget Warns of Speed Danger With Hymn

Boston, Feb. 2—(UP)—Exhibited at Boston University's School of Theology was an automobile device that:

Flashes a white light on the dashboard when a car is going fifteen miles an hour.

Flashes green at twenty - five miles an hour.

Flashes red at forty miles an hour.

And plays "Nearer My God to Thee" on a music box at sixty miles an hour.

I met'cha
I let'cha
If I hadn't a met'cha
I wouldn'ta let'cha
But I met'cha
And I let'cha
I bet'cha
If I met'cha—again
I'd let'cha
I bett'cha.

—The Optimist

The car was parked,
On a lonely road
Let, no thrill had I,
I had flat tire,
So did the car.

—High Times

You'll never see
A fair maid gush
O'er a man who's lost
His shaving brush.

GLEANINGS

By

Virginia L. Agee

In the past year America has lost two of her finest humorists. The first to depart this life was Arthur Brisbane—and now, O. O. McIntyre has followed him.

McIntyre was a typical "boy who made good"; he frequently described himself as such. He was born and reared in a sleepy little town, Gallipolis—he possessed all qualities required for such a town's "bad boy". He played "hooky" from school; he pulled liitle girls' pig-tails; he swam and went barefoot when he shouldn't have; he was delightful!

Then, when he grew up he began working on the Gallipolis paper; but that wasn't what he wanted to do; he thought it not worthy of his true talent—and he was right. When he died he held fame and fortune in the palm of his hand.

And so, America will mourn the loss of Odd McIntyre as deeply as she did that of Arthur Brisbane. His completely sophisticated and amusing column will never have an equal; likewise, his articles in various magazines will never be equalled. And so, we bid—final, sorrowful farewell to the author of New York Day by Day, to that epitome of the nations idea of a typical New Yorker—O. O. McIntyre.

There is a lot of sorrow in this old world right now. With bombs and guns and shells from war-torn lands—with the sick and miserable and the hungry. Perhaps one of the cruelest atrocities ever to come to light was with the discovery of a six-year old child, tied to a chair, hidden from light—paying for the sins of her mother by the harsh decree of her grandfather.

Little Alice Harris was found tied to a chair last week in the home of her grandfather, just seventeen miles from Uniontown, Pennsylvania. She had been kept this since infancy; she is now crippled and undernourished. She can not walk on her badly deformed little legs—she is so thin it tears at your heart-strings to even look at her picture. She is the illegitimate child of a farmer's daughter—she was decreed to such horrible conditions to pay for her mother's sin.

What an outrage against childhood! How could anyone be as harsh and inhuman as this old grizzled farmer, David Harris. What reasons could be given for punishing a child through no fault of her own? It was not her fault that she was born.

Her mother?—perhaps by this time she is hardened to the sight of her baby. Yet, perhaps she has gone to the depths of distraction at the idea of her child suffering for her own folly; and again—perhaps she feels no emotion whatsoever—for if she did she could not not have stood by for six years and watched the pitiful state into which her baby was growing.

And now little Alice Harris — if she lives through the results of the abusements—will be crippled for life—she will never walk as other children do—perhaps her mind will be different, too. A victim of another's wrong-doing—an object of pity!

Last year, after a ten year's contest, Canada's disgusting Stork Derby came to a close. During the period of contestment the world was filled with a loathing towards such an idea. Perhaps it was meant to be something worthwhile and perhaps it was found amusing at first, but as time wore on it turned out to be a failure in that respect, and the slight amusement turned to sheer disgust.

Now, there are howling babies—litters of them—and eight or ten families fighting for the honored "first place". There has been difficulties ever since the close of the derby because the authorities and some of the mothers are having a hard time proving the legitimacy of some of these poor unfortunate babies.

We sincerely hope they soon get the difficulties ironed out, and that never again will anyone deem it necessary to have a Stork Derby.

Rotunda Reverberations

Droves of girls left school last week-end for every point from New York to Podunk. V. P. I. Mid-Winters must have looked like an S. T. C. reunion. Incidentally, the girls may have attended dances but from what we hear of their playing "Drop the Handkerchief", "Going to the Circus", and wearing carrot corsages, we have our doubts. Sounds like a glorified kindergarten to us.

Despite Miss Mary's request that we stop wearing scarfs around our heads, numbers of girls continue to float about the campus looking like peasants on their day off. 'Tis a fad that has become very obnoxious. Instead of enhancing beauty they succeed in giving most girls that true prebean expression! How about it?

We hear that Bert is collecting rings from our pretty little Government girls, while Ruth Curtis is gathering pictures from Hampden-Sydney men and other celebrities (example—Stanley Frank). Three in one day! While on the subject of pictures, have you all seen Frances Steed "Bliss-fully" happy, walking around these days clutching a framed "Sheep"?

The announcement that there would be no Founder's Day dance caused much disappointment in the Student Body. This has always been one of the better dances of the year and most students would gladly pay admission rather than do away with it. The alumnae may not be enthusiastic, but it is one of the main attractions for the younger ones.

We hear tales of one of our younger faculty members hot upon the trail of one of our high and mighty seniors because of a crack made last week. Wouldn't you just LOVE to have a ringside seat when he finally tracks her down!

There were once three little S. T. C. girls who were good friends.

Come Pan-Hel Dance a battle ensued as to who would invite one dashing Romeo down from Roanoke College. They sent telegrams, specials, and letters, while we wondered who would be the lucky girl. Would it be Sieber, Rainey, or Taylor? Seems as if Marshall Griggs decided it himself when he called to see one Julia Mae Monday night.

Thank heavens that last week is well in the past! Poor Martha Holloway worried herself sick over the fact that Randolph-Macon lass who won the "Navy Cake" chose "Salty Sam" as her escort for the hop. Then came Saturday's newspaper with pictures of the girls and "Salty". And Martha's Joe wasn't "Salty Sam" after all. That's the midshipmen's line for you!

Farmville Girls Return Sunday From Victorious Northern Trip

Team Defeats Notre Dame and Panzer School

Ten girls of Farmville's basketball squad and Miss Olive T. Iler, coach, returned to school Sunday noon from a trip to New York having competed with two Northern Colleges during their three day trip. The travellers reported their adventures as successful as the games.

The visiting team knew victory for both games, the first being with Notre Dame Woman's College of Baltimore on Thursday night. Farmville displayed good teamwork, bringing a crushing defeat of 34-11 to their hosts, Notre Dame. Panzer School of Physical Education in East Orange, N. J., was overcome by Farmville on Saturday afternoon. The final score for this meet was 24-13.

The girls proclaimed the trips as "more than wonderful". They left Richmond Thursday morning by train for Baltimore where they embarked at the Emerson Hotel. They played Notre Dame at a high school in Baltimore, and afterwards surveyed the college and met some of the students.

They arrived in New York City by train Friday at one o'clock and spent the afternoon shopping. Friday night Miss Iler's mother was hostess at a dinner for the team at her home on 84th street. Later they went by subway to uptown New York where they attended first a movie and afterwards a play.

Saturday morning again saw them shopping. At two o'clock they were in East Orange, N. J. for the Panzer game. After this game they were entertained at a reception given by the college students and officials. Returning to New York City, they had dinner and took their last chance at shows, some attending the Cotton Club and others the Roxy Theater.

They caught the Pullman from New York at 12:30 a. m. arriving at Richmond at 8:30 Sunday morning and by bus to Farmville.

Dr. S. L. Stealey Will Speak Here

Dr. S. L. Stealey, pastor of Bainbridge Baptist Church, Richmond, and a much admired and influential young people's leader will come to S. T. C., February 17. He will give a talk in chapel that day and another at 4 o'clock in the Y. W. C. A. Lounge.

Dr. Stealey will be glad to have conferences from 11 o'clock to 12 and from 2 o'clock to 4 o'clock for anyone who would like to talk with him. Anyone who would like to talk to him on any matter whatsoever may sign upon the bulletin board under the poster announcing Dr. Stealey. He will also conduct Prayers that night.

Home Economics Club Initiates Nineteen

New members of the Home Economics Club were initiated in the Little Sitting Room Monday, February 14 at 7 o'clock.

Only Home Economics majors with an average of C are eligible for membership. The new members are Nancy Goode Bland, Rebecca Bondurant, Anne Camp, Sadie Cobb, Josie Lee Cogsdale, Helen Darley, Nancy Fulton, Blair Goode, Bell Hall, Evelyn Hutcheson, Elizabeth LeGrande, Mary Hille McCoy, Alma Louise Oakes, Nancy Saville, Helen Seward, Sarah Sibald, Patsy Smith, Fumi Wakayama, and Elizabeth Warner.

College Graduates Find Jobs Scarce

Social workers may dry some of their tears for the under-educated girls who can't earn a living and direct some attention to the young women college graduates who can't find jobs in Washington.

The girl college graduate is a serious unemployment problem in the capital, according to a recent report to American Association of University Women. They may be highly trained, say, in home economics, but they can't get jobs because they have no practical experience. And they can't obtain practical experience until they find jobs.

Some of them work in retail trade, but they occupy positions that could just as easily be filled by young women with less education.

Ruth Phelps, who was recently appointed councilor at Camp Somerset.

Ruth Phelps Is Chosen for Staff Of Maine Camp

Ruth Phelps, president of Farmville's Athletic Association, will be a councilor at Camp Somerset, Oakland, Maine for the coming summer. Ruth was recommended for the position by Miss Ruth Leonard, at present swimming instructor at S. T. C., who was a councilor at the camp last summer. Last week while in New York for the basketball trip, Ruth interviewed the director who requires a personal interview before she appoints her staff.

Camp Somerset is a 400 acre camp with seven natural lakes. It is located in the mountains of Maine. The camp membership is limited to 100 girls from the ages of six to eighteen, most of whom are from Boston and New York. The camp has been in existence for nineteen years.

Ruth will be at Somerset from July until August 31. She will be in charge of some phase of athletics, probably coaching basketball or archery. She will make the trip by boat from Norfolk to New York City where she will meet the other councilors to go on to Camp Somerset.

"I'm so thrilled; it's too good to be true. Mentally I've been in Maine since last Saturday," says Ruth.

Student Council Will Play Y.W.C.A. Council in Classic Of the Basketball World

We just dare you to miss the big social and athletic event of the year tonight. Farmville's gym floor will hold twenty graceful and rehearsed Y. W. C. A. Council nd Student Council maidens, who will match their basketball talents for the first time in the history of the school.

We'll vouch that the game will undoubtedly be fast-moving and exciting, since the majority of the players have never come in contact with a basketball in their lives. In order that each famous and said-to-be-excellent player may make her formal debut, both teams will substitute every few moments.

The costumes (some of the more demure maidens are a bit shy about wearing these modern garments, they say) will remain a surprise. Elizabeth Morris will head the Government ladies, and Isabelle Williamson will captain the Young Women's Christian Association.

A nithinal fee of 10c will be charged, the proceeds of which will be used toward paying for a loud speaker to be installed in the dining room.

Every member of both the Student Council and Y. W. Cabinet, with the exception of those who are on varsity, will participate toward the evening's entertainment.

World Sports

A fifty thousand dollar outdoor sports arena to house boxing, wrestling, baseball and other sports will be operated at Virginia Beach this summer. It will be on the site of the ill-fated dog track. A grandstand which seats one thousand, five hundred is already on the scene and new stands will be erected so the arena will accomodate three thousand, three hundred spectators when completed. Weekly boxing and wrestling shows will be conducted under the supervision of Eddie Ross who is to act as matchmaker for the arena. Ross has already begun negotiatoins to place several big bouts at the beach. In addition, a baseball diamond will be included in the layout. A semi-pro team will probably use it this summer, but plans are being made to include Virginia Beach in a class of professional ball leagues being planned for 1939. This should be quite a drawing card for next summer.

Things I never knew till now item for this week: the umpire at the first baseball game, played in Berlin, Germany, twenty-five years ago, wore a suit of armor, probably as protection against pop bottles.

And another in the same strain is the fact that among the games which Boston's city fathers banned in the old days as wasteful of time and misleading of spirit the law singled out the game of ninepine, but enthusiastic bowlers saved the day by adding one pin and calling it ten pins.

A sportswriter recently returned from Florida, has been bewailing the attitude towards sports to be found there. As an illustration he tells the story of a prizefight. It seems the Yucatan Kid, a fighter with quite a reputation, was scheduled to go on in the main event with some other lightweight. First the kid squawked about the referee and finally compromised on old Tom Heeney. Heeney was satisfactory to the Kid but there was another matter to be considered. His opponent weighed one pound more than the Kid. That was too much so the Kid right off took a run-out powder and they had to run in a substitute. No attempt was made to punish the Kid for his conduct. He didn't want to fight so he didn't.

Speaking of boxing, there's the story about the time when middleweight Freddie Steele underwent an embarrassing moment or so. Steele was brought in as the referee for the Ben Brown-Texas Joe Dundee bout. The announcer first presented Steele as the champion and then turning to Brown he informed the crowd, "In this corner we have the next middleweight champion of the world."

There were two deaths among the famous of the sports world last week. Bernard Rosemeyer, twenty-seven year old German racing driver, who last year won the George Vanderbilt Cup race at Westburg, Long Island, was killed instantly in an attempt to recapture two worlds speed records. The car in which he was traveling, at a speed of about two hundred and seventy-five miles an hour, swerved in a heavy wind, lost a tire and catapulted into the air on the Frankfort on the Main Dormstead road in Germany. Hitler wired condolences to his widow, Elli Beirhorn the noted flier.

The other death was that of James (Smilin' Jeems) Mutrie, eighty-six year old founder and first manager of the New York Giants, after several years illness at the Cancer Institute, Welfare Island, New York. His early club had many tall sluggers. One day in the heat of an exciting victory, Mutrie rallied the team, "You're giants in size, and you're giants in playing—come on, you giants." The crowd took up the cry and the name stuck.

Gene Sarazen, twice United States Open Golf Champion, has just landed in New York after a world tour. Japan, he found has the best golf course (a hundred groundwomen pick weeds there at twenty-five cents a day).

Benny Leonard, former lightweight boxing champion was acquitted of disorderly conduct charges brought by Louis Sacoff, a waiter in the ex-boxer's restaurant. Sacoff had testified that Leonard beat him up for eating a baked potato.

The worlds number one amateur tennis player, Donald Budge of California, trounced Jack Bromwich, nineteen year old ambidextrous star from down under, 6-4, 6-2, 6-1, and won the Australian tennis championship.

Freshman Team Is Host to Hampton

S. T. C.'s freshman basketball team will play their eighth game of the season this week-end when Hampton High school comes here. The speedy Freshman basketeers seven of whom are named on varsity squad, have lost not a game so far, having met the high schools of Rice, Farmville, and Amelia and having been victorious over both the Sophomores and Seniors in the class games.

On last Friday, meeting Rice for the second time, Freshmen triumphed by a score of 38-7. The winners, from the very beginning far outplayed their opponents, gained goal after goal to keep the decision almost certain. Again on Monday afternoon Amelia high school was left far behind by the Farmville champions who triumphed with 30-2.

Farmville Meets Williamsburg in Basketball Here

S. T. C. Will Play 4th Game Friday

The fourth in a series of intercollegiate basketball games played by Farmville's squad will take place Friday night, February 18, when the girls of William and Mary College, Williamsburg, will come to Farmville. The game will be played by the two court method which is comparatively new to the squad. The meet with Panger College introduced this method.

Farmville's girls have a champion record, having lost not a game in several years. This season they have defeated Roanoke National Business College, Panzer College, and Notre Dame Woman's College.

Blackstone College will be the S. T. C.'s next opopnent; the game to be there on February 25. The final meet will be on Founders Day, March 5, with Harrisonburg State Teachers College.

Fischer Will Start Practices Monday

"Volley ball practices will begin next Monday, February 31," Dot Fischer, manager, has announced. Volley ball will be conducted just as other sports; the classes will practice as individual groups and then compete by classes to determine the champions.

Six practices will be required of individuals before they can compete in class games which will be played off before exams. Practices will be held on Mondays at 4 o'clock and on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday at 5 o'clock.

Farmville Alumnae Found Chapter At Gloucester Club House

Miss Nichols Tells Purpose To Members

Alumnae of the State Teachers College at Farmville, met and organized the Gloucester Chapter of the Alumnae Association on Saturday, February 5 at the Woman's Club House, Gloucester, Va.

Miss Nichols, State President of the Alumnae Association, was introduced and told the group about the organization, purpose and work of the Alumnae Association. Miss Taliaferro, Alumnae Secretary, also spoke, telling something of the work of the Association. She spoke particularly about the records kept and the attempts made to keep in touch with the former students, both graduate and undergraduate.

Miss Nichols extended an invitation to all to return for the Founders Day Celebration March 5. She described the program for the day. Mrs. Russel Gray was elected a delegate from the Gloucester Chapter of the Alumnae Association.

Miss Taliaferro delivered a message from Miss Mary White Cox and Miss Nichols delivered one from Dr. Jarman.

It was decided to hold the next meeting at the Woman's Club House on April 30 at 2:30 o'clock. The secretary was instructed to notify by card, all the former students of the Farmville State Teachers College at Farmville, now living in Gloucester.

Those present were invited to have tea at the Club. The meeting was then adjourned.

Mrs. Roy Pearson Meets Mother

Mrs. Laing will leave here February 17 for New York, where she will meet her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Roy R. Pearson, who will arrive there on the "Deuchland" February 18, from the Orient.

Mr. and Mrs. Pearson have been traveling through Europe since December 26, 1937.

Mrs. Laing will remain in New York with them for three weeks, then they will return to Farmville with her to stay until some time in April.

"It will be like coming home to Martha Anne, as she lived here eleven years, and went to school here," said Mrs. Laing.

Mrs. Pearson finished here in the class of 1931, and was a prominent members of both her class, and the student body.

Mr. and Mrs. Pearson will return to the Orient, the first of May, where he is connected with the Standard Oil Company.

Mary Harrison Vaughan and Ruth Montgomery have returned to school after a short visit in Lawrenceville.

Alpha Lee Garnett went to Washington, D. C., for the week-end of February 12.

Joiner Art Exhibit Brought Here By Gamma Psi And Orchesis

Artist Portrays Dance Movements In Paintings

The art exhibit of Miss Betty Joiner of New York will be presented to the Student Body and friends by the members of Orchesis, and Gamma Psi the first week in March.

Miss Joiner has notified the two organizations that the exhibit will be sent here by March 1. It consists of various types of drawings, block prints, and water color paintings of various dance movements. Miss Joiner is an artist, but has spent several summers at Bennington studying the dance. She has obtained the ideas for her drawings from studies of Charles Weidman, Martha Graham and various other celebrities who were also at Bennington.

Miss Joiner's talents have not been limited just to art. She has also written several magazine articles and is the author of a book.

Due to the interest shown in the several Joiner drawings that Mrs. Fitzpatrick possesses, and to the new freshness of the drawings as something new in the field of art, the two clubs thought that by making the exhibit available to the Student Body they would do a real service. The exhibit will also open over Founders Day so the alumnae may see it.

If anyone wishes to order any of these pictures they may do so from some member of Orchesis or Gamma Psi. The exhibit will be here only one week; from here it will go to Sweetbriar.

Mr. Bell Takes Dr. Wynne's Classes During His Absence

Dr. J. Peter Wynne will attend the National Education Association in Atlantic City from February 26, through March 3. He will remain there the entire time and attend various meetings and lectures.

During Dr. Wynne's absence, Mr. Leon E. Bill will be in charge of his philosophy classes in addition to his usual classes.

"I leave my classes with Mr. Bell in utter confidence," stated Dr. Wynne, "knowing Mr. Bell is an able philosophy instructor and an ardent admirer of all the men who made philosophy great."

Once Dr. Wynne is said to have called Mr. Bell "the man who knows more philosophy than any man around here."

S. T. C. Choir Will Sing in Portsmouth

A Cappella Choir and the College Choir have accepted an invitation from Mr. Arthur J. Lancaster, director of music in the Portsmouth schools, to sing in Portsmouth on March 6.

The program has not been announced by Mr. Strick, the director of the two organizations, but will include numbers by Miss Irene Leake, the quartet, the sextette, and each of the choirs.

The members will go down in two buses, and will be entertained at a banquet which will be held in the recreation room of the high school, and is to be given by the choral group of the Portsmouth High school.

Fifty Years Bring Changes

Gypsy fortune tellers must have passed through town recently or how could the Juniors accurately prophesy what changes fifty years could bring forth?

Would Miss Barlow, Miss Iler and Mrs. Fitzpatrick approve of the early morning exercise? Probably not.

Meals may be served in bed but the menu won't change much. Even the rind is still left on the bacon for the very modern school girls to chew. Classes continue to be considered boresome even if they last only a minute.

California being only a few hundred miles away the Hampden-Sydney boys won't even count. The grandsons of the H.-S. boys who rate here now will probably be compelled to fly to Hollywood for a Sunday night date.

Founders Day dance in 1990 will bore the girls to distraction even if the Ziegfield Follies are there.

Mary Harrison's granddaughter really will be an intelligent child. She will be able to explain exactly why her name is Cromer. Perhaps Mary Harrison had something to do with her knowledge of love.

Well, why doesn't Ruth Montgomery want to be loved? Is she afraid of love or is her highest ambition to become a Home Economics teacher at Miss Mary's Finishing School? Of course marriage would disqualify her in that case. What a pity it would be for Betty Butterworth to waste her talent by being an old maid. She would be so useful to teach her children and grandchildren how to talk.

Perhaps the reason for so much luxury and comfort here in 1990 will be the fact that Elizabeth Morris is Republican Governor of Virginia. Surely she will remember her Alma Mater then, even if it has been fifty years since she headed the government of that institution.

The method used to put the sophisticated misses of 1990 to sleep really was quite an idea. Start playing your radio or singing now at 4 A. M. and you've started something, even after a dance. Entertaining dates in Shannon's Palm room might be all right when Ruth Curtis Robeson is a member of the follies.

If a fortune teller did help the Juniors, no complaint is made because Junior Sing Saturday night was a little bit of magic plus the gift of prophecy combined with good acting to make it a GREAT success.

Junior Class Wins, Seniors Are Second In Sing Contest

The Junior Class carried off "Sing" honors, Saturday night, when the contest was closed, and the Senior class won honorable mention with its take-off on Washington politics.

The Juniors chose as their theme Farmville fifty years from now. Two blase girls were revealed worn out from dancing every night and the strenuous task of going to classes by television. A little French maid took class notes.

In fifty years Farmville has traffic jams: Baldwin's has forty floors and S. T. C. a Rose Room.

Army Butterworth and Margaret Britton as youngsters caused much laughter as they implied the future of several senior girls. Shirley Temple was still singing "On the Good Ship Lollipop, despite the many wrinkles had curls.

Isabel Williamson was chairman of the Sing contest. The judges were Miss Camper, Mr. Holten, and Mr. McCorkle.

Freshmen Modernize "Three Ltitle Pigs" For Production

"Sausages and Sweepstakes", the Freshman class production, will be presented on March 8 in the large auditorium.

Emily Hoskins, the author and director of the production, has announced that it is a modern version of the "Three Little Pigs" with the big bad wolf, Little Red Riding Hood, Little Boy Blue, and other famous nursery tale characters thrown in for good measure. Song and dance choruses are sprinkled in to round out the musical comedy program.

Many members of the class are on the committees which are headed by M. Weichel, business and publicity manager; Patsy Fletcher and Jean Upshur, lighting heads; Alice Leigh Barham and Anna George, staging chairmen; Helen Seward, costuming head; Norma Johnson and Betty Shumate, musicians; Mary Sue Edmondson, dance chairman; Crews Borden and Frances Dudley, program committee.

Class Skits to Present Typical S. T. C. Life

Miss Jane Royall, Miss Virginia Bedford, Elizabeth Morris, Deane Saunders, Nora Jones, Frankie Bryan, Nancy Gray and Vera Ebel compose the Founder's Day program committee for the program which is to be held on Saturday, March 5.

Each class will give a skit to represent a phase of college life. Dr. Wynne's class has been selected by the seniors as the typical class and they will present a lecture as it is held now to the alumnae.

The Junior class will present the extra curricular side of school life. They have decided to use the first act of their production, "Sister Pat", as the basis of their theme and will make a few changes in it.

The Sophomore class will present the Mardi Gras festivities as they are held here. They will have the queen and her court and will show the historical phase of the Mardi Gras dance which has become an annual feature of the social life at S. T. C. in the past few years. Performers from the Sophomore production, "Club Manhattan" will perform at this time.

A peep into the dorimtory life at Farmville will be presented by the Freshman class. They will give the alumnae a view as to the typical life as it is lived in the dormitories of Farmville.

Following these skits Orchesis, the honorary dance group, and A Cappella Choir and College Quartets will give selections.

FemaleNormal Life Portrayed

The pages of history were delved into when Freshman Sing portrayed S. T. C. (formerly Farmville Female Normal School—for women only) as it was a half century ago.

Days when smoking cigarettes was considered nothing short of murder in the moonlight, and when a man's presence in the school was something to keep newspaper headlines flourishing for weeks, were so vividly represented that observers drifted from the present into the demure past —so often referred to by grandmother.

Sad it is to think of days when dancing was prohibited with a tone of disgust, even at the mention of the word. How strange it must have been not to run into the Home Office to see if, by accident, a telephone call had been missed.

Instead of "Lights out", hall presidents (or somebody) must have yelled "Blow"—or something of the sort. There must have been some advantages though. For instance, there was no danger of students missing church to hear Jack Benny, and one didn't have to scan the school for a light bulb in order to finish studying a "matter of life and death test".

Maybe those grandmothers prefer "the good old days", but, as for the modern inmate of S. T. C., well she'd consider Farmville Female Normal School (for women only) definitely a thing of the past.

Pan Americanism Is Project Theme of Pi Gamma Mu

Pan-Americanism will be the theme of the annual project of Pi Gamma Mu, national honorary society in social science. The members have planned a three day program to be given near Pan-American Day, April 14. This day is set aside that the people of the Americas may realize a closer friendship. Pi Gamma Mu's program will seek to define Pan-Americanism, to show how the other American countries affect United States as a whole, and her citizens as individuals.

Ruth Sears, chairman of the project committee, says that there will be many interesting features, some of which will be surprises. Others include a chapel talk on what Pan-Americanism is, a travelogue of the South American countries, and an exhibit of South American things borrowed from the Valentine Museum in Richmond and other sources.

Thousand Four Hundred Ten Chairs Grace School

By HELEN REIFF

"There are on campus," stated Pat Whitlock who is taking inventory for fire insurance, "1,410 chairs(not including some thousand theater seats in the auditoriums), 389 tables, 725 beds, and 491 dressers."

Pat went on to explain that, due to the fact that the policy demands that inventory be taken every five years, it has been her job to do this for 1938, and for that reason, she had to enter every dormitory room, office, hall, and parlor in all of the buildings belonging to the college, except the training school, the tea-room, and the dining-room and kitchen, because, as Pat explained, "they decided that that would be a little more than I could handle, along with the others."

"I had to count every stick of furniture," she added, "including all the chairs in the 'rec', all the rugs, the seats in the auditoriums and all the properties such as the linen in the store-room, because there have ben so many additions in the past five years."

Some of the more interesting figures on Pat's list include: 10 typewriters, 5 statues, 49 pictures and paintings, 23 davenports, 119 rugs and carpets (not counting those which the students themselves own) 29 mirrors, 4 ferneries, 32 desks and 25 lamps.

When asked whether or not she enjoyed her job, Pat replied, "Yes it was a lot of fun—except trying to keep it all straight—but I had to explain in every room I went in, what I was doing, because

Orchesis Presents Dance Program To Student Body

Orchesis, the artists dance group, presented a program of dances to the faculty and student body Tuesday night.

The program consisted of two original dances by the dance club: "Gossip" and "A Life's Cycle". The dance "Absurdity", which was composed by last year's Orchesis, was repeated.

The Composition Class produced two original dances "Theme and Variations"; and short round "Here's To—."

An original "Greeting and Meeting" dance was presented by the Fundamentals Class.

Three solos which were called "Fragments" were offered. "A Serenade" was given by Mary Joyner Cox. "Struttin' " was presented by Beverly Baptist and "A Cocky Miss" was given by Clara Nottingham.

Elizabeth LeGrande, the pianist, wrote music for "Gossip" and "Absurdity."

The program was under the instruction of Mrs. Fitzpatrick. The members of Orchesis are: Clara Nottingham, Pattie Bounds, Mary Joyner Cox, Susie Clark, Essie Millner, Katheryn Newman, and Estelle Mann. The alternates are: Beverly Baptist, Sidney Yonce and Ann Dugger.

Dr. Wynne Addresses Appomattox Teachers On Va. Education

Dr. J. P. Wynne on Saturday, the 19th of February, addressed the General Association of Teachers at Appomattox on the underlying philosophy of the Virginia Educational program as it is revealed in the philosophy of James Dewey and Kilpatrick. He stressed the contemporary development of the teacher training at Farmville as an exemplification of this philosophy since 1908, calling attention to the fact that the training school course of study that developed in this period was an application of the same philosophy as that employed by Dr. and Mrs. Dewey in the Elementary School at the University of Chicago.

He called attention to the fact that John Dewey entered Johns Hopkins University in 1884, the date of the founding of the S. T. C. at Farmville. He emphasized the fact that the spirit of Dewey has been kept alive in the college since the development of the course of study in 1908.

Dr. Wynne and Mr. Holton on Monday, the 14, attended the

Mary Mahone Writes Sophomore History For Virginian

Mary Mahone was elected to write a brief history of the Sophomore Class for the Virginian at the regular class meeting Tuesday, February 15.

Mary's writing ability has been recognized by two organizations in college. She writes a column for the Rotunda and is a member of Beorc Eh Thorn, which encourages creative writing. She is also a member of the Dramatic Club. Mary is a member of Alpha Sigma Alpha, social sorority.

Whitehead Will Crown Queen Next Tuesday

"Promptly at nine o'clock Tuesday, March 1, the Queen of Mardi Gras for 1938, Susan Lane of Altavista, will be crowned by her escort, Ed Whitehead of Washington and Lee University," stated Norvell Montague, chairman of arrangements for the dance. This is the first time in the history of the Mardi Gras dance on this campus that a girl has been queen both her junior and senior years.

The court will be composed of the following girls and their escorts: Frances Bryan, Philip Purdue of V. P. I.; Charlotte Minton, Robert Simpson from William and Mary; Elizabeth Butler, Joe Lawson from Hampden-Sydney; Kitty Roberts, Bill Roberts from University of Virginia; Elsie Dodd, Wesley Warren from Richmond; Jennie Belle Gilliam, Gratton Lindsey of Hampden-Sydney; Nan Seward; Claude Whitley from Richmond; Gay Stieffen, Clinton Hodder, of Newport News.

Immediately following the coronation the floor show will begin. The numbers will include Army Butterworth and Margaret Britton in a tap dance and Sara Keesee singing.

Helen Watts will act as page with Perry Smith and Katherine Reed as heralds.

Prizes are more elaborate this year than ever before and can be seen at "Martin's" where they are on display. Prizes will be given for the most original costume, the most beautiful costume, and the most attractive couple. There are to be three judges: the two who have been named are Mrs. Leander Leigh and Mrs. Barrye Wall.

Six hundred tickets were printed for the dance, four hundred stag tickets and two hundred date tickets. These tickets have all been sold and no more are to be printed. One hundred spectator tickets have been printed and may be obtained at the door.

Parents of the queen and the girls in the court have been extended invitations to act as chaperones.

Snell and Allen Will Debate Bridgewater College

Marguerite Snell and Marie Allen will go to Bridgewater College Thursday, February 24, to debate the Bridgewater affirmative team composed of Shirley Hoover and Louise Wampler Thursday night. The Bridgewater negative team, Vera Miller and Mildred Hite will debate Pattie Bounds and Lorana Moomaw of the Farmville affirmative in the Farmville small auditorium Thursday night at 8 p. m. Both debates will be on the national Pi Kappa Delta question: "Resolved that the National Labor Relations Board Should be Empowered to Arbitrate All Industrial Disputes."

The same Farmville affirmative team will meet Robert Gwathmey and Robert Winston, negative speakers from Randolph-Macon College, Ashland, in the small auditorium Friday, February 25 at 8 p. m. Both Mr. Gwathmey and Mr. Winston are from Hanover, and Mr. Gwathmey debated here last year.

Randolph-Macon's affirmative team will debate Hampden-Sydney College on Friday night also.

Dates Pass Slowly; On Sunday Night In Crowded Rooms

Sunday night brought usual dates, the inevitable straight-backed chairs and the boring continuance of over-heard conversations began the week before. On and on the voices droned, as nerves got on edge and natures irritable.

Next door neighbors giggled over petty quarrels meant only for one pair of ears. Backs got more and more sore and the three dating rooms more and more stuffy.

Many people in the senior parlior,—in the junior parlor, and countless numbers in the "rec" labored to cover boredom as the night went on and conversation lagged. Little time was made by any girl; so sure was she of an audience of more than three for every giggle.

At last it was ten o'clock and the dates over. Sighs of relief were politely smothered by all concerned as gentlemen filed out and another Sunday night came to an end. Wistful eyes viewed wasted living room space as high heels passed through, roomward bound.

The situation is not good. Girls aren't satisfied without boys and boys like comfort as they like their food. We want them to return. We like them, and we think they'd like us better if they could see us in spacious surroundings with only a couple or so in arm's reach.

Isak Duneson Writes of Africa From Africa

Native drums throb through the African night; animals make eerie sounds as they creep through the jungle; while Isak Duneson sits in her home at the foot of Ngong Hills and listens to life as it surges "Out of Africa". This life she has written for us.

This book is not a love story Neither is it a biography. It is life! The story of a brave Danish lady who fought against the forces of nature to keep her coffee farm, but went down in glorious defeat. Isak Duneson has given us a book that is "the distilled essence of an enchanting, ruthless, tender and powerful personality." She loved her farm; she was a part of it, and she bravely watched it absorb all the capital she had, but gave nothing in return. So she gave it up.

This was tragic. She gives us a story of her sorrow and pain in a book "classic in simplicity." Her tragedy, however, was good fortune for us because it gives us a magnificent book "Out of Africa."

This book is not Baroness Warden Blixen's (pseudonym, Isak Duneson's) first attempt at writing. Several years ago she wrote "Seven Gothic Tales", but if we did not know it we would think they were by different authors, so unlike are they in style and content. Those interested in a story that is brave, fine, and rich as life itself cannot afford to miss this tale "Out of Africa."

Perhaps not as fascinating as "Out of Africa", but as American as Washington and with the tang of spring and fresh turned earth is Allen Smart's "R. F. D."

Smart was smart and as the saying goes he went "back to the farm." In this book he recounts in a delightful manner the hardships—some of them laughable—the successes and the love of his new life .We find that the storekeeper, the blacksmith, the butcher, and the country doctor are people to be loved, envied, and respected. They become alive for us and we love them.

We as citizens cannot let this book slip by unnoticed. Who knows, some day we have have our mails addressed "R. F. D."?

STUDENT ETIQUETTE

To the Editor:

Evidence during the past few weeks has pointed rapidly to the fact that the time has come for something definite to be done about our respect—or lack of respect—for visitors in Chapel and in Lyceums. Invariably, the most impressive addresses of our visiting ministers are applauded with gusto. Likewise, the last, breathless notes of a selection of sacred music are pounced upon with the same thunderous applause which is accorded to the most secular numbers.

Are we desirous of creating in others the impression that we know no better? If we cannot discriminate between the sacred and the secular, why do we take the trouble to applaud at all, since applause is a form of appreciation, and if we truly appreciate the rendition of something sacred, we know that silence is the most golden token of thanks.

Mistik Krewe Veils Fete

With Mardi Gras less than two weeks away and excitement and anticipation running hand in hand to hasten the days, it is more than fitting that we turn the pages in the album of time back to the early hundreds and Louis Philippe in all his splendor—to Paris and its gayety and to her daughter city—New Orleans.

The first hint given of Mardi Gras comes from Byron who wrote: "For some say, ere Shrove Tuesday comes about, the people take their fill of recreation, with fiddling, revels, feasting, fun and marching—" depict the significance of the colorful ball and masked paraders at "pay Paree".

The sons of fashionable Louisianans who were sent to Paris for their education brought the custom back to America.

Mardi Gras started with a colorful parade known as Marcarade that included huge grotesque looking figures many times their natural size and wound up with a fancy dress ball.

As the years went by, Mardi Gras became more elaborate and with an introduction of floats, came the inauguration of tableaux by various secret societies such as the Twelfth Night Revelers and Mistick Krewe.

The Krewe's identity and purpose was always a mystery to the townsfolk and so this display was the subject of much speculation and curiosity.

Following the grand march, through the streets, the Krewe and the elite of Louisiana repaired at one of the foremost theatres of the city where Krewe still vested in its outlandish garb, presented their four tableaux, dealing with the supernatural; at their conclusion, the audience crowded upon the dance floor; the Krewe disbanded and mingling with the dancers who turned out to be courtly gentlemen as well as devils.

After that, each year brought in something more elaborate in the way of tableaux, and some of these were: The Aeniad, Spencer's Fairie Queen, Mother Goose's stories, and Arabian Nights.

We too, have our pageants, but outstanding among the revelries of Mardi Gras, is that climax event which we too, will celebrate—the Masked Ball, where ladies dance with devils, laughing eyes behind masks, and the Mistick Krewe hold full sway over Mardi Gras!

Coeds have found a new way to "mooch" off unsuspecting Joe Colleges at the University of Texas.

Here's the way it's done:

Girl and boy are standing in front of Texas Union. Coed's friend comes along and asks girl for nickel to buy drink. Girl friend has no nickel.

Result: No alternative for boy. He must buy both girls a drink.

Rotunda Reverberations

Dances furnished the chief source of entertainmnet in our collegiate circle last week-end. From Hampden-Sydney mid-winters to Ely Hall swing and jazz ran rampant. Anne Billups found H.-S. dances less exciting and more lacking in gentlemanly personnel than the V. P. I. frolics . . . but Saturday night the young keydets descended in hordes and saved the day . . . even for her! The signal honor of winning the dance contest was bestowed upon Ann Dugger and one of the localites Friday night at the armory swing session. Several campus celebrities were duly recognized by special dedications . . . It's much better than a line for assuring a good rush . . . but we hear there are exceptions!

Mary Harvey isn't wearing her recently acquired PiKA pin these days. Public opinion is credited with the reason for it's return.

Dame Gossip has it that one of our confirmed man-haters has at last succumbed to masculine charm . . . and irony of ironies the feeling isn't reciprocated! Jack Pedigo is considered the smoothest man at H.-S. . . . Eugenia Jolly is still a believer of love at first sight . . . Fred Beck vows that the person who reported a recent escapade of his isn't long for this world if he can find out who did it . . . Julia May Rainey didn't get to Roanoke College after all . . . he was called away at the last minute on important business . . . . Two of our drama addicts are at each others throats over Chlotilde Jarman . . . Frances Hutchinson prays for bigger and better Washington's Birthday celebrations at V. M. I. . . . "Our Man Arthur", the Coca Cola baron, paid a very unsatisfactory visit to his loves last week-end . . . And Mardi Gras is causing the usual mad scramble for tickets and dates!

Black as the pit from pole to pole,
I thank whatever gods may be
For my unconquerable soul.

In the fell clutch of circumstance
I have not winced nor cried aloud.
Under the bludgeonings of chance
My head is bloody, but unbowed.

Beyond this place of wrath and tears
Looms but the horror of the shade,
And yet the menace of the years
Finds and shall find me unafraid.

It matters not how strait the gate,
How charged with punishment the scroll,
I am the master of my fate;
I am the captain of my soul.

Why Not Be More Patriotic

Dear Editor,

It seems to me that by the time a person becomes a senior she should know what to do, and when to do it. In this particular case I am referring to the Tuesday morning chapel exercise. The National Anthem was being sung, and right across the aisle from me a senior remained seated the entire time, and read a book. Could it be that this girl was ignorant and failed to recognize "The Star Spangled Banner", or did she simply lack respect, honor, and patriotism enough to stand while it was being sung?

Not only was there a senior who remained seated, but there were girls scattered throughout the assembly who, not only sat, but talked out loud, in groups, or amused themselves by singing not in their natural voices, but in little screechy voices unbecoming to anyone while in chapel, or while singing any song, particularly our own National Anthem.

GLEANINGS

By

Virginia L. Agee

At the close of the World War, in the treaty of Versailles, Germany lost part of her territory which developed into small countries, namely: Austria, Czechoslovakia, and Hungary. This, at the time was a great blow to the Germans.

It is the dream of Hitler to re-establish these Nazi-strong countries as a part of the Fatherland. In doing so Germany will not only gain a step in territorial expansion; but, also she will be enabled to ship more adequately. The little countries are in favor of this step, and proved their Nazi loyalty by broadcasting a recent speech made by Herr Hitler.

The speech itself was one of great importance: The entire world listened in—especially England and England's Anthony Eden, for this speech was, in part, directed to those across the English channel. Hitler is determined to regain the provinces she lost to Great Britain during the World War conflict and made no bones whatsoever in making that announcement.

It seems as if Hitler, who in reality is cruel, selfish, self- centered and self-glorified after years of preparations for such actions as he is now demonstrating has finally gathered together enough courage to throw his intentions to the nations of the world—to attack the foreign minister of Great Britain—then, to await the results of his bomb and when they occur, to pounce—not unlike a greedy cat.

The greatest crisis since the abdication of Edward came about when Anthony Eden and Neville Chamberlain clashed. Eden stood practically alone against the entire Cabinet against an issue with Italy—a proposal for an agreement with Italy that might be construed as British submission to Fascist strength. This tremendous issue, however, was dwarfed by the breach between the two diplomats, which worked to a crisis when Eden resigned as foreign secretary.

This step has alarmed France, who stood with Eden and Eden's views. She had hoped to have an Anglo-France understanding. France alone, however, is grieved because of Eden's step; Italy and Germany are pleased because Eden and his firm convictions stood in the way of their taking such steps as Italy is now trying to take with the British kingdom.

And just what does this all mean? None can definitely say, because no one knows. Nothing but theories based on similar previous crises can be formed by even the most brilliant of statesmen and diplomats.

From the way the cards are stacked, however, it looks as if something is near some sort of a breaking point. All the nations are criticizing each other with venom, and not one of them is guilty—according to them. The diplomats are at each other's throats, yet not one of them is willing to admit any indiscretion or fault that may be placed on his country.

It seems that war is inevitable! A queer thing to say so plainly, but why not look things straight in the face? — especially when it stares at us so.

The Student Body wishes to express its sincerest sympathy for Elsie Green in her recent bereavement.

Farmville Trounces William and Mary On Home Territory 29-17 Friday Night

Several Fouls Are Made By Both Teams

Basketball Team Still Undefeated For the Season

Farmville's cheering student body witnessed its undefeated basketball team score a high margin but hard fought victory over William and Mary College in the S. T. C. gymnasium on Friday night, February 18.

Many times during the game the hard fighting visitors pushed forward to sink a goal, but their able hosts were keen to keep a few goals ahead. Each side added several points for fouls received at the hands of their anxious opponents. The first half saw the score hanging at 16-9 in Farmville's favor.

The second half was particularly fast and hard. Both teams showed able passwork, both gaining goals exhibiting spirited plays up to the final whistle. The final score was 29-17.

Swimming Meet Is Put Off Because Of Few Practices

Due to the numerous activities in the Physical Education Department, the students have not been able to get in the required number of practices for the February swimming meet. Therefore the meet has been called off, but practices will continue for the telegraphic meet to be held in March.

Girls are urged to continue practicing in order to be in trim for the meet in which S. T. C. has entered along with the major women's colleges of the South. A varsity squad will be picked and a certain number of required practices must be completed in order to compete in this meet. Those practices already completed will be counted for the telegraphic meet.

The results of the meet held in March will be sent in to one place and all other schools competing will do the same. The school establishing the best record in the private meets will be the winner of the telegraphic meet.

Freshmen Defeat Hampton High School 69-6

Freshman basketball team heaped more laurels to their previous list of successful games when they brought a crushing defeat of 69-6 over Hampton High School on the Farmville court on Saturday night, February 19.

The game, marked by a complete walk-away of the winning team, was a further repetitive display of ready pass-work and alert action on the part of the Freshmen. Hampton, although scoring little in this particular one, has won three out of the five games she has played this season.

Freshman Line up:

Forwards, Hubbard, Hillsman; Centers, Courter, Crute; Guards, Smith, Ewell.

Substitutes — Edmunson, Altimore. Referee—E. Gilliam. Umpire—D. Fischer.

Army Butterworth Leads Ping Pong Contestants

Ping pong is still going strong. Every minute of the day the whiz of balls back and forth across the table may be heard in the vicinity of the "rec". Out on the bulletin board names are being moved "up and down" the ladder. At present, Army Butterworth is on the top ring; a score of other pregressors are awaiting their chance to challenge her and bring her down a step or two. After all, everyone wants to sit at the top of the ladder.

The close runner-ups to first place, are: second place, Wilma Jones; third place, Betty Butetrworth; fourth place, Catherine Stephenson; fifth place, Jack Cock; sixth place, Scottie McAllister and seventh place, Jenny Carroll.

The tournament will be finished by the first day of March and the prize will be awarded the winner that night. So, girls, you had better start climbing to the top of the ladder of ping pong.

In 1931 after a depression football season Princeton alumni threw over a sixty-two year old tradition that only a Princeton man could coach a Princeton team and hired Herbert O. (Fritz) Crisler of Chicago class of twenty-two. The subsequent victories earned Crisler a warm spot in the heart of old Nassau, but his popularity, like that of all coaches, lasted only as long as he produced winning teams. With slim material he produced medious teams in 1936 and 1937 and the same alumni who had worshipped him in victory dangled the ax over his neck. Last week Crisler left Princeton of his own accord. His contract had two years to run, but he had persuaded his employer to tear it up. He signed as head coach at Michigan. Michigan promised him not only the football reins but an assistant professorship and, ultimately, the athletic directorship—a job that sixty-seven year old Fielding Yost expects to leave in three years. Around Princeton's campus, last week, guesses of who would be named Crisler's successor were dime a dozen. Two big name coaches were frequently mentioned, Bernie Bierman of Minnesota and Lou Little of Columbia. Other candidates were: Charles Caldwell, Princeton class of twenty-five and now coach at Williams; Tom Hamilton, formerly at Navy; and Weeman, one of Crisler's assistants who refused to go along with his boss to Michigan. Weewman received the position after being line coach at Michigan, Minnesota, and Princeton, and head coach at Michigan.

Old Sportsman Dies

Another grand old man of sports died last week. He was James A. Ten Edych, eighty-six. He had been rowing coach at Syracuse University since 1903. A professional oarsman whose first sliding seat was greased leather sewn to his trunks, Ten Edych once rowed his wife around Manhattan. At sixty-five he rowed from Syracuse to Albany to prove his fitness and at eighty he rowed in shells with men young enough to be his great grandsons.

Dartmouth Finds Snow

For twenty-seven years the Dartmouth Winter Carnival has been held at Hanover against a snow white background. Although other New England ski meets have had to be cancelled because of unfavorable weather, snow always fell for Dartmouth. Last week, on the eve of the 1938 carnival, the campus at Hanover looked like a Dixie landscape. To postpone the carnival was unthinkable. Like Mahomet, Dartmouth went farther up into the New Hampshire Hills, found snow at Mosse Mountain, ten miles away, laid out ski trails and transported its guests. Although the weather was anything but perfect, Dartmouth was rewarded by winning every event on the program for a perfect score of five hundred—the first time in carnival history.

Curlers Date from 1854

In 1854 the good people of Boston were mystified by the sight of men in mufflers chasing ponderous stones across the frozen ponds, sweeping the ice furiously with kitchen brooms. Last week the average American citizen was still mystified by the same strange game, curling. Scotts have played it for over three hundred years with so much enthusiasm that they once enticed Queen Victoria herself to try it on the polished drawing room floor of a Scottish palace. In the United States there are only some four thousand curlers; all in few areas where the game has trickled down from Canada. Although outnumbered seven to one by Canadians United States curlers are challenging Canadian pre-eminence and United States meets or borspeils, as they are called, are becoming worthy of notice. Last week at Utica, New York the season for eastern curlers came to a climax with the annual competition for the Fred Allen memorial medal. In the spacious indoor rink of the Utica Curling Club, one hundred and fifty fans gathered to watch the final match between Caledonia Club of New York City and the Schenectady Curlers Club. Equipped with rubbers, a tam-o-Shanter, ear muffs and a flask of whiskey a curler need no other paraphernalia except a pair of stones and an ordinary kitchen broom. Object of the game is to propel the stone, weighing about forty pounds, down the ice to stop as closely as possible to the tee, the center of four concentric circles forming a target on the ice. While each member of the team in turn plays his stone, the other three help by sweeping. Although good sweeping is part of a curlers art the essence of curling is to curl. With a delicate twist of the wrist a good curler can control his stone for an out turn or an in turn (curling around an opponents stones to reach the tee) a wick shot (straight shot) drawing the port (making a stone squeeze between two guarding stones to knock an opponent's well placed shot out of the target. Last week when Caledonia faced Schenectady at Utica, Caledonia was led by grizzled James Whyte, seventy-five, aided by septuagenarian A. P. Roth, they beat the comparatively young Schenectady team five to fourteen and won the Fred Allen medal. Then with ear splitting song the hardy curlers shouldered their brooms and paraded to the bar for refreshment.

Big Fight! Y. W. Victory!

It's stupendous, it's gigantic, it's colossal, it's terrific, it's the panic of 1938. First goal, Morris and the Student Council scores! Second goal, Student Council; third goal—hey, wait, this looks like a walk-away. Oh, but it isn't —the worm turns and it's Plummer who pokes it. Two straight goals for the girl of the flowing tresses.

The fight is right! On and on it goes to the first half. The score's 12-6 in favor of the Student Council. The teams are at rest—Perhaps they need it—but let's look around a bit. Oh, there's Munt—energy on foot—who runs so fast to get nowhere; and Blackwell, vivacity minus halt control. She gets stopped tho' even if it is at the expense of somebody else's—ouch! Al bright, all right! Anyhow they're off again.

And 'tis said "disaster befell", came the first foul in a practically foul-less game! The ball goes to Y. W.

Whoo-whoo and off pops the Button. She's rolling too. She shoots and the goal is hers. And say! Where has Upshur been hiding? A few more practices and she's varsity sure. It continues—it's a seige, it's a riot, it's a victory for Y. W. C. A.! The score is 17-14. The comedy game of the season is over. Gone—but not forgotten—No for somebody is still chuckling.

Farmville Basketball Girls Will Play Blackstone There

Farmville's basketball squad will be represented by probably a dozen girls who will meet Blackstone College there on Friday, Feb. 25 for the fifth of S. T. C.'s games this season. The team will leave Farmville by automobile at 6 o'clock in order to get to Blackstone for the game to be played at 8 o'clock.

Farmville team is undefeated so far this season. Blackstone has been victorious over Averette College of Danville and Roanoke National Business College. S. T. C. also won over National Business College, but has never played Averette.

Associate Club Of Girl Scouts Is Organized

Group Plans Work With Local Scouts

Frances Holloway, Mary Grainger, Dot Fisher, Ruth Leonard, Elizabeth Berryman, and Judith Marshall are the charter members of the associate Girl Scout club formed in Farmville recently.

The A. G. S. functions in connection with the local Girl Scout troop. It expects to register with the national organization when the troop and its committee join this month. The purpose of the club is to give practical teaching and leadership experience in scouting, also to give prospective teachers a working knowledge of the fundamental principles and the great variety of work included in the Girl Scout program. This program covers every type of activity that may interest girls from the age of ten through eighteen years.

Badge work that has been undertaken includes: hostess, junior citizenship, cooking, good housekeeping, laundress, home nurse, first aid, scholarship, and many others. The object of this badge work is to give the scout a broad knowledge of many fields, thus aiding her in selecting her vocation and avocations.

The A. G. S. girls will teach the above courses. They will also supervise the outdoor work and assist in recreation and entertainment. An Associate Girl Scout Club is made up of college girls who have been scouts in their home town.

In March all formerly registered scouts will be admitted. However, as few S. T. C. girls have previously had an opportunity to join a troop, those interested in acquiring a knowledge of the adolescent child through organized play, will be admitted at a later date.

The club has the active support of the local Scout troop committee, which consists of a group of Farmville leading women. Its faculty advisors are Miss Olive T. Iler and Miss Mary B. Barlow.

The Farmville troop, due to its unusual size, a normal troop consists of thirty-two members while Farmville's troop has fifty-seven, will register four lieutenants for the first time in history. These are Lucy Blackwell, Myra Smith, Mary Grainger and Judy Marshall.

Alla Berkely Is In Mardi Gras Court

Alla Berkely, a former student at Farmville, left Roanoke Sunday for Momible, Alabama where she will attend the Mardi Gras carnival on Tuesday, March 1. Alla has been named by the coronation committee as one of the four maids of honor in the queen's court for the carnival. Her official escort for the Mardi Gras festivities will be Robert I. Adams.

Alla will be formally introduced to Mobile society on Tuesday night at a party given by her aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Tyler Turner.

Local Alumnae Will Give Tea For Reunion Classes

Founder's Day reunion classes this year will be honored guests at the alumnae tea to be given by the Farmville chapter of the Alumnae Association. The members of the classes of 1888, 1898, 1908, 1918, and 1928 are cordially invited to hold their reunion meetings there.

During the morning birthday celebration, chapter representatives and visiting alumnae will join students, faculty and administration officers in presenting gifts to their alma mater, especially contributions to the Student Building fund. The newest chapter, that of Gloucester, has elected Mrs. Gray as chapter delegate.

In the annual business meeting, all business of the General Association of Farmville Alumnae will be conducted with Miss Mary Nichols presiding. The offices of the president and of one director, Miss Mary Burgess Fraser carry over another year. The term of both vice-presidents, Mrs. W. H. Rogers and Mrs. D. H. Whipple, and of one director, Miss Mabel Spratley, expire. The ballot for elections this year is as follows:

Director (vote for one): Mrs. Olive Smith Bowman, Mrs. Ethel Cole Ould; vice-presidents (vote for two): Miss Susie Floyd, Mrs. Jonnie Hiner Hamrick, Miss Greenlow Parker, Miss Sammy Scott. Nominating committee (vote for three) Mrs. Mollie Moore Bondurant, Miss Olive Iler, Mrs. Anne Meredith Jeffers, Mrs. Nora Garrett Lancaster, Mrs. Eva Hatcherick Warren, Mrs. Kathleen Bondurant Wilson.

Girl Finds Monster Lurking In School

An S. T. C. girl crept on tip-toe into a dim room. A dozen or so statue-like forms before the windows told her the best places were occupied. Statues? No, they weren't statues for their heads turned as one when a loose board squeaked beneath her foot. She caught a glimpse of hostile eyes, as faces were turned her way. Embarrassed, she sneaked quietly into a corner and slumped into a chair. Placing a book on the table she tried to make out the blur of letters in the ghostly light. A deathly silence settled over the room as her movements ceased and she, herself, sat immovable, like the figures which sat before the windows.

Squeak! Squeak! Squeak!

Was that horrible monster sneaking in the door

She stared in horror as she noticed that it was creeping toward her. Finally her eyes, blinded when she looked up from her book, became accustomed to the sickly light, and she saw that it was only another figure like the others in the room, and—yes, and like herself—creeping in rubber-soled shoes which squeaked at every step. There was a rasping as a chair was drawn back from a table, the rustle of a leaf being turned in a book, a slight movement as all the "statues" turned once more to their work, and all was quiet again.

Suddenly, the girl became conscious of a peculiar noise which sounded over and over, the monotony breaking her train of thought. Rattle, rattle, scrape! Rattle, rattle, scrape! She turned her head and looked about the room. There was no movement. What could the noise be? Rattle, rattle, scrape. Angered that she could not discover its source, she turned impatiently to her book. She read a paragraph, and tried to summarize it in a whisper.

"An electrical wave is—"

Rattle, rattle, scrape!! Rattle, rattle, scrape!

Impatiently she started again: "An electrical wave is—"

The girl got up, pushed her chair back, and walked across the room in the direction from which the sound was coming, unmindful of the glares from the "statues".

Rattle, rattle, scrape! An old tree limb rattled against the drain-pipe and scraped the brick wall just outside the window. The girl walked back to the chair, thinking perhaps she could forget the sound, now that she knew what it was. She sat down and looked at her book. "An electrical wave—"

Ding! Ding Ding! "Closing time, girls!" came from the next room. The girl picked up her books, pushed back her chair and walked noisily out—the afternoon of "studying" in the library was over!

VOL. XVII. FARMVILLE VIRGINIA, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 2, 1938 No. 19

Students Are Excused From Classes Saturday

Fifty-Fourth Birthday Festivity

Saturday, March 5, the Student Body will be excused from all classes as Farmville State Teachers College celebrates its fifty-fourth anniversary of service to the state.

Mr. M. B. Coyner is faculty chairman for Founder's Day, and Nora Jones is student chairman. Those on the program committee are Miss Jane Royall, chairman, Nancy Grey, Elizabeth Morris, and Frankie Bryan. They are assisted by Miss Bedford, Mr. French, Deane Saunders, and Vera Ebel.

Friday night, the Farmville basketball team will play its last game of the season against the Harrisonburg State Teachers College team in the gymnasium at 8 o'clock. The game promises to be one of the most exciting games of the season because of the rivalry between the two teams. If Farmville wins, the team will finish its third straight season without a defeat.

The Granddaughters' Club is giving a tea for the alumnae in the Recreation Hall immediately after the game.

The Alumnae Association will hold its annual meeting in the Small Auditorium at 9 o'clock Saturday morning. Miss Mary Nichols, president, will preside. At this time reports from all Alumnae Chapters will be given and funds for the Student Building Loan will be turned in by Chapter delegates. Several new officers will be elected at this time.

Miss Mary Nichols, president of the Alumnae Association, will welcome the returning Alumnae in the large Auditorium at 10:30 Saturday morning. Dr. Jarman will also give a short welcoming address.

A cross section of campus life will be given by members of the four classes. The Seniors will give the scholastic side; the Juniors, the extra curricular side; the Sophomores, a phase of the social side, and the Freshmen, the dormitory side of school life. The orchestra will play, and the Orchesis, A Cappella Choir, and College Quartet will give selections.

Immediately following the program by the classes, Elizabeth Morris, president of the Student Body, will present the school's gift for the Student Building Loan. Each organization on the campus contributes to this fund so that each person in the Student Body indirectly contributes.

At one o'clock the annual Alumnae Luncheon will be given at Longwood.

At 3:30 the Freshmen will give their demonstration in the gymnasium. All of the Freshman gym classes take part in a program of folk dances which they have learned during the winter quarter.

At 4:30 the Farmville Chapter of the Alumnae Association will give a tea for all the Alumnae in the Recreation Hall. Mrs. John Lancaster, president, will be general hostess. The Home Economic's girls will arrange and serve the tea under Miss Jeter's guidance.

A Lyceum number by the Harp Iaia will be given in the auditorium at 8 o'clock. All alumnae are invited.

Immediately following the Lyceum Program there will be a reception for all Alumnae in the Student Building Lounge. Those in the receiving line will be Dr. Jarman, Miss Mary White Cox, Miss Mary Nichols, Mrs. John Lancaster, president of the local Alumnae Chapter, Mr. M. B. Coyner, Mrs. M. B. Coyner, Elizabeth Morris, president of the Student Body, Nan Seward, president of

Mother Goose Has Gone "Swing" for Freshman Class

Mother Goose and her retinue have gone "Swing". That is what the Freshmen believe and they attempt to prove it in their production "Sausages and Sweepstakes" which will be presented in the auditorium March 8 at 8 o'clock.

It is chock full of songs, dances and modernized costumes. Many of the songs are parodies of the latest song hits. Norma Johnson is accompanist and Emily Hoskins directs.

Lucy Staples and Frances Ellet take the part of Mama and Papa Pig. The three little pigs, Frances Steger, Marion Heard and Jean Scott, have many adventures and when the three big bad wolves, Theresa Brinkley, Betty Fahr and Jamie Peake, enter, the plot thickens.

The wolves, by the way are from —Surprise. The old Woman who lived in a shoe, Dorothy Perkins, is spry and nimble and can she truck! Her husband, Caralie Nelson is the object of her lashing tongue.

The class is well brought out and many more take part than can be listed. Some of them are Little Red Riding Hood, Virginia Howell; Old Mother Hubbard, Evelyn Thorington; The Mad Hatter and Alice in Wonderland, Nancy Hopkins and Norma Pamplin; Jack and Jill, Martha Wilson and Martha Whelchel; the preacher, Mary E. Pettecrew, and Baby Ray, Anne Leake.

Farmville Affirmative Debaters Defeat Randolph-Macon

Lorana Moomaw and Mary Rice, Farmville affirmative team defeated Robert Gwathmey and Robert Winstead of Randolph-Macon College Friday night, February 25, in the small auditorium.

The question for debate was "Resolved that the National Labor Relations Board should be empowered to enforce arbitration of all industrial disputes". The affirmative side upheld this question by citing the great need for such legislation, showing how it is a natural outgrowth of our economic system, and proposing that it be enforced by the Federal Courts and compulsory incorporation of all labor unions.

The Randolph-Macon negative team admitted some bad industrial conditions, but contended that compulsory arbitration is entirely opposed to a democratic government and destroys the right of collective bargaining for both employer and employees. They also contended that such compulsory arbitration, could not be successfully enforced.

Ball Put Off

Due to the sudden death of Miss Estelle Smithey, Mardi Gras will be postponed until next Tuesday night, March 8. At that time the dance will be called a fancy dress ball instead of Mardi Gras since only a celebration on Tuesday before Ash Wednesday can be called Mardi Gras.

The crowning of Susan Lane will take place next week as planned, the prizes will be awarded for the best costumes, and costumes and masks will be required as previously announced.

Zimmer Harp Trio Plays on Founders Day

The Zimmer Harp Trio will be the Founder's Day lyceum which will be given March 5 at 8 o'clock. The harp trio is composed of Miss Nellie Zimmer, solo harpist, Miss Louise Harris, harpist and Miss Gladys Crockford, harpist. They are accompanied by Mr. Philip Dundon, baritone.

Farmville is indeed fortunate in securing the Zimmer Harp Trio. They have been acclaimed by New York, Chicago and other metropolitan centers.

The program is as follows: Part I, Largon, Vinci; Bouree, Bach; Impromtu Caprice, Pierne; by the Zimmer Harp Trio Part II. Moorings, Sanderson; The Gartan Mother's Lullaby, arranged by Hughes; A Traditional Pyrenean Song, Teresita Mia; Leetle Barteese, O'Hara; Mr. Dundon, Misses Harris and Miss Crockford. Part III. Garden in the Rain, Presle; Music Box, Liadow; Marche Triomphale, Godefroid. Part IV, Petite Suite, Debussy; En Bateau, Minuet, Ballet; Zimmer Harp Trio. Part V. Odu Mein Holder Abendstern from Tannhauser, Wagner; The Lord is My Light, Allitsen; Mr. Dundon, Misses Zimmer, Harris and Crockford. Part VI. Allegro Moderato.

Dr. Walmsley Is Guest Speaker For Alpha Phi Sigmas

Dr. J. E. Walmsley, head of the history and social science department was guest speaker at the meeting of the Alpha Phi Sigma, national honor fraternity for Scholarship." The subject for the February 23.

Dr. Walmsley gave the group vital information on the subject, "The Value and Meaning of Scholarship. The subject for the talk was interesting and Dr. Walmsley left the group some food for thought.

Music Conservatory Presents Pupils Wednesday Evening

The Schemmel Conservatory of Music presented the following pupils in the second of a series of early spring recitals at the Conservatory Wednesday evening before a large audience: Misses Jane and Martha McCorkle, Jean Terrell, Jean Moyer, Leah Marsh, Agnes Jennings, Margaret Gerlaugh, Louella LaFon, and Helen Wiley Hardy.

Friday evening, the third of the series was given and the members of the Junior department appearing on the program were Misses Polly Bell, Betty Wilson, Norma Lee Rippard, Jane Smith, Eloise Hanes, Martha Wilson, Elizabeth Wilkerson, Thomas Hardy, Jr., and Lester Wilkerson. The concert consisted of instrumental numbers only, and was under the direction of Miss Marie Schroder, director of the conservatory.

Delegates Leave For International Relations Meet

Kathryn Jamison Is Official Delegate

Kathryn Jamison, Ruth Sears, Martha Bailey, Dr. Walmsley, and Dr. Simkins will leave here Thursday morning and drive to Nashville, Tennessee where they will attend the Southeast Conference of the International Relations Clubs which will be held at Vanderbilt University on March 4 and 5. Kathryn Jamison will attend as the official representative of Farmville State Teachers College.

The conference will be made up of clubs from the universities and colleges in Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Mississippi, North and South Carolina, Tennessee, and Virginia. They will attend by the invitation of Vanderbilt University, and in cooperation with the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.

Among the principal speakers will be Dr. Charles G. Fenwick, professor of political law at Bryn Mawr, Dr. Ernest Botson Price, of the University of Chicago and director of International House, and Miss Amy Herninway Jones, Division Assistant of the Endowment.

Ann Dugger Represents School At Atlantic City

Ann Dugger left Sunday morning, February 27, to attend the National Educational Convention, which is to be held from February 28-March 2 in Atlantic City.

Ann has been chosen as delegate to represent the Farmville S. T. C. Chapter of Kappa Delta Pi, national honorary society in education.

One of the oustanding features of the convention will be the banquet at 6:30 on March 2 at the Hotel Chelsea. John Dewey who is nationally known for his work in the field of education will give an address at that time.

Ann is looking forward to a very beneficial trip. While there she will stay at the Hotel Jefferson. Her roommate will be a delegate from the College of William and Mary.

Mr. Strick Attends Meetings Throughout Mecklenburg County

Mr. Alfred H. Strick, director of the music department of the college made a survey of the music possibilities in the Mecklenburg county school Thursday and Friday of last week.

He was assisted by C. B. Green, the superintendent of the schools of that county. Mr. Strick was the guest speaker before the banquet of the Future Farmers of America at the South Hill High School Thursday night. Other schools visited were LaCross, Boydton, Chase City, Clarksville, and Buckhorn.

Third Grade Gives Chapel Program

The third grade of the Training School entertained the Student Body with songs of different countries at chapel hour Wednesday, February 23. As each song was sung, children dressed in costumes of the country sung about, came to the front.

The various countries represented were Holland, France, Russia, China, and America.

Mary Joyner Cox directed the third grade music class.

Mr. M. B. Coyner, chairman of Founder's Day celebration.

Carson-Newman Defeats S. T. C. In Debate

Farmville's affirmative debate team was defeated here Tuesday afternoon March 1, by the negative team of Carson-Newman College of Nashville, Tennessee. In the debate Farmville was represented by Lorena Moomaw, 1st affirmative, and Pattie Alston Bounds, 2nd affirmative speaker. Bill Robinson was first speaker for the negative and Frank Bowman was second negative. The question was the National Pi Kappa Delta question. Resolved, that the National Labor Relations Board Should Be Empowered to Enforce Arbitration in all Industrial Disputes.

Lorana Moomaw, as first speaker in the debate held that compulsory arbitration was sound. She spoke of the deplorable state of our country today, economically, and stated it would be better to have compulsory arbitration than to use force in settling labor disputes as we do today.

Robinson of the negative contended that the affirmative would have to prove that the board would function as a court, that the decisions would be just, and that they could be enforced. He said, "True freedom of contract must be observed or freedom cannot exist."

The second speaker of the affirmative, Pattie Bounds, gave statistics to prove that under mediation, conciliation, and voluntary arbitration, economic conditions were steadily getting worse instead of improving. Yet, the negative suggested no plan. She went on to uphold the fact that the government must give the National Labor Relations Board the power to enforce arbitration in all industrial disputes, if the government was to do what is best for its citizens.

The last constructive speech, which was very forceful, was given by Frank Bowman. He went in to detail to cite cases when the Board had not been successful, and then proved it could not function if given more power. He showed how enforcement would be next to impossible and a just decision utterly impossible with a biased board, as it would surely be.

After constructive speeches of 12 minutes, and six minute rebuttals, the debate ended with Judge Hutcheson, the critic judge of the debate, giving the decision to the negative team from Carson-Newman College.

The Carson-Newman boys were accompanied on their trip by their coach, Dr. Sydnor. Dr. Sydnor married an alumna of Farmville She was Miss Lucy Leake of Petersburg who graduated here in 1911. Dr. Sydnor's mother was also a graduate of Farmville. She

Miss Smithey's Death Shocks Everybody in Community

Veteran of 41 Years Passes Tuesday Morning

Everybody connected with the college community was shocked to learn Tuesday morning of the death of Miss Estelle Smithey who for 41 years had been head of the Modern Language Department of this institution. Funeral services were held this morning at the Farmville Methodist Church and interment was in the cemetery of the Methodist Church at Jetersville.

Miss Smithey was the only woman to receive her degree from Randolph-Macon college at Ashland, where for a long time her uncle was Professor of Mathematics. A few years ago when Phi Beta Kappa established a chapter at Randolph-Macon, Miss Smithey was made a member of the organization.

At two different intervals totaling approximately two years Miss Smithey studied in France, Germany and Spain, the teaching of the languages of which countries she devoted herself to all of her adult life. She spoke these three languages fluently. Miss Smithy was a pioneer in the direct teaching of a foreign language in colleges of the United States.

Hundreds of students who have studied with Miss Smithey during her more than four decades here as well as thousands of other people who have known and counted her among their friends at Farmville feel that she has contributed much in giving this institution the spiritual and cultural atmosphere it has.

Debates End In Victory For Bridgewater

Marguerite Snell and Marie Allen, Farmville negative debating team, lost to the Bridgewater affirmative at Bridgewater on Feb. 24. Dr. Walmsley, debate coach accompanied the team. The question for debate was the National Pi Kappa Delta question. The Bridgewater team was composed of Louise Wampler and Shirley Hoover.

Lorana Moomaw and Pattie Bounds upholding the affirmative for S. T. C. lost their debate on Feb. 24. The debate was held here in the small auditorium. The negative team from Bridgewater was composed of Vera Miller and Mildred Hite.

The visiting team and their coach were met by Nora Jones, who is debate manager. Nora acted as hostess to the guests. The guests were entertained at an informal breakfast on Friday morning.

At the same time the debate was held here, Bridgewater teams were also debating at Lynchburg College. Debating teams from Bridgewater are making an extended trip in Virginia. These girls had just come from Washington, D. C., where they spoke at an open forum with the University of Maryland. The forum was on "Peace". While in Washington they attended Congress, visited the capitol, the White House and other points of interest to be found in the Capitol City.

Mr. Grainger Presents Miss Smithey's Memory As a Living Tribute

To say that Miss Estelle Smithey taught modern languages at Farmville for forty-one years gives no adequate idea of the quality of the service that she rendered to the institution and to the state. That can be expressed only in terms of the spirit which quickened her teaching. For her life was her work, and her work was her prayer.

She came of a family which represented the best of the old Virginia Christian traditions and the ascetic culture of the decades following the War between the States. Her family has contributed other distinguished teachers to the life of the state and she was a "born teacher". She brought to her teaching also the exacting linguistic scholarship derived from her life-long studies under able scolars both in this country and abroad. And her understanding of the principles of language growth enabled her to become a pioneer in the use of "the direct method" in the class room. Of this method she was always an ardent exponent.

Through her teaching also she brought to bear the broadening influence of her sojourns in foreign lands and her knowledge of European literature and culture. She gave to many a Virginia girl her first and only personal contacts with life in other lands. For Miss Smithey knew how to vitalize the study of language and make her students think the thoughts and live the life of the folk whose mother tongue they were studying. To her the teaching of foreign languages was a mission in the cause of international amity—one of the best means of helping to bring about the universal brotherhood of man. This gave a deeper significance to her work.

But the mainspring of Miss Smithey's power over her students was the sweetness and light in her own soul. Always gentle and kindly, ready with her clever pleasantries, unassuming, self-effacing, she brought her ends to pass by her own faith in the good people—by her quiet devotion to goodness, truth, and spiritual beauty. By this she lives on in her students and in all who knew her well. "It is the spirit that maketh alive."

Alumnae President Urges Students To Cooperate

Every member of the student body is asked to aid the Alumnae Association members in folding and mailing six thousands Founders Day Rotundas.

On Saturday afternoon, March 12, tables will be placed in the "tee" and directions will be given volunteer workers from two until six o'clock. One-half hour given at any time during the afternoon by each student, faculty and town alumnae, and friends will make the task a pleasure.

The more workers the more fun and the sooner the papers can get into the mail. Let's get our school paper to our alumnae before the paper gets old enough to hike its own way. Exams start Monday after this particular Saturday—a hard time to do anything extra; therefore your cooperation means a real sacrifice which the alumnae will doubly appreciate.

LETTER TO EDITOR

Dear Editor:

Were you at the basketball game on Friday night? Well, I was and really it was a swell game and the girls on our team are really a swell bunch of girls. But, is it fair for the girls on the sidelines to lower the standards of their wonderful record? I am referring to an incident at the game on Friday night!

At the end of the first half, one of the members of the team came around and asked us if we would please not laugh when the "fat" girl got the ball. Now, I cannot see anything funny about a fat girl who can really play basketball—and she could.

Each of us should be ashamed and humiliated that any member of this student body would be rude enough to laugh at any member of a visiting team.

In order to live up to the standards for which our school is given credit and in order to behave as young ladies should—don't you think that we might give visiting teams a little better impression to carry home with them?

A Freshman

S. T. C. History Is Colorful And Vivid

On March 7, 1884, exactly fifty-four years ago, the State Female Normal School was founded. Two men are responsible for starting the idea of a normal school for women. These two men Dr. J. L. M. Curry and Dr. W. H. Ruffner put their hearts and souls into their dream of founding a normal school for women.

Dr. Ruffner was the first president of the school. The school opened with an enrollment of one hundred and seven students and seven members on the faculty. Since then there have been four presidents. Dr. J. L. Jarman, our present president, has served longer than the others combined. There were only fifty-eight students enrolled in the professional course when the school began. In 1928, however the enrollment had increased to one thousand ninety-five.

Since its beginning the name of the school has been changed twice, and we wonder if the third time is not appraising. Many buildings have been added to the original number, East and West wings, training school, infirmary, dining room, dormitories, laundry, power plant and Student Building.

Today Farmville State Teachers College stands a college of beautiful buildings and campus, standard college courses, modern campus training, six rural training schools and thousands and thousands of loyal alumnae. S. T. C. is a member of the American Association of Teachers Colleges and of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

Dr. Jarman asks that all alumnae, organizations, and friends of the school make their contributions on Founder's Day generously. This request is not only a custom but enables the debt on Student Building to be lowered.

Reverberations Rotunda

For the past week—the sons of Hampden-Sydney have poured into town in droves. Many a fair maid has received attention from a heretofore unsuspected admirer. Of course they would have us believe that it was sheer feminine magnetism and not a desire for bids to Mardi Gras that drew them from their pursuit of knowledge. Marshall Suther, Whit Moss, and Lew Nuckols have been particularly energetic in their quest for bids. Even Bill Wing in his undying devotion for Sweet Briar was not abject from a mild yearning to be among those present!

Orchids for the most romantic episode of the week go to Margaret Stallard and Miriam Pickler. While strolling up the street the other day two suave young gentlemen . . . who looked like they might have stepped from a page of Esquire . . . confronted them. And thereby hangs the romance! They informed Miss Stallard that they were friends of her brother's . . . and of course they were. But their platonic attentions to these two maidens have caused many an ardent prayer for many more brothers with many, many more friends!

Isabel Plummer is our most shining example of undying loyalty and devotion to Hampden-Sydney. When Frances Hudgins mentioned going to Princeton a few weeks hence for a set of dances Isabel exclaimed in horror . . . "Surely you don't intend to miss H.-S. Pan-Hels!"

With Founders Day, or Rounders Day as someone has very ably termed it, just around the well known corner the entire school is buzzing with excitement. Despite the fact that there will be no dance we hear great rumors of plans for celebration.

In competition with the Problem Club there is a newer and more exclusive social organization on campus. Although its exact purpose is unknown the pursuit of pleasure seems to be one of its major aims. There are many aspirants for membership . . . but the S. O. O. F. B. regards them with aloofness!!

Pearl Buck Presents Another American Novel

Pearl Buck has given us another American novel, "This Proud Heart." As is her habit, Mrs. Buck has produced a book exquisitely written, marvelously constructed, and with a keen insight into the minds and hearts of men and women.

The story is centered about a woman who was a genius in many things. She could run her home with great ease; she could manage her children with no effort whatever; and when she was given marble and the tools with which to work, she could bring forth something which seemed to live and breathe. But somewhere, sometime Susan had to make her choice. Would she take her career or her home?.

Susan loved her children and was an ideal mother for them. Nothing seemed too good for them, for their happiness was paramount even before her beloved work. This work was sculpturing. Her skillful hands seemed to fly as she molded her clay models, eager to perfect them in order to begin work on the huge blocks of marble. When her works were completed many celebrated artists came to praise and encourage. Which would Susan choose, her home or her career?

As usual Pearl Buck's plot is not elaborate, but it is so intensely interesting and so cleverly written that there is no lack of thought. Her style of writing is considered by many as excellent and I cannot but say that I agree with them. It has a finish that is lacking in many writings of today. I recommend this book, with the hope that you will enjoy it as much as I did.

Sing Committee Seeks New Ideas And Suggestions

Each Saturday night a notice is will be Sing tonight" or "There wil lbe Sing tonight" or "There will be no Sing tonight"—the latter announcement often brings a disapproving murmur throughout the room. Do those Sings really mean anything at all in a week of the goings-on around school, do you miss them when they aren't given? We'd really like to know if the Sing Committee is acomplishing its purpose of creating an interest in various phases of school life by presenting skits which is some measure pertain to school life.

In the fall, the committee presents a program at the Big Sister-Little Sister reception. Then, during the year it sponsors a contest between the classes, and a cash prize is given to the winning class. In the spring of each year on the last Saturday night before exams Senior Sing is presented. On this occasion the departing class delivers its "last will and testament", and gifts are left to various members of the student body.

The Sing Committee needs and would greatly appreciate suggestions and help from the students. It's very easy for six people to run out of ideas in a short time. This is where you can help, so please come to us with any suggestions you may have. Also, volunteers are most welcome. We need new and better programs.

Chairman, Isabel Williamson

To Miss Smithey

The last day of the shortest month
Called forth an event felt so keenly,
For the last hour of the sweetest life
Was spent quietly and serenely.

Dear one! I envy her position;
She is so far beyond us now,
And yet that enviable transition
This her institution does endow—

With a determination to uphold
Her ideals, her heights of living.
Her heart, her soul were pure gold!
To others always she was giving.

Those who knew her will always know her.
Will always remember and forever cherish
Their hours spent so fruitfully with her.
She still lives; she cannot perish!

GLEANINGS

By

Virginia L. Agee

There is one thing every country in the world is cautious about in times of both peace and war—spies! Always there are secret service men on guard, watching for someone who might be seeing the secrets of his country and selling them to the executives of another country.

The United States has had a spy scare; the first one since the running down of a retired naval officer who was in the business of selling his country's naval secrets to Japan. This present case deals with the theft of secret data on Atlantic coast military artillery defenses and fortifications and the highly confidential mobilization plan for defending the Panama Canal Zone in wartime. Two men and a woman, members of a suspected international spy ring were caught last week — all three broke down and revealed their nationalities, etc., but would not "squeal" as to the country for which they were operating.

The woman is a German fraulin; one of the men is of German birth who was reared in this country; the other man is American born but who was educated in Germany and spent a great many years there; both men were officers or petty officers in the U. S. Army. As for what government these spies are working—?

Russia is most interested in the case, because it involved her very directly. One of the plans of this ring was to obtain American passports for the purpose of aiding German spies to enter Russia. Yes, indeed, Russia is most interested! Officials are still working on the case and are confident that more arrests will take place within the next two or three days.

Hitler goes ahead and continues to make messes. We are speaking of the Austrian-German situation. It seems that all the provinces with the exception of the capital, Vienna, are strongly in favor of complete union with the Fatherland, Germany. Hamlets and towns are full of Nazi converts and enthusiasts, bursting with an indignation born of Vienna's stubborness and delay.

In the town of Gray, ninety miles from the capitol, fifty-thousand fanatical Hitler supporters gathered for the purpose of a Nazi march on that city. Fortunately, the march was checked—or at least, it was temporarily checked, by pure and unadulterated military force.

These people have gone slightly insane. They whirl Swastika flags and proudly display that Nazi emblem on their clothes, in the stores—everywhere. They emphasize their ardor with lusty "Heil Hitler"! Hitler is their idol—isn't it odd that they should choose a tin-plated egotist for an idol?

Gerneral John J. Pershing, commander-in-chief of the A. E. F. during the World War, is in a most critical condition. Physicians, specialists and family have given up all hope for his recovery in spite of the valiant struggle and frequent rallies made by the seventy-seven year old general.

Much is to be said in favor of him. That he was strict with an iron-rod for a backbone was the general conclusion of those under him; the account is brought to balance however, when we consider his quick decisive actions born within his brilliant mind and influenced by his rigid military training.

The United State will miss him—if he dies—and all hope has been abandoned for his recovery. First and always—a soldier and an officer!

Farmville Defeats Blackstone College 19-18 in Hardest Fought Game of This Season

Blackstone Leads At the Half Over S. T. C.

Many Students and Faculty Members Attend Game

Approximately 50 students and faculty members motored to Blackstone to cheer the blue and white to victory on Saturday night, Feb. 26 when Farmville opposed Blackstone College in the hardest fought game of the season.

Blackstone rolled up a 4-0 lead in the first few moments play, holding back Farmville's chances of goals by clever guarding. Later in the half, however, Farmville broke through the line to score six points, their opponnets following at an equal pace. At the half the score rested at 10-6, Blackstone leading.

Spurred by the cheering of the excited witnesses Farmville worked violently in the second half to break the score in her favor, the guards being particularly spectacular in shattering their opponent's chances at the basket. At a crucial moment, tension raced when the score stood at a 13-13 tie. After a rest-up in time out, Farmville pitched into the fray to keep a balance of points with the ever alert Blackstone team. Near the end of the game Farmville scored the determining goal to a narrow victory of 19-18.

The Line-up was as follows:

Pos.	Farmville	Blackstone
R.F.—	Carroll	Farley
L.H.—	Jarman	Batts
J.C.—	Eastham	Sesze
S.C.—	Conyers	Hedrick
R.G.—	Gilliam, Capt.	Wilkerson
L.G.—	Smith	Paxton

Substitutes: Farmville, Chambers (Jarman); Blackstone, Wienn.

Referee, Elizabeth Burger; Umpire, Mary Dabney; Scorer, Dot Fischer. Timer, Ruth Leonard.

Volley Ball

Girls interested are urged to remember, six practices are required for eligibility for playing in class volley ball games.

These games will take place sometime soon, before exams if a sufficiency of practices permits. Class competition for this will be worked on the same plan as class basketball, the winning class gaining points for the color cup.

This week's practices will be from five till six o'clock. However, in order that everyone will be given a chance double practices from four till six will be held each afternoon next week.

Back in 1896 Rutgers won the first American football game—from Princeton, 6-4. Since then the Scarlet hasn't done so well, has lost more often than won. Coaches have come and gone. Last week Rutgers hired its fourteenth coach—Harvey Harman, formerly of Pennsylvania, to replace J. Wilder Tasker. Dr. Robert C. Clothier ,president, held out little hope to victory-starving alumni. "We propose to play to win but, to allay hope or fear, let me add that there is no "big-time football" in the Rutgers athletic picture."

With Fred Perry a professional and only Henry (Bunny) Austin left, England has lost much of her international tennis power—and ambition. Admitting as much last week, Wimbledon officials announced their preference for biennial instead of annual tennis matches.

Error Brings Fortune

Several weeks ago a customer stepped to a pari-mutuel window at the Santa Anita race track in Arcadia, California and required five ten dollar tickets on number six. The attendant, Lonnie Gray, bet five tickets on number five. Bright Mark instead. Gray paid for his error; he bought the tickets. Bright Mark won and Gray collected $2,860.

At Hialeah Park, Florida, War Admiral, Sam D. Riddle's three year old champion, won his debut as a four years old—The Heather—by a length and a half.

In his home town of San Juan, Puerto Rico, while twelve thousand natives cheered lustily, Sixto Escobar pecked at Harry Jeffra's eyes for fifteen rounds, all but closed them up and won the world's Bantamweight Championship for the third time in his career.

Boxer Begins Career

Billed as the young Whitehope who will one day overthrow champion Joe Louis, Jimmy Adamick last week gave his first performance in boxing's capital city, New York. Against Harry Thomas, a second rater whom Max Schmelling recently knocked out, the twenty-three year old ex-Ford employee produced no fireworks worthy of his reputation. His assets are aggressiveness, the ability to absorb punches and the fact that he is sponsored by wily Jack Kearns, who discovered Jack Dempsey. His liabilities are a wide open jaw and balance as awkward as a novice on skates. After ten rounds in which neither fighter scored a knock down Judges and referee Jack Kearns unanimously awarded the decision to Adamick, while the gallery hoodlums booed.

Among the attractions at this week's National Sportsmen's Show in New York is a fifty-eight year old Quebec Indian who spells his name 8-nus, atta 8-pickat. He pronounces it "wee-nus atta weepickat." It means "he who hunts in the shadow."

Three Hundred Ski

Ideal snow conditions in Davos, Switzerland, tempted three hundred skiers to try their speed in the seven mile Parsenn Derby—world's longst down-hill race. On such a lightning fast trail, there was an obvious chance to break the five year old mark of sixteen minutes one second. One after another the skiers spurted across the finish line—sixteen lowering the course record. The fastest man, Mantin Fopp, a Swiss, reached the bottom in fourteen minutes and forty-nine seconds.

With a stylish leap of two hundred and sixteen feet, Berger Rudd, Norwegian olympic champion, soared to the first United States open ski-jumping championship in Battleboro, Vermont.

A group of New York Skiers think it's more fun to climb than slide down mountains. They've formed the Uphill Ski Club, adopting as their emblem an inverted Ski tow.

Three years ago Val Bialas, former olympic skater, lost one of his legs in a train accident. But he refused to quit the ice. With an artificial limb he developed enough speed to cover a half mile in less than two minutes. Last week Bialas challenged other one legged skaters to race.

United States Loses

Halfway through the world's amateur hockey championship in Prague, Czechoslovakia, international officials changed their schedules. The new plan meant that the United States, instead of being in the semi-finals, was in the swirl of a round robin series. Switzerland then eliminated the United States and Canada defeated Great Britain for the title.

The basketball game that beats all others for excitement is the one played a few weeks ago at New Orleans between Centenary and Loyola. Centenary defeated Loyola 78-72 in a five minute overtime period. The score was tied seventeen times; the lead changed hands twenty-six times; and at one point the officials called time out because of exhaustion. Two spectators fainted from excitement.

Student Today Are More Studious

An ACP release of several weeks ago to the effect that students of today are more studious than their prototypes of ten years ago and less given to religious scepticism, drinking and moral infraction elicited the following poem in the Temple University News.

Oh see the modern student
His books upon his knees;
He has no time for pleasure,
For pleasure might bring Es
He never goes to dances,
He never takes a drink
And through his leisure hours
He'll think and think and think.
He's really quite religious,
And not at all a skeptic,
He regulates his diet
(And still remains dyseptic).
His morals are superb
His manners inspiration,
For truly he's as good
As gold before inflation.
The En Em Ess See says it—
No more shall I amaze
When some poor student cries,
"Give me the good old days!"

P. S. Authority for the statement about the goodness of students was a national collegiate church group.

Army Butterworth Wins Ping Pong Title Over Twin

Army Butterworth topped the ladder as winner of the ping pong tournament which ended March 1. Betty Butterworth came out in second place.

Army is a Junior, and has been very active in athletics during her three years at school. She is a member of the tennis team and a member of the varsity basketball squad her freshman and sophomore years.

Betty Butterworth, number two on the ladder, is a senior and Army's twin. She has also been active in tennis and basketball.

Approximately twenty - four girls entered ping pong tournament which was conducted by the ladder system, each girl being given a number and challenging the girls above her number. This is the first year that a ping pong tournament has been held but interest and competition has been so keen that a tournament will probably be held annually.

Farmville Plays Harrisonburg Team Friday Night

Farmville alumnae will witness the season's last and most anticipated basketball game at 8 o'clock on Friday night, March 4, when varsity team will meet Harrisonburg S. T. C. in the Farmville gymnasium. This will be the first event of the Founder's Day celebration.

Harrsionburg has known defeat at Farmville's hands for the past two years and is always keen competition. So far this year Farmville has won every game played.

Following the game a reception for the basketball teams, Athletic Council and physical education heads will be given in the Y. W. lounge. Farmville will be host for the Harrisonburg girls from Friday afternoon until Saturday morning.

A coed at the University of Chattanooga wore a hat composed of one white lampshade, one bathtub plug chain, one shoe lace, two paper clips and a skimpy bouquet of artificial flowers, during all of one day. The only impression she created was the envious stare of a waitress in a restaurant.

S. T. C. Defeats Notre Dame College of Baltimore

Farmville Scores 28 Points To Opponents 10

Farmville defeated Notre Dame Woman's College of Baltimore, Md. by a score of 28-10 on February 25 in the Farmville gymnasium. Passwork of the forwards on Notre Dame's side and the close guarding of Farmville's guards were outstanding features of the game.

Both teams scored their first by making a foul shot. Then with fast, successive passes Farmville rolled up two goals. At the end of the first quarter the score was 5-1 with Farmville taking a slow lead.

With the beginning of the second quarter Farmville pepped up a little and made two short shots in a few seconds of play. Notre Dame then gained the ball and made several attempts to score, but S. T. C. guards recovered the ball. Then with fast passwork the ball went down the floor and into the goal for two more points. Time was called for the visitors.

When the ball went into play again Notre Dame's forward made a long shot. It rolled around the basket several times before dropping in for two points. A foul shot was made good by the blue and whites bringing the score to 13-3 at the half in favor of Farmville.

As the third quarter opened a foul shot gave the S. T. C. basketeers a point. After several passing and shooting attempts, the ball was finally sunk for two points before Notre Dame scored again A foul shot then gave the Northerners two points. Farmville gained next when the ball rolled off the basket, but was recovered and made good. After Notre Dame's unsuccessful free shot, S. T. C. guards gained the ball and passed it to the forwards for two more points. The score at the end of the third quarter was 20-5.

Notre Dame made several long shots in the fourth quarter to double their score, but Farmville did not yield and the game ended with Farmville leading 28-10.

I like an exam.
I think they're fun;
I never cram,
And I don't flunk one.
I'm the teacher.

Jennie Carroll Is Delegate

Jennie Carroll of Rocky Mount, Va., has been appointed by the A. A. council as official delegate to the Southeastern Conference of the Athletic Federation of College Women which is to convene in Tallahassee, Fla., April 17-20. Miss Olive Iler, athletic coach, and Sue Eastham, vice-president of A. A. will also attend the convention.

Jennie, a junior, has been on varsity basketball team since her entrance here. She has been outstanding in all phases of athletics, and has been secretary of the A. A. council for two years.

At the convention Jennie will lead a discussion on "How Can the W. A. A. Interest the Non-Athletic Type of Girl?" There will be representatives from campuses of all the Southeastern Colleges and also athletic directors and playground and recreation leaders.

Miss Jeter's Class Plans Tea For Alumnae Saturday

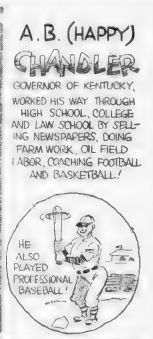
Miss Jeter and the Home Economics majors together with other committees are planning a tea for the Alumnae on Founders Day in the recreation hall from four-thirty to five thirty.

The local chapter of Farmville Alumnae, of which Mrs. John Lancaster is president, will be hostess to visiting Alumnae, faculty members, administrative officers and Home Department members. All town Alumnae are asked to serve as hostesses for the entire hour.

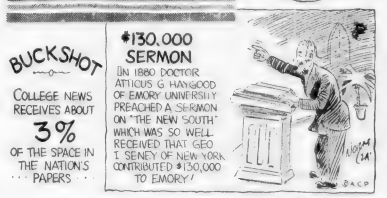
Hardy and Irby Entertain Sigmas

Betty Hardy and Virginia Epes Irby entertained the Sigma Sigma Sigma sorority at a cabin party in Dr. Hardy's cabin last Wednesday afternoon. Refreshments were served before an open fire.

Besides the active members Miss Camper, Mrs. Hardy, Mrs. A. H. Irby, Mrs. J. W. Dunnington, Mrs. McCorkle, Mrs. Helen Hankers, Mrs. Henry Newbie and Mrs. Robert Brumfield were present.



Gamma Theta Pledges Entertain at Party



On February 22, the Gamma Theta pledges entertained the old girls at a George Washington party. The guests came dressed as little girls and played games until refreshments were served. Ice cream, cake, and candy were passed around, by the pledges in soldier hats, to Miss Stubbs and other guests.

The latest reports from the University of West Virginia show that there are seventy sets of brothers, twenty-three sets of sisters, and sixty-three sets of brother-sister combinations attending school there this year.

In addition, they have twenty-nine Smith's and fourteen Jones' An interesting fact is that not one of the sets of brothers or sisters bear the name Jones or Smith.

Founders Day Comes Again Bringing Back Alumnae

Founders Day will witness spotless white dresses under winter coats on the part of students who will eagerly saunter forth to liberties usually prohibited because of classes. The day is usually a sunny one, the excitement usually keen.

Smiling alumnae of every class and type will be here. Then eyes will shine with joy as they view the scenes of past happiness. They will look for old land-marks, the statue of Joan of Arc in the rotunda, the ivy on White House Hall, the dull brown worn steps to the other buildings, Aunt Lucy. They will find things essentially unchanged.

The girls are just as bright-eyed just as noisy and wholesome as the girls of past generations. They love the school just as sincerely and welcome a holiday with the same typical enthusiasm. Dr. Jarman's hearty welcome, Miss Mary's uncanny memory of most names and the cordial atmosphere of the school will assure each visitor that all her life she will remain a part of the college she attended.

The reception, tea, banquet, program, lyceum—all are planned for the dear girls who have come home. Seniors will perhaps be the ones of the present student body to appreciate the occasion as the appalling nearness of their becoming alumnae dawns on them afresh. Freshmen will be appalled mainly at the happiness of the ones returning and juniors and sophomores at the long awaited holiday. No one, however, will fail to be impressed.

A. C. E. Will Present Frobel's Pictures on Kindergarten History

Twelve large paintings depicting kindergarten methods and the development of the kindergarten since its founding early in the nineteenth century will be exhibited in the "rec" by the Association of Childhood Education from Thursday, March 3 through Founder's Day. These pictures are called "Froebel's Pictures" in honor of Firedrich Frobel, famed German educator who founded the kindergarten over a century ago.

Miss Grace Mix, supervisor of kindergarten work in the training school, will speak at an open A. C. E. meeting in the "rec" at seven o'clock. In explaining the pictures she will also tell the history and work of the kindergarten.

A. C. E. is fortunate in having the opportunity to borrow these pictures which recently have been shown throughout the west.

Kitty Jamison, chairman of A. C. E.'s program committee, says that each of the pictures will be full of color and rhythm and probably "tall enough to cover the wall from floor to ceiling."
